THE "Missioners," the band of enthusiasts who are doing such invaluable work towards extending the scope of the Actors' Association, have been renamed, and will now be known as "Commissioners." Their cause is a most meritorious one, and has the hearty goodwill of all well-wishers to the profession at large.

MISS VIOLET VANBRUGH will repeat her remarkable performance of Jacinta in Monsieur De Paris, which is to be revived at the Garrick on Wednesday. The rest of the characters will be undertaken by Mr. Charles V. France, Mr. Julian L'Estrange, and Miss Madge Johnstone. In Down Our Alley, Mr. Arthur Bourchier's adaptation of Anatole France's play, Crainquebille, the cast, in addition to Mr. Bourchier, will consist of Messrs. Julian L'Estrange, Charles Goodhart, Charles V. France, Walter Pearce, George Trollope, Arthur Whitby, Lawson Butt, J. H. Brewer, Frank Lacy, Douglas Imbert, Harrison Carter, Alfred Bristowe, F. Cecil, Hugh Wakefield, Thomas Lipton, F. Neeri, Adams, Carlyle, Langley Bell, O'Brien, and Hilliard, and Misses Kate Phillips, Madge Johnstone, Celia Powis, Vivienne Whitaker, and Kate Harwood. "Poorer London" is the scene of the action.

IN order that Miss Vanbrugh may have a holiday before joining Mr. Bourchier on tour this autumn, Monsieur de Paris will only be played eleven times in all—ten evening and one matinée performance.

THE statements in several newspapers that Anatole France's play, Crainquebille, from which Mr. Bourchier has adapted his new play, does not contain a happy ending, and also that Crainquebille himself is not sent to prison are incorrect. With regard to the latter assertion, both in M. France's book and in the play the old costermonger is sentenced to pay a fine of fifty francs and go to prison for fifteen days. In order to obtain strict correctness, Mr. Bourchier has the authority of a well-known magistrate as to the utmost that could be imposed in an English police-court for the equivalent of the offence committed by the prisoner.

MISS DOT STEPHENS has received hundreds of letters of sympathy from brother and sister professionals and a very large number from all classes of people out of the profession. One or two very touching little letters, too, have come from girls who have also lost a foot or feet. Of course, it has been impossible for the sadly afflicted one to answer them, but she feels their kindness very deeply, and many a tear she and her mother have shed. It is good news to hear that Miss Stephens is making a wonderful recovery; in fact, the doctors look on it as marvellous and say that it is to a very great extent due to her wonderful spirits. She still suffers a great deal of pain principally at nights which prevents her sleeping, but has already once been carried on to the lawn. She is very weak, having been practically in a state of collapse from loss of blood; but they say she will soon pick up when she is able to get out.

REHEARSALS of Asmaris, the new Egyptian light opera by Frederick Fenn and Philip Michael Faraday, with which Mr. Louis Calvert will inaugurate his appearance in the ranks of London managers in August, are proceeding satisfactorily at the New Theatre. The action of the play, which possesses a strong dramatic interest, takes place at Memphis, and Miss Ruth Vincent has a sympathetic rôle as an Egyptian princess. Mr. Rutland Barrington's part will be that of Pharaoh. The dances are being arranged by Mr. John D'Auban, and the scenery painted by Mr. Clement Barnes, whose admirable brushwork in The Shulamite at the Savoy aroused so much admiration.

MISS OLGA NETHERSOLE, at present holiday-making in Paris, has just engaged Mr. Frank Mills to play the leading parts throughout her English and American tour, which begins at Manchester on Monday, September 10. It is said that one of the features of Miss Nethersole's next season is to be a dramatisation of Gertrude Atherton's novel, "A Daughter of the Vine."

MR. LEWIS WALLER brought his season at the Lyric to a close on Saturday with Monsieur Beaucaire, after a noteworthy series of artistic productions. Great enthusiasm was manifested throughout the evening, and the stirring adventures of the dashing Frenchman were more thrilling than ever. Autumn will see Mr. Waller back at the Lyric, where the new Robin Hood play by Henry Hamilton and William Devereux, with incidental music by Herbert Bunning, will be produced on Oct. 15.

WHEN David Garrick got married, in July, 1749, to "a young lady who to great elegance of form and many polite accomplishments joined the more amiable virtues of the mind," he had a fear that the literary wags might level some shafts of ridicule at him. Therefore, he resolved, as Thomas Davies tells us, "to anticipate all satirical wit by being merry with himself." To this end his friend, Mr. Edward More, was invited to write a diverting poem on his marriage, in which Mr. Garrick's character is reviewed by some gossiping ladies, and he is termed by one of them

A very Sir John Brute all day
And Fribble all the night.

A FEW weeks ago while carelessly turning over some old books that he had long used as stage "properties," Mr. E. S. Willard chanced upon a copy of the London Magazine for 1749, giving the original publication of the complete poem. One or two of the lines are not wholly suited to the modern taste in polite literature, but the poem is a sprightly one, and doubtless disarmed the satirists.

MISS EMMA HUTCHISON and Mr. Percy Hutchison seem likely to surpass all their former enterprises in the coming season, during which they will direct many companies and "stars." Under this progressive management Miss Annie Hughes will start a tour at the Marlborough Theatre on August 13th, playing her original part in Arthur Law's fine play, A Country Mouse; and Miss Mabel Love will grace the title-rôle of one of the companies with The Freedom of Suzanne, which attained such popularity at the Criterion, visiting many of the seaside towns in August and September, and the suburban theatres later in the year. On Monday next at Blackpool Mr. George Giddens and Miss Hutchison commence the tour of Public Opinion, Mr. Giddens playing his original part in Mr. R. C. Carton's mirthful farce. Other plays that will be sent out into the provinces, and which are fully booked, are Cousin Kate, with Miss Earle in the title-rôle, On the Love Path, A Country Mouse, and Saturday to Monday. All the arrangements are in the busy hands of Mr. Percy Hutchison.

MR. F. DUDMAN BROMWICH has acquired the King's Theatre—better known as Harwood's Varieties—Hoxton. He is having the interior thoroughly cleaned and redecorated, and will reopen on August Bank Holiday with a first-class stock company, playing drama twice nightly. Mr. Bromwich's varied experience, both as an actor and manager, in theatre and in music hall, should stand him in good stead in this, his latest, enterprise, and his many friends will join in wishing him every success.

MR. EDWARD COMPTON, accompanied by his second daughter ("Katie"), leaves Southampton to-day by the Union-Castle ss. Kinfauns Castle, for a pleasure trip to Capetown and back. He will only remain in South Africa for a week, and will be back in England by September 7th.

MR. H. ATHOL FORDE has been engaged by Messrs. Vedrenne and Barker to play the part of McComas in You Never Can Tell at the Court Theatre.

MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER, on Wednesday last, went down to Margate to witness the performance of Mr. Malcolm Watson's new piece, which Mr. Bourchier had arranged to have produced for a trial week by the Répertoire Theatre Association. On his return to town he wired to Mr. Edward Michael the following gracefully-worded message: "Congratulate you on admirable production. Please convey warm congratulations to the company for their excellent work last night.—Arthur Bourchier, Garrick Theatre."

IN consequence of Mr. Frank Curzon having engaged Mr. Walter McEwan to proceed to New York to produce The Little Stranger, the production of the new light opera, The Cornish Girl, which Mr. McEwan had in hand, is postponed until after his return.

TO Mr. James Macready Chute, who reached his jubilee on July 10, many hearty congratulations have been sent by his fellow managers and actors. To many of his acquaintance his tale of years will be a surprise. They would sooner have guessed forty-five than fifty. That means, we hope, that he will be with us for another half-century, not tired of catering for our amusement and edification. No man among either London or provincial theatre proprietors stands higher in the regard of his friends and patrons than does Mr. Chute. His very name recalls some of the best traditions of the English stage, and he has not failed to live up to them. Many happy returns.

MISS EVA MOSS, who is playing Camille next week at the Victoria Pavilion, Ramsgate, will doubtless be as successful in this as in the similar part of Donna Roma in The Eternal City, in which case the local theatre-goers will have every cause for congratulation. Owing to a misunderstanding, provincial patrons will not have the opportunity of seeing her again as Hall Caine's heroine, the part, after being offered to her, having gone elsewhere.

"KENNEDY'S KOMIKS," the novel entertainment introduced into theatres for the summer months by Messrs. J. P. Moore and J. B. Kennedy, has been a greater success this year than last, and its season has been consequently prolonged for several weeks. Subsequently it will be toured in the form of a strong triple bill, which should prove a great attraction.

"THE YOUNGEST OF THREE" has been meeting with great success during the past week at the Lyceum, Edinburgh, the business steadily rising every night. On Monday, at the conclusion of the third act, loud calls of "Author" were made from all parts of the house, in response to which Mr. H. F. Maltby bowed his acknowledgments.

THE run of The Man from Blankley's, which was suspended last evening at the Haymarket, will be resumed on Wednesday, September 5, when Mr. Charles Hawtrey, Mr. Henry Kemble, Miss Fanny Brough, Mr. Holman Clark, Mr. Arthur Playfair, and Mr. Weedon Grossmith will reappear. The principal piece will then be preceded by a one-act play by Kebel Howard, called Compromising Martha.

WE were glad to welcome home Mr. Dallas Anderson, who looked us up on his return from America. Mr. Anderson, who has been playing a round of Shakespearean juvenile leading parts, has been engaged by E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe to play Laertes in Hamlet and other parts in New York and London.

MISS LILIAN DUNDAS, who has just concluded a short London suburban tour as Lady Isabel with her own company, has unfortunately been obliged to refuse a lucrative engagement offered her for Australia on account of her presence being required this autumn in England on a legal matter in which she is much interested.

MR. FRANK BERTRAM commences his second autumn tour of The Breed of the Treshams on Saturday, Aug. 4. The company includes Messrs. H. Tripp Edgar, George Traill, Alec Flood, Oswald Lingard, William H. Greene, Charles Langton, Gerald Clarke, Wilfred Compton, and Mesdames Florence Tressillian, Miriam Holt, and Celestine Bertram.

A REMARKABLE instance of American theatrical energy was displayed by the manager of a San Francisco theatre, who, within six days of the recent great earthquake, sent to Miss Olga Nethersole her contracts to open there for a three weeks' season next Christmas. His theatre at the time was levelled to the ground, but he wrote assuring Miss Nethersole that it would be rebuilt and ready for her reception by the time named.

MR. HENRY BOWMAN has taken a lease of the Amphitheatre, Ramsgate, from Lord George Sanger from Monday next. During the season he will present many first-class attractions.

RECENT competitions at the Royal Academy of Music have resulted as follows: The Frederick Westlake Memorial Prize (female pianists) was awarded to Myra Hess (a native of London). The adjudicators were: Messrs. C. Albanesi, T. B. Krott, Tobias Matthay, C. F. Peddie, and Oscar Beringer (chairman). The Walter Macfaren gold medals (pianists) was won by Christian Carpenter and Percy Wilson, the examiners being the same as above. The Hannah Mayer Fitzroy prize (male violinists) was awarded to Francis Joseph Thorns (a native of Weston-under-Lizard). The judges were: Messrs. Josef Bláha, Alfred Gibson, W. Frye Parker, Louis Zimmermann, and Hans Wessely (chairman).

IN the Charlotte Walters prizes (elocutionists), Dorothy Webb and James McNaughton Duncan were the successful competitors. The adjudicators were: Miss Annie M. Child, Miss Rosina Filippi, Mr. Ian Robertson, Miss Katie Thomas, and Mr. Henry Lesingham (chairman). The Parepa-Rosa gold medal (contraltos) was secured by Edith Kirk (a native of Leicester), Ethel H. H. Hantke being very highly commended, Gwladys Roberts and Constance Dugard being highly commended, and D'Auvergne Upcher commended. The examiners were: Mr. Thomas Meux, Miss Greta Williams, and Mme. Ada Crossley-Muecke (in the chair). The Julia Leney prize (harpists) was awarded to Elizabeth Bellaby (a native of Nottingham). The adjudicators were: Mr. F. Corder, Sir A. C. Mackenzie, and Mr. John Thomas (chairman). The Schloesser prize (accompanists) fell to Percy Wilson (a native of Grimsby), the awards being made by Prof. E. Prout and Mr. Adolf Schloesser (chairman).

MR. F. DOUGLAS WENTWORTH, one of the latest and most energetic additions to the ranks of travelling managers, commences his second tour of Mr. Henry Arthur Jones's The Bauble Shop next week at the Theatre Royal, Hull. Mr. T. W. Rawson is still confined to his bed at Morecambe, but is making rapid progress towards recovery, and hopes to resume the part of Lord Clivebrook in a few weeks. In the meantime the part will be played by Mr. Frederick Annerley. The cast will also include Mr. H. Gomer May, Mr. J. W. Henson, Miss Dora Price, and Miss Lily Bertram.

MR. SIDNEY BELTRAM, finding that acting-managers are not in great request, is putting to the test another string which he has to his bow, namely, that of scene painting. He has been busily engaged at different towns since the closing of the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Liverpool, and is now repainting the "stock scenery" for the Irving Theatre, Seacombe.

MISS MAY PALFREY will shortly take on tour the new comedy Three Blind Mice, by Arthur Law—the author, by the way, of The New Boy, in which Miss Palfrey appeared to such decided advantage during its long run in London. The tour will begin at the Theatre Royal, Margate, at the end of this month. It may be an auspicious augury that it was at the Margate Theatre Royal that The New Boy was first put upon its trial. The cast will include Mr. Frederick Kerr, Miss Granville, Miss Annie Hill, Miss Mary Barton, Miss Edwards, Miss Brozelle, Mr. Compton Coutts, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Max Leeds, and Mr. Duncan Druce.

"FOR WIFE AND HOME," a new drama from the pen of Mr. John W. Pyman, was to have been produced at the Rotunda Theatre, Liverpool, on the 13th inst., but owing to the scenery, which is of a most elaborate character, not being ready, the presentation was postponed until Aug. 3, at the Queen's, Manchester. Mr. Pyman, better known as Mr. John Power, is a Liverpool man, and at present is successfully touring Man's Enemy.

MISS FLORENCE NELSON has been specially re-engaged for her old part of Florence Hastings in An Actor's Romance for the autumn by Miss Lillian Bezant.

MR. FRANK CURZON'S The White Chrysanthemum Company will commence a long autumn tour at the Grand Theatre, Blackpool, opening on Monday. The strong combination will number amongst them some well known names—Misses Gwladys Elvey, Katie Vesey, and Daisy Le Hay; Messrs. W. H. Rawlins, Horace Mills, O. E. Lennon, F. Pope Stamper, and Harry Paulton, jun. The company will again be under the direction of Mr. George W. Lindsay.

MR. H. LAWRENCE LEYTON has been engaged to play Mr. Aubrey Smith's part in The Fascinating Mr. Vanderveldt, the tour opening Aug. 6 at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol.

MISS DOLLIE VARDEN has been engaged by Mr. Fred Paul to create the part of Millie Meredith in the forthcoming production of The Lord of the Last, and has also been engaged by Mr. Peter Davey for principal girl at Christmas.

MR. LOUIS COHN concluded a successful five weeks' stock season at the Theatre Royal, Ilkeston, on Saturday. Friday was set apart for the benefit of Mr. Cohn, when a crowded house testified to his popularity. In thanking the audience for their patronage, and the local management and staff for their assistance, he took the opportunity of presenting Mr. L. F. A. Rogers, the manager of the theatre, with a handsome case of silver-mounted pipes. Mr. Rogers suitably responded, and, addressing the audience, announced that owing to the great success of Mr. Cohn's company he had arranged with him to again run the stock season next year for nine weeks, commencing Whit Monday, May 20, 1907.

AT the conclusion of Mr. Cohn's season he was presented by the company with a handsome present, which was accompanied by a letter of thanks which read as follows: "We heartily thank you for a most pleasant stock season under your management, and wish you every success in any future enterprise. One of the best and most honourable of men should at least hold his own wherever he goes. Good luck, old chap, from all of us! The following signatures will conclude but a little of what might be embodied in the more pretentious speech.—Yours sincerely, George Steel, E. Bulwer Pitt, Chas. D. Pitt, John Ford, Clement Wakefield, Reginald Hargreaves, George R. Thorne, E. Turner Elliott, Gwendolen Thorpe, Doris Ford." Mr. Cohn suitably responded.

AT the reception given by Lady Gwendolen Ramsden on Thursday, the 12th, at Gerrard's Cross, a highly successful programme was sustained by Mr. Clifford (musical sketches), and scenes and monologues by Miss Addie Croker and Mr. Ivan Berlyn.

PARTICULARS of eleven scholarships and exhibitions, the competitions for which will take place towards the end of September next, have been received from the Royal Academy of Music. The first is that of the Stainer Exhibition for organ playing, which will be awarded to the best student at the entrance examination on September 20. Four of the Ada Lewis Scholarships—one for female vocalists, one for male vocalists, one for pianoforte, and one for viola or double bass—will be competed for on or about September 21.

THE Campbell Clarke Scholarship will be decided on or about September 21, and the same date has been allotted to the Wessely Exhibition for violin playing. The competitions for the Erard Centenary Harp Scholarship and the Erard Centenary Pianoforte Scholarship will take place at the Salle Erard on or about Monday, Oct. 1, and the same date has been selected for the Ross Scholarship for male vocalists. The Sir Michael Costa Scholarship for composition will be competed for on or about Thursday, Oct. 4.

MR. CAMPBELL RAE-BROWN, notwithstanding his many commissions for the variety stage consequent on the success of his well-received Express Baby, has not neglected his regular theatrical work. He has just completed a new three-act comedy for one of our foremost lady male impersonators—make a guess—and has given the play the fascinatingly mysterious title, The Invisible She. His dramatic version of his popular novel, The Loveliest Woman in London, is also near completion; it will be played by probably the smallest cast, as regards numbers, that has ever appeared in a piece of strong dramatic interest.

MISS MARION WAKEFORD, who appeared with so much success in all the leading rôles during Mr. Frank Lindo's stock season at the Victoria Theatre, Broughton, was the recipient on Friday and Saturday last week of several handsome presents and floral tributes, accompanied by the good wishes of her many friends and admirers.

MR. T. ALLAN EDWARDES and family are spending the usual summer vacation in Switzerland, accompanied by their able Stoke manager, Mr. H. F. Miller. They will return in good time for the re-opening of all their theatres on August 6th, Bank Holiday.

MESSRS. DALLAS AND CARSON, who are producing the spectacular American melodrama The Great Wilderness at Fulham Theatre on August Bank Holiday, have a long tour booked, extending into May, 1907, with less than half-a-dozen vacant dates. The dresses used by the company are made of the genuine materials by the Pawnee and Sioux Indians upon their southern settlements in U.S.A., and will be on view to the public at every theatre visited. A strong company of artists is engaged, and everything points to a most successful tour.

MR. J. H. OAKDEN has just returned from his annual Continental holiday, and shortly resumes the management of the Lyceum Theatre, Govan, Glasgow, entering upon his eighth year of control at this pretty and popular house. Again selecting Switzerland for his holiday, Mr. Oakden, accompanied by his wife (Miss Lily Roselle), visited Montreux, Geneva, Vevey, Lausanne, and Territet, thence up among the mountains for a short stay at Villaos-sur-Ollon, followed by a sojourn in Chamonix, at the foot of Mont Blanc. The homeward journey was varied by a few days spent at Boulogne and Folkestone, thus agreeably concluding a tour of much pleasure and interest.

PROMINENT actors and actresses were once more to be seen at the Botanical Gardens, Regent's Park, on the last two days of last week, when a "Country Fair" was held in aid of Our Dumb Friends' League. The hat-trimming competitions by actors in one of the booths were a great success. These contests were held under the direction of the experienced bonnet-maker, Mr. C. Hayden Coffin, and the competitors included Mr. Louis Bradfield, Mr. Maurice Farkoa, Mr. George Giddens, Mr. C. Hayden-Coffin, Mr. Charles Hawtrey, Mr. Henry Lytton, Mr. T. W. Lovell, Mr. Akerman May, Mr. Arthur Playfair, Mr. Walter Passmore, Mr. Courtice Pounds, and Mr. Farren Soutar; while the ladies who graciously presided as judges were Mrs. Carl Rosa, Miss Phyllis Broughton, Miss Jessie Bateman, Miss Vane Featherstone, Miss Kate Cutler, and Mrs. Cecil Raleigh.

PRESIDING at the refreshment and tea booths were Miss Marie Tempest, Miss Constance Collier, Miss Isabel Jay, Mrs C. Hayden Coffin, Miss Fanny Brough, and Miss Phyllis Broughton; while among those who assisted were Mrs. Akerman May, Mrs. Hans Andresen, Miss Esme Beringer, Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Miss Muriel Beaumont, Miss Jessie Bateman, Miss Kate Cutler, Miss Ada Davies, Miss Queenie Davis, Miss Camilla Dalberg, Mrs. Dennis Eadie, Miss Agnes Fraser, Miss Vane Featherstone, Mrs. J. T. Grein, Miss Winifred Hart Dyke, Miss Gracie Leigh, Miss Carrie Moore, Miss Louie Pounds, Mrs. Cecil Raleigh, Mrs. Carl Rosa, Miss Violet Rosa, Miss Marie Studholme, Mrs. Vedrenne, and Mrs. Huntley Wright. Miss Kate Cutler was also represented by her little dog "Puff," who collected money in the grounds.

MISS ZENA DARE agreeably enacted the rôle of a most charming "barmaid," and Miss Kate Santley, Mr. Henry Neville, Mr. Mark Melford, and Mr. Acton Bond performed goodly service in taking turns at organ-grinding, vending, money-taking, and attracting the guileless public to the waxworks show and the American freak museum, which were under the patronage of the United States Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid. The programme of variety entertainments, under the direction of Mrs. Cleveland Greenway, included Miss Esme Beringer, Miss Camille Clifford, Miss Sybil Carlisle, Miss Mildred Carrington, Miss Mabilia Daniell, Miss Ada Davis, Miss Georgina Delmar, Miss Florence Dawnay, Miss Teresa del Riego, Miss Vane Featherstone, Miss Nellie Ganthony, Miss Nancy Price, Miss Louie Pounds, Mrs. Cecil Raleigh, Miss Irene St. Clair, Mrs. Sam Sothern, and Joska Szigeti, the young Hungarian violinist. In the museum La Milo, by the kind permission of Mr. Frank Glenister, gave performances. Other attractions were François Coppée's pastoral play Le Passant, in which Miss Aimee Lowther and Mlle. Rita Jolivet were greatly admired; the White Ladies' Orchestra, under the direction of Miss Lilian Berger; and the same lady and her company in The Merry Gitanas, assisted by Miss Nina Martini, who gave charming gipsy performances and dances; the Imperial Tombouritzas; and a pretty "flower gavotte" arranged by Miss Evelyn Cooke.

MR. ARCHIE SELWYN has been re-engaged to play Hon. Richard Spinnaker in and to stage-manage The Broken Melody. This will be Mr. Selwyn's fourth re-engagement by M. Van Biene.

THE dramatic recital given by Miss E. Pauline Johnson and Mr. Walter McRaye on Monday evening, at Steinway Hall, was decidedly novel, for there was not a single hackneyed piece on the programme, and the costume of the lady was as striking as it was original. In buckskin and scarlet cloth, decorated with silver brooches hammered from coin by the native silversmiths of her tribe—the Mohawks—with a belt of wampum, or beadwork, and brown mocassins, Miss Johnson is unmistakably Indian, the "blanket" that completes her dress having been used in the ceremony of conferring the title of chief on the Duke of Connaught, when he visited Canada and was received into the Six Nations' Indians of Ontario. Both Miss Johnson and Mr. McRaye, whose speciality is "Habitant" poems of French Canada, have toured from end to end of the new world, playing in theatres, halls, barns, mining camps, churches—wherever it is possible to gather an audience together. They intend to remain in London for the present, their clever work having already attracted the attention and admiration of such well known Canadian authorities as Lord Strathcona, Sir Charles Tupper, and Sir Gilbert Parker.

WITH his usual generosity Mr. Sidney Cooper will devote the whole of the proceeds at his theatre next week to the local fund of the "Bath and West Show," to be held in Newport in June next. Mr. Eade Montefiore's company will produce The Streets of London, and local colouring will be given to the performance by the Newport Fire Brigade, which will give a grand display of "Saving Life from Fire" each evening. The performance is under distinguished patronage.

MR. AND MRS. FREDERIC JACQUES (Miss Minnie Rayner) have been engaged by Mr. Charles Macdona to play Lottie and Hamilton Travers in Are you a Mason? company.

MANAGERS are always on the look-out for fresh pantomime talent, and a real comedian is a rara avis. Mr. Bryden Phillips believes he has discovered one in Mr. Dan Whitley, whom he has engaged for next season upon the very strong recommendation of Mr. Geo. Conquest, who speaks most highly of this youthful fun-maker. Mr. Whitley has the vis comica, and is in appearance very like the late Dan Leno.

LEON BOSCO, of the famous Comedians de Mephisto Co., Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco, had an amusing experience at Newcastle a few days ago. It will be remembered that rabbits take part in the entertainment proffered by "The World's Monarchs of Magic," and on the date in question it was suddenly discovered that more of these little animals were required. Accordingly, Bosco went forth in quest of them, and after some wanderings he discovered a vendor, but only one rabbit was available. This he immediately secured, and was then directed to an old Scotsman who resided in the locality.

ON arrival Bosco was told that two rabbits might be purchased at one shilling each, but his anxiety to obtain possession of them was so pronounced that the old man raised the price without more ado. However, Leon Bosco seized the rabbits and paid the demands; then, with his natural love of fun getting the better of him, he said, "Hey, Presto!" and no sooner were the words out of his mouth than the two rabbits were turned into three to the utter amazement of the old Scotsman. The latter stared aghast, but without a moment's hesitation, seized the three rabbits and insisted upon Bosco leaving the house. He declined to listen to any explanation, and stoutly maintained that the three rabbits must be his property. At the same time he emphatically declared that he would not have any uncanny people in his place as he was a respectable church-goer, etc. In the end Leon Bosco was compelled to give up his rabbit hunt for that day.

MR. W. J. ANDREWS, the manager of Theatre Royal, Huddersfield, is publishing an artistic magazine of prospective engagements, and will be glad to receive any interesting personal pars, also photo blocks of any of the principal artists who are visiting Huddersfield during the forthcoming season.

"THE PRINCE CHAP."

The Earl of Henningford .....MR. SAM SOTHERN
Ballington .....MR. A. E. GREENAWAY
Yadder .....MR. FRANK COLLINS
Fritz .....MR. GEORGE SCHAEFFER
Alice Travers .....MISS LILIAS WALDEGRAVE
Mrs. Harrington .....MISS EVELYN WEEDEN
Phœbe Puckers .....MISS HILDA TREVELYAN
Claudia, in Act I. .....BETTY GREEN
Claudia, in Act II. .....GERALDINE WILSON
Claudia, in Act III. .....MISS JANET ALEXANDER

That the sentiment of Dickens can find sympathetic audiences in our West-End theatres has recently been proved by the success of Mr. Tree's production of Mr. Comyn Carr's adaptation of "Oliver Twist" at His Majesty's; but when London playgoers are presented with something in the nature of Dickens watered down with theatrical devices that have done duty for half a century the case is entirely different; and we are afraid that the placid and unenthusiastic reception of Mr. E. W. Peple's play The Prince Chap at the Criterion on Monday evening is only a portent of failure. We shall therefore expect to see shortly in the New York papers a repetition of the charges that have been lately levelled against Britishers of possessing a hostility to American-made plays and American actors. As we all know, and as is admitted by the sensible and level-headed portion of the New York Press, a good substantial American piece which does not deal with some aspect of American life unknown to the Britisher is likely to meet with almost as much success in London as it attains on the other side. Audiences will not refuse to enjoy a good play simply because it is made in the United States. But The Prince Chap is not a good play: it bores one with its feeble humour and its mawkish sentiment. Certainly we have delightful moments with Claudia, represented by a couple of sweet little maidens in Acts I. and II., and we feel a great admiration for William Peyton, the tender-natured but poverty-stricken young sculptor; but we are tired by the tedium of detail before the play is half over.

Some years before the opening of the story William Peyton, a poor sculptor, had employed as model a beautiful girl, who married a worthless scamp. Neglected and unhappy, she falls on evil times, and when, soon after the curtain has gone up on the first act, she returns to Peyton's studio, it is as a consumptive whose life is fast ebbing away. The battle with poverty has been too much for her; she feels the hand of death upon her, and pleads with her benefactor that he will take care of her child—her little Claudia. William Peyton urges that what she asks is impossible; but the plea is strengthened by the terrible anxiety of a dying mother, and as he promises the unhappy one passes to her rest. The little five-year-old orphan girl then enters into Peyton's lonely life. He tells her of his own hopes, and fears, and anticipations under the guise of a fairy story, "The Prince Chap and Princess Alice," but the ending of the story is to come when the Princess arrives on the scene. She does so during the second act, and her name is Alice Travers. She upsets the eight-year-old Claudia by her unsympathetic attitude, and jilts her faithful William for a more wealthy admirer, returning the sculptor's letters and her engagement ring on the eve of Christmas—kept, by the way, quite as a festival at the studio by the brothers of the chisel, who include the Earl of Henningford, otherwise known as Uncle Jack Rodney. In the third act, the events of which happen ten years after Peyton's bitter disappointment, his grace proposes to the grown-up Claudia on her eighteenth birthday, when she discovers that she is in love with her guardian, who, in an interview with his now widowed Alice, has resisted that lady's appeal to take up the threads of their lives and reunite them.

The chief part in the play—that of William Peyton—brings to our notice an excellent actor, Mr. H. R. Roberts, who acts throughout with a quiet sincerity, a convincing earnestness, and a prepossessing style that go far to console one for the poor material of the play. The chagrin, the heart-ache of the man when he discovers at the end of the second act the cynical coldness of the woman he had so adored are realised with rare intensity and restraint, and the scenes with Claudia in her different stages are admirably treated. Claudia in the first act is Betty Green—an artless little maiden who says her prayers with a childish sincerity that touches the heart. In the second act the more grown-up Claudia is taken by Geraldine Wilson, who is quite delightful in the way she puts the argument against the reality of Santa Claus. In the third act Miss Janet Alexander depicts Claudia in her later teens, and it is a portrait full of delicacy and charm. Miss Hilda Trevelyan as Phœbe Puckers gives another of her clever slavey impersonations—in this instance one more edition of the Marchioness in "The Old Curiosity Shop." The smut-marked "general" swallows four sixpences, always falls downstairs when she is happy, and ends by becoming a circus "hartist" and marrying an aeronaut. Needless to say that Miss Trevelyan extracts every ounce of fun from the part, and in poor Phœbe's more tearful moments her words go straight to the heart. Miss Evelyn Weeden, in her one scene as the dying Mrs. Harrington, betrays considerable emotional power; Miss Lilias Waldegrave, by her elegance and charm, gives some justification for the infatuation of Peyton for Alice Travers; Mr. Sam Sothern plays in his own amusing and characteristic fashion the part of the Earl of Henningford; and the piece is lightened considerably by the humour of Mr. George Shelton as Marcus Runion, the faithful servant of Peyton. Mr. Frank Collins, Mr. A. E. Greenaway, and Mr. George Schaeffer present the minor parts of the "brothers in art and misfortune," and play them very well.

At the Pier Pavilion, Cromer, Ashton's Royal Italian Band is performing under the conductorship of Signor G. Calamani, and is earning golden opinions from large audiences. By no means the least of Cromer attractions is the "Middies and the Maids," a concert party whose performances on Rust's Lawn are becoming most popular. The arrangements made reflect great credit upon the management of Mr. L. Ashton-Jarry. Mr. Arthur Randell is the stage-manager, and is supported by Miss Lily Taner, Miss Doris Lind, Mr. Walter Ferder, the inimitable Mr. Bert Williams, and Mr. Walter Mervyn, the talented tenor.

FRENCH PLAYS AT ROYALTY.

M. Gaston Mayer's interesting summer campaign at the Royalty is fruitful of exhilarating programmes, and on Thursday, July 12, was produced the comedy, in three acts, by Maurice Vaucaire, entitled

"PETIT CHAGRIN."

Breteau .....M. LOUIS GAUTHIER
Daumesnil .....M. GASTON DUBOSC
La Bresse .....M. JEAN DAX
Le Maître d'Hotel .....M. PAULET
Un Buveur .....M. CRETOT
Un Garçon .....M. SCIPON
Mimi .....MLLE. MARTHE REGNIER
Lucie Renouard .....MLLE. GABRIELLE DORZIAT
Evelyne .....MLLE. VALENTINE PETIT
La Surveillante .....MLLE. HERVAL
Marthe Foy .....MLLE. JEANNE BERGE
Louise .....MLLE. FONTENAY
Jeanette .....MLLE. LANGE
Gertrude .....MME. DORLIA
Miss Mary .....MLLE. DUPARC

A divided affection is again the subject of M. Vaucaire's comedy, which is cleverly developed, contains much smart and amusing dialogue, and is brightened by one or two good character sketches. Breteau, who has just become engaged to Lucie Renouard, the bride chosen for him by his parents, has perforce to break off his liaison with Mimi, a little actress whose devotion to him is such that he finds it difficult to part from her, when at her request he arranges an interview with her at the spa, where he is staying with his fiancée. Mimi is very fascinating; he still finds that he loves her with no little devotion; and he therefore does not possess a whole-hearted desire to banish her from his side permanently The "last" interview leads to others, and carried away by her real love for him, Breteau determines at supper in a restaurant alone with Mimi that he will back out of his engagement with Lucie. He is saved this trouble, for two of his friends come in to announce that the indignant parents of his fiancée have seen him and Mimi on the balcony, and are determined to throw him over on their part. Breteau professes to be agreeably surprised at the turn events have taken, and returns to Mimi. The little woman, however, is not quite certain that he is sincere, and concocts a plan with one of his friends, Daumesnil, to discover the state of his affections. A letter is written to Breteau which puts the little actress in a compromising light. Does he become indignant? Not in the least, but fires up most unmistakably when Lucie is slightingly spoken of. The inconstancy of Breteau is therefore too palpable to be mistaken, and Mimi, with a sense of duty, heroic under the circumstances, surrenders him to Lucie, being satisfied that his happiness will be best secured by such a piece of self-sacrifice.

Mlle. Marthe Regnier, who joined the company for this production, was responsible for a delineation of the warm-hearted Mimi that evoked great sympathy, and gave passionate expression to the affection of the little actress, scoring also most unmistakably in the scene of sentiment in the third act. M. Louis Gauthier, as the vacillating Breteau—a person much too inferior to be worthy such devotion as Mimi's—struggled bravely with that unsympathetic character, making, however, the most of the lighter scenes with Mlle. Regnier. M. Dubosc played in a natural, easy style as Daumesnil. Petit Chagrin was preceded by Chapeau—a duologue by Marc Sonal of no particular merit—a mere domestic scene written round a dispute concerning a matinée hat between a husband and wife, parts sufficiently well played by M. Scipion and Mlle. Valentine Petit.

On Saturday evening was presented the comedy, in three acts, by M. Romain Coolus, entitled

"PETITE PESTE."

Chantelouve .....M. GASTON DUBOSC
Albert Chancelet .....M. GAUTHIER
Louis Chameron .....M. LUGUET
Rousson .....M PAULET
Lambret .....M. CRETOT
Marceline .....MLLE. MARTHE REGNIER
Paule .....MLLE. JEANNE BERGE
Georgette .....MLLE. LANGE

The heroine of this story, Marceline (petite peste) has no parental influence to guide her in the affairs of life. Her father, Lambret, a touring manager, can only find time to run in and see his daughter between his arrival by one train and his departure by the next. She lives with Louis Chameron and Paule, his wife, who look upon the girl as their adopted daughter. Paule, unfortunately for the domestic peace, is on the point of yielding to a foolish infatuation for Chancelet, their young neighbour. Marceline is well aware of the devotion of Chameron to his wife, and when she accidentally overhears her arranging a meeting with Chancelet at Havre, she determines to prevent it, even at the sacrifice of her own good name. She immediately enters into a serious flirtation with him, and succeeds so well in her blandishments that Chancelet stays to play a tennis match with Marceline even though Paule has gone to keep her appointment with him at Havre. On her return thence Paule hears that Marceline's coquetry is the cause of her disappointment, and immediately determines that the flirtation shall result in matrimony. Chancelet is nothing loth; but Marceline does not care for him, having given her heart to the more elderly Chantelouve, who boasts of having had no less than thirty-one liaisons.

The comedy on its first production at the Paris Vaudeville on Jan. 13, 1905, had the advantage of the services of Mlle. Marthe Regnier in the part of Marceline. That very clever and charming actress repeated her impersonation on Saturday at the Royalty to the manifest pleasure of the audience. The rôle is a very exacting one; but the hare-brained girl is presented with unflagging animation and unvarying truth of expression. She was ably supported by M. Gaston Dubosc in a remarkable impersonation of the elderly viveur Chantelouve, and by M. Luguet as Chameron, the latter suggesting with no little subtlety the husband with affection unrequited. Mlle. Jeanne Bergé was by no means a good substitute for Mlle. Jeanne Thomassin, the original representative of Paule.

On Monday a hilarious evening was spent with this lady and M. Galipaux, who were seen in the parts of Suzanne Borel, the postmistress, and M. le Vicomte in M. Alfred Capus's lightest of comedies, La Petite Fonctionnaire. The story has often been told how Suzanne, who has been given charge of the post-office at the slow, dead-and-alive little town of Pressigny-sur-Loire, plays havoc with the hearts of the men. The Vicomte is the hardest hit, perhaps, and he, after forming an ill-assorted union with a young and scheming widow, obtains a divorce, and lays his title at the feet of Suzanne, the fascinating "little official," whose origin is so humble. Suzanne's fascinations, too, have been too much also for the amatory disposition of Lebardin, even though that ardent Lovelace of the village bears the burden of forty-nine years; and a most amusing scene comes in the last act where he is surprised by Mme. Lebardin during a visit to Suzanne.

The second act is an admirable example of M. Capus's finesse in composing a scene, and M. Galipaux and Mlle. Thomassin played in it on Monday with remarkable brio and humour, the actress displaying considerable command of dignity and much charm. She suggested, too, with infinite tact, in Suzanne's interview with Hermance, the quiet triumph of the woman who can repay a former snub with interest. She was recalled with much enthusiasm on the final fall of the curtain. M. Galipaux shared in this triumph, acting with rare impulse and vivacity throughout. M. Paulet as Lebardin portrayed the middle-aged lover with humorous effect, suggesting, very grotesquely, the rejuvenating effect of love upon one who had nearly reached his half-century. Mme. Dorlia and Mlle. Nobert gave good support as Mme. Lebardin and Hermance, and the success of the piece, which was punctuated with constant laughter, was added to by M. Gabriel Frère's impersonation of Pagenel, in which the actor had but little scope.

The fleeting joys of a triple bill proved attractive to a cosmopolitan house on Monday. The first piece was the neat and wittily written little comedy, in one act, by G. A. de Caillavet and Robert de Flers, entitled

"LA CHANCE DU MARI."

Bobby Hanson .....M. FELIX GALIPAUX
Jacques d'Esteuil .....M. COOPER
Paul d'Arzac .....M. GABRIEL FRERE
Jean .....M. BATREAU
Suzanne d'Esteuil .....MLLE. JEANNE THOMASSIN

The husband, Jacques d'Esteuil, has learnt philosophy in his everyday experiences of life, and is, as you might say, quite un homme du monde, with a real understanding of human nature. His wife Suzanne, after a dispute with him concerning her extravagant taste in parasols, takes umbrage, and sends for her admirer, Paul d'Arzac, to whose pleadings she inclines a favourable ear. Not the least anxiety of mind afflicts monsieur le mari. He simply telephones to another admirer of madame's, and she, after an amusing scene, first with one and then with the other, is unable to choose either to go to dinner, and therefore decides to go with her husband, who explains to the baffled gallants how clever he has been. There is one curious circumstance about the comedietta which deserves a note here, and that is the curious resemblance (which is, of course, quite accidental) between the husband's final speech to his wife, in which he begs her pardon for all that she has done amiss, to that found in Mr. Pinero's The Hobby Horse. M. Jacques d'Esteuil's remarks almost exactly coincide with those of Mr. Spencer Jermyn—a very extraordinary coincidence. Mlle. Jeanne Thomassin acted with a mercurial lightness of touch the part of the feather-brained wife; the gentleman from the States was amusingly caricatured by M. Galipaux; and M. Cooper presented a capital sketch of the level-headed husband.

Following the farce came a short causerie by M. Maurice Lefèvre, who commented on the drawing-room songs of the thirties—the late Georgian and the early Victorian era. He pointed out that the Romantic movement was the normal outcome of the post-Napoleonic reaction, and that it was distinguished by high ideals, by the naïveté of youth, and by its passionate love of the simple life of the country. The simpering affectation of that age is reproduced in the most piquant fashion in sentimental ballads—very precious in the salons of the period. M. Lefèvre in his interesting talk had something to say of the history of the songs and their authors, and interspersed his remarks with a number of amusing anecdotes. He described as a typical song of the period "Jenny l'Ouvrière," delightfully rendered by Mlle. Thomassin, who also charmed by her interpretation of "Vingt Sous de Perinette." M. Cooper sang with most artistic effect the patriotic "Ma Normandie" and "Le Vieux Ruban," and the two artists were heard to advantage in "Colinette au bois," the duet that concluded the performance. The accompaniments were very delicately played on a harpischord.

The closing attraction, called a macédoine, in one act, by Felix Galipaux and Petit Margin, was entitled "Agence Dramatique."

Virgule .....M. FELIX GALIPAUX
Frambosini .....M. PAULET
Parisette .....MLLE. NOBERT

The dramatic importance of this trifle is nil; but it gave M. Galipaux opportunities to be diverting in song and dance, and gag, and that is a great deal to the admirers of this clever comedian, who displayed a wealth of broad comedy in the rôle of Virgule, a comic conjuror. The actor did a number of card tricks, and generally made fun of divers sorts of entertainers.

"IN THE ARENA."

A Duologue by Arthur Holmes-Gore, Produced for the first time on any stage at a Matinée, at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, on Thursday, July 19.

Mrs. "Millie" Faraday....MISS ELSIE CHESTER.
Fred Luton .....MR. ARTHUR HOLMES-GORE
A Servant .....MISS DOROTHY HOLMES-GORE

The scene of the duologue is the private office of Mr. Fred Luton, Lincoln's Inn. The servant is discovered tidying up the fireplace. Millie enters, expecting to see Mr. Luton at his writing-table; but not finding him there, she orders the servant to leave the room, and makes an inspection of the table and drawers, finding on the table the solicitor's diary, and in one of the drawers a French novel and the "Racing Calendar." This appears to somewhat surprise Millie, who evidently thought Mr. Luton was more seriously devoted to his profession. Mr. Luton enters, and is evidently much annoyed at the liberty taken with his private papers, etc. He informs Millie that such conduct is actionable, and poses on the dignity of his profession. Millie only laughs at him, and says that he ought to be as nice and amiable in his office as he always has been when boating on the river with her. After some interesting and amusing conversation, in which Mr. Luton tries to impress upon Millie the inadvisability of ladies, even wives, ever visiting their friends or husbands at his place of business, mainly for the reason that the cares and worries of the day always made them austere and unlovable, quite in contrast to their demeanour after business hours, Mr. Luton then goes on to compare his office to "an arena" in which gladiators fought for existence, and enlarges considerably on the importance of his professional work. Millie, however, does not believe a word of it, and, after flinging his papers about, consents to become Mrs. Luton on the understanding that she can visit the office whenever she thinks fit. Mr. Luton then caves in as to the importance, pecuniary and otherwise, of his professional practice, and informs Millie that he is a rich man from private sources.

Miss Elsie Chester was charmingly vivacious as Millie, giving full expression to the many witty remarks allotted to her rôle. Mr. Holmes-Gore was capital as Mr. Luton, and his efforts to maintain a stern and dignified bearing caused much merriment. Miss Dorothy Holmes-Gore made her first appearance on any stage at this matinée, and hit off successfully a sluttish looking juvenile slavey, speaking the few lines allotted to the part with distinctness and effect.

After the customary cleaning, the St. Helens Theatre Royal will be reopened on Bank Holiday, 6th August, with Home, Sweet Home, by Mr. Frank Lindo. The prices of admission to dress circle and stalls are to be reduced, so that henceforth the prices will range from 4d. to 2s., with extra fees for booking or early doors. These prices will not, however, apply to the Carl Rosa week.

The Kennington Theatre, which closes to-day for the usual summer renovations, will reopen on 6th August with the production of a drama by Vane A. Shirley, entitled The Spider and the Fly, which will be presented by Messrs. Sydney Cooper and E. Carpenter's company.

ACTORS' ASSOCIATION.

The fourth bi-monthly meeting of the members was held on Thursday, the 12th inst., when there were present Messrs. Cecil Barth, F. G. Bayly, C. B. Bedells, Pascoe Bioletti, Acton Bond, Edwin Coates, John R. Collins, Percy Crawford, F. Cremlin, Clive Currie, Herbert Dickeson, A. E. Drinkwater, Lawrence Grove, Monckton Hoffe, P. L. Julian, Quinton McPherson, Walter Pemberton, Langford Reed, F. Clive Ross, J. E. Savery, A. M. Seaton, Adnam Sprange, Douglas Vigors, McIntyre Wicksteed, and George Wyley; and Misses Lucy Beaumont, Marian J. Bird, Marie E. Ellis, Gladys Ffolliott, Eleanor Gilbart, Armine Grace, Georgina Hamilton, Sydney Keith, Vera Leslie, Amy Lloyd-Desmond, Rose Mathews, Kate Maynard, Rosetta McLaren, Helen Mosley, Katharine Parry, Minnie Rayner, Lucy Sibley, and Blanka Stewart.

Mr. Acton Bond was elected chairman upon the proposition of Mr. Cecil Barth, seconded by Miss Gladys Ffolliott. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed. Miss Vera Leslie proposed the following scheme: "To reduce the present subscription of 15s. by a gradually decreasing scale until an annual subscription of 5s. be financially possible, and thus to bring the advantages of the Association within the means of all members of the theatrical profession." It is proposed: 1 (present members)—That any member introducing a new member shall be entitled to have his own subscription for the following year reduced, if 15s., to 10s.; if 10s., to 7s. 6d.; or if 7s. 6d., to 5s. 2 (new members)—That all new members thus introduced be admitted at the reduced rate of 10s. for the first year, and, if introducing a new member during that year, be entitled to have their own subscription for the following year reduced to 7s. 6d., and so on, as above. Entrance fee of 5s. in all cases. The benefits to be thus derived are shown in the following tables:—

Original Sub., 1906, 15s. (reduced to 10s.)	Reduced Sub., 1907, with New Members, £1.	(5s. gain.)
Original Sub., 1907, 10s. (reduced to 7s. 6d.)	Reduced Sub., 1908, with New Members, 17s. 6d.	(7s. 6d. gain.)
Original Sub., 1908, 7s. 6d. (reduced to 5s.)	Reduced Sub., 1909, with New Members, 15s.	(7s. 6d. gain.)

Each new member implies a gain of either 5s. or 7s. 6d., besides entrance fee. Assuming the membership for 1906 to be 1500, and that by the proposed scheme 500 new members are added yearly, the income of the Association will be added to as under:—

Number of Members.		Sub. s. d.	Year.	Income. £ s. d.
	1,500	15 0	1906	1,125 0 0
1,000 / 1,000	2,000	15 0 / 10 0	1907	1,230 0 0
1,000 / 1,000 / 500	2,500	15 0 / 10 0 / 7 6	1908	1,437 10 0
1,000 / 1,000 / 500	3,000	15 0 / 10 0 / 5 0	1909	1,625 0 0

Increase since 1906, £500.
Entrance fees of 1,500 new members, £375.
Total increase, £875.

When a membership of 4500 is reached the income derived from a universal 5s. subscription will be the same as now (with 1500 members at 15s.)—that is, £1125; but as the working expenses with such a large increase of members will be necessarily greater, it is proposed to meet this in two ways: First, by a "volunteer" fund, established by members who are willing to subscribe 10s. instead of 5s. Many of the present members—probably at least a third—would be quite willing to do this, as they do not consider the present rate of 15s. excessive. Such members would be free at any time to reduce their subscription to 5s. should they be desirous of so doing. Secondly, by special performances, at which members of the Association only would appear and would give their services. This might also be made the means of giving provincial actors a much-desired and at present generally unattainable opportunity of making a London appearance.

Mesdames Georgina Hamilton, Helen Mosley, and Lucy Sibley and Messrs. Cecil Barth, Frank G. Bayly, Pascoe Bioletti, F. Cremlin, A. E. Drinkwater, Quinton McPherson, Clive Ross, and Douglas Vigors having spoken upon the motion, which was seconded by Mr. George Wyley, it was put to the meeting and declared to be lost.

Arbitrations.—Miss Gladys Ffolliott having given notice that she wished to speak on "arbitration," asked that the matter might stand over until the next bi-monthly meeting. This was agreed to.

Mr. Cecil Barth then read his paper, "What the Members Want," a full report of which appeared in our last issue.

Three out of the four resolutions proposed by Mr. Barth were carried. The remaining motion was that an experiment should be tried next summer of running a company of members of the Association who may happen to be disengaged on commonwealth lines.

This was seconded by Mr. Adnam Sprange, and after some observations by Mr. A. E. Drinkwater, Mr. Quinton McPherson, and Mr. Clive Ross it was agreed that the further consideration of the question be deferred till the bi-monthly meeting in November next.

The names of Pascoe Bioletti, Marian J. Bird, Herbert Dickeson, Eleanor Gilbart, Minnie Rayner, Langford Reed, F. Clive Ross, Lucy Sibley, and Adnam Sprange were submitted, and the meeting referred the question of their election as "missioners" to the council.

Mr. Pascoe Bioletti proposed and Miss Gladys Ffolliott seconded a vote of thanks to Mr. Cecil Barth for his paper.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Acton Bond for presiding as chairman concluded the proceedings.

The body appointed to control the operations of the Missioners of the Actors' Association held a special meeting on Monday, when the chair was occupied by Mr. Quinton McPherson. There were present—Mesdames Georgina Hamilton and Blanche Stanley, Messrs. Cecil Barth, Leslie Carter, S. Major Jones, A. E. Drinkwater (deputy-chairman of the Council), and C. B. Rivington (representing the secretary).

The question as to changing the name of the "Missioners" was again under discussion, and ultimately it was unanimously agreed that this body should in future be known under the title of "Commissioners."

The form to be used by the Commissioners for their monthly report of work done was approved of after some slight alterations had been made.

The further set of reasons for joining the Association, drawn up by the secretary, were under consideration, and after some discussion a new set of seven was compiled from these, and it was agreed that the matter should be placed on the agenda for the meeting on Monday next, the 23rd inst.

The usual weekly meeting of the Council was held on Tuesday. There were present—Mr. C. Aubrey Smith (chairman), Mr. A. E. Drinkwater (deputy-chairman), Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Mesdames Carlotta Addison, Kate Bishop, and Saba Raleigh, and Messrs. Cecil Barth, Acton Bond, Burton Cooke, F. Cremlin, Fewlass Llewellyn, Quinton McPherson, M. R. Morand, Walter Russell, Algernon Syms, Fredk. Volpe, Hubert Willis, and C. B. Rivington (representing the secretary).

The hon. solicitors reported progress in several matters, and stated that they had advised members on points submitted.

A case of alleged bogus management was under consideration, and the secretary was instructed to file the same for future reference. The scheme affecting the agency brought forward by Mr. Cecil Barth at the last bi-monthly meeting, and referred to the Council, was under consideration, and it was agreed that the decision of the Council should be postponed until an opportunity occurred of consulting the entire body of members.

Another proposition to form a committee for the reading of new plays was approved of generally by the Council, but it was decided that the matter should stand over until Mr. Barth could report more fully on the subject.

Rosalie Dupré, George Lyttleton, jun., and Henry Howard were nominated for election to the Association.

The report of the representative body of the Commissioners was given, and Mesdames Marian J. Bird, Eleanor Gilbart, Minnie Rayner, Lucy Sibley, and Messrs. Pascoe Bioletti, Herbert Dickeson, Langford Reed, F. Clive Ross, and Adnam Sprange were elected to that body.

The report of the Actors' Day Committee was received. The Suggestion Book was considered and an entry made.

The Finance and General Purposes Committee held a meeting on Tuesday last. There were present—Messrs. Acton Bond (chairman), A. E. Drinkwater, C. Aubrey Smith, Hubert Willis, and C. B. Rivington (for secretary).

Several matters of routine were discussed, and the secretary received instructions.

"HANDSOME JIM."

A Play, in Four Acts, by Malcolm Watson, Produced at the Theatre Royal, Margate, on Monday, July 16.

The Right Hon. Douglas Ashbourne .....MR. A. E. ANSON
Matthew Strode, M.P. .....MR. CLARENCE BLAKISTON
"Jim" Bretton .....MR. O. P. HEGGIE
Arthur Onslow .....MR. H. G. MASON
Jerry Mayne .....MR. EDMUND BAKER
Percy Dollingford .....MR. ARTHUR ELDRED
John Raikes .....MR. E. F. SAXON
Bob Keary .....MR. ARTHUR ELDRED
Old Dick .....MR. A. AUSTIN-LEIGH
Mr. Dewlake .....MR. EDWARD MERVYN
Chesham .....MR. S. T. FIELD
Sutton .....MR. M. EDWARDS
Sam .....MR. GEORGE FRYE
Mr. Raeburn .....MR. STALLINGER
Mr. Grayson .....MR. GERALD FOX
Lady Franklyn .....MRS. CULLING
Hilda Strode .....MISS EVELYN D'ALROY
Polly .....MISS HELENA MILLAIS

With a view to an early appearance in London, Mr. Arthur Bourchier's special company appeared in this new production, which received the stamp of approval from a fairly numerous audience. The play has an interesting plot, which is sustained throughout, the time being the present, and the action taking place in London. In Act I. Lady Franklyn is giving an "At Home" at her town residence, among the invited guests being Douglas Ashbourne, the Chancellor of the Exchequer. Strained relations evidently exist between the Chancellor and Matthew Strode, M.P., the leader of the Labour Party, and in order to give the two Parliamentarians an opportunity of arriving at a better understanding Mr. Strode, with his daughter Hilda, is also invited to the reception, when Ashbourne gathers from Strode that the price of his support and that of his party is a seat in the Cabinet. Whilst this discussion is proceeding, Arthur Onslow, one of Hilda's admirers, who arrives late, imparts the news that the cabman who drove him to the house is no other than Jim Bretton, formerly a member of the Home Office staff, who had magnanimously taken upon his own shoulders the crime of another and thus lost his post and disappeared. Having received a sovereign instead of his fare of a shilling, Jim sends it in to the donor, and is sent for, and sneered at by Onslow. Jim used to be Hilda's lover and a great favourite with Lady Franklyn who, in Act II., traces him, by the aid of his badge number, to old John Raikes' mews. Jim has been the making of a declining business, and is the idol of Raikes, his daughter Polly, and Old Dick, a stable help. The arrival of the two ladies leads to a tender scene between Hilda and Jim, and Strode, seeing in which direction the wind is blowing, offers Jim a post as general overseer of a mine in Mexico. The offer is declined, but that of Ashbourne, who places at his disposal the position of private secretary to the Minister, is accepted.

Act III. finds Jim installed at Downing-street, where he receives a visit from Bob Keary, his erstwhile stable companion, Polly Raikes, and her father. From them he learns that Strode has been at the mews trying to find out what he could to Jim's disadvantage, and that, in paying over a "fiver," he dropped a paper, which they have brought for Jim's inspection. Jim hands it to his chief, and when Strode arrives he is faced with the agreement on his part to sell his party to the Opposition for a seat in the Cabinet. Finding himself trapped Strode sends off a message as a counter-move, in response to which his daughter comes, and learns of her father's duplicity. There is an affecting scene between Jim and Hilda, who wants him to destroy the paper, but the secretary's duty to his chief prevents him playing the traitor. Ashbourne, who has overheard the conversation, disdains to use the information, and hands Jim the document to send to Hilda. Hilda is delighted to get the paper back, and the fact that Jim's downfall was due to no fault of his own, but that he went into voluntary exile to shield his brother, only serves to heighten her admiration for him. Strode, who has followed his daughter, bids her return with him. "I will go with you," Hilda says, "but there is a stronger claim even than a father's"; and turning to her lover, says, "When you bid me come, Jim, I will come to you whatever the cost and in spite of all opposition."

The new piece, which was produced under the direction of the author and Mr. Austin-Leigh, was remarkably well played. Mr. A. E. Anson played with quiet dignity and convincing force as the Rt. Hon. Douglas Ashbourne. In the encounters with Strode there was a dignity about his acting that made the character intensely real. Matthew Strode found a capable exponent in Mr. Clarence Blakiston. Deceit and cunning and the craving for power were displayed in all his actions, but it was a part that was in no way overdone. Jim Bretton was happily represented by Mr. O. P. Heggie. The scene with his sweetheart when he was besought to destroy the evidence of her father's duplicity was finely acted, and in the other scenes he was equally effective. Lady Franklyn was a delightful presentment at the hands of Mrs. Culling. Her love scene with Ashbourne was a pretty piece of unaffected acting, and throughout she rendered yeoman service in the production, the success of which was in no small degree due to her efforts. Hilda Strode, as played by Miss Evelyn D'Alroy, was a charming and altogether lovable character admirably played. Old Dick was in the capable hands of Mr. Austin-Leigh, who portrayed the garrulous, philosophical old stable help to perfection. John Raikes was quietly portrayed by Mr. E. F. Saxon; Bob Keary was in good hands with Mr. Arthur Eldred; and Polly Raikes found an admirable exponent in Miss Helena Millais, a young actress who shows promise of excellent work in the near future. As Mr. Dewlake, Mr. Edward Mervyn was good; and the other characters in the cast all performed their allotted tasks creditably.

Her Majesty the Queen (Messrs. A. and C. Black inform us) has graciously accepted a copy of Mr. Earl Hodgson's book on salmon fishing, just published.

ACTORS' CRICKET MATCH.

LONDON v. PROVINCIAL.

At Kennington Oval on Friday, the 13th inst., London actors tried their skill on the cricket field against some of their provincial brethren, the match being held in the cause of charity, with the view of increasing the Actors' Benevolent Fund and the Actors' Orphanage Fund. The attendance was exceedingly poor. Practically visitors were only to be seen in the grand stand, and this was but sparsely filled, the few seats that were taken up being occupied by relatives and personal friends of the players. In fact, it could not be said that the public was represented at all. Among those present were Mr. Henry Lytton, Mr. Courtice Pounds, Mr. J. D. Beveridge, Mr. Horton Cooper, Mr. J. J. Dallas, Mr. J. M. Crawford, Mr. M. R. Morand, Mr. Arthur Anderson, Mr. Philip Cunningham, Mr. Ralph Kimpton, Mr. and Mrs. Akerman May, Miss Lily Brayton, Mrs. Gerald du Maurier, Miss Muriel Beaumont, Miss Dora Barton, Mrs. Aubrey Smith, and Mrs. Nye-Chart. During part of the afternoon a number of selections were rendered in fine style by the Imperial Bijou orchestra.

The London actors showed infinitely better "form" than the provincials, although the best single innings, which resulted in a score of 60, is to be set to the account of a country actor, Mr. W. H. Morgan. Mr. Oscar Asche came next with 60, his vigorous hitting being followed by vociferous cheers from his admirers. The provincials, who were decidedly unlucky in not having Reeve Denbigh and the two Homewoods available, won the toss, and had the advantage of batting first on a capital wicket, but did so badly that five wickets were down for 39. Then Messrs. W. H. Morgan, J. P. Wilson, Horace Mills, and P. Knight rendered valuable assistance, and the innings realised 183. The London actors easily topped this, Mr. Oscar Asche playing excellent cricket for his sixty runs. Starting somewhat slowly, he gradually livened up till well set, when boundaries followed each other in quick succession and his thunderous voice bellowed its loudest. Mr. V. O'Connor was also responsible for a praiseworthy bit of work; and, in fact, all of the London actors played exceedingly well. Although included in the team, Mr. Gerald du Maurier had not the opportunity of batting, which was a pity, as imagination rendered him particularly interesting on account of his impersonation of "Raffles, the cricketer and criminal," at the Comedy. It was unfortunate that E. D. Burnaby, the fast bowler for the Provincials, and P. F. Knox, their wicket-keeper, got hurt, and had to retire from the game. Ultimately the London actors triumphed by three wickets and 50 runs, their score being 233 as against the 183 of their opponents. Of the bowlers Mr. B. Egerton came out with the best average, as he dismissed five of the provincial batters for 34, Mr. Aubrey Smith coming next with four wickets for 49. Much was expected of Mr. Smith, remembering his cricketing past, and the cheers which greeted each wicket he captured no doubt brought memories of more strenuous days, when the sobriquet of "Round the Corner Smith" followed his achievements as captain of Cambridge and Sussex. Like Oscar Asche, he has become a familiar figure at these events. Later in the afternoon rain fell heavily and intermittently, but as all the onlookers were under cover weather considerations did not affect their enjoyment to any great extent, although of course it interfered with the comfort of those upon the field. The details and scores are as follow:—

"PUT IT IN BLACK AND WHITE."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—It does not seem to be generally known that a form of contract between managers and artists has been drawn up and approved by the Touring Managers' Association and the Actors' Association; and if this were generally adopted it would do away with a lot of misunderstanding and ultimate litigation. One important clause in this contract is to the effect that in the event of any dispute arising it should be referred to the joint Board of Arbitration established by the two Associations. I think, with some slight modification, this same form of contract could be made to apply to engagements at London theatres.—Yours faithfully,

July 11, 1906. CECIL BARTH.

Sir Charles Villiers Stanford has been appointed a corresponding member of the Maatschaapij tot Bevoodering der Toonkunst, the premier musical society of the Netherlands, which has done much good work in reviving interest in the music of early Dutch musicians.

COUNCIL ENTERTAINMENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I see that our excellent and experienced confrère Mr. Wm. Bailey, of the Royal West London Theatre, has warned the London County Council that they are "venturing upon a dangerous undertaking. . . . They would be rushing on to enormous cost." This is in regard to the recent suggestion to provide full entertainments in the parks during the summer months and in town halls, &c., during the winter.

Oh, the poor ratepayers! What next will they be "commanded" to bear, and how long are they going to sit meekly silent and tolerate this reckless trading. It really seems reasonable to suppose that the rates will some day reach 19s. 11½d. in the £ if our kind and considerate Councillors and others are to have their own sweet way in everything. I overheard a man say the other day: "We have a lot of faddists on the Council time after time. Each individual comes along with some fresh scheme. One chap desires to place a finger-post at each street-corner pointing to the shop that retails sherbert. Another wiseacre wishes to close up the Strand and Regent-street because women with naughty winks do sometimes assemble therein. Another enthusiast intends to prevent the slaughter of sheep, oxen, &c., because it is barbarous and out of date, and because he thinks that turnips and mangold wurzels contain all the nourishment necessary to sustain jaded humanity, who—as individuals—should be able to exist on twopence a day." And so on, ad infinitum.

We in the entertainment professions are faced with the outrageous suggestion that the commercial enterprise displayed by places of entertainment should be for ever doomed. All the money so carefully invested shall be lost, and every manager shall be made to feel that the disciples of crankyism on the County Council not only know far more than the said managers, but fully intend to put their ideas into practice, take up the onerous responsibilities of ministering to public requirements, and—starving the managers. Truly a pretty picture!

In your last issue you say that "thousands of hard-working citizens have invested" money in public entertainment concerns, and I take the liberty of setting out hereunder the undertakings worked under limited liability conditions, and the approximate amount of capital, debentures, &c., sunk in each concern. It is well to state that this list represents but a modicum of the amount of capital supporting entertainment ventures, as it will be well within your knowledge that many are worked on private enterprise or by small private syndicates:—

Glancing at the above list, we observe that most of the companies are sound concerns, backed by men of experience in their line of business, and it would seem to be inexplicable that a certain gentleman who recently bequeathed £250,000 for the cause of temperance should have had the harmless entertainment so much to heart that one of his provisions reads:—

> "In providing not more than £500 per annum towards the cost of opposing in any part of England the grant of licences to public houses, theatres, music halls, and other places of entertainment."

Many philosophers aver that one of the most extraordinary elements of civilisation is the interfering spirit ever hovering around us. Now, entertainment managers are not only faced and harassed by unfair municipal and council competition which really ought to be made unlawful in a free country, but Tom, Dick, and Harry now intend to make wills in which they will bequeath money in trust to fight down the freedom of the masses. Think of the effect of an unlimited continuance of such an idea! Let us, by all means, fight our respective battles man to man in life; but when it comes to leaving wolves backed by money to snarl and growl at customs, then it would appear time to shut down the brakes.

What with the old tale of the subsidised theatres, the County Council Grand Opera House, the County Council Minstrel Troupe or Pierrot Crowd, and the bequests of gentlemen against the amusements of the people, it does not seem unreasonable to dream that we—even in this generation—may have to creep about in fear and trembling in case an extra deep-drawn sigh may be considered a direct contravention of the law.

In conclusion, it would not be out of place to iterate the fact that "A School to Promote Broad-mindedness among the Ambitious" would be very welcome at the moment, and the London County Council—by encouraging such an institution—would be benefiting their own dominions, and give an excellent cue to every municipal body throughout the world. Many of us in the entertainment professions would hail with delight such a school!—Yours faithfully,

London, July 16, WAT W. ESSPEA.

ACTORS' DAY.

The roll of actors and actresses favourable to the establishment of Actors' Day is growing daily, and the letters which the committee receive give unmistakable proof of the warmth with which the scheme is welcomed by all concerned. The following, in addition to those whose names have already been published, have promised their support:—Adale, Florence; Anderson, Millar; Antley, George; Averill, Harry; Aynesworth, Allan; Barratt, W. Burgess; Beardsley, Mabel; Bedford, Nora; Bellingham, Isa; Bishop, Gwendolen; Black, Jessica; Black, Kenneth; Black, Kenneth, jun.; Blande, Brereton Edith; Bowyer, Arthur; Bowyer, Maud; Brandon, Louise; Bromwich, F. As it is, unfortunately impossible to communicate directly with all who are interested in Actors' Day, the committee ask for the co-operation of all who are willing to assist in the work of organisation. Copies of the appeal, and forms for signature, will be sent to those who will be kind enough to write for them.

If one member in each company playing, and residents in different parts of the country, would do this, and endeavour to obtain promises of help from their friends, they would be rendering excellent service.

All communications should be addressed to the Actors' Day Organising Committee, 10, King street, Covent Garden, W.C.

MR. NORMAN V. NORMAN AS COUNT HANNIBAL.

Count Hannibal himself, one is almost inclined to dub one of the very best of Mr. Norman's creations. Most admirably does the actor seem to have caught the novelist's conception of what is, as already hinted, a profoundly enigmatic character—a mixture of aristocratic pride, strong will and inflexible purpose on the one hand, and cold, cynical, pitiless yet bantering, mocking brutality on the other, with more than a soupcon of diplomatic cunning, finesse, and intellectual adroitness thrown in. In the midst of a brilliant crowd of silken doubletted cavaliers and brocaded, richly jewelled ladies of high degree at the French Court, the men with their glittering steely eyes, vandyke beards, and upward pointing moustaches, reminding one of pictures by the Old Masters—Mr. Norman stands most prominently forth, a handsome, commanding figure in vivid scarlet cavalier suit and trappings, and endows this fiery Benedick-cum-Othello-cum-Machiavelli, with all the external authority and dominion of the impulsive, yet quick-witted tactician that he is. He's distinctly a man of action—but he wraps his purpose to some extent in an air of mystery that harmonises fitly with the subtle riddle of his character as a whole. In any case from a dramatic point of view, Mr. Norman's study is powerful, engrossing, and distinguished enough to command unstinted admiration.—The Brighton Standard, May 25, 1906.

An amusing interlude was provided in the House of Commons in the small hours of Tuesday morning when the Musical Copyright Bill issued triumphantly through the turbulent times of its committee stage. Mr. O'Hare, the member for North Monaghan, had moved an amendment, and after it had been discussed a division was called. At this point Mr. O'Hare was understood to intimate that he desired to raise a point of order. According to the rules of the House, he could only do so—the question having been put—sitting and wearing his hat. As Mr. O'Hare had no hat, an hon. member folded up his order paper into the shape of a cocked hat and offered it to his brother in distress, by whom it was rejected. Another hon. member meanwhile crossed the house with an ordinary silk hat, which he placed at the hon. member's service. It was several sizes too large for Mr. O'Hare, but he put it on, and amid such merriment, submitted his "point of order," which turned out to be merely a request to be allowed to withdraw his amendment.

Mr. Lingford Carson's mascot play, The Drama of Life, is having a most successful suburban tour. On Monday at the Shakespeare, Clapham, M. Auguste van Biene was an enthusiastic spectator, and after the performance, warmly complimented the manager of the company (Mr. Edward van Biene) on the excellence of the show. Mr. T. E. Dunville, the famous comedian, occupied a box on Tuesday, and on Wednesday Mr. Samuel James (on the look-out for a big attraction for his circuit) was in the stage-box

Mr. F. M. Paget, we regret to hear, has been very seriously ill through shock to the entire system, caused by leaping from an omnibus when going at full speed. Inflammation of one of the legs and blood poisoning supervened. For some days the patient was in a critical condition, but on Monday there was a change for the better, and there is now gradual improvement, but it will be some time before Mr. Paget can be out and about again.

Doggett's Coat and Badge, the legacy of the well-known eighteenth century actor, Mr. Thomas Doggett, will be decided on Friday, Aug. 3, at 12 noon. Eight young scullers have entered for the contest, the trial heats of which are to be rowed on Wednesday next.

DEATH OF MISS GAYNOR ROWLANDS.

It is with great regret that we announce the death of Miss Gaynor Rowlands, who passed away on Wednesday. An operation was successfully performed on the 12th inst., but owing to Miss Rowlands' weakened condition her system was unable to stand the strain, and she finally succumbed to heart failure. Miss Rowlands had been connected with the stage for many years, and always displayed the greatest enthusiasm for her vocation. She made a lengthened tour of India during 1901-2, and afterwards scored a distinct success as Hester in My Lady Molly, the popular comedy opera by Sidney Jones, written by G. H. Jessop, and produced at Terry's Theatre on March 14, 1903. She then joined Mr. George Edwardes' Gaiety company, where she speedily became a great favourite both before and behind the curtain. She appeared in many pieces, notably The Orchid, La Poupée, and The Spring Chicken. Combining as she did with her great personal attractions talents of no mean order, both of singing and dancing, her loss will create a lasting void both among the public and her many friends. The funeral will take place on Monday, the cortège leaving 13, Cavendish-road, St. John's Wood, at 2.30 p.m., for Finchley Cemetery.

PLAYGOERS AT THE BOTANIC.

The picturesque pleasaunces of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Regent's Park, were thronged on Tuesday evening with a crowd of playgoers and their friends. The weather was perfect, and the magnificent foliage of spreading acacias, stately beeches, and graceful limes, and other beautiful specimens of arboriculture, glowed with the glint of thousands of fairy lamps, lending a softened splendour to the calm, warm summer night. Cavaliers, dames, and demoiselles—the women folk in the daintiest and lightest of fabrics—flitted about the greenest of swards bordering each side of the grand walk, where long bamboo rods holding lighted Japanese and Chinese lanterns bent over so as to form a long illuminated archway of subdued incandescence. Here in close proximity to the band of His Majesty's Royal Horse Guards (Blue) one could enjoy a cooling drink, and listen meanwhile to Rossini's fine illustrative music in the overture William Tell, to that march of light-hearted gaiety—so typically Parisian—"La Matichiche," or to the more tender strains of "Love, could I only tell thee?" which must have had a romantic significance for scores of happy couples. Inside the spacious conservatory an excellent programme of vocal and instrumental music was provided under the direction of Mr. Seymour Dicker, and among the artists who won special recognition were Miss Olga Antoni, who sang with delightful finish and charm old English ditties, and the brothers Tscherniavsky, three juvenile executants of exceptional promise, who were heard to considerable advantage in Sulzer's "Summernight" and Pauper's "Spinnlied"; Mr. David Evans, an excellent bass baritone, who sang W. H. Squire's song, "Like Stars Above"; Mr. Walter Hyde, Miss Annie Bartle, and Miss Ivy Ancove, a violinist who chose a Hungarian piece for one of her solos, and Miss Frances Reeve. A natural amphitheatre was found for an al fresco entertainment in the vicinity of a grassy knoll, and "under the greenwood tree" we heard Mr. Alfred Capper whistle as he only can "Les Papillons," the well-known polka by Waldteufel, a most difficult selection that was rendered with perfect finish. Unfortunately, the piano—an excellent Steinway—was not in tune with Mr. R. B. Hopkins's bells, and therefore his artistic efforts as a campanologist in a pretty but rather cloying ballad were not so successful as they deserved to be. He found an excellent accompanist in Mr. Charles E. Johnson. Mr. Will Ballard heartily amused his audience by his rendering of Miss Vesta Tilley's song, "The Seaside Sultan," and gave as an encore a well-written and quaint parody of "Navahoe." Miss Aimee Bebb was quite successful in "My Toreador." There were compliments in plenty for the dancing of the Davis trio of smart and attractive girls; and Mr. Southey's banjo solo was most acceptable. Much entertainment was found in the scientific readings of Professor Hubert, phrenologist and palmist, and of Madame Beatrice, who also read the lines of the hand. Additional fun was derived from the awarding of the prizes for ladies, each lady having a numbered ticket presented to her on entering the gardens, a "draw" deciding the prize-winners. Mr. and Mrs. W. Sparkes "received" the members and their guests.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

An orchestral and choral concert was given at the Royal College on Thursday evening, July 19, the concert opening with R. Strauss's Symphonic Poem "Don Juan." The young students in the orchestra simply revelled in the clashing chords and violent contrasts of this remarkable work; but judiciously controlled by their conductor, Sir Charles V. Stanford, the orchestra, on the whole, gave a fairly artistic performance. In his violoncello solo of Max Bruch's lovely "Canzona," Mr. F. G. Parkington played like an artist, evidently realising the many beauties of this fine work, being at the close rewarded by loud and long continued applause. Miss Maria Yelland was hardly well advised in attempting so difficult an air as "Ah! mon fils!" from Meyerbeer's Le Prophète, although the young lady has a fine vibrant contralto voice; but for such an air she really requires operatic experience. The novelty of Thursday's concert was a work by G. von Holst, entitled "Songs without words for Orchestra," which was "recommended for performance by the Committee of the Patron's Fund, as it was held over from the concert given on July 3." Mr. Holst's two songs were entitled "Country Song," very suggestive of country life and dances on the village green, the other and most important composition, a "Marching Song," did the composer great credit, both in its stirring melody and the clever and suggestive tramp, tramp of a marching regiment. At the close the young composer was called to the front amidst a perfect storm of applause. The concluding item was of somewhat serious a character, being no less than Schumann's "Scenes from Goethe's Faust, Part III." It proved less interesting than the other work done at this concert. Although the soloists bravely attacked their difficult task, the most satisfactory portions of this fine work was the clever and harmonious singing of the chorus and concerted music. The work was sung in German in a manner that did credit to the training the young students have received. The orchestral parts were also skilfully performed. Sir C. V. Stanford conducted all compositions with the exception of G. von Holst's two works, which were conducted by the composer.

Miss Carlotta De Yonson and company produced two new sketches at the Grand Theatre, Sheffield, on Monday. The first one, entitled Love and Hate, by Mr. J. F. Austin, is a strong dramatic story of a young farmer who is temporarily convinced of his wife's faithlessness by the passing off of a girl who bears a strong resemblance to her. The other sketch, entitled His Little Hobby, by Mr. Claude Agnew, tells the story of a young couple who decide to marry against parental wishes, pretend to be hypnotised by the old gentleman, and refuse to be brought back to their normal state until they gain his consent.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

Walsall.—Her Majesty's Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—The Remington troupe of lady acrobats top the bill here this week, and are received with marked success; Fred Lincoln, comic singer, is good; Odeyne Spark is a delightful comedienne and dancer; the Maies contribute an acceptable comedy turn; the Henri Taylor trio, Mexican jugglers and equilibrists, give a capital performance; Marvelle's birds furnish a remarkably interesting entertainment; Abdy's canine circus, presented by a troupe of wonderful dogs, is greatly appreciated. A series of pictures on the American Bioscope concludes the programme.

Warrington.—Royal Court.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; General-Manager, Mr. J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred J. Reece.—Mr. Charles Windermere and company are here this week in the comedy, Facing the Music. Despite the fact that it has been seen several times here, the amusing episodes associated with the career of John Smith are as diverting as ever, and Mr. Windermere scores a big success; Mr. Norris Matthews, as the Rev. John Smith, imparts the requisite clerical reserve to ensure success; Mr. Wentworth Fane is good as Dick Desmond; and Mr. Graham Morrison is a typical Colonel; Mr. Henry Nelson does well as Sergeant Duffell; Miss Clare Mansfield acts charmingly as Mabel, a remark which applies to Miss Zoe Davies as Norah; Miss Phyllis Leslie is a chic Miss Fotheringay; and a portly Mrs. Ponting is Miss Evelyn Shelley. A pretty curtain-raiser, The Bookworm, is well acted by Mr. Windermere as David Holmes and Miss Clare Mansfield as Kate.

Royal Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; General-Manager, Mr. J. Potter; Director of Amusements, Mr. F. Willmot.—Good business is the order here this week, and a capital lot of turns is billed. Cline and Clark are a couple of diverting black and white artists, and Miss Florence Yayman is one of the most accomplished coon burlesque exponents seen here for some time; Henriette and Selina win approval with a refined vocal and instrumental entertainment, and Lillie Le Breton is a clever trapeze artist; Ford Williams, Celtic vocalist, sings several songs in fine style, and J. W. Barrett again scores; Henri Cazman is rightly styled the "one man music hall"; and the Bioscope pictures are all good.

West Bromwich.—Hippodrome and Theatre Royal.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. P. Moore.—Kennedy's Komiks still maintain their popularity and are playing to crowded houses nightly. Charlie Bayham has become quite a favourite in the town. The Incemores give a smart display of singing and dancing, and a return visit of the Sisters Dudley, who get repeated encores for their clever vocalism, is welcomed. An eminently successful item is that submitted by Mr. Frank Lyndon, who displays talent as musician on strange instruments. The Four Sisters Godfrey are well received. The Sisters Verne show great skill in their skipping-rope dance and well deserve the applause given. Little Hatch is still to the fore with his comic songs and funny antics; and the show is brought to a close by an animated picture of the Warwick Pageant.

West Hartlepool.—Palace.—Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten.—The programme submitted here includes some good turns. Keen and Waller exhibit exceptional dexterity in a comedy acrobatic performance, and well deserve their encore; the mimicry of Herbert Clifton, who successfully imitates some well-known stars, gains for him a flattering reception; the Jalvans, Oriental jugglers and top-spinners, are remarkably good in their particular line; a big hit is made by Colby and May, "the ventriloquist and the dancing doll"; Tiny Arnold, the dainty little comedienne and dancer; and Maisie Calder, pleasing in song and dance, are adding to their popularity; and the remainder of the programme is made acceptable by the efforts of Joe Dale, comedian, and Raymond's Bio-tableaux, which are up to the usual standard of excellence.

Weston-super-Mare.—Knightstone Pavilion and Opera House.—Manager, Mr. W. Payne.—Messrs. Ernest R. Abbott and F. C. Berridge's company is appearing here this week in Sapho and Trilby. On Monday the former was presented. Mr. Ernest R. Abbott gave a masterly interpretation of Jean Gaussin; excellent, too, was Mr. F. C. Berridge's impersonation of Henri Dechelette; Mr. Ernest Hartington's Flamant was a sound performance; Mr. George C. Doughty was an excellent Uncle Cessaire; Mr. John Lester's Caoudal deserves eulogy; so, too, does the Hettema of Mr. W. H. Davis-Brown. Mr. Fred C. Roper made the most of La Gouvernerie; old Legrand found an able exponent in Mr. Weedon Ross; Miss Ada Abbott gave an intensely dramatic representation of Fanny Legrand; Miss Mary Douglas's La Pipotte was commendable; Lucy was ably portrayed by Miss Phyllis Atherleigh; whilst Miss Marjorie Tennent was extremely good as Madam Hettema. A word of praise must be given Miss Louis Gilmore for her Aunt Divonne.

Grand Pier Pavilion.—The Vagabonds commenced a week's engagement here on Monday. Miss Merita Leclair gained loud applause for her singing of "Sally's Courtship"; Miss Belle Green's imitation of a little child reciting fairly convulsed the audience with laughter; Mr. Ernest Devereux was deservedly encored for his rendering of "When the boys go marching by"; Mr. Percival Mackenzie is an expert banjo player, and also excels as a lightning cartoonist; Mr. Harold Montague made the hit of the evening with his extremely humorous songs; the pictures shown by Mr. Frank Lens on the Bioscope are received with prolonged applause; Herr Julian Kindt's Austrian Blue Band has become very popular.

Weymouth.—Royal Opera House.—Manager, Mr. H. J. Nobbs.—The St. Louis Picture Company opened on Monday for the week, and attracted large audiences. The items include talking and singing pictures, introducing the swinging scene from Veronique, the Destruction of San Francisco, the Royal Wedding in Madrid, and many other interesting as well as humorous exhibits. The coloured films were much admired, and the management are to be congratulated on a really good show, which is under the control of their courteous business-manager, Mr. Walter W Hook.

Wigan.—The Hippodrome.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Worswick.—The drama, Her Luck in London, is the attraction here this week. The Hon. Fitzgerald O'Connor, the young Irish nobleman, is admirably impersonated by Mr. Charles A. Leicester; and the part of Richard Lenowen is played with marked subtlety by Mr. Alfred D. Adams. The Rev. Lionel Strong has an excellent representative in Mr. Douglas Tremayne; and Mr. J. Telby Dillsen is a great success as Jerry Gotobed. Miss Mary Davis takes the part of Lilian Harborne, the nun, in admirable style; and Miss Ada Roscoe scores as Mme. Gabrielle. Miss Mary Neil as Nellie Harborne is the life and soul of the piece, and plays the part with much vivacity and abandon Worthing.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—Mr. Hilton Frances and company opened here on Monday with The Medical Student. The farcical comedy went with a rare swing, and caused roars of laughter from start to finish. Mr. J. W. Hooper as Tom Burton works unsparingly, and is the life and soul of the piece; Mr. Harold West is also successful as Dick de Feetum; Mr. Hilton Frances, as Mr. Ambrose Burton, enacts the character of an irate parent; Mr. Arthur Rodney and Mr. Archie Bradshaw, as Sir Giles de Feetum and Professor Boski respectively, put in good work; Miss Ellen Snow is highly capable as Sophie; Miss D. A. Barrington is well placed as Alice; Miss Cecila Gordon, as the servant Sarah, is thoroughly amusing; while Miss Constance Groves gives an admirable impersonation of Mrs. Burton. On Thursday, Mr. Ellerslie Pyne and company appeared in the drama The Sleigh Bells.

Wrexham.—Empire Music Hall.—Proprietor, Mr. J. J. Scott; Manager, Mr. Herbert Nicholls.—The great attraction this week has been Mlle. Lucretia, a charming burlesque actress and speciality dancer. Haverley and Homer, refined comedians and dancers; Bert Boon, comedian; Les Eldines, duettists and sketch artists; Miss Minnie Rose, comedienne; and the pictures also contribute to the bill.

York.—Opera House.—Managing-Director, Mr. Wm. Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. Sidney Brook.—Dou-Ban is astonishing all this week, and is being well received; the Ringling trio of acrobats are clever in their business; and Spencer and Marks are also smart in their peculiar line; a really neat show is that of Fred Elton, who scores a huge success; the Brown and Kelly combination is an amusing item; Dan Conroy tells some funny stories; and charming Lil O'Gorman makes many friends. Yorkshire Tom, Blanche Holt, Meier and Mora, and the Bioscope complete the bill.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

FRAULEIN W.—The School for Scandal was adapted into German by Rudolf Genée under the title of Schleischer und Genossen, and produced at the Royal Schausspielhaus, Berlin, in September, 1869.

AN OLD LYCEUMITE.—Yes; Sir Henry Irving gave recitals in October, 1869, while he was acting at Drury Lane, and during that month appeared at the Westbourne Hall with the late H. J. Montague.

ARISTARCHOS.—It is dangerous to use the actual dialogue of a copyright novel. See the judgment in Warne v. Seebohm set out on p. 23 of "Law of Copyright," by A. A. Strong, published at this office.

A. WILLIAMS.—The cast of The Lancashire Witches produced at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, on October 20, 1879, was as follows:—Sir Ralph Ashton, Mr. Furneaux Cook; Richard Ashton, Mr. H. Hallam; Hopkins, Mr. J. Leitch; King James, Mr. R. Temple; Alizon, Miss Edith St. John; Chattox, Miss Bella Cuthbert; Dame Nutter, Miss Alice Cook; Mother Demdyke, Mrs. R. Power.

G. T. P.—It is against our rule to give the ages of members of the profession.

AUTO.—The Licenser of Plays, Lord Chamberlain's Office, St. James's Palace. The fee is a guinea for a one-act piece; two guineas for pieces of more than one act.

MRS. C.—(1) The Dragon of Wantley; or Old Mother Shipton, a pantomime by E. L. Blanchard, was produced at Drury Lane Theatre on Dec. 26, 1870. (2) The date of the death by drowning of Miss Bessie Edwards was July 22, 1878.

THE BARON.—On the original production of Jim the Penman at the Haymarket, on the afternoon of March 25, 1886, the play contained a French character named Baron Hauteville, played by M. Marius. When the piece was put into the evening bill on April 3, same year, this part was Germanised into Baron Hartfeld, and was played by Mr. Beerbohm Tree.

G. E. C.—The Little Squire, adapted by Mrs. William Greet and Horace Sedger from a novel by Mrs. De La Pasture, was produced at the Lyric, April 5, 1894. The principal parts were played by Messrs. Charles Sugden, Seymour and W. S. Laidlaw, Mrs. Edmund Phelps, and Misses Dorothy Hanbury, Mary Rorke, Rose Leclercq, Isa and Empsie Bowman, and Fanny Brough.

A. D.—Miss Dolores Drummond was the original Hortense in Jo, when that play was produced at the Globe Theatre in 1876.

BRIXTON.—A play by H. G. Donnelly, entitled Fashions, has been performed in America.

J. K.—Edwin Forrest, the American actor, died at Boston, U.S.A., on March 12, 1872. Consult "Edwin Forrest," by Laurence Barrett. Henry Irving played the part of Compton Kerr when Formosa, by Dion Boucicault, was produced at Drury Lane on August 5, 1869.

NERO.—Will reply next week.

BRITANNIA.—Write to Mr. Edgar Bateman (Francis, Day, and Hunter, 142, Charing Cross-road, who will probably be able to give you the required information.

E. A.—As far as we know, the title has not been used.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, JULY 21, 1906.

A GILBERT AND SULLIVAN REVIVAL.

When a proposition is made for the revival of a "stage classic" one is apt to pause and wonder what the "best friends" of the author really ought to desire. It is Lear's "best friend" who remarks, àpropos to the old king's death, "He hates him that would upon the rack of this tough world stretch him out longer." A "great success" is a combination, which may almost be deemed fortuitous, of author and actors. It is not fortuitous, but the result of the selective ability of author or manager. Yet it is wonderful how, in some magical manner, the man comes when the hour comes; and the woman, too, for that matter. How were the exact individuals for the original cast of H.M.S. Pinafore evolved in the persons of Mr. GEORGE GROSSMITH, Mr. RUTLAND BARRINGTON, Mr. RICHARD TEMPLE, Miss ALICE BARNETT, and Miss ROSINA BRANDRAM? They seemed to have been born to play the parts they sustained. One could imagine—and can imagine—nothing better.

This is one of the great difficulties of a revival: even if you collect the "old guard" from the four quarters of the theatrical earth, they are necessarily many years older. Some of them have probably departed from the earth altogether. And there is a curious tendency in the old actor, when replaced in a character in which he has once shone, to exaggerate, just as an ancient beauty overdoes the rouge and powder. The revival, it may be said with certainty, is never exactly the same thing as the original production. It may even be superior in certain respects; but it is different. To the palate of the old playgoing epicure there will always seem to be an inferiority.

And it is not only in the cast of a GILBERT and SULLIVAN revival that there would be a difference. Times change, and the public changes with them. When Pinafore and Patience were produced the country was positively pot-bellied with prosperity. People "did not know what to do with their money," and offered it, open-handed, to whoever would invent them a new pleasure. It was not by a mere coincidence that the Savoy Hotel, with its wonderfully delightful and splendidly expensive dinners, was practically contemporaneous with the Savoy Theatre. The whole spirit of the GILBERT and SULLIVAN opera was one of after-dinner Philistinism. It was not exactly cynicism; it was the easy-going, not too deep, indifferentism of the well-to-do Briton of the period as he lighted a cigar after an excellent repast. When the Captain's daughter in H.M.S. Pinafore drew a contrast between papa's luxurious home, with its Venetian mirrors, and everything that wasn't old from GILLOW'S, and her probable life as a sailor's wife, with one cracked looking-glass to view her face in, and dinner served up in a pudding-basin, she touched a note which echoed in the breast of her audience collectively. When the Bo'sun in Pinafore rolled out the admirably worded verses of "He is an Englishman," with its pungent sneer at patriotism, everyone felt that the question of the absurdity or excellence of that quality was settled for ever. One smiled at the eccentricity of those who in those distant days found fault with the War Office, and felt more than ever inclined to support economy in our arrangements for attack and defence.

A good deal of water has run beneath the bridges since then; and there have been a good deal of blood and many tears mingled with the stream. Mr. GILBERT, who, one fancies, as NAPOLEON said of DUROC, "never shed a tear," is hardly in tune with a generation impoverished by a vindication of "national honour," and rendered serious in spite of itself by its not-yet forgotten losses and bereavements. The GILBERT and SULLIVAN opera asked its hearers to think—just a little. Its wildest extravagances had their foundation in an ethical argument. Patience is a curious essay on the egotism of sexual love; and here and there throughout the other operas bits of quaint cynical philosophy crop up in the oddest manner, considering the nature of the entertainment. For Mr. GILBERT was far too practical an author to write, "all through," over the heads of his audience. He won the intelligent part of his patrons by his intelligence, and the foolish majority by his whimsical folly—the wise, half-melancholy folly of the jester who despises his master's guests, and takes their measure exactly, while himself no "jolly fellow" at all. Mr. GILBERT could at times be as "cheap" as popularity requires; witness the points of the non-seagoing First Lord of the Admiralty, the "fat woman" hits, the across-the-footlights appeal (against the old-fashioned rule in theatres) to a head fireman in a private box; and many others. And so he pleased all parties—of that period.

The present period is not exactly the same. In the early GILBERT and SULLIVAN time there yet lingered amongst lovers of light musical entertainments a certain demand for plan, coherence, and—strange to say—literature. Even the admiration for the old burlesques, with their elaborate puns, was based on cleverness in the management of words. All the best LECOCQ and OFFENBACH operas had "stories" and characters. We have "changed all that." As a rule, the modern musical play is as proper as the French pieces were—Frenchified; it is also as superior to the trammels of form as Mr. BERNARD SHAW himself, and as non-literary as a newspaper. And the musical play undoubtedly represents the ideal of "up-to-date" playgoers who form the majority.

We must not write, however, as if the GILBERT and SULLIVAN operas were all Gilbertianism. Several of them, such as Iolanthe and The Pirates of Penzance, were purely fantastic in idea, and not in the least philosophic. And they had the advantage of not being "worked to death," as the more popular operas were. Probably they might stand reviving. Somehow or other, nevertheless, when one thinks of a GILBERT and SULLIVAN revival in London one always sees difficulties—not for oneself, but for the capitalist who "runs the show." The imperative necessity is that, if a revival takes place, it shall be done not pretty well, but remarkably, strikingly well. For our own part, we would rather see a pretty good GILBERT and SULLIVAN, or even OFFENBACH-ian, revival than many modern musical plays; but we are not the general public. One has a feeling that the best chance of such a revival would be a series of matinées on the répertoire principle; but then there is the difficulty of the scenery. The trouble is that, if you do the revival superbly you risk a lot of money on an off-chance, and if you don't do it superbly, with something in the way of a new prima donna or extra good scenery as "spice," there is little chance of your getting your money back at all. The matter, however, may well be left to the judgment and decision of Mrs. D'OYLY CARTE, who is such a keen woman of business that she is not likely to be carried away by any dreams or hopes, and is capable of adding up the arguments pro and con a GILBERT and SULLIVAN revival much better than we have been able to do within the limits of a leading article.

MR. O'CONNOR'S BILL.

The following is the text of the Musical Copyright Bill, as passed in Committee and reported to the House:—

Clause 1.—Every person who sells, exposes, offers, or has in his possession for sale any printed copies of any musical work, or has in his possession any plates for the purpose of printing or reproducing pirated copies of any musical work, shall (unless he proves that he acted innocently) be guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction, and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding five pounds, and on a second or subsequent conviction to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding two months or to a fine not exceeding ten pounds. Any constable may take into custody without warrant any person who in any street or public place sells, exposes, offers, or has in his possession for sale any such copies as aforesaid.

2.—(1) If a court of summary jurisdiction is satisfied by information on oath that there is reasonable ground for suspecting that an offence against this Act is being committed on any premises, the Court may grant a search-warrant authorising the constable named therein to enter the premises between the hours of six of the clock in the morning and nine of the clock in the evening, and, if necessary, to use force for making such entry, whether by breaking open doors or otherwise, and to seize any copies of any musical work or any plates in respect of which he has reasonable grounds for suspecting that an offence against this Act is being committed.

(2) All copies of any musical work and plates seized under this section shall be brought before a court of summary jurisdiction, and if proved to be pirated copies or plates intended to be used for the printing or reproduction of pirated copies shall be forfeited and destroyed or otherwise dealt with as the court think fit.

(3) In this Act the expression "pirated copies" means any copies of any musical work written, printed, or otherwise reproduced without the consent lawfully given by the owner of the copyright in such musical work; and the expression "plates" includes any stereotype or other plates, stones, matrices, transfers, or negatives used, or intended to be used, for printing or reproducing copies of any musical work; provided also that the expressions "pirated copies" and "plates" shall not, for the purpose of this Act, be deemed to include perforated music rolls used for playing mechanical instruments, or records used for the reproduction of sound waves, or the matrices or other appliances by which such rolls or records respectively are made.

Mr. BILLY MCCLAIN is making a gratifying success with his coloured sextet, including Mme. Cordelia, in their sketch The Hottest Coon in Dixie, at the Palace, Blackburn, this week. No less than seven recalls were insisted upon on Monday night. Mr. McClain was compelled to make a speech before the applause would subside.

DEBATE ON THE PIRACY BILL.

The House went into Committee on Monday to resume the consideration of the Musical Copyright Bill, promoted by Mr. T. P. O'Connor.

On Clause 1 ("Penalty for being in possession of pirated music"),

Mr. BYLES moved an amendment providing that there must be knowledge that the music was pirated before the person selling, exposing, offering, or having in his possession for sale any pirated music should be guilty of an offence.

Mr. HARWOOD said no Bill had carried this clause before No stringency against the hawker would stop the production of pirated music. He was against a departure of this kind being made without good cause being shown.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL thought the objection taken was one of form rather than substance. The Act was exceptional, but the circumstances were also exceptional. Pirated music had no name of printer or publisher upon it, and, therefore, it might be seen at once that it had no authorised or legitimate origin. There were many cases in which Parliament had definitely thrown the onus upon the defendant in criminal cases. A person found in possession of stolen goods was presumed to be a guilty person unless and until he offered a good explanation of how he became possessed of such goods. There was ample precedent for this clause, and it was based on the recommendation of the Committee on Musical copyright, which was supported by two magistrates and also by Sir Harry Poland.

Mr. LUPTON saw no reason why the sale of pirated music should be made the subject of a criminal prosecution instead of a civil action. He objected to the onus of proof being put upon the hawker to make out his innocence. He had bought that day for twopence a beautiful piece of music entitled "Kathleen Mavourneen," which was not copyright. It had no publisher's name upon it, and he objected to any man being run in for selling it.

Mr. LLOYD MORGAN said the Bill as it stood was class legislation to which he had always taken the strongest objection. He insisted that with music, as with other things, the prosecution should be called upon to prove their case, and that it was not right that the onus of proving his innocence should be placed upon the prisoner. This was bad legislation. If the right of appeal to quarter sessions was taken away, as it was in this Bill, it was more essential that the onus of proving their case should be thrown upon the prosecution.

Mr. CREAN and Mr. DUNDAS WHITE supported the amendment.

Mr. A. C. MORTON wanted to know from the head of the Government whether he was going to advise the passing of exceptional legislation, whereby in future a Britisher would have to prove that he was innocent, or otherwise he would be taken to be guilty.

Mr. KEIR HARDIE, though his name was on the back of the Bill, said he sympathised with the amendment. He appealed to the Home Secretary to amend the clause so as to restrict its punitive operation to the producers of pirated music.

Mr. GLADSTONE said he could not accept the suggestion. If the hawker was exempt the difficulty would be enormously increased. The selling of pirated music was a regular business which had grown up in recent years. It was confined to a certain class who well knew that the music was pirated. As soon as a change in the law was made as proposed in the Bill the evil would be removed.

After further debate,

The Committee divided, and there voted:—

For the amendment	71
Against	213
Majority against	142

Mr. LUPTON moved to amend the clause by inserting a provision that the prosecution must be instituted by an authorised prosecutor.

Mr. GLADSTONE said this amendment was wholly unnecessary.

The amendment was negatived.

Mr. GLADSTONE moved to omit the penalty of imprisonment for a first offence, so that as the clause then stood the defendant would only be liable to a fine of £5.

This amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LUPTON moved an amendment with the object of reducing the penalties provided in Clause 1.

Mr. GLADSTONE declined to accept the amendment.

The amendment was negatived without a division.

Mr. EVANS moved to omit from the clause the words "Any constable may take into custody without warrant any person who sells, exposes, offers, or has in his possession for sale any pirated music."

Mr. J. D. WHITE supported the amendment.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL said that without this power of arrest it would be impossible to give effect to the Bill. In 1903 5,000 summonses were issued in respect of the sale of pirated music, and it was found possible to serve less than 300. A constable had powers of arrest under various Acts of Parliament, and this clause did not increase to any appreciable extent those powers.

On the question being put from the Chair that the words proposed to be left out stand part of the clause,

The CHAIRMAN declared that the "Ayes" had it.

Mr. EVANS stated that the "Noes" distinctly challenged the question.

The CHAIRMAN said he was exceedingly sorry if that were so, but he listened for the challenge and did not hear.

Major SEELY corroborated the statement of Mr. Evans.

The CHAIRMAN said he did not dispute in any way the statement of the hon. member for Glamorgan. All he had said was that he did not hear the challenge of the "Noes," and had declared that the "Ayes" had it. He was very sorry there should have been any misunderstanding, but he could not allow the division now.

Mr. CREAN: Then I beg to move to report progress.

Mr. GLADSTONE resisted the motion.

The Committee divided, when the numbers were—

For the motion	45
Against	191
Majority against	146

Mr. GLADSTONE moved an amendment providing that the sale of the pirated music must be "in any street or public place."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. EVANS moved an amendment providing that the seller must have knowledge that the music was pirated.

The Committee divided, when the numbers were—

For the amendment	40

Majority against	150

A drafting amendment having been agreed to,

On the question that Clause I as amended stand part of the Bill,

The Committee divided, and there voted—

For the clause	205
Against	22
Majority	183

On Clause 2 ("Right of entry by police for execution of Act"),

Mr. GLADSTONE said, in the opinion of the Government the clause was too drastic. He proposed a series of amendments with the object of providing that a constable should not be allowed to enter premises by force without a warrant properly granted.

The amendments were agreed to

On a subsequent amendment of Mr. Gladstone's, to provide that the constable should have power to seize any copies of any musical work or any plates in respect of which he has reasonable ground for suspecting that an offence against this Act is being committed, and that all copies of any musical work and plates seized under this section should be brought before a Court of summary jurisdiction, and if proved to be pirated copies or plates intended to be used for the printing or reproduction of pirated copies should be forfeited and destroyed or otherwise dealt with as the Court thought fit,

The Committee divided, and there voted—

For the amendment	216
Against	3
Majority	213

The announcement of the figures was received with loud laughter.

The clause as amended was then agreed to.

On Clause 3 ("Definition"),

Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR moved an amendment providing that gramophone and similar records should not be included in the expressions "pirated copies" or "plates."

The amendment was agreed to, and the clause as amended was added to the Bill.

On Clause 4 ("Short title and extent"),

Mr. O'HARE moved that the Act should not extend to Ireland.

Mr. J. REDMOND said the motion was opposed to the wishes of the overwhelming majority of the Irish party.

Mr. CREAN supported the amendment.

A division was challenged, but was not persisted in, and the clause was agreed to.

Mr. O'HARE moved the following new clause:—"This Act shall not apply to any musical copyright which is not registered in terms of the Copyright Act, 1842, and no proceedings shall be competent in respect of any offence committed prior to such registration."

Mr. LUPTON supported the new clause.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL resisted it. Copyright could be held without registration, and the Government, having considered the question involved in this clause, had come to the conclusion that it would be unwise and unnecessary to cast upon the owners of this species of copyright the burden of registering.

The proposed clause was negatived.

The Bill as amended was then reported to the House.

The House adjourned at 5 minutes past 3 o'clock.

The consideration of the amended Bill was begun by the House of Commons on Thursday.

Mr. BYLES moved the omission of the clause which made a dealer in pirated music a guilty person until he had proved himself innocent.

Mr. LUPTON supported the amendment.

Mr. GLADSTONE said that the amendment was unnecessary, and he hoped his hon. friend would not press it.

Mr. CREAN supported the amendment. He held that the man who was most guilty was the man who knowingly pirated music. If there were no purchasers there would be no printers or publishers.

Mr. MORTON denounced this attempt to introduce into the law the new and dangerous principle that a man was to be held guilty unless he could prove himself innocent.

Mr. BERTRAM supported the Bill as a composer whose works had never been pirated.

Mr. T. M. HEALY described the proceedings as a prostitution of the powers of the House. Even the Attorney-General might be prosecuted if he bought a pirated copy of "Dolly Gray" at Charing-cross and an intelligent constable thought that he was going to sell it.

Mr. HARWOOD complained that Mr. T. P. O'Connor, while expressing his willingness to accept amendments, declined to do so because the people behind him would not let him.

Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR: I repudiate in the strongest language the insinuation of the hon. gentleman.

Mr. HARWOOD thought that an ordinary policeman ought not to be the judge of whether music was pirated and whether its possessor meant to sell it. Music registration was in a chaotic state. One had only to register a title, "Love me, my darling," or something like it, and that was all. The whole trade was in the hands of a syndicate. The assertion that at present the only remedy against musical piracy was by civil proceedings was disproved by the fact that the "king of pirates" was undergoing a sentence of nine months' imprisonment.

Sir J. LAWSON WALTON said the procedure contemplated under the clause constituted no substantial departure from the ordinary law.

The House divided, and the amendment was defeated by 176 votes to 69—majority 107.

Mr LUPTON moved an amendment that a constable should only arrest a hawker of pirated music if instructed in writing by the owner of the copyright or his agent.

Mr. HEALY said the Government had been hoodwinked in regard to this Bill. All that was asked by the amendment was that every prosecution under the measure should be authorised by some responsible person, against whom there would be a remedy in case of false imprisonment.

Mr. GLADSTONE declared that the adoption of the amendment would make the Bill almost farcical. The 400 owners of copyright would have to write 16,000 letters to the constables in London in order that those officers might be enabled to arrest persons found selling pirated music.

Mr. SHACKLETON contended that the owner of the copyright, as the aggrieved person, should be associated with a charge under the Bill.

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL defended the clause as it stood.

The House divided, and the amendment was rejected by 172 to 44—majority 128.

Mr. P. A. LENNON, who commenced his management of the Camberwell Palace on May 14, started his professional career as a chorister at the Haymarket Theatre under Mrs. Scott-Siddons. Afterwards he was with Mr. Wilson Barrett at the Princess's during the run of The Silver King, with Mrs. Langtry at the Imperial, Sir Henry Irving at the Lyceum during a Shakespearean season, Miss Mary Anderson, Mr. Charles Warner at the Adelphi, three seasons of the Italian Opera at Covent Garden, two seasons of English and one season of German Opera at Drury-lane; other engagements being at the Vaudeville, Olympic, Gaiety, Prince of Wales's, Alhambra, Oxford, Canterbury, and Paragon.

Mr. LENNON is one of those men who can shake hands with themselves—for the reason that they have risen from nothing to a position of importance and responsibility through their own honest endeavours. Starting as call-boy at the Empire, Leicester-square, when it was a theatre, Mr. Lennon was promoted to the assistant stage-managership. Subsequently he was stage-manager for Mr. George Edwardes at the Palace, Manchester, where he reproduced the Empire ballets, Cleopatra, Dolly, Cecile, Paris, &c. Then, in 1893, he returned to the London Empire as stage-manager for twelve months, leaving it to go to the Birmingham Empire for Sir Edward Moss, and a couple of years later opening for the same gentleman the Sheffield Empire, his appointment at which establishment he relinquished to take up the management of the Croydon Palace. He was re-engaged by Mr. Moss to open the Leeds Empire in 1898, since which time he has been at the Bradford Empire and the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Richmond.

AMUSEMENTS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

DURBAN, JUNE 23.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager for Mr. Leonard Rayne, Mr. Grant Fallowes.—Mr. Rayne, with his talented company, has been presenting a series of one-night plays at the Theatre Royal during the week. On Monday night A Royal Divorce was staged. Mr. Rayne as Napoleon powerfully portrayed the "man of destiny" throughout the play. The principal lady part, the Empress Josephine, was taken by Miss Gertrude F. Godart, and well sustained. Mr. Frank Beresford as the treacherous Marquis de Beaumont submitted a good delineation of the villain. The acting of Miss Freda Godfrey as Stephanie de Beauharnais was a special feature of the play; and Miss Adah Barton portrayed the part of the Empress Marie Louise admirably. A Message From Mars was presented by the company on Thursday night, when Mr. Rayne as the selfish Horace Parker made the part exceedingly realistic, his acting being of a very high standard. Miss Freda Godfrey as Minnie again scored a distinct success; and the Messenger of Mr. Charles Howitt was very ably performed. All the minor parts were performed in a capable manner. The other plays during the week with which Mr. Rayne concluded his present Durban season were The Christian, The Money-Makers, Caste, and The Harbour Lights.

A THRILLING experience of ballooning is related by Miss Granville, the well-known actress, who made an ascent on the 12th inst. with Mr. C. F. Pollock and another gentleman in the balloon Vivienne III. "It was a most contrary day," said Miss Granville. "Our progress was very slow, and after our balloon had lost much gas we came down into a cold cloud that made the silk shrink and made us shiver. Near Streatham Common Mr. Pollock decided to land, but found that the escape valve would not work, and the ripping cord had to be used. We came down like a runaway lift, while we hung on to the ropes with our feet raised so as to minimise the effect of the bumps. I did not like the look of an acre or two of glass ahead, but there was nothing for it but to hold tight, and when we did come to a standstill further on we found we had escaped with a few bruises."

PAGEANTRY seems likely to grow and flourish all over the country. There is to be a spectacular display at Romsey next year to commemorate the millenary of the foundation of Romsey Abbey. The pageant, which is fixed for June 19, 20, and 21, will take place at Broadlands, the seat of the Right Hon. Evelyn M. Ashley. At Winchester also the Lord-Lieutenant (the Marquess of Winchester), the mayor, the dean, and the headmaster of the college are taking the initial steps towards a proposed pageant there in 1908.

WE regret to record the death at an early age of Frau Lohse, a well-known operatic vocalist, who passed away at Cologne on the 13th inst. Frau Lohse was born in Vienna on February 1, 1876, and made her début in opera at the Stadt Theatre of Strassburg in 1896 in the part of Mignon. There she met her husband, Herr Otto Lohse, and with him she continued her studies. For a few seasons she appeared at Covent Garden, where she sang with considerable success the parts of Elizabeth in Tannhäuser, Elsa in Lohengrin, Eva in Die Meistersinger, and other rôles. In 1904, when her husband took up the post of conductor at the Cologne Opera House, Frau Lohse accepted an engagement there, and sang with great success until she had a nervous breakdown.

IN the Court of Bankruptcy on Tuesday, before Mr. Registrar Linklater, Mr. E. G. Saunders, who was called to be publicly examined upon his affairs, applied for an adjournment on the ground that the examination would prejudice the realisation of part of his estate. The application was refused, and he was asked to take the oath. This the debtor declined to do, and Mr. Registrar Linklater directed the Official Receiver to report the case as contempt of court to Mr. Justice Bigham when next sitting as bankruptcy judge. The debtor returns liabilities £12,415, and assets of sufficient value to yield a surplus of £20,545, the latter consisting of shares in the Waldorf Theatre and hotel syndicates.

"HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE, WAYSIDE," figured in the Court of Chancery on the 13th inst., when an injunction was claimed on behalf of Mr. Greet to restrain the defendants, Burnett and another, from passing off a drama at Dartford, as The Sign of the Cross, of which Mr. Greet, as executor of the late Wilson Barrett, claims to hold the copyright. It was stated that the defendants were respectively manager and lessee of a travelling theatre, their répertoire including "blood-curdling plays and variety entertainments." Amongst the plays billed were The Sign of the Cross. Counsel submitted that there was no infringement of copyright. As a matter of fact, the defendants made 15s. out of the "blood-curdling dramas," which the people evidently did not like, preferring the variety entertainments. Mr. Justice Swinfen Eady granted an injunction with costs, adding that the parties might agree if they liked when before the Registrar to treat this as the trial of the action.

A COMPETITION took place at the Academy of Dramatic Art on the 12th inst. between two teams of picked students from the final classes held by Mr. J. Fisher White and Mr. E. Lyall Swete, for a joint prize presented by their instructors. The subject chosen was Browning's In a Balcony, and the performances took place on the model stage in the largest room of the house in Gower-street. The cast in the first instance consisted of Constance, Miss Mary Barton; the Queen, Miss Kehr; and Norbert, Mr. Reginald Owen. In the second performance the cast was Constance, Miss Beatrice Smith; the Queen, Miss Estelle Kaufmann; Norbert, Mr. Bertram Forsyth. Mr. Forbes Robertson, Mr. Bourchier, and Captain Marshall were the judges, and unanimously awarded the prize to the second cast. Among those present were Sir Squire Bancroft and Mr. John Hare, both members of the council of leading managers and dramatic authors, under whose control the academy is conducted.

PRINCESS LOUISE-AUGUSTA OF SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN, who was present at the special meeting in the Garrick Theatre, has become a patroness of the British Empire Shakespeare Society.

MR. JOSEPH POMÉ, the well-known ballet master and producer, has been engaged by Mons. P. Ruez, of the Folies-Bergeres, Paris, to invent and produce dances and spectacular displays for the forthcoming revue at that theatre. Mr. Pomé takes with him his own troupe of 24 English dancers. When he returns to London in September, he will be associated with a big West End production.

THE members of the Eccentric Club have presented a testimonial to the hon. secretary, Mr. J. H. Harrison, on the occasion of his fiftieth birthday, in recognition of his services to the club during a period of sixteen years. More than 500gs. was subscribed.

ON Wednesday evening last, during a severe thunderstorm that passed over Bedford, a Mrs. Fox, wife of Tom Fox, known as "The Miniature Hercules," was struck by lightning and killed whilst crossing Russell Park with two of her children, who, happily, were unhurt. Much sympathy will be extended to Mr. Fox in his sad bereavement. Miss Rosie Kearns (Mrs. A. H. Hook), well-known in the dramatic profession, is a sister of deceased.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

It has come at last! Justice to the men and women who flood the world with melody, who lighten hearts with the rhythm of mirth, who gladden homes with simple song is within sight. The gallant fight of Mr. T. P. O'Connor against the kerbstone dealers who have for years carried on a nefarious traffic, which has robbed the composer of any reward for his genius which he would receive by royalties, has been crowned with success. The popular Parliamentarian's earnest and warm partisanship of the cause of song-writers and publishers, and the moderation and tact that he displayed in the introduction and pressing forward of his Musical Copyright Bill have had their effect upon the Government, who at length showed their sense of the importance of the subject by making the Bill a Government measure.

The Bill passed through the critical Committee stage early on Tuesday morning, and an account of the debate will be found in another column as well as the text of the Bill as now amended. We had the courage of our convictions, when in our issue of January 27 last, we said: "Whatever may be one's politics, it is a satisfaction to think that the recent election makes the passing of a Musical Piracy Bill a little more probable. Our congratulations are due to the music publishers for the plucky way in which they fought and are fighting their battle with the pirates. We feel sure that in the end they will win that battle. We feel confident that the Government will take up the musical copyright question, and that a Musical Copyright Bill will be on the Statute Book before many months have passed away."

The prophecy is, practically speaking, fulfilled; victory is within the grasp of the publishers and song-writers who have been so cruelly harassed, and the bitter cry of the makers of the people's songs has sunk deep in the hearts of the men of all parties in the first Parliament of the world. The crusade has been long and costly, the fight strenuous and severe, and in the thick of it, encouraging depressed supporters, and carrying war into the enemy's camp, has been Mr. David Day, who may at length be congratulated on a long-deferred victory that has been largely due to his tireless energy and undaunted pluck.

Mr. T. P. O'Connor, in the course of a speech he made at the National Liberal Club, recently turned the tables very neatly on an interrupter. Mr. O'Connor was referring to the tendency of a man to become accustomed to the atmosphere in which he lives, unless he is a crank. "No, no!" shouted someone. "Am I interrupted by a crank?" asked Mr. O'Connor. "If so, I have lately become used to it, as cranks have been lately interrupting me in introducing one of the most important private Bills of the Session"—an allusion, of course, to the objectors to his Musical Copyright Bill.

The question of the reconstruction of the London Coliseum (Limited) occupied the attention of the liquidators and the Committee of Inspection at a meeting at the Cardiff Empire on Saturday night. Several schemes were discussed, that finding most favour being a proposition that a heavy sum in new capital should be put on the market, subscribers to which should receive a preferential security on the assets of the company. The scheme of reconstruction will be published at an early date.

Mr. Paul Martinetti and company will be on Monday at the Palace Theatre, where they will play a speechless version of "taming a shrew"—not in any way connected with the cantankerous Katharina of Padua, but of a much more modern origin. The lady's haughtiness and temper in the Martinetti production are subdued after marriage, for it is called My Wife, which has already been seen at the Metropolitan and Canterbury. Other new attractions in Mr. Alfred Butt's programme will include Mooney and Holbein, grotesque dancers from America, and Miss Jose Collins, daughter of Miss Lottie Collins, herself a great favourite at this house.

Mr. Tom Costello had to give up work at Chatham last week, where he was fulfilling an engagement. He struggled on, although not fit, and at last collapsed and had to be taken home to his residence at Brixton Hill, where he now lies seriously ill. His illness is the result of ptomaine poisoning through eating a pork pie on the journey from Liverpool to London some weeks ago.

The secretary of the Music-Hall Benevolent Fund has received the sum of £9 from Messrs. Donald Currie and Co., being the proceeds of a concert organised on board their s.s. Briton. The president and committee of the fund beg to publicly thank Mr. Tom McNaughton, who recently sent a cheque for £7 17s. 6d. for the charity. Messrs. Donald Currie and Co., Miss Claire Romaine, Meier and Mora, Miss Cora Corina, Mr. Frank Wheeler, and Mr. Mountford, and Miss Walsh for their united efforts on behalf of the fund, which is sadly in need of immediate help.

Mr. Charles Relf, who has carried on the Royal Albert, Canning-town, as a music hall for a number of years—who, in fact, developed it on the lines of a modern variety house—has sold it, and terminates his proprietorship on Saturday next, July 28. He will say "farewell" to his numerous friends on Thursday evening next, when a special entertainment will be presented by a company largely augmented for the occasion. Mr. Relf long since proved himself the friend of the toiler in the teeming neighbourhood, to the amusement of which he ministered for so many years.

The Royal Albert came to be popularly known as the Dockers' Theatre, for its proprietor was ever in the van of any movement that had for its object the relief of their distress or the improvement of their status. His establishment, which he twice enlarged, was the scene of much charitable effort on behalf of the neighbouring Poplar Hospital, whose work is cosmopolitan, and whose needs therefore are great. Municipal duties have also occupied much of Mr. Relf's limited leisure, and he has certainly earned the rest that he will now take, and which he feels to be imperative since the lamented death last year of his son Robert. Mr. Relf will take with him in his retirement the respect and esteem of his fellow proprietors, the profession, and a large section of the public.

Mr. Walter Leaver, who has presided at the chairman's table at the Royal Albert ever since it started on its variety career, is the last of the music hall chairmen, and is one of the most entertaining of men. He was acquainted with Arthur Orton, of Wapping, and when that notorious personage came to dockerland as the Tichborne claimant, Mr. Leaver was bold enough to tell him he was a fraud. The veteran official's seat of office is a finely modelled chair in hammered iron of most artistic workmanship made by himself. We trust that Mr. Leaver's kindly and genial sway will not be abolished. He would be much missed by frequenters who have both veneration and affection for the worthy white-haired gentleman who announces the turns.

The purchaser of the Royal Albert is Mr. Arthur G. Hunt (late of the Empire, Dover), who takes possession on July 30. He will close the hall for necessary alterations, and due notice will be given of the reopening. We are given to understand that no outstanding contracts will be taken over.

Mr. G. Rhodes Parry, acting-manager at the Palace, Manchester, has accepted a London appointment, and leaves Manchester at the end of this month. A benefit performance to Mr. Parry has been arranged for Thursday next.

Mr. P. D. Elsourne, the young and highly-respected resident-manager of the Birmingham Hippodrome, was married at Holy Trinity Church, Birchfields, Birmingham, on Tuesday last, to Miss Nelly H. Manson. Presents and good wishes galore have befallen the happy pair, who are spending the honeymoon at Filey, Yorkshire.

The Maidstone Hippodrome, which has been carried on successfully by the Maidstone Hippodrome Company for the last two years, has been leased to Mr. Stanley Baskerville, who will reopen the building on August Bank Holiday with a strong and attractive bill.

Mr. Sydney Paxton, resident-manager of the Grand Theatre, Southampton, and district-manager of the Hippodrome, who has been spending a short holiday in Germany, arrived home on Tuesday, looking very fit and feeling greatly benefited by the change.

Mr. Sharplin (of the Paragon Trio) was well enough to be discharged from the Royal Halifax Infirmary on Friday, July 13, For three weeks he had been an inmate of that institution, where his progress throughout was remarkable. He will now take a short holiday, in order to regain strength. Everyone will join with us in congratulating him on his convalescence.

The twelfth annual staff outing of the Regent Theatre of Varieties, Salford, took place on Sunday at Morecambe, whither the manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond, conveyed his party of fifty, per London and North-Western, in special saloon carriages. Dinner was served at the Clarendon Hotel, Morecambe, followed by a drive to Bolton-le-Sands, where sports, &c., were indulged in. The party returned at 8-30, after a thoroughly enjoyable day.

We regret to learn that Mr. Thomas Stanley Chappell (chairman of Messrs. Chappell and Co., Ltd., the eminent publishing house) was badly injured on the 13th inst., through a motor-car colliding with the hansom cab in which he was riding with a friend. Both gentlemen were thrown out into the road. The chauffeur was committed for trial for manslaughter, a man who was riding with him being killed.

In consequence of the success of the first production of Mr. H. Bernhardt's new comedy, Peggy by Atholie Robertson at the Palace Pier, Brighton, recently, the management have arranged with him to reproduce it on Bank Holiday (Brighton Race week), for which an interesting engagement has been made with Miss Billie Burke in the title-rôle. Miss Billie Burke is charmed and delighted with her new part "My Peggy," and the play is being revised and re-written, with a view to its early production in London, under the stage direction of Mr. Chris. Walker.

Through the kindness of Mr. Frank Macnaghten a grand matinée took place at the Palace, Southampton, on the 12th inst., in aid of the Staff Outing Fund. The building was crowded, the fair sex being particularly in evidence, and the Outing Fund will benefit considerably. An excellent programme was presented, the full Palace company appearing, in addition to "extras." Amongst the extra turns were George Mozart, Susie Protti, several members of the orchestra from the Hippodrome, the Fantastics from the Royal Pier, who gave an admirable turn, Miss Dolly Harmon, the comedienne, winning golden opinions.

The "star" turn was however the first and last appearance of the Southampton Nondescripts, billed as the worst minstrel troupe the world has ever witnessed. Who was the ethiopian who sang (?) "Down the Vale"? No wonder the audience cried out, "You are Brown." But the fun waxed fast and furious when the combined troupe attempted to play Black Justice, with the irrepressible R. Judd Green as the Judge—and a good judge too. Johnny Holland was the mountainous policeman, and he was assisted by several prisoners well known to the police. This tabloid burlesque with musical numbers was a fitting finale to a palatial gathering, over which Mr. William Trussell presided with his customary courtesy.

Nearly 400 of the inmates of Brighton Workhouse were allowed out on Wednesday afternoon in order to attend a performance at the Hippodrome, to which they had been invited by Mrs. Barrasford.

Messrs. Harrington and Tate have specially written Miss Daisy Harcourt a new comedy song on the burning Suffragette question, which this talented Australian artist will produce on Monday next at the Palace Theatre. They have also written her a "chic" number, entitled "Did you ever know a girl who wouldn't?" which she will produce at an early date.

Miss Rose Tilley has been engaged by Mr. Lingford Carson to appear as principal boy in his pantomime, The Babes in the Wood, at the Queen's Theatre, Keighley. Mr. Oliver Conroy will also appear in the same production.

Mr. Albert Whelan, the Australian entertainer, wishes all proprietors, agents, managers, &c., to know that he has placed his business in the hands of George Barclay.

Those cosmopolitan song-writers, Harrington and Tate, have this week supplied that clever American raconteur, Mr. Fred Niblo, with a whole budget of new and original songs for his wife, specially written for American consumption.

Miss Constance Moxon produced, at the Amphitheatre, Ramsgate, on Monday, with great success, her new musical monologue A Toff for Ten Minutes.

The success of Miss Mary Glenn's new scena My Texas Queen, is fulfilling her most sanguine anticipations, and is proving a sure success on her tour.

We regret to report that the condition of Mr. J. L. Toole is still very grave. There was no improvement yesterday in the condition of the veteran comedian. Among the recent visitors has been Mr. Harry B. Irving.

His Majesty the King, their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke of Sparta, and Prince Louis of Battenberg were present at the performance of La Traviata at the Royal Opera Covent Garden on Thursday.

"All Mixed," a new sketch by E. C. Matthews, was produced by Miss Judith Dene at the Surrey this week. There are three people in the cast, which included Miss Bertha Cadman in a Lancashire comedy part.

Caicedo, the well-known "king of the wire," who has recently completed a prosperous tour of the United States and Cuba, opens on Monday at the Empire, Glasgow.

In spite of this being the "dull" season for music publishers generally, the Monte Carlo Publishing Company are the daily recipients of multifarious orders for their big seaside "winner," by Lawrance and Mellor, "Bamboo Bungalow"; while two other publications of the same firm, "Widow Doolin" and "Zing Ta-ra-ra Band," are also going very strong with pierrots just now.

The Camberwell Palace will, on and after the 30th inst., be run upon the two-houses-a-night principle, under the joint control of the Camberwell Palace, Ltd., and Moss' Empires and Stoll Companies.

Mr. J. J. Fruin has received the sum of £7 17s. 6d. for the Music Hall Home Fund, being the amount collected by Mr. Tom Macnaughton for this charity. A similar sum was forwarded by Mr. Macnaughton to the Music Hall Benevolent Fund. Mr. Fruin has also been handed a cheque for £9 from the R.M.S. Briton, per Captain R. E. H. Bishop.

Miss Fanny Wentworth is paying a return visit to the Tivoli, where her work has always been popular. Perhaps the best song in her large repertoire, called "Isn't that like a man?" is included in her present turn. She has composed a great many of her most successful songs, having had the advantage of a thorough musical training, and appeared, during her first years on the stage, in every branch of dramatic work.

The current issue of that well-known monthly organ of the music trade in New York, The Dominant, gives prominence to a eulogistic article on the advent, rise, and progress of the American branch of the firm of Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter in that city. After a concise résumé of the history of the house in London, and a reference to the gigantic success of Miss Vesta Victoria's song "Waiting at the church" ("the most remarkable and rapid hit that perhaps New York has ever witnessed"), the article concludes with the following words:—"The courteous treatment all visitors receive at the hands of the firm, added to its pushfulness and legitimate go-a-headitiveness, have combined to make Francis, Day, and Hunter's perhaps the most popular house in the city."

Mr. Reginald A. Allan, the well-known composer and arranger, is about to become a Benedict, the lady being Miss Kathleen Marguerite Riley. The happy event takes place in September. Mr. Allan for many years has been on Messrs. Day's staff, and has done much orchestration for all sorts and conditions of composers.

Mr. George Lashwood had acquired two new numbers of the "swell" order from the writers who supplied him with his celebrated song, "My Latchkey"—Messrs. Ernèe Woodville and Harry Adams. Mr. Whit Cunliffe and Mr. Woolmer Young have also in study ditties by the same pens, the one entitled "Quite sufficient, thank you," and the other "Come along, boys!"

"The Romany King" is the name of a picturesque and romantic operatic sketch to be produced at the Holborn Empire on July 30 by Messrs. J. C. Piddock and Lempriere Pringle. The libretto is from the pen of Mr. E. C. Matthews, and the music is composed by Clement Locknane. Mr. Piddock will be remembered by by his work in The Lady Slavey. He has just returned from Australia, where he has been fulfilling a successful engagement with Mr. Musgrove.

Mr. Willie Edouin, who has recently made his début on the variety stage, has passed his fiftieth theatrical year. According to the records of Old Drury, he appeared at that theatre in pantomime as a child about 1854, while in a burlesque of Belphegor at the Strand Theatre in September, 1856, he was billed as Master Edouin.

The charity matinée given on Wednesday by Mr. George Chirgwin at his pitch, the Happy Valley, Southend, was a great success, and a goodly sum will be divided between the Music Hall Benevolent Fund and the Music Hall Home. The attractions of the entertainment were augmented by Miss Fanny Wentworth and Mr. Joe Archer, who gave their services, and travelled from London to entertain. Mr. Chirgwin, as a matter of course, also appeared, and gave of his very best, meeting with the heartiest of receptions.

Arrangements have just been completed by which the sole rights of Campbell Rae-Brown's smart sketch, The Express Baby, in which Miss Edith Evelyn and company have scored such an emphatic success, have been secured by the lady named. Mr. Rae-Brown's next important contribution to the variety stage will be his sketch version, in three scenes and some musical numbers, of his famous "Kissing Cup's Race." This, the author informs us, is the only version authorised by himself. It goes into rehearsal immediately.

That eminent authority on music, Mr. J. Spencer Curwen, writes thusly apropos of vocal music in the parks:—"To intersperse the band pieces with songs, &c., is a small matter that touches no principle. I wonder that legislation is necessary to secure it. I must say, however, that outdoor singing is usually ineffective. Any soloist, any conductor of a choir will tell you this. Indoor municipal concerts in winter want watching. There is such a run upon them by people who can afford to pay, and the class they are meant for is, alas, indifferent to them. If they are given they should either (1) be self-supporting, or (2) be given in congested tenement districts only. In running choral societies as an offshoot of their evening classes, the London County Council has gone beyond anything I have met with in France or Germany, where a strict line is drawn between musical instruction, which is undertaken by the municipality, and musical recreation, which is left to voluntary associations."

The Chelsea Palace staff had their annual outing last Sunday. A most enjoyable day was spent, and over 40 turned out. In the absence of Mr. Edward Swanborough, his able colleague, Mr. J. Norman Berlin took the chair. Speeches at the dinner at the Red Lion Hotel, Betchworth, Surrey, were made by Mr. Angelo Asher (the musical director, Mr. Leon Zeitlin, of the Metropolitan, and Mr. Ross, of the Conservative Club. After dinner, drives through the uplands of Surrey were enjoyed, the party returning for tea. A very happy day was spent.

We regret to learn the sad news of the death of Mrs. Dalmane, the beloved mother of Mrs. Barrasford, which happened at 6-30 on Wednesday morning. The proprietress of the Dyke Estate, who is so popular in Brighton, will have much sympathy in her bereavement.

The romantic tragic episode of The Monk, by Robert Overton, will be played at the Bedford on Monday by Miss Helène Forest and company. Miss Forest will appear in the part of Pearle Vallette and Mr. Ernest H. G. Cox in the title-rôle.

The working staff of the Palace Theatre had an enjoyable outing at breezy Brighton on Sunday, and thoroughly appreciated the admirable arrangements made by Mr. Alfred Butt. The party mustered 120, and left Victoria terminus at 10.5 a.m. On arriving by the sunny shore they dined à la carte at Mellison's Grand Concert Hall Restaurant. The chair at the dinner was occupied by Mr. Alfred Butt, faced by Mr. Fitzroy Gardner. Among the company were Messrs. Herbert Finck, Frank Damer, and Thomas Miller (members of the committee), John Cummings, H. J. Kilgallin, T. Lowe, W. Mountam, W. F. Hughes, C. Percival, E. Tremearne, and W. Turner. After a brief visit to Mrs. Barrasford's hotel at the Devil's Dyke the company returned to the restaurant, where tea was served at six. The party started for Victoria at a quarter to nine, highly delighted with their visit to the Queen of Watering Places.

Miss Lily Burnand is an enthusiastic coachiste. Her second coaching party to Box Hill leaves her charming residence, 21, Loughboro'-road, at ten o'clock sharp, on Sunday morning.

Miss Kellermann, the lady Channel swimmer, has returned from Paris to her Channel training quarters at Broadstairs. She was engaged by the L'Auto newspaper to swim through Paris, on the clear understanding that her swim should be more in the nature of an exhibition, but only the day before she left for Paris she heard that two other ladies had been entered for some weeks before. Miss Kellerman, whose whole existence appears to be taken up in swimming the Channel, had been steadily training for that purpose, found herself suddenly in for a sprint of some eight miles against the fastest men and lady swimmers in the world. She is therefore more than satisfied with her achievement.

She was greatly touched by the enthusiastic ovations she received from the thousands of Parisians as she passed each bridge, always some five to ten yards ahead of the Austrian lady, until after the last bridge, when a boat most palpably got in front of her which nearly gave her opponent the race. It has been the luck of but few foreigners to become from the first so great a favourite with the French and to retain this popularity through twelve months of absence. Miss Kellermann expects to make her attempt at swimming the Channel during the first week of August.

At the 472nd meeting of the Committee of the M.H.A.R.A. on Tuesday Mr. Harry Blake was in the chair, and there were also present—Messrs. Chas. Gardiner, George Preston, Chas. Coborn, G. A. Booker, George Gray, A. Carlton, W. H. Clemart, Douglas White (hon. treasurer), and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary). The minutes of the last meeting were read and passed, and cases of refunds considered. The addition of fifty-six new members was announced. The weekly financial account was submitted, and the hon. treasurer's report showed that a total of £987 stood to the credit of the Association. It was agreed to transfer £100 from the current account to the deposit account, making a total of £500 on deposit.

Mr. Joe O'Gorman had an enthusiastic send-off at Waterloo Station on Saturday, "Rats," "Terriers," members of the V.A.F. and I.A.L. all combining in a hearty expression of good wishes for the success and safe return of the popular comedian. Mr. O'Gorman is accompanied on his trip to South Africa by Miss Jessica Grace, the Bros. O'Gorman, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Lucas, and Robins and Collier. Among those who congregated on the platform were Messrs. Charles Coborn, Will Oliver, Tom Holmes, Bob Leonard, Michael Nolan, Wal Pink, Fred Karno, Jeff Vendome, Harry Gray, Lydia Dreams, W. H. McCarthy, Arthur Rigby, Frank Leon, George Preston, Frank Gerald, Harry Blake, W. H. Clemart, Regan and Ryan, Walter Norman, Atlas and Vulcana, Will Johnson, Harry Griff, Geo. A. Booker, C. C. Bartram, Dave O'Toole, H. E. High, C. Douglas Stuart, Harry Bancroft, Jack Collinson, Frank Halter, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh O'Sullivan, little Miss Nora O'Gorman, the Misses Sarah, Polly, and Lil O'Gorman, Miss Dolly Golden, Mr. James Allison, Miss Selina Seaforth, and Messrs. Chas. Dillon, Albert Christian, Harry Conlin, Alfred Martinetti, and Kyoto.

The taste for varieties in the suburbs is to be ministered to in the districts of Willesden and Tooting, where the list of outlying music halls is to be added to by an Empire at the former place and a hippodrome at the latter. Both houses are to be constructed and controlled by Mr. Walter Gibbons, whose operations in Holborn and elsewhere have been highly successful. It is hoped that the Willesden Empire, which will be situated on the High-road, will be ready for visitors at Christmas, and that the good people of Tooting will find entertainment awaiting them at the local Hippodrome—at the junction of the Broadway and Mitcham-road—by Easter. Mr. Matcham is responsible for the architecture.

Mr. "Johnnie" Wood, brother of Miss Marie Lloyd, who has taken the Loughborough Hotel, Loughborough road, Brixton, in conjunction with Mr W. J. Grimes, has definitely fixed the "change" celebrations for Tuesday next, when he hopes to be favoured by the attendance of a goodly company.

Mr. Frank H. France and Miss Edith Stewart having toured for some months with the successful American racing sketch The 100 to 1 Chance have now acquired all rights therein for the United Kingdom. They are prepared to book a further tour; their dates extend into next year.

Mr. "Sixpenny Pops" Smith dispatched on Thursday morning from Denmark-street a trifling matter of fifty thousand copies of the publications which have given him the sobriquet by which he is now so well known. The carriers of this order were Messrs. Pitt and Scott, and it came from Messrs. W. J. Pater and Co., of Melbourne, per Mr. Stanley Mullen, a gentleman now representing Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter in Australia, and till lately a terror to music pirates in London.

Mr. Sammy Shields, the swell Scotch comedian, will shortly produce a new song, entitled "Jane McKie," written and composed by Terry Wynne, of Welda and Wynne. Mr. Arthur Gilbert has secured a song, entitled "Bill Smiff's Air-Ship," from the same writer.

"Urbanora" asserted itself effectively at the Alhambra on Wednesday afternoon, when the latest examples of animated photography, obtained by the sacrifice of enormous trouble and expense, were displayed by the Charles Urban Trading Company (Limited) before the Agents-General of Australia, colonial visitors, and others interested in the development of our dependencies. The Australasian scenes included a panorama of Sydney water front, a log-chopping competition at Tasmania, herds of cattle, the breaking in of wild horses, and many other interesting films: "Sights in New Zealand" which were specially taken under the auspices of the New Zealand Government and the Tourist and Health Departments, included a view of the steaming hills of Rotomahana, a volcanic range at the base of which a large expanse of water boils furiously. Maoris cooking and washing in the hot springs, dancing, canoe hurdle-racing, and playing other games unknown in this country, were all marvellously realistic.

A series of views illustrating the frozen meat industry of New Zealand was afterwards presented, followed by a South American cattle ranch, with illustrations of lassooing and branding calves, a cowboys' festival, and a Gauchos' dance and barbacue. "Life in a Burmah Teak Forest," showing a number of big elephants pushing their way through the thick undergrowth of the jungle, displayed the wonderful sagacity and strength of the animals. Upwards of 30 scenes connected with North Borneo, depicting its progress from savagery to industrial development, and including a railway trip through the Penotal Gorge, were striking features of the exhibition, which was brought to a close by a representation of "Logging in a Canadian Forest" and a few "Phases of British Railway Industry." The pictures serve the best purposes of the art of the cinematograph, and, while being at times diverting, are an unrivalled means of imparting instruction. They were enthusiastically applauded, and their inclusion in the programme at the Alhambra should prove irresistibly attractive.

The promoters of the "Dangerous Performances" Bill would doubtless be surprised to hear that Madame Ella Zuila, who has long been known as one of the most daring high-wire walkers in the show world, is a highly strung, even nervous, little woman. She feels, however, absolutely safe and always cool and collected during her perilous turn, and says that while a sudden noise would "make her jump" if she happened to be standing on the ground, it would not affect her in the least when she was on the wire.

Miss Clarice Mayne, who has come to the front with a bound, certainly accomplished an unprecedented feat at the Palace Theatre, Shaftesbury-avenue, last Monday night, when she not only produced for the first time on any stage three new and orginal songs by Messrs. Harrington and Tate, but united the methods of Mesdames Marie Lloyd, Connie Ediss, and Vesta Victoria in the renderings thereof. Evidence of the genuine "hit" made by this talented lady is afforded by the fact that she is singing no less than four songs nightly at the Palace—not imitations, but all original.

That delightful song "That's your Cactus over there," by H. K. Hamilton Field, which Miss Lil Hawthorne so charmingly renders on the "halls," has been eagerly snapped up for pierrot exploitation, and is already quite popular at many seaside resorts. "My Pyramid Girl," by the same composer, is also a pronounced success with alfresco entertainers. Both numbers are published by the Monte Carlo Publishing Company in their "Sixpenny Successes" series.

Miss Margaret Ashton, who has this week been appearing at the Empire, Newport, has met with a very cordial reception from South Welsh audiences. The charming American soprano will next week visit Liverpool, and on the conclusion of her provincial engagements, will appear at some of the West-End halls, prior to the fulfilment of her continental tour, which will occupy her until February, 1907.

"Coming from Kildare" is the taking title of an Irish sketch of considerable interest which has been produced this week with complete success by Mr. George English and Miss Florrie Penley. Mr. English, a versatile actor, plays in vigorous and earnest fashion the part of a sergeant of Irish Dragoons, in which he recites some of Rudyard Kipling's "Barrack Room Ballads," being particularly successful in "A Shilling a Day." It will be remembered that it was Mr. George English who first popularised George R. Sims's poems on the boards of the halls. He will no doubt familiarise variety audiences with the virile and picturesque stanzas of Tommy Atkins's favourite poet. In the sketch mentioned Miss Florrie Penley displays her charm and piquancy in no fewer than three characters.

Miss Adele de Frece, after a three months' tour on the Continent, opens on Monday next at the Palace, Hammersmith, with a new song-scena, The Maid and the Sphinx.

On Sunday last the staff of the Empire took their annual outing, and for the first time the stage employees and the front of the house staff joined forces, the result being highly satisfactory. The trip was to Clacton-on-Sea, the headquarters being the Brunswick Hotel, with a fifteen-mile drive in brakes through Weeley Woods. Mr. H. J. Hitchins was unavoidably absent, but among those present were Mr. Arthur Aldin (the acting-manager), Mr. Cuthbert Clarke (the musical-director), and Mr. Spencer Barry (the stage-director). The successful affair reflects the greatest credit on Mr. A. J. Reynolds, the secretary, who arranged every detail.

Miss Daisy Dormer will shortly produce a pretty new number by Mellor, Lawrence, and Gifford, entitled My Rickshaw Queen. It has been secured by the Shapiro Von Tilzer Music Publishing Co., and will be introduced into Messrs. Howard and Wyndham's pantomimes.

Mr. Michael Nolan has had specially reserved for him for use on the music-halls Mills and Scott's fine song, "My Boy in the Irish Guards," which Mr. David Day has published. Mr. Day is also issuing a very pretty number, by Percy Edgar and Henry E. Pether, entitled "Seashell."

"Her Last Dance," a dramatic episode written by Roland Oliver, with special music by Louis La Rondelle, was produced on Tuesday evening at the Empire, New Cross, and was enthusiastically received by a crowded house. The characters were exceedingly well rendered respectively by Miss Grace Jones and Mr. H. Naylor Grimson.

George Foster has just returned from a pleasure trip to Ostend, looking the picture of health. The fates have been propitious to him, for in three days he has relieved the cosmopolitan trippers on the plage of 1,100 francs.

Miss Fanny Robina has been specially engaged by Mr. Samuel James to play Sinbad in pantomime at Christmas. We can congratulate Mr. James on his judgment in securing this clever and talented artist.

Miss Nora Moore deputised on Monday night for Mr. J. W. Rowley at the Palace, Glasgow, and her success was so pronounced that, although Mr. Rowley's return was hoped for on Thursday, her services were retained for the remainder of the week. Miss Moore had therefore to work both the Pavilion and the Palace in the Glaswegian city.

Mr. Fred Karno's volatile company of Dandy Thieves open at Cissie Lawson's Hippodrome at Ilfracombe on Aug. 13. Mrs. Lawson, we regret to learn, is still very ill.

Miss Ada Norman collected the sum of £2 3s. 6d. while Walter Norman's nigger troupe was performing during the afternoon at the Music Hall Sports.

Madame Fougere attended at the Newington Sessions on the 13th inst., and entered into bail to appear on the 24th inst., when it is understood the legal points will be decided.

No better title could be bestowed upon Mr. Leoni Clarke than the "Cat King." Frequent performances are given by him daily in the Chinese Court at the Crystal Palace. He must be a wonderfully patient and industrious man. To make cats perform as he does is absolutely astounding. Felines are not easy to train, and he deserves the highest possible praise for his success. He seems to have been equally fortunate with a couple of hundred other animals, including monkeys, rabbits, rats, mice, and birds. To see these smaller creatures standing on a pole while the cats walk over them, showing great care in not treading on them, astonishes those who are used to the everyday sort of cat. How pussy refrains from taking a tasty bite out of some of the appetising little morsels shows that cats must have a lot of self-control. Cleverer monkeys it would be hard to find. Mr. Clarke conducts the entertainment with so much energy and dash that no one wearies for a moment. To hear the shouts of delight of an audience chiefly composed of school children as the clever monkeys romp about and the cats plunge through fiery hoops and the rabbits jump over hurdles is as good as a tonic. The culminating feat, when a cat climbs a rope to the roof of the centre transept and descends by parachute right into Mr. Clarke's arms, brings to an end an entertainment which everyone should see.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE OXFORD.

The hot weather does not seem to affect to the extent that one might anticipate the number of visitors to the Oxford. At any rate, on the evening of our call the house was comfortably filled, the allurement being, of course, an attractive programme. There is, for instance, Miss Carlotta Levey, whose refined songs are a distinct acquisition to any high-class music hall bill. She appeals to the sentiments of her hearers with some verses, the moral of which is, "Do a good turn whenever you can." And that is what Miss Levey herself does every time she appears before the footlights. The coldheartedness of a selfish world forms the theme of her second number. "Ain't it funny," she asks, "that when you look for money all you get is sympathy?" No, Miss Levey, it isn't a bit funny—it's most exasperating. But what does that matter? The song, like its predecessor, is sung in such delightful strain that one forgets all about the irony of fate which it laments in the happiness one derives from the lady's vocalism. Miss Ethel Arden and Mr. George Abel make for merriment with absurd "situations" in the sketch, The Lady and the Parson. Miss Arden as an ardent sportswoman, and Mr. George Abel as an innocent, bland, and childlike curate, contrive between them to interpret an amusing contretemps.

Mr. E. Rousby's electrical review, "Paris in London," brings to our notice many beautiful dissolving views. Thus, to begin with, the Place de la Concorde, and then a magnificent view from the Louvre in daybreak, tempest, sunset, and moonrise. These phases of the Solar system are most artistically depicted; and although the representations may not confirm or refute the Nebular Hypothesis, yet they are most interesting and attractive by reason of their vivid naturalness. The production of melodies by ingenious electrically-worked appliances in "The Palace of Illusions" is indeed a triumph of inventive genius, and the summer-night festival on the Champs de Mars, showing a neat model of the Eiffel Tower, is another electrical marvel. Pierce and Maizee command one's attention with their varied singing and dancing entertainment; and the Sisters Edwardes prove most engaging with their vocalism, dancing, and "drumming." Mr. James Fawn gives us a little of the history of the Hen-Pecked Jossers' Club, a praiseworthy institution the members of which rid themselves of domestic worries and drown recollections of a nagging wife in the big tankard. Mr. Fawn's references to the club are extremely comical, and the facial expression which accompanies each anecdote enhances its humour. A quartet of athletic, skilful, and nimble aerial artists are the Eugene Family, many of whose feats are distinguished for daring and orginality and the smartness with which they are performed. Miss Vesta Victoria, as usual, treats the house to a host of absurd notions. Her distinctive style of acting and singing seems to become more and more popular, and this week at the Oxford she is securing a rare ovation nightly.

Miss Lily Burnand, twirling a lorgnette and adopting a saucy attitude somewhat reminiscent of Marie Lloyd, sings about a ballet lady named Sally, around whom is woven a delicate romance. It was a case of love at first sight—"his lordship saw her photo—wrote her—now she drives his motor." What could be nicer in the way of a modern fairy tale than that? And could anything exceed the vivacity and spiritedness of Miss Burnand's performance of this song, a remark that may also be said to apply to her "Stowaway?" A doddering, yet cheery, old gentleman, attired in the kind of dress that veteran swells used to affect thirty years ago, hobbles along the stage with the aid of his stick, and in a cacophanous voice tenders advice to a young and unsophisticated generation. Years ago, he tells us, he was a great boy himself for a bit of fun. Well, he is still very funny—or, rather, Mr. George Bastow is. Later we see him as a gallant major, "a gay old stager," as he describes himself, still open for a lark, still with half an eye on the women! Really "age cannot wither"—never mind the rest; George Bastow is a skilful eccentric character impersonator. Miss Gracie Grahame is a dainty comedienne who wins golden opinions for her agreeable singing and darcing, and Mr. Joe Archer excels no less in his particular line of comedy.

The name of Miss Victoria Monks is nowadays one to conjure with. She seems, albeit unconsciously, to have dipped deep into the well of psychological influence, and immediately she glances at an audience she has that audience in her grip. To be in the grip of such a lady is not at all an unpleasant experience, and when she is so complimentary as to sing, quite pleadingly, "Take me back to London town," what indescribable joy takes possession of the Cockney heart! And whether or not you believe her statement that she—an American artist, too!—likes London better than New York, you will, at any rate, admit that the sentiment is interpreted in a most enchanting manner. "Ain't you gwine to say adoo?" is her succeeding item, and before the lady herself says "adoo" to the footlights we get her quaintly melodious rendering—and what an exquisite touch there is in it!—of "If you want to have a row." You might waltz round the world till you were dead and not find another such quartet of whimsical wights as they who style themselves the Harmony Four. They are exceedingly generous with their comical absurdities, which keep one in a state of much risible perturbation. Then there are an intelligent doggie called Rosie attached to one Dandy George; some talented vocalists and dancers in the Six Lancashire Lassies; Lotto, Lilo, and Otto, the wonderful trick cyclists; and Jury's Bioscope, with a series of amusing pictures descriptive of Coney Island sports and pastimes.

THE ROYAL ALBERT.

Mr. Charles Relf, who has disposed of the popular hall in Canning-town which he has so successfully governed for many years, has provided a really first-class programme for the last week, but one of his management. The place of the sensational playlet, which is usually such a favourite item in the bill, is this week taken by a sketch of a lighter nature—the farcical trifle Barmaids, which is one hearty laugh from beginning to end. Mainly responsible for this hilarity is the predicament in which a Mr. Teague places himself by his own foolishness. Wishing to prove to his friends what a gay dog he is, he, in the absence from home of his wife, proposes marriage to three barmaids. One after the other they all visit him, and the perplexed Teague persuades his butler, Dixon, to pose as his brother, and interview them, whilst he takes refuge behind a screen. The climax is reached when the wife unexpectedly comes on the scene, but happiness is restored when the "barmaids" declare they are all married women, and only intended to play a joke on Teague. The playlet is full of witty lines and humorous situations, and is admirably enacted by Miss Holo Hodgson, Mr. Harry Lowther, and the company supporting them, especially droll being the representative for the butler, Dixon.

Another mirth-provoking item is the duologue Dare I Marry; or, the Painter and the Pro, presented by Miss Cora Duncan and Mr. Albert Brasque. An artist has fallen in love with a music hall "star," but hesitates to propose marriage to her, as he will inherit a large sum of money on condition he weds a certain lady named in a will at once. The fascinations of the variety artist are, however, so great that he decides to forego the fortune; and when it transpires that she is the lady his relative wished him to marry, the happiness of the young couple is complete. Miss Duncan, in the rôle of the music hall artist, sang with much archness a humorous song, "Little Widow Brown," and as the painter who is so smitten with her charms, Mr. Brasque acted with earnestness and finish, the happily-associated pair causing much amusement in the funny love-making scene. The bright and merry little duologue was accorded a flattering reception.

An especially dainty and pleasing interlude was that given by Vivian's Arcadians. The talented youngsters appeared as a couple of charming shepherdesses and an attendant swain in a pretty pastoral scene, their entertainment including some vocalism and dancing of a really high order of merit. The comedian of the quartette was responsible for an eccentric dance and some laughable fooling, and the entire show proved most acceptable. Indeed, such a refined and dainty little turn is seldom seen in the halls, and the youngsters and those responsible for their training are to be congratulated. The dance music by Mr. Edward German is given by kind permission of Mr. H. B. Irving.

Early in the programme Mr. Bert Sharp secured applause for his comic rendering of humorous ditties, and much wonderment was created by the "black art" of Mustapha, an illusionist who produced tables, chairs, rabbits, a couple of geese, &c., in a most remarkable manner. The Sisters Melba, a couple of attractive vocalists with voices of excellent quality, were loudly acclaimed for their rendering of three tuneful duets; and Mr. Sid Bandon, a character comedian of decided ability, scored equally with a serious ditty, "Dear Old Pals," and a really funny number, "Sez I to myself, sez I," also arousing merriment with his other comic ditty, "To cut a long story short." Other entertaining turns were supplied by Lomas, in his clever "monkey" act; Ellis and Watts, comedians, patterers, and dancers; the Reed-Oetzmann Troupe in their funny pantomime, On Tour in the Tyrol; and Walter Payne's Bio-Photoscope. Mr. Walter Leaver, who has been connected with the hall for some twenty-seven years, occupies the chair with his usual geniality and tactfulness.

CAMBERWELL PALACE.

Under the capable management of Mr. P. A. Lennon, who has been here a little over two months, affairs at the Camberwell Palace are forging ahead very nicely. This week there are twenty different items on the programme with which the local public are being amused. Mr. Chas. Kitts and Miss Rhoda Windrum take up a fair amount of time with their trifle, The Cuckoo, but the time allowed them is well spent. Mr. Kitts as a fickle, love-making officer, and Miss Windrum as the "cuckoo" make for merriment on a liberal scale. Both characters are well played, and with fine appreciation of the humorous possibilities of what they call "a military contretemps." Mr. Chas. Lilburn is extremely whimsical in his song, "They met in the pale moonlight"; and Miss Dolly Denton is a talented and pleasing comedienne. Vandequotti shows us how smartly he can juggle; and Sibb and Sibb gain applause for their neatly-executed trapeze acts. Miss Nellie Adams is the fortunate possessor of a highly-trained voice, and her rendering of "The Swanee River" and "Trips" evidence tunefulness and a good vocal range. Woodhouse and Wells keep the audience in a continual state of amusement with their entertaining patter and cross-talk. Their conversation about "The Jungle" is particularly diverting, and they perpetrate some really first-class jokes and puns. A vocalist whose singing is full of feeling, expression, and character is Mr. Wolmer Young. The Allisons have an interesting duet on the subject of hats. The lady takes up the defence of the confections worn by her own sex and her companion defends masculine headgear. The result is laughter-compelling, to say the least, and the same remark may be said to apply to the animadversions which each later on casts upon the other. The Allisons also introduce a speciality dance, which is smartly executed.

Mr. Fred Storey, supported by a company of capable actors and actresses, revives an old favourite in Rip Van Winkle. The production is praiseworthy from every point of view. The acting is good, and the piece is excellently mounted and staged. Mr. Storey himself, of course, again brings before us the character of the careless, drunken ne'er-do-well, and he seems to grow better in the part the oftener he plays it. Rip Van Winkle will keep the boards for a long time yet, and the commendable manner in which Mr. Storey puts the piece on the music-hall stage should ensure him a run with it for many years to come. The Du Gros Trio appear in an extremely original gymnastic exhibition. One member of the little troupe is a lively comedian, and he jests and indulges in all kinds of antics in connection with his associates to the intense merriment of the house. Some of the feats of the Du Gros Trio are exceptionally daring, notably the somersault in mid-air of one man and his being caught up by the other two seated in their trapezes, while much amusement is created by the continual upward movements of the jester on the springing table. A versatile couple are the Sisters Bartholomew, whose business proves highly popular, and that without the fictitious aid of words which lack refinement. Their whole turn is pleasing from beginning to end. In their first song, "The pet of the regiment," one of the ladies looks extremely soldier like and well-groomed in Hussar uniform, while the other assumes the more natural office of a fascinating sweetheart. "She's such a dainty way" is the theme of their succeeding number, and it is sung with a vivaciousness and "go" that make the melody so infectious that the hearer wants to join in with the ladies. Ben Hur, the strong man, explains what it is to be strong—how easy it is to exercise with a 150lb. barbell, how easy, too, to support seven men and a heavy platform upon one's chest and knees! These demonstrations, as well as the poses, are attractive.

Miss Cissie Scofield is a young comedienne who wins great favour with her pretty singing of a lyric, "Will you be my Esquimaux?" which is, we suppose, a relative of another popular ditty. Anyhow, the lady's work is of the most agreeable order, and she dances gracefully withal. A comedian who combines in himself two or three of the arts and sciences associated with the variety stage is Mr. Sidney Dolf. Mr. Dolf can interpret the lines of a funny song to the best advantage, and he at the same time shows remarkable skill at juggling and balancing. His turn is an attempt to represent the different branches of "business" before the variety footlights. The Thurbani Trio excel in the direction of the playing of musical instruments. They are quite experts with the drum, the mandoline, and the cornet, their interpretation of "My Irish Molly" and a number of other popular melodies winning golden opinions. The trio dance in sprightly fashion, and altogether are jolly good company. Miss Hulo Hodgson, Mr. Harry Lowther, and company tickle one's fancy with humorous sayings and doings in the farcical comedietta, Barmaids. The Cranks are seen in a capital cycle act; and Vernon's Bioscope concludes with an admirable set of pictures, and the whole cannot but be described as little less than a monster programme.

WALTHAMSTOW PALACE.

A better bill than that presented this week by Mr. Arthur J. Barclay could not be desired, even by the most exacting patron of the halls. The programme is peculiarly diversified, no two turns having anything in common. The star turn is Tom Leamore, who sings two or three songs, including his park keeper ditty. His droll manner and eccentric make up are, as usual, much ap-

DEATH OF MISS MARIE WALFORD.

We regret to announce the death of Miss Marie Henry Walford, professionally known as "Mystic Marie," sister of Dr. Walford Bodie, famous throughout the country as the "Electric Wizard" and "Bloodless Surgeon." Miss Walford fell a victim to that fatal disease consumption, from which she had for a long time been a patient sufferer, and she passed peacefully away on Thursday morning, to the great grief of her relatives and friends. Assuming the title of "Mystic Marie," the deceased entered upon a stage career under the direction of her distinguished brother, and as "the girl with the magnetic brain," or "the hypnotised pianist, painter, dancer, and singer," she appeared at his performances all over the country until her health broke down, and she was compelled to seek retirement and rest. The malady had, however, taken too firm a hold; and her all too early death has come as a great shock to her family and friends, for whom the deepest sympathy will be felt in their sad bereavement.

A STRONG RESEMBLANCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—With reference to your admirably-written and considerate criticism of a sketch produced last week at the London Pavilion entitled Nell of the Music Halls, I must, in justice to myself, point out that my dramatic episode, Lulu; or, the Heart of an Actress, was produced at the Cambridge Music Hall last March by Miss Sylvia Cavalho, has since been played continuously by that lady in the London and suburban halls, and is booked many months ahead.

There is a very strong and suspicious resemblance between the plots of this new (?) sketch and my own, but there all similarity certainly ceases.

Thanking you in anticipation, I am, yours faithfully,

CHARLES DARRELL.

OPEN LETTER TO MANAGERS AND PROPRIETORS.

Gents,—

George Barclay and Co., of 221, Brixton-hill, now act as my Sole Agents.

Yours entertainingly,

ALBERT WHELAN,
The Australian Entertainer,

London Pavilion.

MARCO ENRICO BOSSI'S version of "Paradise Lost," which was produced at Augsburg in December, 1903, has been translated into English for the London Choral Society's performance by Miss Florence Hoare. The work consists of a prologue and three sections, Hell, Paradise, Earth. Two baritone and soprano, contralto and bass soloists are employed, and the voices of God the Father and of God the Son are given respectively to the chorus and to the tenors of the chorus. The composer of Il Paradiso Perduto is a native of Salo, near Brescia. He was a professor in the Neapolitan Conservatorio, and subsequently director of the famous Liceo Benedetto Marcello at Venice, where he remained till he was appointed head of the Liceo Musicale at Bologna.

preciated. A greater contrast to Tom Leamore than Messrs. Albert Wyndham and Company in The Roman Father it would be difficult to imagine. The piece is based on the well-known story dramatised by Sheridan Knowles, "Virginius," and the title-part was at one time a favourite of Macready's. Since his day the piece has rarely been played, the most recent performance being by John McCulloch, the American actor, at Drury Lane, when to the surprise of most people who knew him the late Sir Augustus Harris essayed the leading juvenile part of Icilius. In the condensed version presented by Mr. Wyndham the piece was played in four scenes, and while the main features of the plot are retained, the dialogue is much reduced. Mr. Wyndham makes a fine Virginius, acting with vigour, and speaking his lines with intelligence and force. Mr S. Edwards is especially good as Caius Claudius. Mr. Charles Whitley is sufficiently villainous as the licentious Appius Claudius. Mr. Roy Herbert acts well as Memitorious, and Miss St. John plays Virginia with maidenlike simplicity. This production is the best thing Mr. Wyndham has yet given us.

In Lulu, played by Sylvia Cavalho and company, we have again a complete change. The scene is a dressing-room at a London theatre, where the manager is awaiting the arrival of a new leading actress who is to take the place of Lulu, who has been playing the part in the provinces. Lulu, however, turns up, and after upbraiding the manager, with whom, it is evident, she is on terms of close intimacy, she consents to take the part, as the new actress has been injured in a motor smash. She scores a success in the first scene, and, returning to her dressing-room, learns that her lover, the manager, has a wife and child. The scene between the wife and the mistress, and the subsequent interview between Lulu and her lover, were played by Miss Cavalho with tragic intensity, and the curtain fell to prolonged plaudits. Mr. Clifford Pembroke, as the manager; Mr. Richard Purdon, as the acting-manager; and Miss Emma Chambers, as Lulu's foster-mother, were all excellent in every respect.

Miss Grace Grahame gave her much discussed "Fishing" song and another, and was accorded a hearty greeting. Harry Conlin was as funny as ever in his dame song. The Sisters Morgan sang sweetly and danced with grace. King and Benson gave a much appreciated turn, somewhat out of the regular run. Tray and Rich were, as usual, very amusing in their patter, and their dancing was exceptionally smart. The dog smugglers on Ruffell's Bioscope was a very interesting and particularly clear and distinct film. The overture "Eclipse" was well played by the band, under Mr. H. Peterson, and the stage sets did credit to the ability of Mr. John Grant, stage manager.

NEW CROSS EMPIRE.

A decidedly interesting event in the variety world was the appearance of Mr. Willie Edouin at the New Cross Empire on Monday evening. A comedian possessing a true sense of humour, Mr. Edouin has for a good many years stood high in the estimation of playgoers, and his record of successful impersonations in popular pieces is quite a long one. His Nathaniel Glover in Our Flat, his Hilarius in La Poupée, and his Hoggenheimer in The Girl from Kay's need only be mentioned to revive recollections of pleasant evenings spent at the theatre, and there are a score or more of other character sketches which have exercised the artistic ability of Mr. Edouin with the happiest results. In making his appearance on the variety stage, under engagement to the Moss' Empires, the popular comedian will undoubtedly add largely to the number of his admirers. He opened on Monday with a specially written monologue, in which he represented various people who pay a visit to a medical man, making up for the characters impersonated in full sight of the audience. He appeared first as the gentleman who, desirous of obtaining an insurance on his life, has to undergo a medical examination, and it is the peculiar methods of the doctor that Mr. Edouin so comically and cleverly makes fun of. His second character was that of a rough-and-ready kind of individual—one Bill Hawkins—who wishes to insure for £200, and persists in entering into details respecting his domestic affairs. After portraying a dude in evening dress who has not been discreet in his potations, and cannot therefore comply with the requirements of the examining doctor, he appeared lastly as Mrs. Wadlow, the keeper of a boarding-house, who has a strong objection to stating her age, but is not disinclined to carry on a mild flirtation with the medico. She gushes about her husband, "Dear Herbert," and finally walks out of the doctor's consulting room after a very unladylike display of temper. The fussy middle-aged lady was the most amusing of the character sketches. On Monday Mr. Edouin was, so to speak, feeling his way with the audience; and his performance will be still funnier when he has become more accustomed to his new surroundings. As it was, Mr. Edouin had an extremely cordial reception at both houses.

TED COWAN, WINNER OF THE ONE MILE BUCHANAN CHALLENGE CUP BICYCLE RACE.

A HARD-FOUGHT contest was that for the Buchanan Cup in the one mile cycle race. The cup, which is to be won three times in succession for undisturbed possession, was held before by Mr. Gent Lotto, and is now in the safe keeping of Mr. Ted Cowan, who is to be congratulated on a very determined "scorch." Unfortunately, Mr. Cowan and Mr. Lotto collided at the winning line, but Mr. Cowan's claim was confirmed by the judges.

One of the most successful turns in the current programme is that of Simms and Simms, whose mixture of gag and melody can be strongly recommended. Their duets on the mandoline and banjo are excellently rendered. One of them is made up as a darkey, and his always interrupted attempts to play the trombone and his catch phrase, "You are not mad, are you?" cause much merriment. Mr. Herbert Lloyd, the "Diamond King," gives a performance which is as original as it is funny. He arrives in a motor-car of curious design, and takes off an overcoat and hat both sparkling with brilliants. It would not be an easy task to describe in detail the "Diamond King's" many devices for exciting the laughter of the audience, but they are all ingenious and effective. He makes his exit in another curious looking car, bearing the inscription, amongst others, "To Hanwell." Miss Edie King appears in the character of Cinderella, representing that favourite heroine of the nursery in the Kitchen scene. She sings a song and laments her loneliness, being, indeed, moved to tears when she pictures the delightful ball to which her sisters have just departed in high glee. A quick-change, and Miss King, in a pretty dress, gives a charming dance that is received with much applause. Techow's cats prove that feline intelligence is much more developed than many people suppose. These animals, under the direction of their owner and trainer, accomplish some exceedingly clever tricks, their performance on the rope being specially worthy of note. Spot, "the enchanted coon," in his amusing travesty, "The Cake Walk Craze," meets with deserved success; the graceful couple, Helene and Emilon, are applauded for their gymnastic exercises on the trapeze; Bernar's Fantoches are extremely amusing; Mr. E. J. Sheldon, comedian; Brown and Le Clerq, in the old sketch, Black Justice, with a set of new cases for trial; and the well-known Glenroy Troupe of International Dancers are also in the bill. Mr. Ernest Bridgen is the efficient acting manager here, and Mr. Louis La Rondelle is the able musical director.

"THE HOUSE-BOAT."

A new Sketch, in Two Scenes, by John Leopold and Wilfred Vaughan, performed at the Empress Theatre, Brixton, on Monday, July 16.

Col. Scorcher ..... MR. WATSON HUME
Lively ..... MR. WILLIE LEOPOLD
Horatio Binks ..... MR. JOHN LEOPOLD, JUN.

Dolly Damper ..... MISS AMY HALL
Daisy Damper ..... MISS QUEENIE BRONTE

A Guest ..... MISS ZILLAH FAIR
Mrs. Scorcher ..... MISS KATHLEEN CAVANAGH

The married man who, galled by the chains of matrimony, seeks to renew some of the delights of his single life, is a familiar character in countless farcical plays, many of them having a Palais Royal origin. In The House Boat, which is one of the leading attractions at the Empress, Brixton, this week, the "gay dog" who breaks loose from matrimonial moorings is called Col. Scorcher—no doubt as an index to his character. The middle-aged military man happens to know a music-hall artist, Dolly Damper, who has a lively sister named Daisy. They have a houseboat up the river in a very quiet nook, and they invite the Colonel to lunch with them, asking him to bring a friend with him. Scorcher is not the man to resist such a temptation, and to his wife he makes the usual excuse of being called away on urgent business. However, at the last moment he receives a message from his friend Howard that he is unable to join the party; but the Colonel overcomes the difficulty by getting his manservant, Lively, to play the part. Indeed, he is to be introduced to the young ladies as "a real live lord," and in order to do justice to the assumed character his master hands him a bundle of bank notes. The Colonel carelessly drops the letter of invitation, and it is of course picked up by Mrs. Scorcher, who, greatly upset when she has mastered its contents, confides in the maid-servant, Maria, Lively's sweetheart. At her suggestion it is decided that mistress and maid shall also go up the river in search of the house-boat, which is stationed opposite the Jolly Anglers' Inn. The Colonel and his supposed aristocratic friend duly meet the Damper girls, and Lively, in response to their inquiries, finds a difficulty in locating his country house. Mrs. Scorcher and Maria meanwhile watch the "goings on" from a balcony at the riverside inn, Lively's sweetheart seizing the opportunity of dropping a tray on her young man's head. When the party adjourn to the house-boat the fun becomes fast and furious, as two exceedingly active gentlemen, known as Horatio Binks and Augustus Scarem, contrive to abstract most of the eatables, to the mystification and mortification of the hungry guests. In this scene a good deal of pantomime and knockabout business is introduced, with the most laughable results. Mrs. Scorcher, disguised as a fortune-teller, interviews her husband, and after some uncomplimentary remarks from him concerning the wife he thinks he has gulled, she reveals herself, to his utter consternation and dismay. Maria "goes for" Lively, and the sketch concludes in merry fashion.

Mr. Willie Leopold contributes largely to the fun and frolic, as Lively; and Mr. John Leopold, jun., and Mr. Ernest Leopold are exceedingly active and energetic as Binks and Scarem. Mr. Tom Leopold also scores as Police-Constable Smith, Mr. Barry Lupino makes excellent use of his opportunities as Tipit, a waiter; and Mr. Wilfred Vaughan renders good service as the bluff innkeeper Blobbs. Miss Amy Hall as Dolly Damper and Miss Queenie Bronte as Daisy are bright and appropriately vivacious representatives of these characters. Miss Gertie Winter works hard and successfully in the part of Maria; Miss May Gordon is a pert waitress; and Miss Kathleen Cavanagh is well suited as the middle-aged Mrs. Scorcher. Mr. Watson Hume plays the part of Col. Scorcher with spirit; and other minor characters have satisfactory exponents in Mr. Charles Gough, Mr. William Howarth, Mr. Harry Oates, and Miss Zillah Fair. The merry little piece is adequately staged, and on making its first appearance in London has met with a highly favourable reception.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

We often wonder if the great majority of our showmen readers understand the usefulness of the organisation that ceaselessly watches over their interests. Of this we are reluctantly compelled to have serious doubts, when we see the tardy recognition that the work of the Showmen's Guild receives from the rank and file of the great body of people engaged in the fairground industry.

We draw attention to the remarkable contrast between the work of Showmen Trade Defence as it exists to-day and to the tremendous efforts involving an agitation extending over the whole of the United Kingdom in the early days of the life of the Van-dwellers' Association.

Last week as much effective work was done in a two hours' conference between the executive officials of the Guild in blocking and eventually stopping for the present session of Parliament a Bill (which in some of its particulars was even more obnoxious than the historic Movable Dwellings Bill of 1888) as was formerly accomplished in twelve months.

When that Bill was introduced by educational faddists in 1888, the showmen were utterly without organisation, and but for kindly sympathisers and friends who warned the showmen of their danger, it would have passed into law. To defeat George Smith of Coalville's Bill, the showmen had to be roused from one end of the kingdom to the other, and large sums of money generously subscribed in face of the urgent need had to be spent before the voice of the organised showmen could be heard in Parliament, and a threatened danger averted by the blocking and final disappearance of the Bill.

Only a fortnight ago the Parliamentary agent of the Showmen's Guild acquainted the executive with the danger threatening the show business and the domestic life of showpeople from a proposed measure introduced by a private member to deal with the education of vagrant children. Now notice the difference. Instead of an agitation involving the expenditure of hundreds of pounds to defeat this dangerous Bill, all that was necessary and all that was done was a conference between the Honorary Chaplain, the Rev. T. Horne, and Mr. F. Millar, the Guild Parliamentary Agent, and the friends of the showmen in the House of Commons, who were told how the Bill would interfere with the showmen's work and home life. On its second reading the Bill was blocked, and now, owing to the heavy pressure of Government work for the remainder of the session, the promoter of the Bill will have no further chance of introducing it; in other words, the educational faddists will have to begin their work all over again in the next session of Parliament, and they will find again the same alert and strenuous opposition that has defeated their purpose for the present.

We have spoken at considerable length upon this question in order to rally all showmen to the support of the trade organisation that looks after their interests with such ability and success. We have repeatedly stated that one of the most valuable assets of the show business is the organisation of trade defence built up by some of the best minds engaged in the business, and no less by those whose genuine interest for the well-being of the travelling showman has led them to co-operate with and extend the work done by showmen proper. We ask careful attention to this wonderful contrast between the early days of showman organisation and the present day, in which the power and influence of the Showmen's Guild is recognised in the high places of the land.

A very interesting proof of this recognition of the Showmen's Guild is evidenced in the success of the petition against the abolition of Mitcham Fair. The Home Secretary refused to abolish the fair, although the local authorities at Mitcham were backing up the influential group of residents who were agitating to do away with the people's pleasure fair. He was not satisfied with the reasons given for abolition, but was duly impressed with the reasons against abolition set out in the showmen's petition for the retention of the fair.

Whilst we rejoice at the success of the Guild's work, we wish to emphasise the importance of maintaining it in unimpaired vigour, for if the Guild did nothing else but Parliamentary defence work, it would still remain an incalculable boon to the whole of the showman world. Parliamentary work is but one branch of its usefulness, even if we include with that opposition by petition to the abolition of fairs.

There is another important work engaging more and more the time and ability of its executive officials, and that is journeying to towns where fairs are threatened with opposition and possible extinction, and endeavouring, by interviewing the town authorities or those who threaten the continuance of the fair, to bring about amicable arrangements. Examples of this kind of work are recorded from time to time in our columns, but many of these arrangements are of that confidential and private character that they cannot be made public.

In connection with work of this kind at the request of showmen, the Honorary Chaplain has made a number of visits this season, and in most instances success has rewarded his efforts. There are at the present moment four fairs threatened by powerful local minorities of inhabitants, and each one of these is engaging the time and attention of the Honorary Chaplain.

The most important of these fairs has reached a stage when no advantage can be gained by further conciliatory action—we refer to the old Charter Fair of Horsham. The opposition to this fair is the work of one man, and is carried on regardless of expense by this individual, in spite of the fact that the whole of Horsham is opposed to his autocratic action.

Briefly stated, the facts of the case are these: The pleasure fair has been held for many years past upon a piece of land known as "The Jew's Meadow," on the outskirts of the town, and admirably situated for its purpose. The nearest house of any pretension to the fair ground has been taken within the last few months by a gentleman who, without waiting to see what the fair is really like, has sent a lawyer's letter to the showman lessee of the ground, threatening him with an injunction if he perseveres with the fair. The lessee acquainted Mr. Horne with the difficulties of the situation, and every effort was made to propitiate this one objector to the fair, but unfortunately without success.

Having exhausted all the possibilities of conciliation, the lessee of the ground determined to risk the injunction and to hold the fair, and we shall watch with considerable interest the results. We very much doubt that the people of Horsham will permit one man, and he, comparatively speaking, a stranger within their gates, to impose his will upon the town. We do not remember, even in our very wide experience of cranks and faddists and their opposition to the pleasures and amusements of the people, a more flagrant case of wrongheadedness than this individual resident of Horsham, who fancies he will be annoyed before the annoyance (if it be one) has come within his purview, and remarkable as it is to say, was told by the owner of the house that the fair would be held within sight and hearing of his very door at the time that he took the house.

Trouble is threatened also with regard to the Whitsuntide Fair at Weston Green, near Knighton, in Surrey. A showman correspondent has put us in possession of the fact that a number of the residents are moving with a view to stop the fair. This, of course, is the legitimate work for the Showmen's Guild to undertake, and the matter will receive immediate attention, for if the fair is a statute one the usual procedure under the Abolition of Fairs Act will have to take place, and that gives a full opportunity for the showmen to petition the Home Office, but if it is a fair held by permission of the Lord of the Manor its continuance will largely rest with him.

A local showman writes to us concerning Gloucester Green Fair, Oxford, to say that the continuance of the fair is threatened by a section of the members of the City Council, and gives us the alarming news that if this agitation to abolish the small fair succeeds the same people will attempt the abolition of the great fair of St. Giles. Of course, entirely apart from the menace to the greater fair, the Showmen's Guild will endeavour to save the smaller one from threatened extinction.

Then there is another example of a threatened fair near Chelmsford; it is the town of Writtle. We have an interesting letter from Mr. W. Castledine, veterinary surgeon of that town, telling us that a petition has been sent to the Home Office for the abolition of the fair, but that he and a great number of the parishioners wish it to be continued, and have drawn up a petition which has been extensively signed, and intend forwarding it to the Home Secretary. It would greatly assist the Executive of the Showmen's Guild if the showmen and stall-holders taking Writtle Fair would send in their names and addresses to the Guild Secretary, care of The Era.

In connection with the extremely important question raised by Mr. P. Collins in his open letter to the showman world generally, and in particular to a numerous body of his tenants on the fair-grounds he controls, we have an equally important letter from Mr. Wm. Murphy, lessee of some of the principal fairs and feasts in Yorkshire, Durham, Cumberland, and the border counties:—

"SHOWMEN'S WELFARE."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—I quite agree with the contents of Mr. P. Collins's letter, appearing in your issue of July 7. The showman's calling must not be allowed to lapse into anything approaching degradation. Our business transactions have developed with rapid strides during the past twenty years, and it becomes every traveller to retain the position we have reached to-day in the eyes of the great British public, who are keen observers, and it behoves us to establish firmly our calling as a perfectly legitimate one.

These objects can only be reached by the co-operation of the rank and file collectively. The integrity of our commercial transactions must be unshaken. Our homes must always be model homes, able to compare with others. Our language must be pure and free from offence; and further, the most important point which every labour-employing showman must insist on, is to see that the public who may be customers to a roundabout, show, or stall are treated with in a civil tongue, whether they purchase or not, by their employees.

Personally, so far as I am directly concerned on my show-grounds (which extend from the Humber to the Tweed), my tenants know that what I have stated above is a mutual cause of interest. The general body of the showmen of to-day, I know, do comply with these conditions, so essential to our well-being and success; but in our business, as in other callings, there are isolated cases of wrong-doing, and it is to these cases that my remarks are directed.

On my grounds all straw, &c., must be cleared from booths, &c., and on Sunday I look for every showman to observe Sunday as Sunday-in so far that work not a necessity is concerned; and I have given my agents instructions to report to me any violations of these rules.

I sincerely hope all will pull together, and thereby reflect credit on our calling, obtain welcome acceptance by the public, and always provide healthy and innocent amusement to the nation.—Believe me, yours fraternally,

WM. MURPHY.

Show Ground, Skipton, Yorkshire, July 10.

Following up his vigorous crusade in defence of showmen in the West of England, Mr. Norton has sent the following letter to the Cornishman, and we doubt not that it will fulfil its necessary and eminently useful purpose:—

A PLEA FOR THE TRAVELLING SHOWMAN.

Sir,—You have been so uniformly fair in your notices and criticisms of the showman's life and business that the enclosed notes from to-day's issue of The Era will, I feel sure, interest you.

I am responsible for the remarks therein on the recent actions of the Penzance Corporation and the Devon County Council.

To force showmen to leave a fair-field by 6 a.m. on Sunday, and to shut the gates at three minutes past that hour in the faces of those ready and willing to leave, as was done here, is surely unnecessary and vexatious as well as undoubtedly illegal.

I was then, and am now, at a loss to discover the raison d'être of this cruel regulation. If it was intended to prevent a supposed violation of the sanctity of the Sunday in question it defeated its own ends, for the showmen were working all night pulling down.

On the other hand, if the rule was made to prevent the feelings of early church-goers being outraged by the spectacle of a living wagon or show-wagon passing through the streets, then I can only remind those responsible for such a rule that religion without humanity is worse than useless. Possessing, as I do, a somewhat intimate acquaintance with the members of the showman's profession, I can assure you that I have never known a case where a showman has willingly disturbed the susceptibilities of church or chapel-goers by passing through a town during the hours of Divine service.

Where such a thing has happened it has occurred through inadvertence or necessity. The exigencies of his profession unfortunately impel the showman, as well as the more fortunate members of the theatrical profession, to be on the road most Sundays, and this to his regret, as well as that of other people's. So I devoutly trust that the Penzance Corporation will not needlessly impose such an illegal and vexatious restriction another year.

Take the manifesto of Mr. Pat Collins in to-day's Era to his tenants on the various fair-grounds. This is a fair example of what showmen are doing among themselves, and reveals something of the justifiable pride they feel in their profession. The Showmen's Guild, to which I have the honour to belong, also exerts its powerful influence in the same direction.

My only excuse for writing to you on a subject which is probably by now forgotten must be that I have been requested by some of my showmen friends to take some notice of the Sunday regulation at Penzance.

I trust that, with a fuller knowledge of what show people really are, Corporations and County Councils will abstain from further pin-pricks, and treat their entertainers, who are welcomed by the show-loving public and the ratepayers, for different and other reasons, with a little more courtesy and humanity.

Geoffrey W. A. Norton.

Beachfield Hotel, Penzance, July 7, 1906.

Alexander's Circus paid a visit to Hastings on Tuesday, and gave two performances in the Central Cricket Ground. A word of praise is due to Mr. Denton and his capable little string orchestra for their rendering of the musical numbers. Heading the list of performers is Kurio, the enigma; Leonora submits a lightning jockey act which pleases her audience greatly; the Three Stebbings are agile and clever triple somersaultists; the Kamara Japanese troupe of acrobats afford much pleasure; Alfonso, equilibrist, and Wilfred, flexible marvel, delight the audience; clever riding is done by David Burns; Texas Frank, George Knight, and Mlle. Bellina; and much merriment is caused by the troupe of funny clowns.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boulton opened at Kinksholm Athletic Ground, Gloucester, on Monday, in a large marquee pavilion specially erected, with their Al Fresco company, which included the Boultons, speciality artists; Mr. Sam Johns, quaint comedian; Miss Lambert, soprano; Mr. R. B. Ward, comedian; Miss Connie Irwin, pianist and mandolinist; Mr. John Lambert, baritone vocalist; Miss Ivy Boulton, song and dance artist; Fred Boulton, comedian; and the Lamberts, duettists. A sketch entitled The Insurance Office was also given. The opening performances were well attended, and the troupe should prove a great attraction during the summer months.

Proctor's Circus is at Horwich this week, and proves a great attraction, the fairground being crowded at every performance. The company is a very smart, all-round one, and the jockey act by the Proctor Family, Miss Marian Proctor on the tight-wire, the fiery donkeys, and the band carriage parade are highly appreciated.

Mr. Harry Marvello has a large number of attractions on his ground, the Harbour Green, Promenade, Portobello. Amongst others, are Sam Stott, with fancy goods and rick, Codona's dolls, cocoanut sheets, &c., Pickle's cup-breaker, Black's fancy goods, White's shooters and other games, also a few auctioneers. During the current week Glasgow holiday-makers have well patronised the various attractions. The Geisha entertainers, Harbour Green Pavilion, are completely packed at every performance. Chester and Lee's marionettes are proving a great draw, record business being done.

At the Fleece Field, Evesham, Mr. Jacob Studt's electric motor-cars and grand bioscope exhibition, Matthew's juvenile switchback, Freeman's bowling saloon, E. Clarke's shooting saloons, Professor Gal Hague's boxing saloon, Warwick's fine art exhibition have done good business, the grounds being visited by thousands of people.

Headless Cross Cherry Wakes were maintained by Clarke's motor-cars, Chipperfield's cinematograph exhibition and hall of laughter, Clarke's shooting saloon, swing boats, cokernut sheet, and striker, Wilson's bottle shooter, Kemp's toy stalls and fisheries, ring-boards, and other amusements by Messrs. Wilson, Chipperfield, Kemp, and Taylor.

Scott's amusements have been visiting Crowle and Hanbury, Ayer's aggregation has been to Alcester and Bidford, and Herberts' to Ashwood Bank, Cookhill, and Bishampton.

Pleasure Fairs during October will include King's Norton, on the 1st; Alvechurch, on the 3rd; Evesham, on the 5th; Alcester, on the 9th; and Stratford-on-Avon, on the 12th.

Messrs. Turnbull and Tofts's hobby-horses, swing boats, and shooting saloons are doing good business at Limerick, and visitors are enjoying their constant spin on these inanimate sprinters. Mr. J. F. Calverto has also many other attractions, including the novel helter-skelter, aerial railway, and electric punching-ball, so much appreciated by the lovers of the noble art.

Ringwood Fair was maintained by the local showman, Haynes, who provided steam horses, park swings, and shooting concerns, and with him was associated Messrs. Birchall and D. Smith with minor novelties.

The fairs ahead for next week are:—Bramley Feast, Cheddingley, Glemsford, Epsom, Hockswold, Reading, Alresford, Cley-next-the-Sea, Melsham, Bollington, Compstall, Falmouth, King's Nympton, Mossley, Olney, Shirland, Stretton, Unsworth, Heyford, Keighley Feast, Saltaire Feast, Sandford, Shipley Feast, and Windhill Feast. In Scotland: Stirling, Edinburgh, Kilmarnock, Kirkcudbright, and Leith.

THE LATE JOHN DEE HUMPHREYS.

The letter from Mr. Arthur Reeve published in our columns recently draws attention to the necessity for helping Mrs. Humphreys and her family. We strongly commend this most deserving case to the generosity of the showman world.

The many friends of the deceased, who was one of the founders of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association, will, we are confident, now that they know the urgent necessity of the case, respond with readiness to this appeal.

During the whole course of a laborious and honourable career John Dee Humphreys was ever ready to assist his brother showmen. His open-handed generosity and unfailing kindness endeared him to a wide circle of friends and comrades in the circus and show world.

The object of the fund is to enable the widow and family to maintain their home until such time as the children are able to earn an income sufficient for that purpose.

SIDE-SHOWS AT THE AUSTRIAN EXHIBITION.

Before passing to the detailed story of the side-shows at Earl's Court it is only right that a tribute of appreciation should be paid to the Austrian Exhibition as a whole. The characteristic of the show from end to end is completeness: there are no unfinished or unoccupied places in the Exhibition. As a picture, wherever we may travel within the vast space of the Earl's Court enclosure the eye is satisfied; and, vast as the dimensions of the Exhibition are, the sky pictures are so marvellous in their artistic beauty as to impel the illusion of still greater space of mountain, upland, and valley. It is in very truth gems of Austrian scenery, and set pictures of the polyglot empire in miniature.

And now to our more particular task—the shows at Earl's Court. Two of the side-shows must be put upon the highest plane of up-to-date achievement. We refer to "The Tyrol Village" and "The Cavern of the Syrens." The vast space of the Empress Hall is entirely occupied with the first, and the subterranean waterways, interminable almost in their lengthy and winding courses, have been utilised for the eerie sensation of the "Cavern of the Syrens."

In the Tyrol village we have examples of the village industries of the Austrian Alps transplanted in all their native completeness, and we see the actual workers engaged in their artistic cottage industries. The communal life of the Tyrolese workers is further illustrated by the native songs, melodies, and dances given by two excellent companies of Tyrolese singers. This mammoth side-show is one of the most complete stage pictures we have ever witnessed.

"The Cavern of the Syrens" is a most original and weird conception. The strong current maintained by the gigantic water-wheel drives the boat-loads of passengers along the eerie maze of its many channels, passing under rocky cavern roofs studded with stalactites and quaintly and cunningly illuminated, and then at last the startling picture of the syrens enticing their victims by their fatal beauty. This show alone, with the Tyrol village, is novelty enough to draw the whole of London to Earl's Court.

In the beautiful Western Gardens there are a number of splendid side-shows, conspicuous amongst these being the salt mines, a perfect working illustration of a typical Austrian industry.

Then there is the magnificent panorama of the Battle of Isel, giving to the visitor a splendid picture of the historic victory of the brave mountaineers over their French and Bavarian enemies.

Deftly hidden for part of the way by the mountains we have the inevitable switchback, still, as ever, a source of unfailing attraction. As you looked at the mountains, almost convinced of their reality, you heard the joyous ring of happy laughter, and then in a bend of the mountain range you would get a glimpse of real life in the happy switchback voyagers.

A very up-to-date exhibition in the Western Gardens is the electrophone, where the visitor may have the music and words of the leading London productions 'phoned direct from the theatres and music halls.

To complete the list in this part of the grounds we must mention the ever-popular distorting mirrors in the Hall of Laughter, the clever exhibition of ants and bees, Tyrolese shooting ranges, and autophotoscope machines.

Now for all the fun of the fair. In the Prater all the showmen are busy calling—ever calling—their patrons to enter the shows.

The biggest of these is the Summer Theatre, where "Vienna by Night" is illustrated with song, dance, and music by artists from the Austrian capital.

Professor Otto, the wonder man, with performing cats and birds, gives frequent exhibitions in the Bijou Theatre.

The bicycle circus, the Tyrol shooting range, a capital stereorama, the Trieste flying fish, the Prater Wurstel man, and the aerial flight form a continuous line of novelties.

Willard's marionette show, the merry mannikins from the Prater, Vienna, perform to delighted audiences.

Maskelyne and Cook's invention, "The Temple of One Thousand Eyes," is an exhibition of great novelty and attractiveness.

The extreme end of the open fair-ground of the Prater is occupied by the gigantic wheel and its modern rival the helter-skelter lighthouse.

On the occasion of our visit we walked the Prater—or, rather, were carried along by the rapidly-increasing crowd visiting the fair after the lights were lit. We need hardly say that the illumination of the grounds with innumerable coloured lamps is one of the features of an Earl's Court show that ought not to be missed.

Passing from the Prater through the vast range of buildings filled with exhibits of the trades and manufactures of the Austrian Empire, we found in the Queen's Court, high above the pleasure lake, that most marvellous of modern roundabouts—Sir Hiram Maxim's captive airship.

Here, too, was the giant water chute, and a number of small but very attractive novelties.

Of the delightful music, both instrumental and vocal, we can say but a passing word. The air was filled with pleasant sounds, and wherever we went our first impression was more than confirmed by the manifest enjoyment of the vast throng of visitors that found in the open air of Earl's Court the ideal amusement for a summer's evening.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

J. A. Burton (Derby).—We have searched the available obituary notices, but cannot find the date of Van Hare's death.

H. B. Pratt (Oxford).—Yes, the Showmen's Guild will deal with the matter. Very glad of your co-operation.

W. Taylor (Hounslow).—We will carefully watch the proceedings at Weston Green, and will communicate with you further.

F. Richardson (Newcastle-on-Tyne). — Many thanks for your kind offer of assistance, shall be glad to hear from you.

G. C. (Ealing).—We advise you to make your wants known through our advertising columns.

The Rev. T. Horne is making arrangements to hold a meeting of the Showmen's Guild at Longsight Wakes, Manchester, on Sunday, July 29. This meeting has been for many years an annual event. The vicar of the parish, the Rev. H. Norburn, is an hon. chaplain of the Guild, and provides a school for the children of the Wakes ground and a special service for the show people on the Wakes Sunday.

Nantwich, near Crewe, has a capital fair beginning on July 14 and lasting three days. The shows at this fair were Manders' star menagerie, the Hutins, second sight experts, Wright's fine art academy, and Johnson's novelty booth. The machines included three large sets provided by John Collins, gondolas, galloping horses, and steam yachts. The minor novelties were Johnson's big boats, Wright's Winchester range, Dobson's shooting gallery, Claughton's bottle battery, and throwing games by Deeke, Mercer, Johnson, and Claughton.

Subscriptions to the Showmen's Guild:—Per Mr. John Whiting, William Greenhough, Esq. (Rochdale), 10s. 6d.; per Mr. Shuttleworth, A. Hutchinson, 5s.; William Scott, 5s.; S. A. Heeson, 5s.; per Guild Secretary, Professor Ruby, 5s.

The Alexandra Hippodrome visited Hastings on Tuesday, and both performances were well patronised.

DANGEROUS PERFORMANCES BILL.

MEETING OF PROTEST.

A mass meeting of lady music-hall artists was held at the Hotel Provence on Wednesday afternoon for the purpose of protesting against the Bill now before Parliament for the prevention of dangerous performances by women and children. The meeting was convened by the International Artists' Lodge and the Variety Artists' Federation. Miss Ethel Peck, the lady secretary of the former institution, presided, and an interest amounting to enthusiasm was evinced by the many lady gymnasts and acrobats present. The ladies realised that they were there in the cause of their very means of livelihood, and it is to be hoped that those performers concerned with the athletic branch of the profession who were unable to attend will make their voices heard and their influence felt to get the Bill framed in such a manner that it will not injure a legitimate and honest calling, which is proved not to be prejudicial to health or offers extraordinary risks in the way of personal accidents. Let every member of the gymnastic profession join in this agitation, and we cannot too strongly urge that the battle against the Bill must be carried on by the acrobatic members of the profession themselves. If they hope to secure serious and sympathetic consideration from Imperial Parliament they must plead their own cause. We think they should, as the next step, strive at once to get an inquiry conducted by a Committee of the House of Commons into the safety or otherwise of stage acts. Then many of them would be able to give evidence of such a character as would enable the Commissioners to come to some kind of decision as to what was or was not a hazardous performance. Mr. C. C. Bartram, the secretary of the International Artists' Lodge, and Mr. Frank Gerald, the secretary of the Variety Artists' Federation, are both working hard in the interests of the profession in respect of the Dangerous Performances Bill. We have not the slightest doubt that if Mr. Herbert Samuel and Mr Herbert Gladstone (the Home Secretary), who are both reasonable-minded men, are approached in a proper manner, and by members of the profession instead of by outside agitators, justice will be done to all parties.

The chairwoman opened the proceedings by reading the draft of the proposed Dangerous Performances Bill submitted by Mr. Herbert Samuel, M.P., and also read to the meeting extracts from that gentleman's letter which appeared in the last issue of The Era. Continuing, she remarked that this letter was intended to allay alarm, but did not succeed in doing so. The Bill itself was loosely worded. It meant the abolition of thousands of acrobatic and gymnastic acts. Then, who was to judge whether or not a performance was dangerous—the police or the magistrates? What would happen if they took women out of the acts? It would mean the ruin of the acts certainly for a time. Then there would be difficulty with managers in regard to contracts. If this Bill were passed no manager would be certain whether or not he was to be deprived of the services of a lady artist. If he wished, on the other hand, to find an excuse for getting rid of her, this Bill would furnish him with one. The various music-hall societies had all come to the conclusion that the Bill was unnecessary, especially as the extension of the Workmen's Compensation Act rendered it of questionable value. The speaker hoped that the meeting would express its opinion strongly, and suggest further steps to be adopted. It had been rumoured in Parliament that this movement to oppose the Bill was a managers' movement; but this could be refuted, for the London Entertainments Protection Association had been written to for their support, and had replied as follows: "I am desired to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of the 3rd inst., enclosing a copy of a resolution passed at an extraordinary meeting of your executive committee as to the Dangerous Performances Bill, 1906, and to inform you that your suggestion that a deputation should be sent to those concerned in the conduct of the Bill meets with the approval of this Association. It is considered that such independent action on your part would be most effective. My Association will be glad to hear the result of any action on your part as they will be glad to further your opposition should it, in their opinion, be considered advisable.—Yours faithfully, J. L. Graydon, Hon. Sec." The Theatre, Variety, and Concert Agents' Association replied: "I am in receipt of your letter of yesterday's date, which I will bring before my committee at their next meeting," and nothing more had been heard from them. The granddaughter of Lord George Sanger had written to say that there was no more danger in acrobatic performances than in riding on electric tramcars. She had never had a serious accident, and had never broken a limb. The training made one strong. If the Bill were passed it would mean starvation for hundreds. Marta and Julietta sent a note to say that the Bill meant the taking away of bread from hundreds of artists; and a lady member of the Trapnell Family stated that she had been in the business for twenty years, the family consisting of two brothers, two sisters, and herself, and they had been doing acrobatics without injury to themselves. The Franz Family also wrote in similar strain, as well as Mme. Borelli. Another artist wrote: "Unjust and unreasonable law. What would the show business amount to if the novel and beautiful acrobatic acts were taken away?" Similar communications were received from other well-known performers.

Miss Vulcana, of Atlas and Vulcana, called upon to make a speech, said she strongly opposed the Bill at every point.

Miss Kitty Marion proposed the following resolution: "That this meeting of women variety artists protests strongly against the so-called Dangerous Performances Bill. Facts prove that the performances in question are not dangerous, only two serious accidents having occurred to women in 7,800,000 performances. They therefore appeal to the Government not to abolish the gymnastic profession, as this Bill will undoubtedly do, in a moment of panic, and thus deprive thousands of their means of making their livelihood in a highly-skilled and hard-working profession."

The resolution was seconded by Miss Atora and carried unanimously.

Miss Merrilees proposed and Miss Kaufmann seconded a resolution as follows: "This meeting of lady performers of the profession consider it advisable that a deputation be nominated to attend on Mr. Herbert Samuel and the Home Secretary for the purpose of putting before them the objections against the passing of the Dangerous Performances Bill." Carried.

Frau Goltz, who spoke in German, remarked that she and her husband had for years performed without meeting with a serious accident. On the other hand, their children, who had not been trained at all, had had limbs broken in school exercises.

Miss Kitty Marion proposed and Miss Vulcana seconded the following resolution: "That it be left to the various music-hall societies which have already combined to elect a deputation and decide what further steps should be taken; and that the societies be advised to have as many gymnasts and acrobats on the committee as possible." Carried.

Mr. C. C. Bartram pointed out that it must be borne in mind that the business of the variety gymnast and acrobat was a profession and not a trade, and it was therefore desirable that the meetings should not partake too much of the nature of a labour meeting. He thought that the music-hall profession might take a large theatre and organise a gathering there.

Mr. Charles Coborn complimented the lady artists who had attended the meeting. He had been connected with the profession for twenty years, and he considered that the present movement was for the good of their calling.

Mr. Frank Gerald, the secretary of the Variety Artists' Federation, deprecated the idea of a Hyde Park meeting suggested by one of the speakers.

A vote of thanks to Miss Ethel Peck for presiding so charmingly, proposed by Mrs. Coborn and seconded by Miss Marion, brought the deliberations to a close.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Mr. Herbert Samuel's letter, published in your last issue, is anything but reassuring to performers who would be affected by the operations of the proposed Dangerous Performances Act. In his claim that this law does no more than repeat the Dangerous Performances Acts of 1879 and 1897 he does not enlighten your readers as to the effect those laws have had. The result of the two Acts, together with the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Act (1904), which prohibits the training of children for acrobatic and gymnastic performances, has been to virtually abolish children acrobats.

Mr. Samuel tells us that the projected Act merely means to extend the provisions of these laws to women, which, of course, means to abolish the women acrobats and gymnasts. If Mr. Samuel will have a little patience, he will find there is no necessity for legislation to abolish women performers. The very fact that the law prevents children being trained for this calling, both here and in other countries, will soon result in an end of either female or male acrobats and gymnasts. There surely the Government must see the injustice of depriving those already trained of their means of support.

Mr. Samuel further says: "The method of determining what is or is not dangerous to which the performers' profession has long been accustomed will be the method employed under the Bill." Terrible thought! An extension to women acts of the annoyance we have been submitted to under the old Acts by the no-two-alike decisions of Merrie England's magistrates. Then what manager would engage a gymnastic turn, knowing full well that by the caprice of some police officer or magistrate he might find himself at a moment's notice deprived of the services of that artist?

It is, indeed, a "panic" legislation galloping toward Utopia so fast that it mercilessly crushes whole classes of the people at every bound. Does Mr. Samuel know that his Act would make it illegal to perform 50 per cent. of the "dumb shows" at present appearing in music hall or circuses? For who is to judge what is dangerous when even we, the performers, do not agree to the comparative danger of any one trick.

If Mr. Samuel does not, as he claims, intend to place restrictions on those music hall and circus gymnastic and acrobatic shows which only the grossly ignorant could call "dangerous," but only wishes to restrict avowedly hazardous feats as parachute jumps, looping the loop, etc., why does he not state so much, without including and making illegal the work of a reputable calling outnumbering the other by 1000 to 1.

C. C. BARTRAM.

MLLE. GHITA CORRI, fresh from her triumphs in Yorkshire, has been winning golden opinions this week with her fine song-scena, Waiting, at the Canterbury and the Paragon, getting repeated and enthusiastic calls every night at both houses. Mlle. Corri's phenomenal and unbroken range of three octaves and five notes—from E in alt to the bass G, or five notes lower than any contralto has ever been known to take—is for the first time set forth in the programmes, and is, we believe, unique not only in our day, but also in the vocal records of past prime donne.

ON Monday, in the Chancery Division, before Mr. Justice Barton, in the matter of the Belfast Empire Theatre of Varieties and the Companies Act, Mr. Blood, K.C. (instructed by Messrs. William Findlater & Co.), applied under the 15th section of the Companies Act of 1900, for an order granting the directors liberty to register 500 debentures of £10 which by inadvertence had not been registered previously. After the company was started the debentures in question were issued, and were repayable in ten years, which term had expired in 1904. The secretary had approached the debenture holders with the object of getting the time for repayment extended for another ten years. The debenture holders had consented, and it would be, therefore, necessary to have the debentures, which had become practically new debentures, re-registered. This in no way would prejudice any outside creditors. Mr. Justice Barton made an order for the re-registration of the debentures, to be repayable at £11 in ten years from 1904.

MESSRS. KARR AND KOONEY, who are with Burton's Bohemians at South Shields, are making a huge success with Delmar and Burton's latest comedy song, "Seaside Louise," published by Feldman and Co. This song is a capital al fresco number, and will be in great demand for pantomimes.

THE wrestling match between Hackenschmidt, the world's champion, and M'Inerney, the Irish champion, for £50 offered by the Theatre Royal, Dublin, and £25 aside staked with the Dublin Evening Mail, was decided on Wednesday afternoon in the theatre mentioned. Ten minutes passed without a fall, but at the end of thirteen minutes the Irishman was in difficulties, and was thrown in 13min. 5secs. After a two minutes' interval the match was resumed, and a furious struggle ensued, the Irishman being "downed" at the end of 23min. 24secs. He was at once seen to be injured, and his opponent lent him a hand to rise. He immediately stumbled to the wings, and a scene of great excitement followed. After some minutes Mr. Morgan, Hackenschmidt's manager, returned and announced that M'Inerney was unable to continue the match, his shoulder being injured.

MR. CARL HERTZ has made a great success in New York with his novelty, "Belchazzar's Blackboard," in which the famous illusionist seems to have surpassed himself. The trick is performed with an ordinary blackboard, crossed with lines that form squares. Mr. Hertz hangs a square of cardboard in front of the board and then goes into the auditorium, requesting people to write questions. When he has gathered a sufficient number he returns to the stage and reads the questions one by one, upon which the answers appear separately on the board, written in chalk. It is one of the most puzzling illusions ever shown in the city, great pains being taken to show that there is no apparent connection between the board and its surroundings. Mr. Hertz opened at Proctor's 23rd Street Theatre, and his success was so great that he was offered forty weeks' engagement in America from September, but as he is all booked up in England, commencing in August, he has had to refuse the glowing salaries offered.

ON Saturday last Wm. Symonds' roundabouts and amusements visited Mitcheldean, where good business was done.

NEWENT Foresters' Fête was held on Monday. Symonds' roundabouts, Biddall's bioscope, and numerous other shows were in attendance, and proved, as usual, a great attraction. The weather was beautifully fine, and the attendance good.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

MR. R. MADGE, who some time ago met with an accident while employed as a scene-shifter at the New Theatre, and brought an action for compensation for injuries sustained, has accepted an offer to settle his claim for the sum of £35, including costs.

The Era Tug-of-War Shield, for which a special case has been made, has been despatched to Dublin for the holders, the Empire Team. Mr. P. Sheridan, electrician at the Crown Theatre, who has just returned from his native city, Dublin, reports that he was asked to inform the Sports Committee that if the Shield was not despatched forthwith, the team would come over and collect it.

AT the committee meeting of the general staff branch of the National Association of Theatrical Employés, held on Wednesday, the quarterly financial statement to June 30th, with the auditors' report, was submitted and accepted. The accounts show that the death claims paid during the quarter totalled £20, the sick claims paid were £7 15s., and benevolent grant £3 7s., leaving a gross balance of £1,121 14s. 11d.

THE stage staff of the Theatre Royal, Newcastle-on-Tyne, should be complimented on the way the theatre was decorated during the recent visit of the King to that city, the King drawing the attention of Queen Alexandra to the effect produced.

THE Amalgamated Musicians' Union are bringing to fruition their long-considered scheme of a club for their members in London. The society has secured commodious premises in the vicinity of Leicester-square, and will provide the usual advantages of a social club, billiard tables, reading rooms, dining rooms, and offices for the business of the society. It is expected that the club will be ready for opening in September.

THE third annual staff outing of the Alexandra Theatre, Birmingham, was held at Bidford-on-Avon last Sunday, when the efforts and arrangements of the popular chief and proprietor, Mr. Lester Collingwood, for the behoof of his employees and friends evoked praise and gratitude all around. Starting at 9 a.m. from Snow Hill in special saloons, well and thoughtfully provided with refreshments, the party was taken as far as Stratford, after which brakes were requitioned to complete the journey to Bidford by road, which proved most enjoyable. At the dinner, which was served promptly and most satisfactorily by Host Butler, at the White Lion, the health of the chairman, Mr. Lester Collingwood, was drunk with real acclamation, and his response to the sensible and cogent remarks made in his honour showed a deep appreciation of the same.

The weather was gloriously fine, and the beauty of the surrounding country, and the rare facilities for boating, made an ideal day. Moreover, a fishing contest added to the interest, and here, Mr. Fred Bernardo was the lucky winner of a handsome Vienna clock, Mr. Taylor coming in second for a pretty pair of vases. The party was duly photographed and afterwards regaled with a substantial tea, returning by road to Stratford in good time to stroll round and admire, reaching Birmingham at 9.30 in the evening. The party numbered nearly sixty friends and employees, including Mr. Albert Bushell, Mr. H. Wallis, Mr. H. Calver, Mr. and Mrs. Forsyth, Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins, Miss Mary Brammer, Miss Helen Holmes, Miss L. Jephcott, Mr. R. J. Montgomery ("Monty") W. Gay, J. Sharp, J. Clamp, etc.

MR. PHILIP SHERIDAN, the electrician of the Crown Theatre, Peckham, has just returned after a fortnight's holiday in Ireland, of which he is a native. One dark night, in Kilkenny, he, with Mrs. Sheridan and her sister, lost their way whilst taking a "short cut" with their bicycles across the fields. Without knowing it, they had a narrow escape, having been in a field which contained a ferocious bull, owned by Mrs. Sheridan's uncle, for over an hour.

THE Torquay Theatre staff, accompanied by Mr. W. H. Mortimer, managing-director, had their annual outing on Saturday. Reaching Moretonhampstead by train, the party drove across the Moor to Princetown, partaking of luncheon on the way at the Warren. From Princetown, Plymouth was reached by rail, and there dinner was served, Mr. Mortimer presiding. At the call of Mr. A. Pearce, secretary, "The Managing-Director" was heartily drunk. Leaving Plymouth, home was reached by train at about 10.30, the day having been a most enjoyable one.

THE annual outing of the St. James's staff is reported as being most successful. The Empire staff outing, also, was most successful.

HERBERT CAMPBELL OBELISK.

The above is an illustration of the monument erected to the memory of the late Herbert Campbell. The handsome obelisk is the work of Messrs. Winters and Sons, of Abney-park. It is in red polished granite, and on the face has the following cut in clear gold letters:—

Sacred to the Memory of
HERBERT CAMPBELL
(Herbert Edward Story),
Comedian,
Who departed this life on July 19, 1904.
This monument was erected to his memory by a few friends, in affectionate remembrance.

The memorial is erected very close to the entrance to the cemetery, from Stoke Newington-road, near to Stoke Newington Station on the G.E.R. and Alexandra Theatre.

The grave is very near to that of Nelly Power, George Leybourne, and Walter Laburnum.

MISS ANNETTE KELLERMANN.

Lady Channel Swimmer.

Miss Kellermann, the Australian lady swimmer who has gained so great a reputation for pluck, endurance, and skill by her attempts to swim the Channel, her exhibition at hundreds of natatoriums in the country, at the Hippodromes (aquatic) of the Moss Empires Company, at London, Liverpool, and Manchester, will shortly appear in a new rôle. She has always evinced the fact that she possesses largely the ready resource of her Australian compatriots, which rendered them so invaluable during the South African war, and owing to many proposals of a highly lucrative nature for addresses on her favourite subject, not feeling quite sure of such an undertaking, carefully thought out a scheme by which she can herself present the Channel swimming, Channel feeding, different styles of swimming. To this end the Urban Trading Company's best experts have been secured to work out this wonderful set of pictures, which go from sublime to ridiculous. Miss Kellermann will present her new turn for the first time at Margate on Monday next.

MR. DAVID DAY has just published a capital song, sung by Miss Florry Cooper, entitled "The Blind Boy and the Thrush," which pierrots should certainly not miss.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follows:—

MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALAN W. YOUNG,
Empire Theatre, Liverpool.

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. WILLIAM COLLINS,
The Empire, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

SOME NEW AND ORIGINAL IDEAS.

No. 490. WORKHOUSE GRANNY, age 93. A fine study in facial expression. You must admit that Granny is a character, after seeing the marvellous change in her expression. 1, Pinch of Snuff; 2, Granny's Flirtations; 3, A Drop of White Satin; 4, Grandfather late again; 5, Good Night. Length 310ft. Price £7 15s.

No. 476. DOLLY VARDEN (A Fine Romance). Dolly, disguised as a man, elopes with lover, and is followed by irate father, who is held up by highwaymen, and eventually rescued by his daughter and her lover. An exciting finish. The carriage used in this picture is the original state carriage of his late Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge. Length 740ft. Price £18 10s.

G. 003. EARLY BIRDS WHO DIDN'T CATCH THE WORM.
Two thirsty men take liberties with the morning milk, and are eventually taken in custody after some lively and extraordinary antics. Length 550ft. Price £13 15s.

NEW "NORWOOD" FILM.

No. 07. THE DOG DETECTIVE. This is a grand picture of a dog who shows wonderful intelligence in saving the property of a Bank, in tracking the thieves, and in saving her master's life by frustrating the devilish scheme. This is a fine subject. The intelligence shown by the dog is marvellous. It will arouse the keenest interest. Length 730ft. Price £18 5s.

No. 05. A TACK IN THE REAR. A roaring tickler of tin-tack points and a wooden seat. Result, a tack in the rear. Length 260ft. Price £6 10s.

No. 06. CHASER CHASED. Terrible complications arise from a series of mistakes. An excellent and well-thought-out plot. Bound to be a success. Length 235ft. Price £5 17s. 6d.

NEW "CLARENDON" FILM.

C. 146. RESCUED IN MID-AIR. A great sensation. A perilous ascent. A steeple for refuge. Airship to the rescue. A sensational and awe-inspiring catastrophe. Length 605ft. Price £15 2s. 6d.

No. 1095. THE PILL MAKER'S MISTAKE.

A doctor and assistant are carefully making up pills. The assistant, though working hard while his master is present, shows himself not over eager for work on his departure. A boy who comes into the room by way of the window enters into conversation with the assistant, which seems to afford them much pleasure. While the doctor's "right hand" is gazing out of the window, the boy with evident delight goes to a cupboard, and taking out a very large bottle, which apparently is pretty full, doses well all the pills recently made. The good doctor is standing at his shop door, where he has advertised in a prominent manner his drops, &c., for invigorating and giving energy to all. A buxom lady going hastily into the shop makes a purchase of pills, and goes quickly and excitedly home. Upon arriving there she discloses herself as a cook, and after getting dinner ready brings out her recent purchase for a little "stimulant" before serving. Unfortunately, holding the box over the soup, in her agitation she spills the whole contents, and they quickly dissolve.

A special dinner party is taking place, and with healthy appetites the diners sit round the table eager for a good meal. The butler innocently brings in the soup, of which they all partake pretty freely. The effect on them is soon seen to be quite true to the worthy doctor's description, for it certainly does invigorate and excite them tremendously.

The pillmaker is once more seen standing at the shop door, and is approached by our friends who have lately dined, and with more than necessary violence they illustrate that his goods in their case have been much too effective.

Length 300 feet. Price £7 10s. 0d.

MILK-FOOD IN THE MAKING.

Fame and the feeding-bottle are apparently more closely associated than one would at first suppose, for it is by the furnishing of that important article of domestic use that the firm of Allen and Hanburys, the pharmaceutical chemists, have won renown. By their preparation of infants' foods they claim to have stemmed the tide of infantile mortality, the records of which show that every year 120,000 die in England and Wales before they have attained their first birthday, and to have provided a form of nourishment by which the babies of the land may be preserved and turned into citizens of light and leading. Few may remember with certainty the period of their first months of existence, when all things are viewed by the light of a ravenous appetite, nor is it easy to estimate how many of our leading players owe their histrionic triumphs to an early acquaintance with the "Allenburys" bottle; but its virtues are none the less apparent, especially in the case of those mothers whose profession prevents them nourishing their offspring by natural means.

Ocular demonstration of the perfection which be attained in the manufacture of milk-food was given on the 17th inst., when a train-load of Pressmen invaded the little town of Ware, in Hertfordshire, where the works of the noted firm are situated, and inspected the machinery and appliances in operation. The factories stand on the outskirts of the old and picturesque town in the heart of the country, the estate on which they are built covering an area of seventeen acres; and on every side are meadows which provide pasturage for herds that supply milk to the factory. The portion devoted to the preparation of the foods is situated on an island some six acres in extent in the centre of the river, so that all danger of contamination is avoided. The buildings are designed on hygienic principles, and are admirably ventilated. The walls are of glazed brick, and the motive power is largely electricity, several of the dynamos being driven by the water of the River Lea, which runs its course through the town.

The milk is dealt with immediately it is obtained, and the fluid, after cooling, is conveyed to the factory and treated before any acid reaction has had time to occur. Thousands of gallons of this milk are delivered every morning at the factory by the contractors, each man's supply being tested by a trained chemist. The milk is first passed through separators, and the cream temporary removed. The excess of casein is then extracted, and the deficiencies of fat and milk-sugar made good. The process of reducing the milk to a powder consists of evaporating it in vacuo. By removing the pressure of the air the milk boils furiously at little more than half the usual temperature, so that one may look through the small glass window on the top of the pans and see the boiling milk below, and yet be able to place one's hand with impunity on the copper surface. A perfectly pure, dry powder is finally obtained, guaranteed free from all contamination with germs, and, when mixed with the right amount of water, resembling as closely as possible natural human milk.

Many and ingenious are the mechanical devices adopted for the weighing, packing, and sealing of the tins in which the foods are supplied to the public. One of the machines hermetically seals up the tins without the application of solder, thus avoiding any possibility of affecting the contents by excessive heat. Another is the filling-machine, which automatically cuts off the supply of powder as soon as the proper weight has been deposited in the tins. Other portions of the factory devoted to the manufacture of jujubes and soaps, the grinding of drugs, and the distilling of oils, &c., are kept entirely separate from that part in which the foods are produced.

The firm of Allen and Hanburys dates back to the early days of the eighteenth century, when Silvanus Bevan settled in Plough-court, in the City of London, as an apothecary, and took his brother into partnership. The modern headquarters of the business in Plough-court stands upon the site of the house where Alexander Pope was born. Mr. Cornelius Hanburys, who presided on Tuesday at the luncheon subsequently given in an immense tent in an adjoining field, replied to the toast of the firm of Allen and Hanburys, remarking that their predecessors had laid the foundations of an honest and good business, and that the application of modern methods had brought it to its present perfection.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDEEN.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. C. Cavanah, C.A.—Mr. Edward Tearle and company entered on the last week of their present season with the production of The Black Flag. Mr. Tearle plays the part of Harry Glyndon in an attractive breezy manner; Miss Esther Tearle is excellent as the boy Ned; and Miss Mary Campbell is well suited to the rôle of Naomi Blandford. Mr. Bernhardt Turner makes the most of a new part; and all the other members of the company act capably.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Rosen and Bliss; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—Dr. Walford Bodie's popularity continues unabated, the house being crowded in all parts every night. His marvellous exhibition is punctuated throughout with unstinted applause. The cures are undoubtedly speedy and effective. Mr. Charles Diamond and Miss Beatrice are also enthusiastically received; the Great Halma is as successful as last week; Glennie's Royal Marionettes prove, as usual, a delightful item; Signor Bandoni's one-man band performance is equally enjoyable, and Dainty Little Dolly is clever alike as a singer and dancer. Other excellent turns are those of the Brothers Robson, comedians and dancers; and Mr. Norman Mills, actor-vocalist.

ALDERSHOT.—THE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. E. Williams.—Mr. Fred Jarman's company is presenting Lady Lucky, a new play of the musical comedy type. Vocal items galore are contributed by the various artists with capital results, and several dancing novelties are given—especially those by Miss Susie Raymonde—in a highly effective manner. Mr. Fred Jarman is responsible for an amusing exposition of Joe, and he is ably seconded by Miss Gracie Vicat as Susan. Mr. Mayor Cooke sings and acts well as Harry, and as "Lucky" Miss Ella Rose proves to be a charming little actress. Messrs. Oswald Grey (Sir Stephen) and Henry Hare (Dr. Wharton) are clever in heavier rôles; and Johnny Chippendale (Binks) is amusing; whilst Misses Susie Raymonde (Pollie) and Minnie Everett (Mary) are good.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Fairbairn.—The Luck of Life is being presented here this week. It is a favourite melodrama, and has much in it of a stirring and exciting character. The company is a capable one. From the standpoint of effectiveness the parts sustained by Mr. Roland Yorke as the villain; Mr. Jos. Millaine as the courageous solicitor; Mr. Polson Turner as Bahadur, the Hindoo; Mr. Leonard Thackeray and Mr. Albert Cuthbertson as Nihilists; Miss Gertrude Bonser as the Countess; Miss Mary Dawson as Rene, the much-abused wife; Miss Adelaide Clare as Vivienne; and Miss Kate Peronne as Mlle. de Beaudyn are undoubtedly well and intelligently interpreted. In the domain of humour Mr. Fred Danvers and Miss Dora Huggett are supreme.

EMPIRE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Sons; Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy B. Broadhead; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech.—The programme at the Hippodrome this week is a strikingly successful one, the bulk of the artists being exceptionally well received. Jessie Jukes is a pleasing juvenile comedienne, and her top-boot dancing evokes loud applause; Master Joe Conway, "the pocket comedian," is a precocious youngster, who gives three distinct turns with pronounced success; Miss May Cordite (from Buffalo Bill's Show), assisted by a male Mexican, introduces a pleasing variety in rope spinning and lassoing, which is graceful, clever, and novel; Mlle. Du Roche, operatic soprano, possesses a voice of excellent quality; Graham and Graham are a witty couple, with smart patter; J. C. Scatter as a burlesque soldier is humorous; Stanley's Urchins are popular; and the Tokios share with the Westwoods the honour of furnishing the most sensational items seen for some time in Ashton.

AYR.—PIERROT CONCERT PARTY.—Mr. Ernest Hampson and his refined concert party are still attracting large audiences on the Low Green. Frank H. Dundas renders some pleasing songs, and is a favourite; whilst Messrs. Kent and Giddings are entertaining in their various duets and eccentricities. Mr. Chas. Champney sings a budget of catchy songs; John J. Mannix renders his popular ballads with conspicuous success; Harry Hayes and Joe McCulloch score with their respective ditties; whilst "Ernie" Hampson is popular with his quaint songs and patter. Mr. Arthur Sherwin is the efficient pianist, and does some clever trick playing as an interlude. On Thursday evening they gave a special concert in the town hall.

LEE AND ARDEN'S ENTERTAINERS.—At the Newton Public Park Pavilion these entertainers are drawing great crowds, and deservedly so, for they change the programme often and introduce novelties and variety. The company is under the management of Mr. J. W. Forrest, who is familiarly known as "Sunny Jim." Mack Dennison, with his comicalities and all-round jollity contributes to the enjoyment. Mr. Leonard Charles sings tenor songs in a pleasing and finished manner; Retta and Rex dance neatly; Professor Milne, the well-known ventriloquist, gives a clever turn; and Cambo, the musical monkey, plays on all sorts of quaint musical instruments and creates great amusement. There is a cinematograph turn which adds to the variety; whilst Messrs. Lee and Arden, society entertainers, divide their attention amongst the various companies they have running, and appear on occasional nights in Ayr. Mr. Rawson Buckley is the musical director.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.—ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—The Russian play, A Beautiful Fiend, is occupying the boards here this week. Mr. Montague Baudyn, as Ivan Paulovitch, wins admiration; Mr. Tom Robertson, as the villainous Count, does full justice to an exacting character; Miss Irene Munroe gives a very sympathetic rendering of the heroine, Nadine Karateff; and Miss V. St. Lawrence, in the name part, submits a highly artistic portrayal of a difficult rôle.

HIS MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—The British Empire Photo Company is here for another week, and the fine entertainments are much appreciated. Some beautiful illustrated vocal numbers are given during the evening by Miss La Clair and Little Doris.

TIVOLI.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Stage-Manager, Mr. Tom Whiting.—Gustave Fasola, Oriental wonder-worker, tops the bill here this week in a bewildering and clever entertainment; Mezzetti and Mora, in their special triple bar act, give a particularly smart performance; Mlle. de Roze has a capital reception; Tony Ivesson's mimicry is first class; Mr. G. H. Hawtree renders some enjoyable songs; and David Pool's ventriloquial entertainment is excellent.

BELFAST.—PALACE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Warden, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Freece; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Harris.—A great attraction is provided here by Mr. Arthur Roberts, who with an admirable company is presenting The Importance of Being Another Man's Wife. Mr. Luis Hardt, "the Mighty Atom," creates quite a sensation with his feats of strength; and De Marce, aptly described as "the famous animal trainer," introduces several animals whose feats are quite amazing. Miss Miniature Marie is a delightful comedienne and capital mimic; and others appearing include that droll comedian Little Barney, Miss Annie Laurie, and the Calcotts.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John Walker.—Mr. Bransby Williams, the clever impersonator, heads the bill, and has been most successful with his realistic character impersonations. His impersonation of the showman playing Hamlet is remarkably clever. The Sisters Casselli are dashing comedians and fine dancers; and nothing but praise must be accorded the Borellis in their unique musical and vocal selections. Mr. Fred Poplar is a funny comique; and Miss Ina Lorrimer, a clever comedienne, creates quite a furore with her dancing. The comedy act of Felina and Gratton forms a decided attraction; and the same may be said of the act presented by Howard and St. Clair. Miss Kitty Wager, comedienne, completes the bill.

NEW ALHAMBRA THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—General-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—This week Mr. Downs furnishes a capital attraction with the sterling piece The Fatal Hour, presented by the Alhambra Dramatic Company. Mr. John Burton acquits himself with much credit as Squire Henderson; and Mr. Cyril Grier is an effective Richard Blair. Miss Nina Blake-Adams exhibits much emotional feeling in her interpretation of the heroine Amy Henderson; and the villainies of Arthur Henderson are realistically portrayed by Mr. Herbert Cecil, a clever actor. Olga Meredith is cleverly portrayed by Miss Lena Nazeby, who speaks her lines with fine dramatic effect; Mr. Stephen E. Scanlan as Maurice Isaacs acts skilfully; and the humour of the piece is capitally sustained by Miss Effie Macintosh as Eulalie St. Jones, Mr. W. G. Wesley as Walter Wallop and Mr. H. Arnold Allen as Bertie Lamb. Mr. Wm. Mailing and Mr. J. F. Pearce complete the cast.

BIRKENHEAD.—ARGYLE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—Ferguson and Mack, eccentric comedians of the first order, are a prominent success; as also is Mr. Whit Cunliffe, a highly popular and clever comedian; Mlle. Zelda is an expert and entertaining instrumentalist, and a capital combination includes Spencer and Marks, versatile and amusing comedians, who are well received; the Brothers Adderley, duettists and mimics of ability; Miss Maude Wilton, an accomplished coon vocalist; and Miss Lil Gorman, a charming vocalist. Brown's Royal Bioscope adds variety to the programme.

BIRMINGHAM.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood. Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Bernardo.—The Sins of a City, the strong, moral play by Nita Rae, has been represented here by Miss Winifred Maude and company, under the able direction of Mr. Victor Du Cane. Miss Maude undertakes the rôle of Seaweed, the heroine, in which she creates a very favourable impression; while Mr. Du Cane is seen as the irrepressible Levi, a part he enacts with many sly touches of humour. Mr. W. E. Simpson as Donald McIvor wins much admiration with his rugged and powerful acting; Mr. William Vane as the brave and true-hearted Sandy McDonald leaves nothing to be desired; Mr. James Stevenson, junior, plays the villain's rôle, Ralph Blackwater, with all the zest it requires; and Mr. Maurice Drew is successful both as Joe and Jasper Woodleigh. Miss Ethel Tinsley acts in a well-fitting manner as Lesbia; and the rest of the company, including Miss Jenny Hakett as Midge, do excellently well.

CARLTON THEATRE, SALTLEY.—Owner and Manager, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Resident-Manager, Mr. James Alexander.—Kennedy's Komiks continue their varied attractions, among these being Little Hatch, the wonderful long-boot comedian and dancer; T. W. Lenner and Florrie Wright, the clever comedy couple; Harry Plowden, a droll comedian; Lalla Vincent, the contralto gem; J. W. Levey and Ella Marston, the entertaining couple; the popular Ingemores, and that special favourite, Freddie Marston, are retained in the company; and the Electric Animated Pictures, which include the Warwick Pageant, are also on view.

THEATRE ROYAL, ASTON.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Whittles.—A Wrecker of Men is staged here by Mr. C. Watson Mill's capable company. Miss Amy Ellam displays all the fascination and power requisite for the titular rôle, Risca Mollison; Mr. Eric Campbell deals most successfully with the rôle of the slogger, Jim Murley; Mr. Milner Noble as the Wanderer, Pharosophus, deserves the highest praise; Mr. Alfred Maurice gives an interesting and artistic portrayal of the silent witness, Railton; Mr. Matthew Bolton presents many engaging and manly qualities as Guise Strange; Mr. Thompson Carruthers obtains a ready meed of sympathy as Eric Melville; Mr. Henry P. Kennedy acts as the Jew, Isaacs, and also as the mummy, Karnaphus, with good results; and Mr. Lancelot Usher as Reggie Verincourt, and Miss Kittie Melville as the nondescript, Slopper, are to the fore with some welcome comic relief; while Miss Cissie Podmore as Doris Melville proves herself sympathetic and clever.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Resident-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham.—The Skirmishers, one of the most amusing of Herbert Darnley's sketches, is attracting packed houses here. Nellie Coleman gives a clever impersonation of the eccentric comedian; the sweet singing of Maude Courtney is highly appreciated; the Sutcliffe Family are loudly applauded for their bag pipe, sword dancing, and acrobatic display; the New York Nippers are on a return visit; the Warsaw Brothers appear in a good comedy act; Eily Adair is an attractive comedienne; the McConnell Trio, in their musical sketch; and Jonny Gilmore, comedian, are applauded.

GAIETY THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Albert Bushell.—The Gelbinis are presenting their smart and up-to-date cycling act to good houses; C. Emlyn Jones introduces his quartette of ladies, who give a concert turn of a high order; May Henderson, in her coon songs and dances, is popular; Warren, Reed, and company have an amusing sketch, Married or Photographed; Harry Meir is an expert juggler. Other popular turns are Rose Elliott, Roy and Terris, and Charles Somers, who are all well applauded.

HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—One of the most mysterious illusion turns we have seen is that of Le Roy, Talma, and Boscoe; Fred Earle, comedian, is always sure of applause here; and Nash and Noel also come in for a good share of the honours. Fanny and Harry Dent have a duologue, Mary and the Squire, which is well received; the Five Olracs have a clever acrobatic display; Frank A. Wood renders his tenor songs with effect.

BORDESLEY PALACE.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Foster—The Casey Circus is proving a big attraction here; Toledo and Prince are clever contortionists; the Howard and Collinson Combination in The Porter and the Parcel, and Johnson and Bert in their sketch A Queer Customer, are amusing; Reins, an expert dancer, Guy Ryder, a smart whistler, Rosie Archer, and the Bioscope, are in the programme.

BLACKBURN.—NEW PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Page.—Miss Winifred Chalmer's company in The Master Criminal is appearing here this week. The play is in the hands of an excellent company, and good work is done by Miss Chalmers in the part of Cecile; while Mr. Henry L. Oswood gives a powerful delineation of the title-rôle.

PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Will Murray.—A capital entertainment here includes turns by Rozel, sensational gymnast; Herbert Rule, comedian; Helm and Cozens in a sketch, The Doctor and the Patient; Leah Arden, ballad vocalist; the Donatos, one-legged acrobats; McDonald and Huntington, American singers and dancers; Gertie Moore, illustrated songstress; Dick Cruickshank and company in the humorous absurdity Bridgett's Idea; and Raymond's animated pictures.

BLACKPOOL.—HER MAJESTY'S OPERA HOUSE.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Public Opinion; or Pansy's Breach of Promise Case, is finding high favour here this week, and Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison have selected an admirable company to present the same. The Horace Wibsey of Mr. George Gid dens is, of course, a masterpiece, and affords the highest amusement; Mr. Charles Harley creditably assumes the rôle of Spencer Traughton; and Mr. Fred Lewis does well as Mr. Justice Mulley; Mr. Douglas Hamilton, as Sir Babington Mulley; and Mr. Douglas Greet, as Viscount Poffley, likewise give every satisfaction. An attractive Pansy Bligh is furnished by Miss Nancy Beresford; Phyllis Dagenham is well sustained by Miss Connie Dene; Lady Caldershaw is carefully impersonated by Miss Moyra Crugan; and Miss Violet Harley deserves praise for her Charlotte. The Stratagem makes a good curtain raiser.

GRAND THEATRE.—Owner and Manager, Mr. F. Sergenson.—A capital house gave a good reception to the sparkling musical play The White Chrysanthemum on Monday. Mr. Frank Curzon's capital company gave a delightful performance of this pretty piece. Miss Gwladys Elvey is charming and wins favour by her sweet singing; she makes the most of her part of Sybil Cunningham (known as O. San, the white Chrysanthemum); Miss Daisy le Hay, as Betty Kenyon, the young widow, acts and sings in a delightful manner; and Miss Katie Vesey is a smart Cornelia Vanderdecken, her dancing being particularly clever and sprightly; Mr. F. Pepe-Shamper makes a typical hero as Lieut. Reginald Armitage; Mr. W. H. Rawlins is as good as ever as Admiral Sir Horatio Armitage; and the fun is kept going by Mr. Horace Mills as Lieut. "Chippy" Belmont; Mr. Harry Paulton, jun., as Private Perks; and Mr. O. E. Lennon, as Sir Chong, the Chinaman.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. G. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred. Waller.—"House full" is the notice displayed here nightly this week, and the reason for same is not far to seek. Vesta Tilley is simply adored by the Blackpudlians, and she makes her first appearance since her recent return from America; she sings five or six songs nightly, and the audience clamours for more. The rest of the programme is also good, and amongst the contributors are Carr and Rose, in a humorous sketch, A Domestic Episode; Charlie Williams, comedian and dancer; the Trapnell Family, acrobats; My Fancy, the clever terpsichorean artist, who is always welcomed here; Charlene and Charlene, the drawing-room entertainers, who are now in the third week here; the Howards, in comedy and melody; Terry and Bentley, comedians; and the Brothers Redmond, acrobatic comedians.

HIPPODROME.—Lessees, Messrs. Whitehead and Ramsden; General-Manager, Mr. T. P. Dingnan.—A good holiday programme is provided for the patrons of this house. It includes Mr. and Mrs. Parker's Children's Party, in a novel spectacular divertissement; Florence and Lillian, in their artistic musical act; Fanny Robina, actress and vocalist; Miss Lily Flexmore, a dancer and dainty singer; Marie Weston, vocalist and dancer; Sam Redfern, the "Black Boss of the Benighted Bohemians"; Shang Hia, Chinese juggler; Florrie Cooper, vocalist; Ford and Hanson, American musical millionaires; the Bros. Obo, patter comedians; Frank Leslie, vocal comedian; and the Royal Bioscope.

WINTER GARDENS PAVILION.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—The new spectacular ballet extravaganza, In Sunny Spain, to which we have previously referred in very favourable terms, is now being given to crowded houses twice daily. The variety programme, which is also given in addition, remains unchanged. Horace Goldin, who is the principal star, performs the most astonishing tricks, whilst Dr. Jules Angelo's Tableaux Vivants evokes rounds of applause.

TOWER CIRCUS.—General-Manager, Mr. G. H. Harrop.—Mr. Harrop has provided another admirable show at the Circus this week. A capital programme is made up of: The Kellinos, acrobats and Risley performers; the Lecussons, in an excellent exhibition of horsmanship; Marasso, the new American jockey; Duncan's troupe of talented dogs; the Musical Johnstone; Paul Conchas, in his "Military Pastimes" act; Willie Hole, globe expert and hoop manipulator; the Klein Family, acrobatic and musical cyclists; August and September, comedy boys; the Novellos, in their equilibristic act; and the Finneys, champion swimmers.

BOLTON.—GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—A return to "variety" is made here this week, the principal attraction being the Seven Savonas, musical marvels, who appear in their latest creation The Palace of Orpheus; they are also billed as the Six Cycling Elliotts, performing some really clever feats of cycling. Other turns are Bishop and Vale, knockabout comedians and dancers; Rita Bell, Dutch comedienne; Miss Florence, vocalist, in illustrated songs; Stan Aubrey, eccentric comedian; Pete and Juno, coloured comedians and dancers; a dramatic sketch The Sacred Trust; and the Imperial Bioscope.

BOSCOMBE.—HIPPODROME.—Joint proprietors, Messrs. Frederick Monillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Ball.—The Australian contralto, Miss Alice Hollander, is this week delighting well-filled houses with her powerful voice; a very funny turn is contributed by the Mannon Troupe in A Motor 'Bus Outing; Walter King's whimsicalities make him a great favourite; Elton and Elma are seen to advantage in a clever triple-bar act; the Bartholomew Girls sing and dance daintily; and other turns include the Elgars and the wonderfully smart Lulaine-Darrell Trio. The ever-popular Hippodrome pictures conclude the programme.

BOSTON.—PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, George Saphrini.—Mlle. Florence's vaudeville company is supplying the entertainment here. The chief position is occupied by Abex, the miniature Hercules; Mlle. Florence, the famous London to Brighton globe-walker, gives a fine exhibition of her prowess on the rolling globe, concluding with the sensational feat of descending a staircase 15ft. high; Dale and D'Argan prove a great success in their comedy acrobatic sketch; and Alvar, gymnast; Pearce and Ward, comedy couple; the Dana Girls, duettists and dancers; the Bros. Arnold, in a remarkable cabinet mystery; Fred Tenby, comedian; and the Bendons, speciality artists, complete the programme.

BRADFORD.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. F. Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—A return visit of Mr. Julian Malvern's company with the stirring drama, I Defy the World, presents a strong attraction here. Mr. Percy Ballard wins frequent and hearty marks of appreciation as the adventurous hero, Leon Darville, Miss Violet Crawford supporting him finely in the character of the much injured wife. Mr. Charles Wilton gives an effective performance of the Count de Beaulieu, the other parts being in capable hands.

THE EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—The clever Barowsky Trio head a fine programme here this week, and elicit hearty applause for an exceptionally skilful acrobatic performance; Harry Weldon's comedy is a source of much merriment; Clown Barker, assisted by Miss Rozsika, introduces a number of cleverly trained dogs into his enjoyable equestrian entertainment; the McNaughtons, now on a return visit, elicit roars of laughter; the Althoffs, novel entertainers, combine good instrumental work with their comedy; Maude Mortimer has a fine stage presence, and her songs are pleasing; Alice Lloyd is "chic," and charmingly renders her catchy songs; Nellie Martell, who submits an acceptable song, dances finely; Mignonette Kokin is a charming American comedienne, whose dancing is novel and clever; and Galetti's wonderfully trained monkeys are a distinct source of merriment.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. C. Arnold, jun.—Sam Veld, on a number of strings and wind instruments, contributes an interesting item; Millie Denham, comedienne, submits some acceptable songs; a smart singing and dancing turn by Douglas and Ford wins favour; the Jalvans are wonderfully expert Oriental top spinners and equilibrists; as a "banjo virtuoso," Francis O'Flynn is exceptionally clever; a gymnastic pot-pourri by the Arley's Combination, introduce some wonderfully trained dogs; Edie Gray and White Coons, on a return visit, win appreciation; Cullen and Carthy (with little Cluley) are diverting comedians; and some amusing films are exhibited by Raymond's Bio-Tableaux.

AL FRESCO PAVILION.—The Alskarno Trio of comedy Risley acrobats are the latest addition to the company here.

BRIDLINGTON.—ROYAL PRINCE'S PARADE.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer.—The Scarlet Mr. E's have drawn large audiences to their capital entertainments in the Grand Pavilion. The Jester (Mr. Walter Dowling) gives some capital songs and smart patter; Mr. Vivian-Vivian's character sketches from Dickens's novels are cleverly played; "Bawing's" female impersonations and well-rendered songs are excellent, and the concerted numbers of the company are applauded. Mr. Emmerson's new series of animated pictures are a big draw. On Thursday Mischa Elman gave one of his violin recitals. The vocalist at the Promenade Concerts in the Floral Pavilion this week is Miss Lenora Sparkes, who possesses a fine voice, and pleases greatly with her songs.

THE SPA.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. Henry Hague.—Herr Wurm's fine programmes at the Promenade Concerts are greatly enjoyed by large audiences. Miss Emilie Martin is the vocalist this week, and her fine soprano voice and finished style secure for her constant recalls. The Strolling Players continue their amusing entertainments, and never BRIGHTON. — GRAND THEATRE. — Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter.—Mr. Morton Powell's company opened here on Monday with The Woman Who Gambles. Miss Gertrude Hunt as the gambling Countess Natalie Steinbach displayed admirable and powerful acting; Mr. Edward E. Ashby was also highly successful as Count Otto Steinbach; Mr. Horatio Sinclair gave a forcible enactment of Baron Cratzlaw; Mr. Reginald Fox's Lieutenant Carl Ctzarteryski and Miss Florence Halton's Cora Gouldhart were capitally played; while the light comedy element was ably sustained by Mr. Fred Prior as Peter Peterhoff, Mr. Frank Howard as the Hon. Bertie Bray, and Miss Florrie Hall as Mlle. Zila Zeyelda. The play was finely dressed and staged.

ALHAMBRA.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. L. Graydon; General-Manager, Mr. Ernest Lepard.—There is a capital company here this week. Carl Mysto, described as "The World's Greatest Handcuff King and Prince of Prison-breakers," submits a clever and interesting turn, in which he is assisted by Miss Noemi; Gipsy Woolf and her Six Sunbeams sing and dance themselves into great favour; the Donnas Trio are well received in their equilibristic and ladder trapeze act; the Two Bees (Harry and Flora Blake) are entertaining in their comedy scena The Man in the Moon; Rosie Lloyd is very effective in her latest successes; Clive Watts is a capital comedian and expert dancer; Driscoll and Beattie make a decided hit in McFee, M.P.; Ada Martine is a dainty comedienne; Charles Clark is a good character comedian; and the Alhambrascope pictures are very amusing.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—An attractive programme is presented here this week. Harry Rogerson, "The Tired Comedian," is very amusing; Haydee's miniature vaudeville theatre is a diverting novelty with a clever marionette entertainment; Tom Lloyd is an eccentric comedian; Ernest Montefiore and company appear with great success in the musical and dramatic scena, The Little Colonel; Lina Verdi's impersonations of well-known musical-hall artists are good; Arthur Rigby wins hearty applause for his humorous songs and delightful patter; Gladys Mavius, the Canadian girl, sings and dances admirably; the Brothers Egbert, "The Happy Dustmen," are amusing and clever tumblers; Baroux and Bion are eccentric acrobats; the Ellimans are refined musical entertainers; and the Barrascope pictures are interesting.

WEST PIER.—Secretary and Entertainment-Manager, Mr. A. D. Norman.—Mr. Alfred B. Tapping and company are here this week with Masks and Faces. Mr. Tapping gives an admirable impersonation of Triplet; Miss Alice Farleigh makes a charming Peg Woffington; Mr. Baliol Holloway's Sir Charles Pomander and Mr. Hubert Harben's Ernest Vane are well played; and Miss Clarissa Selwynne achieves great success as Mabel Vane. Mrs. Lloyd Townrow is a pleasing Mrs. Triplet; and able support is given by Miss Violet Agnew (Kitty Clive), Mr. George Cecil Murray (Colley Cibber), Mr. Lloyd Townrow (Snarl), and Mr. J. Bouchier (Burdock).

NEW PALACE PIER THEATRE.—Mr. Henry Swinerd's company is here this week with Dare Devil Dorothy. Miss Dorothy Desmond, in the title-rôle, acts and sings in pleasing style; Mr. Walter Ashley as Captain Fielding also displays expressive vocalisation; Mr. Edward Kipling makes an amusing Silas Crump; Miss Nellie Harcourt is a vivacious Judith; the Misses Mabel and Lillie Blake contribute some clever dancing; and Mr. Henry C. Warde, Mr. Deane Cliff, and Miss Marie Vere render effective support.

AQUARIUM.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. J. Sallmayer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry de Groot.—Kardoc, the handcuff king and jail-breaker, is still here, and other favurites of last week are also retained in Harry Keeble and Leo Kelso, comedians; Gipsy Ann and her fortune-telling dog, Rosie; Hoozee, ventriloquist; and Madame Rosini with her toy menagerie. A new variety turn is given by the Melroses(Lalla and Mat), continental burlesque artistes and lightning sand dancers.

THE DEVIL'S DYKE.—Proprietress, Mrs. M. Barrasford.—A singing competition in the Café Chantant on Tuesday afternoon proved very enjoyable. The awards were made as follow :—Ladies : 1st, Miss A. Taylor; 2nd, Miss Daisy Wisden; 3rd, Miss Lesca. Gentlemen : 1st, Mr. George Hide; 2nd, Mr. John Tree; 3rd, Mr. A. G. Rogue. Both the first prize winners will have the opportunity of taking a week's salaried engagement in London, while the others, through the generosity of Mrs. Barrasford, will receive handsome prizes. The judges were Mr. W. H. Brown, Mr. H. Parker, and Mr. S. Beirnsteine; Mr. Harry Clark officiated as stage manager; and Mr. Arthur W. Briggs carried out the duties of accompanist.

BRISTOL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. F. Crowe.—Mrs. Morton Powell's company is here with the new drama, Darkness. It is mounted effectively, and it is very carefully played. Miss Laura Walker acts well as Gertrude Hunt; Mr. Ernest Griffin displays power as Constantine Schwabe; the Rev. Basil Gorte is excellently taken by Mr. Cyril Austen-Lee; Mr. Henry Heller makes a typical country vicar of the Rev. Mr. Byars; Mrs. Morton Powell scores in the light comedy part of Helena Byars; Mr. Edward Valentine acts with much distinction as Sir Robert Llewellyn; Mr. Louis Lingard is effective as Harold Spence; and the comic parts of the Honourable Charlie Gayfly and Gracie Goldeye are capitally taken by Mr. Miller Wilson and Miss Nellie Freeland.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. James Macready Chute.—There were two well-attended entertainments here on Thursday, the 19th inst., the theatre having been kindly lent and the performances arranged by Mr. Chute for the benefit of the St. Augustine's National Schools. Both the matinée and evening performances were under distinguished patronage, and all the reserved seats were booked in advance. The programme at each performance was of a varied character. At the matinée Mr. Arthur Holmes-Gore and Miss Lilian Rogers successfully appeared in The Fatal Stockings, and pleasing variety turns were given by Miss May Marton, comedienne and dancer; Mr. Albert Le Fre, comedian and speciality dancer; Miss Helen Mar, American storyteller; Miss Evie Hamilton, comedienne and dancer; and Mr. Fred Vallance, conjurer, &c. After the interval the new duologue, The Arena, by Mr. Arthur Holmes-Gore, was performed for the first time on any stage, of which a notice duly appeared in our last issue; and the performance concluded with variety turns by Miss Fanny Dango, Mr. Albert Le Fre, Miss Helen Mar, Miss Evie Hamilton, Miss Gertie Gitana, Miss May Marton, and Mr. Fred Vallance. At the evening performance Chatterton was well played by Mr. Cuthbert Hicks, Mr. R. W. Audean, Mr. Alfred Harvey, Mrs. Gent-Wood, and Miss Lallie Hodder. The Fatal Stocking was again performed, and acceptable turns were provided by the Bristol Gleemen, conducted by Mr. Walter J. Kidner. Miss Helen Mar, Miss Fanny Dango, Miss Elsie Chester, and Mr. Fred Vallance.

PALACE.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. F. V. Welchman.—Wilbur Hill and Willette Whittaker head the programme with a clever and much appreciated novelty in music and song. Claude Feldman's Juveniles present an excellent turn, being equally successful in solo singing, concerted music, and song and dance acts; D. W. Watson, cornetists and coach horn artist, obtains applause; Marie Neilson pleases as a comedienne and dancer; Frank Lynne, comedian, has some amusing songs; Alice May and company score with their protean sketch, Tranquillity; Nelson and Thomas amuse with a duologue, On the Ra Ta; and the performance concludes with "The Adventures of Raffles and his pal Bunny," depicted by Vernon's Imperial Bioscope.

EMPIRE. — Proprietor, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—Daisy Dormer, comedienne, heads the programme with a very attractive turn of song and dance, which is well applauded by all parts of the house. Atlas and Vulcana, and Gwen and Maud Atlas present excellent strong acts, and Vulcana also presents some admirable classic poses on a raised stage with a background draped in black. Sid Bandon, character comedian, amuses with his songs; Florence Deighton is a pleasing double-voiced vocalist; Sonny Moss, comedian, has a quaint style; Russell Wallet scores with his clever scena, The Lady in Black; the Knick-Knacks do a smart song and dance act; and Ida Brophy obtains appreciation for a pretty song and dance. The performance concludes with a good display of animated pictures by the Empire Bioscope.

BROUGHTON.—VICTORIA, LTD.—Manager and Licensee, Mr. J. Fred Watson.—The name of Mr. Harold V. Neilson (who was here the other week) is sufficient to entice a good audience in spite of the sultry weather to witness The Money Spinner. Mr. Neilson ably represents the kind-hearted, absent-minded Lord Kengussie; Millicent Boycott is played by Miss Dorothy Milne with a fine conception of the character; Mr. Bellender Clarke forcibly portrays Harold Boycott; Mr. John Detliv as Baron Croodle is very droll; and Miss Frances Waring as Dorinda Croodle, with Miss Hettie Webster as Margot, also provide comedy. Jules Faubert, in the hands of Mr. Ulick Burke, is a good study of a French detective. Dream Faces, a one-act play, is an excellent curtain raiser, with Mr. Harold V. Neilson and Miss Dorothy Milne in principal parts.

BURNLEY.—EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Homer.—During the vacation this theatre has been redecorated and extensive alterations have been made in the construction of the stage and dressing rooms, and on Monday opened to crowded houses with an excellent bill. A most artistic and delightful musical turn is that of the Jackson Family. Some clever marksmanship is exhibited by Miss Lilian and Mme. Vera, for which they are loudly applauded; the Three Seabornes, on a return visit, thoroughly maintain the high standard of acrobatic skill they have already attained; the Padiham Apollo Quartette certainly deserve high praise for their able singing; the Seddons, the lady juggler and funny waiter, cause much laughter, and Kendrick and Laura are a smart dancing turn; the Bros. Onda are very funny on the triple bar; and the Motor Maniac, a performance introducing a cinematograph film, is much appreciated.

BURY (LANCS.).—THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Sons; General-Manager, Mr. Broadhead, jun.—A good programme here includes the Musical Palmers in their act, entitled Officers at Play; the Frantz Family of Acrobats; Whimsical Walker and company in Captain Hamilton, V.C.; Wat Tyler, character vocalist; Barnard Katz, a Hebrew bass singer; Daisy Palmer, song and dance artist; Adams and Rouse, comedians; and Iona, who is a fine shot. There are also the usual Bioscope pictures.

BUXTON. — OPERA HOUSE. — Secretary and Manager, Mr. Arthur Willoughby.—Sunday has been heartily welcomed here on a return visit. Mr. Leonard Pagden is admirably placed as Colonel Brinthorpe; and Mr. G. Wallace Johnston plays the part of Arthur Brinthorpe capitally. Mr. Ernest A. Douglas has made Tom Oxley a very pleasing personage; Mr. William Lockhart as Towser is excellent; and Mr. Sidney Rennef's Davy is a finished character sketch. Mr. P. Norman Walter repeats his clever assumption of the lovable old man Lively; and Mr. Arthur Vegin plays exceedingly well as Jacky. Miss M. Aimee Murray is an acceptable Mrs. Naresby; and Miss Muriel Pope speaks her lines nicely as the Nun. Miss Emélie Polini's Sunday is delightful, being fresh, natural and sympathetic. Billy's Little Love Affair was announced for the last three days of the week.

CAMBRIDGE.—THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Askham.—The Hippodrome opened its doors to the public once more on Monday evening. Under the proprietorship of Mr. T. Askham, the Hippodrome commenced a new lease of life with a programme presented by Capt. Ben Harris, who was assisted by vaudeville artists from the London and provincial halls. A prominent item was the sketch A Promising Pupil, performed in a creditable manner by Capt. Harris and his "nippers." Harry Rogers, a mimic of no mean ability, contributed excellent impersonations of music-hall stars. The three turns by Miss Rosa Neilson were greatly enjoyed, and her dancing fully deserved the unstinted approbation accorded. Another good dancing turn was contributed by Miss Lillie Leoville; while Miss Gertie Graham, comedienne and dancer, cleverly presented various characters from the well-known pantomime Dick Whittington. Veno, with the assistance of his comedy cadets, provided a considerable amount of genuine fun, which was also a feature of the turn contributed by Harry Leroy. The Royal Raynors gave a clever contortionist performance. The programme concluded with the Bioscope, on which a number of the latest films were shown.

CARDIFF. — KING'S THEATRE. — Proprietors, King's Theatre, Cardiff, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Samuel James; Acting-Manager, Mr. Albert C. Duncan.—This week we have presented here by Miss Bonwin Carlton's company the sensational comedy drama The Plucky Nipper. The piece abounds with tragic and exciting incidents, and the interest of the audience is held from start to finish. As Bill Burgess, a ne'er-do-well, Mr. Edward Surrey is capital; Mr. Fred Rivers, in the rôle of Richard Vanbrugh, the villain, gives a capital piece of acting; Miss Bonwin Carlton, in the title-rôle, is exceedingly good, her comedy with Mr. Douglas Campbell as Tommy Atkins keeping the house in roars of laughter; Miss Kitty Maynard plays the part of Daisy Paget, the blind girl, in a pathetic manner; as the Colonel's daughter, Ina Frederick, Miss Evelyn Derwent scores considerably; and special mention should be made of the fine songs rendered by Mr. Edward Stream as Captain Frank Leslie. Mr. Douglas Campbell's songs and dances also deserve praise.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. M. Dring.—Miss Winifred Hare is decidedly the star here, and the audiences on Monday were delighted with her performance. Her rich soprano voice was heard to great advantage in the song entitled "There's one little star up there." The sketch Casey's Court, given by the "Midget Mimes," is very amusing as a street urchin's idea of producing a variety entertainment. Bob King, the director-in-chief, otherwise Mrs. Casey, is conspicuous, and the appreciation shown is abundant recompense for his hard work. The fun is fast and furious all through. Miss Minnie Cunningham is an Irish comedienne of the best type, and her sweet songs are well received. Her first song, "That is where a little fib scores," was given for the first time on Monday, and the result was distinctly successful. Drew and Alders are a couple of good eccentric comedians, and their bill-posting turn is highly amusing; the Zanettos, jugglers, are the finest we have seen in Cardiff for some time, their knife-throwing skill being marvellous; the Goltz Trio give an exceptionally clever equilibristic turn; and Rich and Rich are funny comedians. The Leonards, comedy duettists; Miss Elsie Roby, "the slavey at the piano"; and the Sisters Pine, duettists, complete a fine programme.

CARLISLE.—THE PALACE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Signor Rino Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. E. Nicholls.—Tom Foy and company are making a first appearance here with The Yorkshire Lad in London, which creates roars of laughter. They also provide an entertainment entitled The Excursion Depôt, which is not a whit less amusing. "Whirling the whiri" is a thrilling act brimful of excitement submitted by the Tom Davies Trio; a delightful turn is contributed by Miss Maidie Scott, a dainty and charming comedienne with a capital voice and a graceful and refined style; Miss Katie Butter's droll rendering of songs brings down the house; Meier and Mora are particularly smart and entertaining; Walter Ray sings "Mona" with artistic effect; and the Pepiscope completes an enjoyable entertainment.

CHATHAM.—THE GAIETY THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Capt. H. E. Davis; Manager, Mr. Frank E. Donne.—Marion Hall opens the ball here with a couple of songs; and Syd Godfrey follows with a medley and imitations of various music-hall celebrities; then come the Brooklands, a dainty pair of serios in coon songs and dances; and some capital pictures by the Edisonograph. During the interval the Gaiety orchestra, under Harry Clements, contribute "Le Chevalier Breton," after which Mlle. Lucretia gains plenty of well-merited applause for her skilful dancing. James Prior, the big comedian, sings three songs; and Mlle. De Dio creates considerable enthusiasm by her spectacular dance, "Terpsichore's Dream."

BARNARD'S PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—Neil Kenyon tops the bill here, and is scoring a big success; the Madcaps are a quartette of lively dancers; Woodhouse and Wells patter and dance to everyone's delight; Myra Love is a popular comedienne; Grey and Parry give their latest creation, Acrobats, Past and Present; and others appearing are Linda Wasey, comedienne; and Morley and Percival in a duologue; while Lacey's Erascope projects some capital pictures.

CLACTON-ON-SEA. — PALACE-BY-THE-SEA. — Proprietor, Mr. Hy. Ford; Manager, Mr. Edgar Curtis.—Another good show here is nightly attracting big audiences. Varieties are submitted by Chas. Russell, comedian; the Sisters Valli, banjo, mandoline, and zylophone players; and Zasma, an exceptionally clever gymnast. Michael Braham, with a highly-trained bull terrier; the Cotton Blossoms Quartette are distinctly clever and amusing; and Miss Dolly Golden is a young dancer of great ability. Mr. Antonio Medcalf's company of operatic singers, comprising Mr. Hy. Beaumont, Miss Alice Boaden, and Miss Fanny Emmerson, have this week been giving the Garden Scene from Gounod's Faust in a manner which has left little to be desired. The Palace Pierrots and the fine band, under Mr. G. S. Thomas's able directorship, continue to attract large crowds.

WESTCLIFF GARDENS. — Messrs. Graham, Russell, and Bently, who are really their own star artists, and the principal attraction here, have been assisted this week by Kit Kern, coloured comedian; Miss Winifred Siddons, who is well liked in Clacton; Mr. Harry Barratt, a good bass; and Mr. Wilfrid Alderton, silver handbell soloist.

OPERETTA HOUSE. — Lessee, Mr. C. Macdona; Manager, Mr. T. H. Rhodes.—McLaren's variety artists have submitted a capital show here this week. Will T. Burgess and company, in the dramatic episode Found Faithful, earn well-deserved applause; the Votos and company are seen to advantage in the laughable farce Good-Night; Mint and Mart, in a paper-tearing act, are clever and interesting; and Great Wambo, the tramp cyclist; Alec Alexander, actor-vocalist; Cissey Grodon, soprano; Chas. Grin, comedian; Gertrude Ena, comedienne, are all accorded a favourable reception. Alf Berg, in a novel weight-lifting act; and Charlie Grein, English champion heavy-weight wrestler, are also here.

PIER PAVILION. — Messrs. Ashton have a good variety entertainment this week. The Misses Winifred Saunders and Margaret Lewys are both refined vocalists; and Mr. Fred Frampton is a clever comedian. Mr. Henry Moore and his dog Learto give an interesting turn; and the Walturdaw pictures bring to a conclusion an enjoyable entertainment.

MR. SAINTON'S fine orchestra continues to attract great numbers round the Council's bandstand, and Mr. Fred McLeod, the Council's business-manager, is a prime favourite here for his unfailing tact and consideration towards his many patrons. By permission of Mr. Oswald Stoll the Coliseum Glee Singers are here this week, and have been giving some excellent part-songs; Messrs. Cyril Thomson, baritone, and Frank A. Wood, tenor, have been singing duets.

COLCHESTER.—HIPPODROME.—Joint Proprietors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and Walter de Frece; Acting-Manager, Mr. George Alen.—Chung Ling Soo's exhibition of magic holds audiences spellbound here, and amply verifies the reports which had preceded his advent to the town; Frank Keegan and company, in their absurdity, entitled Everyday Cyclists, afford an immensity of genuine fun; whilst another very humorous item is the sketch by the Forrest Combination. The Five Royal Zerbinis, who are making their second appearance in the locality within a year, are greeted with every manifestation of genuine delight in a particularly attractive musical show under the designation of Fairyland. Dean Bros., a couple of dancing experts of a most refined order, are loudly applauded; Austin and Cowen quickly make themselves popular by reason of their smart and original songs; Cissie Curlette, the lady mimic, is versatile; Sam Dalton is funny; and Lillian Trevelli shines as a vocalist.

COVENTRY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—A great attraction is provided this week by a visit of Mr. Carr Loates's company in a musical comedy drama, entitled At the World's Mercy, in four acts. In Act II. some capital songs, dances, and specialities are given. The part of the hero, Captain Frank Manley, is in the capable hands of Mr. G. Irving; Miss Isabel Singleton reflects credit on herself as Alice Lloyd; Mr. A. L. Read does well as Jabez Barber; Mr. Carr Loates acts with good effect as Morris Goldstein, a Jew; and Mr. H. Evan Gibson performs creditably as Charlie Smart, a music-hall artist.

THE HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. T. M. Sylvester.—Two good houses on Monday night appreciated the excellent programme provided. The chief item on the bill was Miss Nellie Wallace, who rendered some capital songs, and had to respond to a number of well-deserved encores. Clarke and Glenny are clever comedy artists; the Delornes, duettists and dancers, give a good speciality act, entitled The Phantom Clogs; E. W. Selman is a capital comedian and dancer; Weldea and Wynne are well received; Miss Ivor Collard is a capable comedienne and dancer; and Picton Roxborough and Fanny Wright appear in a duologue entitled Cockie. The usual animated pictures conclude the performance.

CROYDON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Samuel James; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Herrick.—The boards here are occupied by Miss Adria Hill and Robert Ayrton's well-selected company in the interesting drama A Gambler's Daughter. Miss Harriet Loydall is careful as Auntie Zeb; Miss Sanders does well as Carita; and Miss Adria Hill acts the rôles of Mildred and Miriam Grant with all the skill of an accomplished actress. Mr. Robert Ayrton is quite satisfactory as Desmond Dare; Mr. Alfred Sanders is excellent in the part of Solomon Solomons; Mr. Richard Pitt is reliable as John Grant; Mr. Victor Millard is good as Jack Grant; Mr. Vincent Carlyle is praiseworthy as Ralph Gillman; Mr. Harry Barham is well placed as Dick; Mr. Lincalt deserves a word of praise as Stephen Brand; Mr. George Vinning is adequate as Tom Brand; and minor parts are commendably acted by Misses Lizzie Gordon and K. Dempsey. Mr. Charles Herrick is a popular and courteous manager.

EMPIRE PALACE OF VARIETIES. — Proprietor, Mr. Walter Gibbons; Manager, Mr. Eustace H. Jay.—A pleasing programme at this popular house includes Wilson and Waring, bright and versatile comedy duo artists; Hector and Paulus are neat and clever in a speciality acrobatic act; Musical Silvo, inventor of musical novelties, is remarkably good; Nat Watkins is a smart comedian; the Jees, in the instrumental sketch The Musical Smithy, deserve unstinted praise; Victoria Monks, in her song-scena Moving Day, is warmly applauded; and interesting items are given by Sidney Dolf, vocalist, mimic, and juggler; Elsie Clare, ballad vocalist; and Kittie Bell, comedienne. A coloured picture on the bioscope, entitled "A Phantom Motor Ride from Nice to Monte Carlo," is worth seeing. Mr. Archie Hully handles his large orchestra in a masterly manner.

DEWSBURY.—THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessees, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. H. Asquith.—The bill here includes Miss Gertie Gitano, who is refreshingly vivacious and energetic in her vocal work, and she also dances cleverly; the Three Royal Temples, including Mme. Louie Gilbert, render operatic and other selections in brilliant style; Allan McAskell amuses his audience, and at the same time mystifies them by his clever "fake" conjuring; the Yorkshire Tykes, Messrs. O'Connor and Brady, prove themselves the drollest of the droll; Mlle. Fontaine's Marionette Palace deserves mention, the puppets being very cleverly manipulated. Other artists appearing are Oakley and James, who are funny in a mélange of song and duologue; Wisper, comedy juggler; and Beattie Bloom, a smart comedienne.

DONCASTER. — THE PAVILION, Hexthorpe Flatts; Lessee, Mr. Baker.—The programme at this popular resort provided by the munificence of the Doncaster Corporation is an exceptionally generous one, and bears the names of artists of reputation. Mr. Harry Barclay, comedian, is responsible for some very popular songs; Madame Nanoni contributes vocal numbers in a highly cultured voice; Harry Morgan cleverly asserts his claim to the title of eccentric comedian; Nellie Forrest is a dainty comedienne; and Dan Armstrong appears in the triple rôle of comedian, vocalist, and dancer; Oswald Battyre, legerdemain artist, is extremely mystifying; and Leopold and Lorna, refined speciality artists, give a pleasing turn.

DOUGLAS.—GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Hemming; Acting Manager, Mr. T. R. Wood.—The Grand Theatre has been crowded during the current week, the attraction being the musical comedy, Floradora. The members of Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company are very clever artists, and their efforts have been cordially applauded. Miss Josephine Sullivan invests Dolores with a delightful charm, and she renders the music with verve; the Angela Gilfain of Miss Florence Hersee is refined and dainty, she adds distinction to the performance; Miss Kate Leicester displays an appreciation of subtle comedy as Lady Holyrood; the Antony Tweedlepunch of Mr. Daly Cooper possesses the ripe unctuous humour, without which such a character lacks its proper value; Mr. Stanley White works hard as Cyrus W. Gilfain; Mr. Allen Morris looks nice and sings with real taste as Frank Abercord; and Mr. Herbert St. John is well suited in the pleasant rôle of Captain Arthur Donegal. The singing of the chorus is tuneful and the dresses are bright.

GAIETY THEATRE, LTD. — Secretary and Manager, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting Manager, Mr. George Gray.—Amorelle has all the charm of the earlier comic operas, those operas which Offenbach and Hervi made famous. Mr. C. P. Levilly's specially organised company make the most of all their chances. Miss Stella Gastelle lets herself go as the heroine; she acts with an abandon essentially Parisian, and yet is always refined. The music she renders with exquisite taste, and she dances delightfully. Mr. W. H. Powell has an eccentric character in Dr. Napoleon Bonaparte Crowe, and exacts every ounce of fun out of it. To the traditional business of its original creator, Mr. Willie Edouin, he adds his own perception of opportunities. As the noble old friend, the "gentilhomme of the ancien régime," Mr. Arthur Dennis is truly admirable; Mr. J. Manfred Russell is romantic as Jules; Miss Kitty Cavendish looks as pretty as a picture in the rôle of Lesbia. The other characters are all well played.

THE PALACE, LTD.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting Manager, Mr. Arthur Brittain.—Mr. R. A. Roberts is again the bright particular star at the Palace, and is showing wondering thousands what he can do as a protean actor. On Monday and Tuesday he once more submitted his tragic playlet, Dick Turpin, which was received with enormous enthusiasm. The High Toby man miniature drama will be succeeded by Ringing the Changes, and Lucinda's Elopement. Mr. R. A. Roberts is a great draw. The programme at the Palace this week is crammed full of popular turns, in addition to Mr. R. A. Roberts. Mr. G. R. Whittle is a quaint and amusing fun-maker; Ernesto is an equilibrist and juggler who does his really clever work with neat dexterity; Messrs. Frank and Jen Latona present a musical interlude that suits all and sundry; the Sisters Showell are bright vocalists; the Mascots give a refined entertainment; Mr. Tom Edwards is a ventriloquist who could give the hero of Henry Cockerton's once-famous novel "Valentine Vox" points. Then at the Palace there is Vernon's Bioscope and Mr. Harry Woods' orchestra. During the day, at intervals in the grounds, are al-fresco entertainments, given by the Mascot Pierrots.

DERBY CASTLE, LTD.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. J. Kelly.—An absolute change of programme at this, the people's pleasure palace, has resulted in crowded assemblies. Miss Millie Hylton tops the bill, and she sings the songs suited to her idiosyncrasies with artistic effect. Miss Hylton is accompanied by Miss Decima Brook, a young and clever actress, who made a hit at the London Coliseum quite recently, and who in concerted numbers with Miss Hylton is highly effective. Mr. Fred Sinclair is an actor of the Palais Royal calibre; Miss Gracie Whiteford is a smart soubrette. Their playlet, Getting Even, is chic, and their turn at Derby Castle evokes applause. The Anartos are always up to date; Lotto, Lilo, and Otto, cyclists, give a performance which has a fascination for all who admire dexterous work; the Lavelle Brothers have a vogue as comedy acrobats; the Castle Bioscope presents up-to-date films; Mr. Alf Gibson is a droll comedian. Mr. Harry Woods' orchestra provides music which invites the tripper to dance, and the floor at Derby Castle for this purpose is in fine condition. In addition the side-shows at Derby Castle present many attractions.

THE HIPPODROME. — Sole Manager and Director, Mr. F. J. Connor; Ring-Master, Mr. Albino.—An entire change of programme has been made here, and the constellation which flames brightly this week is a combination of stars. The Marconis, who do wonderful things by the medium of electricity; Mezzetto is a wonderful juggler; Du Calion gives a fine performance on the ladder; the Brothers Leotard postulate that the thing appreciated by our sires in circuses has not lost its charm; Mons. Eugene Foote and Mdlle. Lizzie Rowland give the equestrian entertainment, which if deleted from the bill would be as Hamlet with the melancholy Dane omitted. The Towerograph has the dernier cri in animated pictures. The Cecilias submit a pleasing musical scena; Captain Maximilian Gruber continues his previous successful record with his elephant, horse, and pony; Mr. W. Tudor's equestrian goat and performing ponies are prime favourites; so are the Dillons.

NEW EMPIRE THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Charles Elderton; General-Manager, Mr. Elwyn Walter.—Mr. Elderton presents just the right form of entertainment for his patrons. Garden's Royal Quintette of vocalists, pipers, and dancers, come at the psychical moment. This is Scotch fair week in Hall Caine Land. The Sisters Lyle are well-voiced singers and graceful dancers, their efforts are appreciated; Mr. Joe Humphreys is a smart comedian; another star turn submitted is the Three Coopers, in their pathetic song scenas, "Descendants of Eve," "Blind Engineer," and "The Two Orphans." Mr. Harry Wallatts, a singer of the George Leyburne school, is much applauded; Miss Katie Cosper, a clever juvenile actress, gets there; and so does Mr. Alf. Bishop, a quaint fun-maker; Miss Sheila McNeil, described as the female Harry Lauder, does well.

BUXTON'S PIERROTS AND SEA VILLAGE. — Mr. Frederick Buxton's new large Pavilion has this week been crowded three times daily. His Pierrot Troupe work very hard, and give the public a clean and wholesome show. Their songs are new and tuneful, and the concerted music is rendered with intention.

The additional attraction at Buxton's is Saccho, the fasting man, who has created much interest.

Mr. Charles Dare's Minstrels, on the Head, cause many thousands to frequent that delightful spot, and listen to their pleasing burnt-cork comicalities.

Mr. Benson's Pierrots, on the Grand Stand, are not at all a negligible quantity. They have patrons who disdain all other forms of entertainment, and these artists work hard for the applause they gain.

The Toreador Orchestra and Concert Party, on Onchan Head have beaten all records known in Douglas. Crowds of two and three thousand people flock to their entertainments, which are given three times daily.

DOVER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, The Dover Theatres, Ltd.; Chairman of Directors, Mr. B. Carter; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred C. Dew.—A new version of Sapho, presented by Messrs. Ernest R. Abbott and F. C. Berridge, supported by a capable company, has attracted large audiences nightly. Miss Ada Abbott plays cleverly in the exacting part of Fanny Legrand; an excellent portrayal of Mme. Hettema is given by Miss Marjorie Tennant; Miss Mary Douglas makes a vivacious La Pipotte and furnishes a strong contrast to the sweetness and sincerity of Lucy, played by Miss Phyllis Atherleigh. Mr. Abbott as Jean Gaussin portrays the varying emotions of that character with skill; Mr. F. C. Berridge is responsible for a meritorious impersonation of Henri Dechelette; a noteworthy performance of Flamant comes from Mr. Ernest Hartington; Mr. George C. Doughty introduces a clever touch of humour in the rôle of Uncle Césaire; Mr. W. H. David is also amusing as Hettema; and Mr. Weedon Ross as Father Legrand also contributes to the mirth.

THE EMPIRE PALACE.—Proprietors, The Empire Palace Co.; Manager, Mr. B. H. Harland; Secretary, Mr. Chas. R. Standfield.—A really clever and interesting turn is given here by Mlle. Rita and Fred Roma, who deserve the prolonged applause which greets their efforts; the Brothers Brooks, patter comedians, have a quaint and original act; Cissie Wren sings and dances well; some smart conjuring is contributed by Henri Bekker; and other items on the programme are submitted by Fred Arnol, the Sisters Brand, Raynor and Reece, and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux Pictures.

THE PAVILION, PROMENADE PIER.—Lessees, The Dover Theatres, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred C. Dew.—The Excelsiors, who hold the board this week, submit a bright and interesting programme; Miss Marie Maffert is responsible for artistically rendered 'cello solos; Mr. W. H. Webb has a fine basso; Mr. McCall Chambers is amusing; Miss Ethel Branston is a fine contralto; Mr. Wilson Bamber a pleasing tenor; and Miss Grace Swinburn an attractive comedienne.

DUBLIN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Parrington.—The chief attraction here is that great Dublin favourite, the one and only Marie Loftus, a queen of comedy, whose doings are as varied, as interesting, and as full of brightness and charm as ever they were. Needless to say, she meets with a most flattering reception. The New York Comedy Four delight all with their vocalism and comedy; Arthur Kenny is deservedly applauded in a sensational act; Alexandra Edwin, soprano, sings with much pathos; Michael Nolan is an Irish comedian of great merit; Herr Grais' Baboons provide an exceedingly clever and interesting turn; Dale and O'Malley are up-to-date comedians; the songs and dances of the Eight Sunrays are repeatedly encored; Frederic Neiman appears to advantage as a ventriloquist; and Cole and Rags, comedy jugglers, and the Royal Pictures complete the bill.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager Mr. J. W. Whitbread; Acting-Manager, Mr. John M. Dawson.—Messrs. Travis Green and Arthur Hinton's company commenced a week's engagement here on Monday in the military drama A Soldier of France. Mr. Arthur Hinton submits a masterly rendering of Father Jean; Miss Leila Zillwood achieves success as Pauline Lorraine; Mr. Gerald Byrne is highly effective in the dual rôle of Captain Louis Lorraine and Lieutenant Louis; and the part of Zippa is excellently portrayed by Miss Phœbe Watson; Judas Delara is admirably sustained by Mr. Travis Green; Miss Florrie Zillwood makes an acceptable Margot; Mr. Frank Brunell is well placed as Pollyput Jollyboy; and Miss Olliver as Quassia and Miss Lydia Andre as Rita are both good in their respective parts.

PAVILION, KINGSTOWN.—Manager, Mr. C Irvine Bacon.—At this pleasant resort an attractive programme is presented by Mr. Walter Curtis's Merriment company. The songs, sketches, and instrumental music submitted are of a high order, and the artists who contribute successfully include Miss Joan Deering, Master Cecil Bernard, Miss Lilian Payne, Mr. Fenton Cross, Miss Laura Spencer, and Mr. Walter Curtis.

EMPIRE. — General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager and Secretary, Mr. George H. Marsh.—The Boissetts, who again head the bill here this week, are causing a furore nightly with the pantomimic sketch The Evening Party. The Howard Brothers, who justly style themselves the Banjo Wizards, are decidedly clever, and Maggie Rimner, coon comedienne and dancer, is a dainty and winsome artist. Harry Thurston's impersonations of music-hall stars merit warm praise; Will Fredo is a smart comedian and dancer; Calile and Walker enhance their reputation as comedy artists; and J. P. Ling scores successfully as a mimic. Charles Craston, eccentric comedian, sings amusing songs; and the Empire Pictures are entertaining.

TIVOLI.—General-Manager, Mr. Charles M. Jones; Secretary, Mr. H. A. Murphy.—Here we have a return visit of W. J. Churchill, whose amusing songs and patter win much appreciation; the Brothers Babusio, staircase performers, meet with unstinted approbation; Mabel La Blanche sings in a pleasing manner; as club jugglers the Geraldos score successfully; as does also Fred Durran, comedian. Other excellent turns are provided by the Vekeys, banjoists; May Fallowfield, an attractive soubrette; Jack Ross, vocalist; Menva, magician; and the Bioscope.

WORLD'S FAIR AND MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. T. A. James.—The artists engaged here include Van Gelder, conjurer; Little Dandy, character comedian; Little Hustler, serio and dancer; and Will Bell, Ir

Stella Darbyshire. Miss Ethel Verne as Lady Staunton and Miss Eva Lonsdale as Mabel Seabrook contribute pleasing studies. The drama, which is prettily staged, is preceded by the comedietta Mrs. Hilary Regrets, brightly played by Mr. Beaumont as Dr. Power and Miss Ralland as Mrs. Hilary.

THE GRAND THEATRE. — Manager, Mr. Harry Fischer.—The Scottish musical play, A Trip to the Highlands, continues its successful career at this house. The entire production reflects the greatest credit upon Mr. Harry Fischer, under whose direction the present revival has been produced. The dresses are fresh and tasteful, and the new numbers by Mr. W. Scott-Phipp and Mr. J. G. Aitken are not without merit. The members of the company play with an infectious gaiety that thoroughly exhilarates the audience, and conspicuous success attended the dainty acting and charming singing of Miss Maisie Ellinger as Miss Araminta Brown Windsor, Miss Millie Engler as Winnie, and Miss Nellie Burdette as Fanny Flounce. Miss Engler is rightly recalled for her delightful rendering of "Fishing" and "I've built a bamboo bungalow for you." Mr. Joseph B. Montague plays with his old humour as Timmins; Mr. Arthur Poole makes a hit as the detective; Mr. Wellesley Smith is a dignified Viscount Lackington; and Mr. Frank Barclay—vocally and artistically—is a dashing Frederick; while Mr. Wal Croft scores as the McMutchin.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting - Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton.—An attractive holiday programme is provided this week for visitors to this popular house. Cinquevalli heads the bill with his incomparable juggling feats; Conn and Conrad introduce both originality and humour into their clever acrobatic turn; and Vernando, the ventriloquial barber, imparts some freshness to a familiar form of entertainment. Peggy Pryde's lively comedienne turn is well received; the Scottish songs of Ruth Lytton are thoroughly appreciated; and J. A. Wilson, with his dog Towser, provides considerable amusement. Strong and well-contrasted turns are given by Harry Freeman and George Formby, the former marked by a refreshing breeziness of style, and the latter excelling in a peculiar quaintness and humour, which are exceedingly entertaining. The Two Madges, juvenile artists, are very effective in their rendering of a pathetic little scena; Lee and Bentley present a smart sketch, entitled Mabel B., with much success; Ike Scott and Son are happy as the Navvy and the Fiddler; and a good selection of pictures is shown by the American Bioscope.

FLEETWOOD. — QUEEN'S THEATRE. — Licensee and Manager, Mr. H. J. Snelson.—On Monday and Tuesday Mr. Herbert Barrs and company appeared in the comedy-drama, Life. Mr. Barrs played the part of Jack Lockhart, the hero, and Mr. R. Graham that of Sir Horace Lester, the villain, and both did full justice to their parts. Zac Krabbe was ably represented by Mr. E. Cheetham, and Joe Pippet was carefully acted by Mr. H. Ashton. Mr. W. Collins, as Detective Blake, Mr. A. Wilson as Israel Jacobs, and Mr. L. Ernest as Sam Sykes were also good. Miss M. Vincent as Jess is clever, and gave some acceptable songs, and Miss D. Oswald as Ruth Thorpe and Miss A. Collier as Beatrice Farrars sustained their respective parts very well. On Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, the same company was seen in Mr. H. Barrs' special musical version of East Lynne.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—During the earlier part of the week Mr. Thomas McKenzie's company, in Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace, was the attraction. Mr. Yorke Stephens made a good impression as Captain Mowbray; Mr. Maitland Dicker as Colonel Jardine was all that could be desired; Mr. W. Briscoe Owen submitted an able impersonation of Lieut. David Cairn; Miss Frances Vine sustained with ability the rôle of Mrs. Gorringe; Miss Mary Webb and Miss Mabel Melba were exceedingly good as the daughters of Mrs. Jardine; Miss Isabel Fladgate as Miss Potts was well placed; Mr. Reginald Walter scored a success as the detective; and Miss Marie Illington in her original rôle of Mrs. Jardine was charming. For the latter end of the week Mr. Charles Macdona's company was billed in Mr. Hopkinson.

VICTORIA PIER.—Lessees, Messrs. Keith Prowse and Co., Ltd.; Local Manager, Mr. J. Fenton Walsh.—The Sabots are paying a return visit here this week, and are as good as ever; Miss Dorothy Payne is greeted with rounds of applause for her clever reciting and singing. On Wednesday afternoon and evening Mr. George Mozart paid a special visit, his turn being hugely appreciated; the Victoria Minstrels, under the direction of Mr. H. Romer, are still going strong.

LEAS PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. A. Setter.—Miss Mildred Jones, contralto, is a talented vocalist; Mr. Gurney Russell acquits himself well as a comedian; the Ladies' Blue Salon Band is immensely popular; and the pictures are up to the usual standard.

BATHING ESTABLISHMENT GROUNDS.—Mr. Charles Cardow's Cadets are doing good business here. The company includes Mr. Tom Mellor, of "Wooden hut" fame; Mr. E. S. James, an old favourite, who is heard to advantage; Mr. George Ellis, a capital entertainer; and, on special nights, Miss Cecilia Gold, who renders able assistance.

GATESHEAD.—KING'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. M. S. Hammond; General-Manager, Mr. Joe May.—Heading the bill here this week is Harry Tate's company in Fishing, a farce which keeps the audience in a continual state of merriment. The most popular item, however, is Sid Cotterell and company's excellent sketch entitled The Substitute. Exponents, par excellence, of the burlesque comedy art are found in the persons of The Sivronis, who receive much applause. John Lloyd's glee singers, a quartette which includes Miss Helen Bourne, the well-known lady tenor, sing delightfully; Will Souls, described as a "laughing comedian," is a big favourite; the Brothers Pasquali, head and hand balancers, are clever; Diana and Natalia are graceful gymnasts; and Miss Florrie St. Roy, comedienne, and Miss Amy Elcock, a smart dancer, complete the bill.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Bolam and Bacon; General-Manager, Mr. Sidney Bacon; Acting-Mnager, Mr. Stephen Smith.—"Starring" here is Charles Matthews, who claims to be the champion jumper of the world. W. H. Morgan, comedian and vocalist, obtains well-merited applause; Carl Rovinelli's company presents a capital little sketch entitled A Burglar's Romance; Marie Gibson, a vocalist of considerable ability, makes a hit; the Sisters Lunelle are a clever pair of comediennes and dancers; Lottie Lonsdale, a local child comedienne, is a huge favourite; and the "show" concludes with an amusing series of pictures shown by Downey's Bioscope.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. Bolam and Bacon; General-Manager, Mr. Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Thomas France.—Appearing here this week with considerable success is Miss Grace Warner, who, assisted by a good company, is presenting The Scarlet Clue and East Lynne. In the former play, Miss Warner is seen to great advantage as Scarlet Sal; Mr. George Gordon depicts with much force the part of Michael Stanton; Mr. J. Leighton Leigh, in the dual rôles of Jack and Harry Esmond, is highly successful; Miss Kathleen Cranston submits a clever portrayal of Mother Scrooge. In East Lynne, Miss Warner achieves a triumph as Lady Isabel, and capital support is forthcoming from Messrs. George Gordon (Sir Francis Levison), J. Leighton Leigh (Archibald Carlyle), J. O. Tomlinson (Richard Hare), A. Richards (Mr. Dill), and Misses Ada Romer (Joyce), and Kathleen Cranston (Cornelia Carlyle).

GLASGOW.—KING'S, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr. H. Macfarlane.—A pleasant atmosphere pervades the King's this week, where Mr. H. F. Maltby is appearing in his own play, The Youngest of Three. Supported by an able company, Mr. Maltby receives a hearty welcome, and his acting as the dogged old Squire Wendover is clever and convincing. Miss Beatrice Marsdene makes a charming and naive heroine as Lucy Dulley, and her scenes with the masterful young lover, Gerald Wendover, are both pretty and dramatic. Miss Janet Hodson and Miss Mara Maltby as the two elder sisters of Lucy act well and in due contrast to the girlish impetuosity of their youthful protégée. Mr. A. E. Wyn Weaver submits a clever portrait of Philip Radford; and a well-played character part is the Samuel Johns of Mr. Ralph Hutton. Mr. Ernest Noble gives clever effect to two parts, the landlord of the "Bowl of Punch" and the stupid country lout Paul. Mr. Maltby's tragic little play, Hounslow Heath, is given in front, and is very effectively staged and played.

METROPOLE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Gillespy.—Mr. Frank Lindo's domestic drama, Home, Sweet Home, is on a return visit here. The character of Stephen Armitage is played by Mr. Lindo himself. He gives a robust and manly interpretation of a sympathetic part. Some equally good acting by Miss Marion Wakeford as Joan is also enjoyed. A charming child-actress is Miss Daisy Rochefort, with a promising future, her Dora being surprisingly good. Mr. J. W. Henson, as the villain, Lyle, bears himself well; and the Duke of Captain Gerald Gambier is a praiseworthy rendering. As David Armitage and Dick Redmayne, Mr. D. Laurence Doyle and Mr. George Overs make the most of two exacting rôles, and all the vivacity required in the rôle of Sybil Fay is displayed by Miss Hetty Webster.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Limited; District-Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. Mussett.—The principal item in this week's programme is that powerful if gruesome little play, The Monkey's Paw, of which Mr. John Lawson and his company give a good account, Mr. Lawson as the old father being specially well placed. The Bogannys as the "lunatic bakers" give an entertaining acrobatic and risley performance. Don Caicedo, the King of the Wire, returns here to show his marvellous dexterity and daring; Brett and Orford repeat their clever comedy and musical duologue; Cooke and Miss Rothert give an entertaining American comedy act; Lilian Lea sings several songs sweetly; Jack Pleasants makes a hit as an immobile comedian; the Four Goldinis give a smart display in their speciality act; Beatrice Willey sings well; and the American Bioscope, with pictures of life on a training ship, completes a really first-rate programme.

ZOO HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd., and E. H. Bostock; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—Good houses are the order here this week, the prime attraction being Eugene Stratton, whose artistic scenas and beautiful melodies have such a hold on the public; he is well supported by the Merrills, a trio of clever knockabout cyclists; Duncan and Godfrey, in the pleasing coster sketch, Me and 'Er; and the striking gladiatorial act of the three Romas. The banjo solos of Dick Williams are received with well-merited applause; Alfred Hurley's refined vocal imitations also obtain due recognition; other popular features of an attractive programme being the expert xylophone playing of Brilliant and Brilliant, the songs and dances of Bessie Butt, and the part singing of the British Quartette.

PAVILION, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr Samuel Lloyd.—The Wakeman Quartette sing several songs in good style; Heeley and Meeley, in their clever comedy scena, are as amusing as ever; Wyndham and Waters score in their comedy act, The Professor and his Pupil; Alice Blanford's singing meets with much success; the vocal abilities of Martine and Son please the audience. Other good turns are Bert Woodward, the "Coon on Wheels"; Zo E. Cliffe, comedian; Florence Schuberth, burlesque artist; and Stave, comedy artist.

COLISEUM.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. B. G. Maclachlan.—The Craggs, in their condensed sketch, embodying the saloon scenes from Laughter Land, cause roars of laughter at their quaint eccentricities, and evoke admiration for their clever acrobatic work. Hal Godfrey and company do extremely well in their lively comedietta, A very Bad Boy; Jacques Inandi, the wonder worker with figures, astonishes the audience with the facility with which he works out mentally the most intricate arithmetical problems; Starr and Leslie are clever in their comedy turn; the Casino Comedy Four are good singers and amusing comedians; Harwood's Juveniles contribute a pretty scena entitled The Children's Christmas Eve; Mabel Sinclair is a clever ventriloquist; the Checkaboards, white and coloured vocalists and dancers, give a varied and attractive turn; Millie Payne's low comedy proves popular; and the Bioscope, with new films, completes varied programme.

PALACE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Rich. Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry M'Kelvie.—The programme here includes De Biece, illusionist, who is allotted the premier position; Hayman and Franklin, humorists and vocalists, have also made a good impression; Miss Lily Morris, comedienne, has a fair share of the honours; and other notable turns include George Collins, a quaint comedian; Tom Dunmore, eccentric comedian; Wyndham and Waters, duettists; the Sisters Wingrove, comediennes and dancers; Bros. Lowenworth, Hebrew comedians; and the Bioscope, with a capital series of pictures.

GREAT YARMOUTH.—ROYAL AQUARIUM.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—Messrs. E. Lockwood and R. Crossman's company, giving an excellent interpretation of Sergeant Brue, forms the attraction here for the week. In the title-rôle Mr. Arthur Reynolds is successful as the not very brave policeman of the C Division; Mr. H. Goldsworthy sings well and acts naturally as Michael Brue; Miss Mary Hay is charming as Aurora; Daisy is smartly and vivaciously depicted by Miss Marion Hargrave; and Mabel Widget is daintily acted by Miss Mabel Keith. Mr. Cecil Burt gives a quaint character study as Mr. Crank; and Crookie Scrubbs finds a clever exponent in Mr. Charles McLagan, whose make-up and mannerisms cause roars of laughter. Miss Hebe Bliss is admirable as Lady Bickenhall, and her effective singing wins many encores.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—Mr. Thomas Thorne and répertoire company occupy the boards here this week. On Monday Our Boys was played, and the old comedy seemed to have lost none of its attractiveness. Sir Geoffrey Champneys and his son Talbot were capitally represented by Mr. Norman Clark and Mr. Keith Fraser; Mr. Thomas Thorne as Perkin Middlewick was extremely funny without descending to buffoonery; Mr. Arthur Bawtree was good as Charles; Violet Melrose, Mary Melrose, and Clarissa Champneys were effectively depicted by Miss Ruby Loncrain, Miss Elsie Howard-Ross, and Miss Rachel de Travis; Miss Edith Hesketh as Belinda, the lodging-house slavey, was exceedingly quaint and funny. Other pieces presented during the week were The Guv'nor and Confusion.

BRITANNIA PIER.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edward Gray.—Espinosa and Neilson, in a pot pourri of international dances, are topping the bill here this week, their act being received with great applause; Ryde and Beeman, grotesque acrobats, give an excellent performance; Witty Wattv Walton has established himself a firm favourite, and is at home both in comedy and pathos; Miss Rosa Loader, the merry musical mimic, scores a distinct success; Miss Ruby Bijou, dainty national and barefooted dancer; Mr. Edward Davies, tenor vocalist; and Miss Gertrude Cameron also achieve success. Adler and Sutton's troupe of pierrots have quickly made themselves popular; Alex Kendal, eccentric comedian; Mena Brae, the little duchess; Tom Perry, boy comedian; John Green, baritone; Harry Herbert, patterist and dancer; and J. A. Tunbridge, solo pianist, all work with good effect.

WELLINGTON PIER PAVILION. — Proprietors, Great Yarmouth Corporation; Manager, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—The well-known company of comedians known as the Follies are drawing full houses this week. The entertainment, devised and arranged by Mr. H. G. Pellisier, is varied, artistic, and amusing. The Misses Marjorie Napier, Gwennie Mars, and Ethel Allandale and Mr. Dan Everard contribute effectively-sung songs, duets, and trios; Mr. Lewis Sydney, "wrestling with the piano," and inventing some personal experiences, is ludicrous in the extreme; Mr. H. G. Polissier, in topical songs and burlesque, is a host in himself, and keeps the house in perpetual laughter. The Rosabel Ladies' Orchestra contribute some enjoyable music, and up-to-date pictures are shown on the bioscope.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert.—The great attraction for the week is the "Walrus Hunt," arranged by Mr. Durrell, of log-rolling fame. Mr. Durell, with real walrus head and skin, goes through various evolutions and defies capture, playing havoc with various excursion parties on the water and causing endless fun. Unthan, the armless wonder, does a capital turn; the Carr Bros. provide a musical comedy act; Algy and Handy Andy contribute a juggling entertainment; a Japanese acrobat, Tamamoto, gives an extraordinary exhibition on a tight rope stretched perpendicularly from floor to ceiling; Salmo contributes a clever horizontal bar and trapeze turn; the six King's College Boys give an enjoyable musical programme; and Ullmann's Ladies' Orchestra, consisting of male members of Mr. Gilbert's company, are responsible for a screamingly funny performance.

CHAPPELL'S CONCERT COMPANY.—A capital programme is provided, the artists appearing including the Bros. Hannaway, cross-talkers and dancers; Ada Victor, vocalist and dancer; Harry Mansfield, character vocalist; Clyo and Rochelle, comedian and soubrette; Harry Barker, versatile artist; Amy Allnutt, comedienne; the Nettas, harmony duo; J. H. Crew, the jovial eccentric; Abel and Welsh, comedy acrobats; Bernard and Weston, the argumentative gents; Fred Dice, descriptive vocalist; the Sisters Hula, vocalists and expert dancers; Leslie Reed, comedian and extempore vocalist; Will Netta, baritone vocalist; the Camerons, comedy artists; Ernest d'Almaine, tenor vocalist; and Minnie Leverentz, ballad vocalist and actress.

GRIMSBY.—PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Assistant-Manager, Mr. S. Tolfree.—Mr. Charles Carte, the well-known character-actor, and a strong company have presented the attractive drama A Noble Brother here this week with considerable success. Mr. Carte has admirably sustained the title-rôle, a part in which he has appeared over 2,000 nights, and his efforts have been ably seconded by Miss Doris Brookes as Nana Leigh. Mr. Howard Thorne has given a dignified rendering of Col. Leigh, while Mr. A. Tomlin as Jack Elsworth and Mr. F. Lyndon as Henry Travers have also done well. Miss Rosie Conroy as Rosie Rapid and Mr. Michael Madden as Larry O'Brien have provided some excellent comedy, their singing and dancing being quite a feature of the play. Other parts are ably sustained by Miss Alice Ballard, Mr. Payne Reynolds, and Mr. Ronald Douglas. The play has been followed each evening by a funny Oriental musical comedy, entitled In Happy Land.

PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. T. A. Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. W. Moyes.—A capital bill has been headed here this week by the Martelloni Troupe of lady acrobats, who have presented an act quite as daring as any seen here before. Charles Gardener, the popular comedian, and an old favourite locally, has scored with his extremely funny songs and patter, his eccentric make-up also contributing not a little to his success. Bugler Car has performed some exceedingly smart balancing feats with military weapons; Kloof and Ramsey have presented a bright musical act; the Two Zampahs, duettists and dancers, have also contributed; while others who have appeared are Matt Wilkinson and Co. in their amusing sketch The Registry Office; Bros. Lilian, gymnasts on the silver chains; and Violet Beatrice, a clever impersonator.

THE EMPIRE, CLEETHORPES.—Proprietor, Mr. J. Carter White.—Marie Elsie, the popular comedienne, has again appeared at the top of the programme here this week. Miss Elsie possesses an exceedingly dainty style peculiarly her own, and never fails to win many admirers. Little Don, a comedian who claims a resemblance to Little Tich, has also been a prominent contributor, and his eccentric style together with some excellent comedy business has made him very popular. Captain Devereux's dogs have proved themselves to be possessed of almost human intelligence; Rodin, the tramp cyclist, has presented a series of cycling tricks, and the Greys have sung operatic solos and duets with much success. Other artists contributing have been Viviana, a smart dancer; Andre and Bronton, in a funny sketch, entitled A Woman's Curiosity, and Magna in her artistic poses.

PIER PAVILION, CLEETHORPES.—Manager, Mr. W. T. Bollard.—The principal artists here this week have been Miss Margaret Cooper, in a new répertoire of songs at the piano; Mr. Wm. Wild, tenor; Mr. Foden Williams, humorist; Mr. Cyrus Dare, mimic, and Mr. D. Milner, banjoist.

GUERNSEY.—ST. JULIAN'S HALL.—Lessee, Mr. C. Robt. Perkins.—On July 20th Mr. Fred J. Little and Mr. Fred Darcy's company appeared here in the operatic extravaganza, Mr. A. Baba; or, The Thieves of Bagdad. Mr. Marie Adair was the all-important and dashing Captain; Miss Nellie Moore made a lively and captivating Ganem; Miss Flora Buxton sang well as Morgiana; Mr. A. E. Mann caused much merriment as Cogia Baba; and Messrs. Bass and Guinness were always funny. The Sydney Girls did some good work, and the Marvellous Ladderites caused quite a sensation.

HALIFAX.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Robinson; Manager, Mr. S. Winks.—This week Harry Radford and his charming wife Miss Millie Valentine are here, and their smart ditties and juggling feats are just to the public taste; Stewart and Morgan bring down the house by their delightful singing of selection from "Dear Owld Ireland"; the ventriloquial items presented by Bert Williams are smart. An item that stands out with prominence is The Galley Slave, a powerful little playlet from the pen of Mr. Arthur Shirley. Mr. George Leicester and Mr. George Bellamy assume the chief rôles skilfully, and are distinctly successful, as are the other members of a strong cast. D'Arc's marionettes surpass all anticipations; the cleverness of Charles Banks' dog and the genial style of its master and trainer keep the audience well amused; Gallando is successful as a clay modeller, his models being neat and clever. A capital single-handed musical turn is Orpheus, whose selections on the oboe and horn are rendered with a skill which wins for him prolonged applause.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Macnaghten.—Billy McClain, Mme. Cordelia and company are appearing here in a unique sketch, entitled The Hottest Coon in Dixie, in which native darkies are seen to great advantage. The dancing throughout is spirited, and the by-play and dialogue exceptionally smart. Downes and Langford are old favourites here. Others in a good vaudeville bill are the troupe La Faille; Henry Clifton, impersonator; Gladys Whitton; Edna Latonne; and Fields and Lewis.

HANLEY.—GRAND, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Alfred Edwardes. Coram is a ventriloquist of much ability, and his turn is much appreciated here; the Bros. Wartemburg are wonderful foot equilibrists, accomplishing some difficult feats; Francis and Alfred are comedy jugglers of considerable merit; Charles Chard is a capital comedian with good songs; and Annie Casey sings most successfully; the Sisters St. Julian also sing and dance cleverly. The pictures are, as usual, quite a feature of the programme.

HARROGATE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Fielding-Smith.—The first three nights of the week the stage at this popular house was occupied by Mr. Leigh Lovel's company in Sydney Grundy's play Sowing the Wind. Mr. Lovel depicted Mr. Brabazon very well; and Mr. Henry Osman appeared as Mr. Watkin; Mr. F. Pennington Gush was excellent as Ned Annesley; Mr. Willson was good as Sir Richard Cursitor; and Mr. Arthur McCullogh gave a clever study of Lord Petworth. Miss Octavia Kenmore as Rosamund submitted a capital reading of the part. For the remainder of the week Mr. Louis Calvert presented Sunday, with Miss Polini in the title-rôle.

HASTINGS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr H. W. Rowland; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles E. Scutt.—The amusing farce, Mr. Hopkinson, was played here the first half of the week by Mr. Charles Macdona's company. The acting all round reached a high plane of excellence, but undoubtedly Mr. Frank Stanmore in the title-rôle was the chief favourite. Happy results were attained by Mr. Shirley Lea as the Earl, and a good performance as the Duke was supplied by Mr. Arnold Lucy. The exacting rôle of the Duchess was well filled by Miss Alison Alexander, and much amusement was caused by Miss Katherine M. Romsey, who played Eliza Dibbs. A much-appreciated visit was paid the second half of the week by Mr. Lionel Rignold, Miss Ada Blanche and company in What the Butler Saw.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES. — General-Manager, Mr. Albert Mathams. — An interesting programme is opened by the attractive comedienne and dancer, Miss Maudie Ford. The up-to-date films of the Hippodrome Bioscope are a special feature; the Jackley Trio go through a series of remarkably clever acrobatic feats; as a characteristic comedienne, Miss Rosie Revall excels; Tom Parker wins much approbation by his comic ditties and dancing; Johnny Johnston is an accomplished all-round performer, either as patterer or dancer; Miss Mabel Thorne, whose welcome re-appearance gains popular recognition, sings in her usual excellent form; Mr. J. W. Winton is an expert Australian ventriloquist.

BEACH CONCERT PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. Geo. Blackmore.—The entertainment of mirth, music, and mimicry provided by Wallis Arthur's company continues an attractive feature to the many holiday visitors now here, whose enjoyment of doubtless heightened by the novelty of their environment.

HASTINGS PIER PAVILION.— Pier Master, Mr. R. Turner; Entertainment Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—The popular farcical comedy, Betsy, is holding the boards here this week, by Mr. J. D. Hunter and his large company. The piece is bright and highly amusing, and is interpreted with no little skill. Mr. Philip Gordon well represents the part of Mr. Birkett; the important rôle of Adolphus, his son, is well sustained by Mr. George Mudie, jun.; Mr. Charles Hawker plays the part of Dick Talbot with constant vitality; Mr. Maule Cole as Capt. McManus acquits himself admirably; as the tutor, Mr. J. D. Hunter quite distinguishes himself, and his diversities of humour are as true to life as they are diverting; Miss Cherrie Wardroper in the small part of Madame Polenta does excellent work; a bright and interesting performance by Miss Helen Anderson of Mrs. McManus is much applauded; Miss Eva Bayley plays the rôle of Mrs. Birkett with exquisite grace and finish; in the title-part Miss Blanche Bayley shows all the piquancy which the character demands; Nellie Bassett and Clara Peyton are respectively taken by Miss Marjorie Cassina and Miss Vera Dudley, and considerably add to the success of the piece.

ST. LEONARDS PIER PAVILION. — Pier Master and Entertainment Manager, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—Mr. Roland Bottomley's bright little play, The Impertinence of Nancy, is occupying the stage at this well-appointed theatre. A better all-round company could not be desired. Mr. Roland Bottomley as Brabazon gives a capital realisation of the part; as Ned Wynton, Mr. Reginald Eyre displays good acting; Mr. Tom Shelford, as the Curate gives a clearly drawn sketch; Miss Marjorie Christmas evinces true dramatic talent in the part of Nancy; with equal success Miss Edith Bottomley depicts the character of Sylvia Wynton; Miss Mary Stuart supplies a natural touch to the part of the widow, Mrs. Armstrong.

HUDDERSFIELD. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—Every turn in this week's bill is really excellent. At the top are Barton and Ashley in a rollicking sketch, Canal Boat Sal. Then come Florizel, a clever lady gymnast; Miss Lilian Rigby, a dainty little lady with a smart musical show; Albertus and Bartrum, a couple of club jugglers with a keen sense of humour, combined with great skill; the Villions, in their daring cycling act; Johnny Fuller, in his clever impersonation of a cat; Miss Constance Mori, comedienne and smart dancer; and Max Waldon, a refined female impersonator.

HULL. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. Morton; Resident-Director, Mr. W. F. Morton.—Henry Arthur Jones's fine play, The Bauble Shop, is being presented here after a lapse of years. Mr. Douglas Wentworth has gathered round him a good company. Mr. Fredk. Annerley in the rôle of Viscount Clive Brook has a good style, and does well; Miss Lily Bertram is effective in the delicate and difficult rôle of Jessie Keber; as an exponent of the Nonconformist conscience, Mr. H. Gomer May reveals many fine touches as Mr. Stoach; Matthew Keber's bibulous ways are well illustrated by Mr. Percy H. Vernon.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietors, Mortons, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Geo. Morton.—A welcome return visit is being paid this week by Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Kimberley's company in the Two Little Drummers. There is a healthy tone pervading the play. The Molly Meadows of Miss Edie Macklin is much appreciated; the two boys find good exponents in Miss Margaret Hazel and Miss English; Mr. Ed. Bikker fills the rôle of General Kingsley, V.C., with considerable effect; and the Frank Carsdale of Mr. Beresford Lovett gains sympathy.

THE PALACE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. Jno. S. Barnett.—Harry Tate is here with his humorous absurdity "Fishing"; Alexandre and Hughes are also well received. Other popular artists include the Bastiens, Will Poluski, jun., Ross and Grayson, Nelson's Newsboys, Gertrude Bradshaw, Mark Merry, and E. J. Sheldon.

THE NEW HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Alfred Graham; Manager, Mr. Tom Lunn.—The Bloomsbury Burglars have made a welcome appearance here; Cline and Clark, speciality singers and dancers, are prime favourites; Frank Cass, a popular versatile vocalist, gains much applause; Margutta is a clever young lady contortionist; and Marti and Julietta, Rose Tilley, and Lade Henderson complete the bill.

ILKESTON. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. L. F. A. Rogers.—The Ticket-of-Leave Man and One Woman's Wickedness have been played here this week by Messrs. Phelps and Tilbury's Co. The Ticket-of-Leave Man was performed on Monday night, when Mr. A. Geo. Fry gave a very good reading of Robert Brierley; and Miss Belle Tilbury won favour as May Edwards; Mr. Bernard Webb was seen to advantage as Mr. Gibson; and Mr. Harry Tilbury was smart as Hawkshaw. As the talkative Mrs. Willoughby, Miss M. Dorris was well suited; and as Sam Willoughy Miss U. T. George was deserving of praise; Mr. Chas H. Phelps did well as Jem Dalton; and in Mr. E. Bulwer-Pitt, as Melter Moss, had an apt assistant.

IPSWICH. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—The programe for the current week here includes some novel and attractive turns. Martin Conway, comedian, sings humorous songs; the Sisters Urma contribute graceful feats on the swinging bar; Kavados in his juggling act is clever; Pueblo and Cropp are applauded for a pleasing dance; Brady and Johnson in a sketch, entitled A Chapter of Blunders, provoke mirth; and other turns include Lillie Soutter, a vivacious comedienne; Ethel Dove, a clever dancer; and the Columbio Trio.

JARROW.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Jerold E. Reed.—This week Mr. John Power's company is here with the drama entitled Man's Enemy. Mr. Francis Everard gives a manly portrayal of Harry Stanton; Mr. H. Payne does justice to the character of General Sir Arthur Stanton; Mr. A. D. Mead is quite at home as Fred Lisle; Mr. B. Dunstan is an effective Isaac Barnett; Mr. John Power submits a powerful rendering of Tom Drake; Miss Marie Lyons plays Sarah Drake forcibly; Miss Clara Reid makes a capable Polly Harris; Miss Edith Leslie does well as Grace Lisle; Mr. E. W. Bretton causes amusement as Bill Sanders; and Mr. C. Clifford is excellent as Count Lanski.

JERSEY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Lessee, Mr. C. Robert Perkins.—Mr. Fred J. Little and Fred D'Arcy's company is this week presenting Mr. Frank Ayton's burlesque, Crusoe, the Cruiser. Dainty Miss Nellie Moore is delightful as Polly; Miss Louie Adair ably fills the name-part; Miss Flora Buxton, the dusky belle, receives several encores nightly for her fine singing; Mr. A. E. Mann is funny as Mrs. Crusoe; and is ably supported by Messrs. Bass and Guinness, as the twins; Mr. George Rapley appears as a pirate; and Mr. Fred Dobito as a cannibal king; whilst Mr. Syd T. Russell undertakes the indispensable rôle of Friday. In the last scene, the Zara Troupe appear, their exhibition of gymnastics and feats of strength being enthusiastically applauded. The scenery and dresses are particularly good.

SPRINGFIELD GROUNDS.—Mr. Victor Stevens and his pierrot troupe continue to draw good audiences.

TRIANGLE PARK.—The Gaieties conclude a most successful engagement here this week. Mr. Charlie Rogers' banjo playing is much appreciated; and Mr. Charles Conyers is a great draw. The troupe is under the direction of Mr. Wilson James.

LEAMINGTON. — JEPHSON GARDENS.—Corporation summer music season.—In connection with the Leamington summer music season, Mr. Patrick Kirwan and his idyllic players paid a visit to the town on Tuesday, when they presented a series of pastoral plays afternoon and evening in the Jephson Gardens. At the afternoon performance the players gave a very admirable interpretation of The King's Orchard, adapted from Gringore by Patrick Kirwan. This was followed by an amusing comedietta, entitled The Duchess of Bayswater, which caused endless amusement. In the evening the company gave a very fine performance of "Ferdinand and Miranda," adapted from The Tempest, Mr. Patrick Kirwan appearing with great success as Prospero. The incidental dance of nymphs and reapers was most gracefully executed by members of Messrs. Bellew and Stock's Academy. Other pastorals given included The Enchantment of Titania, and "The Jewel Scene" from The Merry Wives of Windsor. Both performances were well attended and highly appreciated.

LEEDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; General-Manager, Mr. R. Ernest Liston.—Mr. Arnold Bell and company are interesting big audiences this week in the powerful piece Lost in London. The cast is an excellent one, and includes that sterling actor, Mr. Cuthbert Imrie, in a strong part. Mr. Frank Carlisle and Miss Frances Campbell are also particularly successful in the presentation of leading characters.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. Dottridge and Longden; General-Manager, Mr. C. H. Longden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. Bush.—How Money's Made is a new drama full of striking and sensational incidents, and its presentation at this popular theatre during this week has been well received. The leading parts are well and faithfully portrayed by Mr. John Cecil, Mr. Frank Strickland, Mr. Henri Gerald, and Miss Minnie Leslie amongst others. The humorous element is well looked after by Mr. Elton Morgan and Miss Flo Norman.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. T. Gerald Morton; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alex Galley.—The popular coon vocalist, G. H. Elliott, is at the head of a good programme here, and enhances a big local reputation with an acceptable new song scena. Harriett Vernon returns with her lilac-girl speciality, and is accorded a good reception, as also is that clever comedienne, Marie Kendall. Annie Abbott gives a remarkable exhibition of magnetic power in a novel entertainment. The Ten Genis are a troupe of clever risley acrobats. Rezene and Robini are vastly amusing in burlesque eccentricities. Steve McCarthy contributes a smart song and dance turn, and the audience is further entertained by Francis and Melli, O. K. Sato, and an interesting series of animated pictures.

CITY VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Mr. F. W. Wood; General-Manager, Mr. J. C. Whiteman; Acting-Manager, Mr. S. Jones.—The Sisters Marion are a strong lead here, their admirers being numerous and lavish of demonstrative appreciation. Versatile Herbert Shelley again displays histrionic and vocal ability; H. O. Wills dispenses comedy in clever style; Trick and Trixie are pleasing in their novel speciality; and Helen Charles is also an entertaining contributor to the programme.

LEICESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Milton Bode and Edward Compton; Business-Manager, Mr. E. R. Beaumont.—The Power of Gold, played by Mr. Frank Ayrton's company, is here. That gentleman as Sammy Smudge and Miss Madge Seymour as Norah Donnelly are extremely popular; Miss Lilla Wilde as Lady Brandon displays much histrionic power; Miss Georgina V. France makes an excellent impression as Meg Judson; and Little Mabel is good as Paddy Blake. Mr. Charles Whitlock as Hadji Zambra is to be complimented on a clever performance; Mr. Richard Oliver as Paul Judson is also a success; and Mr. Albert Sefton as Mark Harley, Mr. Frank Holyoake as Dr. Saunders, and Mr. W. Victor as Peter Maguire may also be praised.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; District-Manager, Mr. Hatton W

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Lapworth.—Dora Lyric is the principal attraction here. Others who contribute to the programme are Diana Hope's company in the sketches The Doctor and The Grasshopper; Harry Carmen; Billy French, coon singer and dancer; Daisy Lane, comedienne; Daley and Collins, comedians; and Walter H. Pallister's American Bioscope.

Abell, Johnson, and Unsworth.—The following excellent company is delighting patrons here this week:—Arthur Bearle, society jester; Bert and Dora, comedy duettists; Dan Lyndon, comedian; Frances O'Reilly, a charming vocalist; Dorothy Baddeley, a clever soubrette; Herbert Simister, comedian; and Walter Chapman, pianist and musical director. On Thursday Dan Lyndon, who has become a warm favourite, took a benefit, when the programme was augmented by the appearance of the following artists:—Bert Wallace, comedian; Leo Storer, actor vocalist; Miss Dolly Burton, soubrette; Miss Edith May; Miss Lilly Hurst; Ben Blow, comedian; Harry Braisby, comedian; Will Lawson, comedian; Thos. Day, tenor; Fred Cooke, baritone; and others.

LIVERPOOL.—ROTUNDA THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery, jun.—The attractive drama, Her Luck in London, has held the stage here during the week. Miss Mary Neil again played Nellie Harborne with all her former sweetness; Mr. Charles A. Leicester, an able actor, was the Honourable O'Connor; Miss Frances Bruce made the most of Lilian Harborne, handling the part with care and discretion; Mr. Alfred D. Adams was an excellent Richard Lenowen; credit is due to Mr. Douglas Tremayne for his portrait of the curate, Strong; Mr. Tyrone Power proved effective as Stephen Harborne; and much humour was provided by Mr. Bruce Clapham as Algie and Miss Florrie Groves as Maud Shovepenny. The drama was well presented.

LYRIC THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold; Directors of Entertainments, Messrs. T. Barrasford and F. Willmott; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Coles.—The most interesting and entertaining item in this week's programme is the Regal Operatic Quartette in selections from Maritana. The various numbers are loudly applauded, particularly Madame Marie Burnett's "Alas! those chimes." Mr. Edward Wynn suits the part of Cæsar de Bazan admirably, and sings in a masterly manner; Mr. Albert German's King is well acted, and his songs have artistic finish; Mlle. Adele Prescott is a pleasing Maritana; Baroni and Kemp give an exhibition of quick changes; Les Marsumas are responsible for most of the fun; and a pleasing and greatly enjoyed turn is that of George Martinengo as "The Unemployed Musician," his 'cello playing being loudly applauded. Other turns billed are Arthur Elvy, George Grogie, Carlotta Lunn, Harry Bent, Tennis and Laune, and Lily Le Bretton.

STAR THEATRE. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Harris Fineberg.—True to the Core has been given here by Mr. H. J. Snelson's company. Miss Elsie Marriott Watson very creditably undertook the rôle of Mabel Gratton; Mr. Bert Albert handled the part of Noel Meadows satisfactorily; Mr. Scott Leighton was a manly Captain Meadows; Mr. Harry J. Snelson as Stephen Dudley worked hard; Mr. J. Carl Lyle caused a deal of amusement with his Joe Lamb; and Mrs. H. J. Snelson carefully portrayed the dual rôle of Mrs. Gratton and Old Sal.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Lingford Carson; Manager, Mr. Fred L. Arthur.—A well-presented drama entitled The Romany's Revenge has been witnessed here by large audiences. The company brought by Messrs. E. A'Dell and F. Chabot is an all-round good one, while the scenery is particularly picturesque. Miss Ethel Ashleigh, as Zamet, played with dramatic effect; a capital John Hope came from Mr. Edward Louis; Mr. Harry C. Robinson was powerful as David Renard; Miss Fanny Wallace as Polly Pluck maintained the fun, giving also some excellent clog dancing; Mr. David Hamilton in the rôle of Bobbie Bloom held his audience in the grip of laughter, his comic convict being an admirable piece of fooling; and Miss Eva Elwes distinguished herself in the double part of Lilian Hope and Elspie.

THE EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Principal here this week are Miss Dolly Elsworthy's company with The Orange Girl, an episode in the life of King Charles II., which has proved very enjoyable. Miss A. Schrier as Lady Castlemaine deserves special mention. Margaret Ashton has a capital song scena, "The Winter Girl"; Dan Crawley is as funny as ever; the Deane Tribune Trio present an amusing sketch, Applicants; Lockhart's elephants go through an interesting exhibition; the American Comedy Four are exceedingly funny; Miss Lilian Bishop proves herself a clever male impersonator; and others in the list are Miss Maud Ross, comedienne; the Three Phydoras, Will Mitcham, and Claire Beasley's cats.

ROYAL HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr Thomas Barrasford.—A particularly strong bill is offered at this popular resort this week. Foremost is Little Tich, who has, as usual, proved an immense draw. A neat and clever entertainment was provided by the Four Athos, ball manipulators and novelty acrobats; Dusty Rhodes had a long list of funny things· a bright little sketch, In the Studio, came from Fred Mulvey and Minnie Miriam; Will Godwin rendered in excellent style, "If those lips could only speak"; Emma Don and Co. offered an enjoyable musical mélange, The Prodigal Son; Kitty Clover and Co., supported by Mr. R. Courtney, presented a smart comedy sketch; and others on the programme were Tom E. Hughes, character comedian; Sylvesto, with a speciality act; and Lily Lena, comedienne.

NEW PARTHENON. — Proprietor, Mr. Edwin W Smith. — Bioscope pictures, interspersed with variety turns, are yet on the bill here.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—The "Royal" stock company is this week presenting here A Father's Revenge, a well-written eight-tableaux sketch, by Sydney Spencer. As usual, Mr. Percy Boucher has most of the comedy work, his Pedro creating great laughter. Mr. Cecil Ravenswood as Antonio, Duke of Milan, plays with much dramatic effect; Miss Florence Palmer is telling as the daughter, Princess Miranda; a capital Fidelia is offered by Miss Beryl Ravenswood; Mr. Harry Tresham ably undertakes Andrea; Marco is in the good hands of Mr. Sydney Grant; and Mr. E. D. Allen affords the utmost satisfaction as Stefano. Some attractive cinematograph pictures are also shown.

PARK PALACE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Willmot.—A series of Bioscope pictures occupies the principal part of the programme here this week. Variety turns are given by the Amphlett duettists, with an interesting vocal scena, A Domestic Mistake; some excellent songs are rendered by Clarence L. Winston, coloured tenor vocalist; and a powerful dramatic sketch entitled The Gambler of Liverpool is well given by Messrs. J. Marks and E. Gordon, Mrs. J. Marks, Miss Florence St. Clair, and Miss Connie.

HAYMARKET.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Willmot.—A fresh series of moving pictures are here this week, with variety turns by Jack Harris, vocal comedian; Mollie Doon, comedienne; and the Three Seymours, equilibrists and jugglers.

WESTMINSTER. — Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery, jun.; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Montgomery.—The bioscope remains here another week, and, in addition, some excellent variety artists appear.

OLYMPIA, LTD.—Manager, Mr. A. W Young.—Visitors to this beautiful building find the sliding roof a pleasant innovation during the hot weather. Good business has been done during the week with Karno's laughable creation, Moses and Sons, which tops the bill; Ludwig Amann charms everybody with his remarkable impersonations; Cruikshank brings some new songs, jests, and stories, which are delightful to listen to; Max York's dogs show a high degree of training; and Kathleen Cogan is a pleasing comedienne.

LLANDUDNO. — GRAND THEATRE.—Responsible Manager, Mr. A. G. Pugh.—Ian Maclaren's dramatised version of Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush is being presented here. In the part of Lachlan Campbell Mr. William Mollison is excellent, and gives a perfect portrayal of a difficult part. Mr. Alec F. Thompson as Archibald McKittick ("Wee Posty") causes roars of laughter; Mr. John Clyde as John Maclure is effective; and the same may be said of Miss Evelyn McNay in the rôle of Flora Campbell. Mr. Kendal Chalmers (Tammas Mitchell), Mr. D. Lyall (the Earl of Kilspindle), Mr. Archie W. Chappell (Lord Hay), Mr. Durward Lely (Rev. John Carmichael), Miss Josephine Woodward (Margaret Howe), Miss Edith Blair-Staples (Annie), Miss Martha Stewart (Geordie), and Miss Jeannie Fitzgerald (Jeannie) all do well.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. C. R. Chaplin; Musical Director, Mr. Jess Holroyd.—A variety entertainment has been given here for three nights, the bill being headed by a tabloid farcical comedy, entitled The Collar Stud, in which Mr. Bartlett, Mr. W. Stone, Mr. James Black, and Miss Muir appeared, the house being convulsed with mirth. The Lady and the Lunatic, in which Miss Muir and Mr. Bartlett sustained the two rôles, caused endless amusement. Other turns were the Sisters Granville, comediennes and dancers; Arthur Wallis, reciter; the Dereneys, in a pot-pourri act; and Joe Redmond, comedian and dancer. The New Barmaid was played on Thursday.

HIPPODROME.—This place of amusement opened for the season on July 23, the principal attraction being the Jamacian Choir, brought to this country by Sir Alfred Jones, of shipping renown.

LOWESTOFT.—MARINA. — Managing-Director, Mr. E. A. Smith.—With its sparkling music, clever dancing, and smart acting The Dandy Doctor is paying a welcome return visit, and Mr. E. Marris's company is to be warmly commended on its success. The mounting and dressing all call for special mention, several very pretty stage pictures being introduced. Mr. Edward Marris is thoroughly at home as Brown, a millionaire, and keeps the fun going merrily. Equally praiseworthy is Miss Florence Smithers as Jane. This lady is particularly clever. Mr. Herbert Pearce is well placed as Col. Pendred; and Messrs. E. H. Bertram (Arthur Vandyke) and Leslie Martin (Bertie) are happily cast. Miss Elfie Vincent as Ivy Pendred gives a pleasing performance; and equally smart is Miss Rosie Chandler. The specialists include the Dandy Belles, the Dutch Girls, and the Yeoman Male Voice Quartette.

MANCHESTER.—ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. B. Broadhead.—The Sorrows of Satan, transferred from the Grand Junction Theatre, is the attraction here this week. Mr. Hugh Carmichael and Miss Nelson Ramsey head the company.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. B. Broadhead.—A big turn here this week is Major and Thurgate's Mystery Fair, an elaborate comedy illusion very well staged and highly successful. Herr Addison's troupe of Royal Fox Terriers also provide an admirable show. Other clever and entertaining turns are Jordison's Eight Dancing Dotts; Victoria Dagmar (and clown) in a smart bar act; the Three Mushams, in a comic sketch, A Day at Hampstead Heath; Cavalli, expert ventriloquist; Merton and Rydon, in a lively musical comedy act; the Loveladies, illustrated song artists; and Ormonde Penstone and his lady assistant in a series of illusions.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. B. Broadhead.—Messrs. Beaudyn and Livesey's company is here again in their interesting and exciting play, A Traitor Prince, which was presented to a fairly good house on Monday. A very fine performance of the title-part is given by Mr. G. M. Montanini, and his efforts are rivalled by Miss Nesta Sandford in the important rôle of Vashti, the snake charmer. Mr. Ernest A. Duval makes a good Frank Derrick; Mr. Victor Rae, in the part of Cara, the half-caste, is seen to great advantage; Miss Rose Routledge is very natural as the heroine, Lola Vane; plenty of fun is forthcoming from Mr. Edmond O'Grady as Billy Bright; and among others who are well placed Mr. A. W. Norman and Miss Kitty Thomas deserve commendation.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. R. Flanagan; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Berry.—An old favourite, A Royal Divorce, is the attraction here this week, presented by a company under the direction of Mr. W. W. Kelly. A better performance could not possibly be wished for. Miss Edith Cole's Josephine has long been a popular and memorable impersonation; and those who have seen Mr. Frederick Victor in the part of Napoleon know that his realisation of the Emperor of the French could not be surpassed as a convincing, restrained, and dramatic piece of work. The large cast also is worthy of its principals, among the best being Mr. St. George Frere as General Angereau; Mr. Arthur Preston as Murat; Miss Agnes Imlay as Marie Louise; and Miss Clara Russell as Stephanie du Beauharnais. The general staging and effects are extremely good.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Walter De Frece; Secretary, Mr. Peter Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. Rhodes Parry.—Harry Lauder, the favourite Scotch comedian, is the attraction here this week, and crowded houses are the rule. The Holloway Trio are exceptionally clever acrobatic wire performers, and are well received; Shawlene, the well-known whistler, meets with a deserved good reception; and Belle Braham, the pictorial songstress, proves very popular. Harry Rochez's circus includes a troupe of cleverly trained ponies and dogs; considerable amusement is caused by the Pender troupe of pantomimists, and the Continental stilt-walkers, in a novelty speciality act; Harry Brown is a capital coloured comedian, who "gets there"; and the Sisters McNulty are neat comediennes and dancers. As usual, the Palace pictures are very good.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—A very fine turn here this week is that of the Ten Loonies, in Dotty, a long and elaborate musical sketch, which includes much fun and music, the latter chiefly eccentric, but sometimes beautiful in character and rendering. Of a different character, but vocally very good, is Harrison Brockbank's The Freebooter, which retains its popularity. The Brothers Horne give their smart boxing sketch with great success; Frank Seeley, comedian, is popular; a pretty and well-sung scena is given by the Classicum Quartet of Venetian singers; and other pleasing turns are Will Haines, light comedian; May Evans, comedienne; Amber Austa, quaint singer and dancer; and James Heron, illustrated song vocalist. The pictures are entertaining.

HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. P. Morgan.—A great treat in the way of refined comedy character-acting is provided here this week by Willie Edouin, who gives three distinct impersonations during the course of an amusing monologue, entitled Are You Insured? A fine turn also, beautifully staged, is Percy Honri's musical fantasy Concordia. Belle Davis and her Pick-Chicks, three merry nigger boys, who dance extremely well, are loudly applauded; the Sisters Oswald, comediennes, sing and dance agreeably; a clever equilibristic act is offered by the Henri-Taylor Trio of Mexican artists; a smart and amusing turn is that of James Stewart, the tramp at the piano; two songs are admirably sung by Hamilton Hill, the Australian baritone; and a brisk and effective exhibition of military drill is given by Capt. Bevan's Gordon Highlanders. In addition to these, two vocal items are tastefully and melodiously rendered by the choir; and a funny series of pictures, "The Terrible Kids," are presented on the bioscope.

TIVOLI. — Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. A. Wilkes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—The star attractions here this week are Austin Rudd, the breezy comedian, and Rachel Lowe, comedienne, both of whom meet with a good reception. Les Frasettis play several selections on the violin, 'cello, harp, and xylophone in a most delightful manner; and Nellie Moore recites "The Women of Mumbles Head" in an effective and refined way. Others who contribute good turns are Maude Roma, mimic and comedienne; the Itrams, in their novel perch pot-pourri act; J. W. North, comedian; Harry Cook, comedian; and the Dewars, comedians and patterers. Raymond's Vivagraph pictures are excellent.

KING'S, LONGSIGHT.—Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. B. Broadhead.—The Poor Must Live is being played here twice nightly by Mr. Geoffrey Fulton's capable company, headed by Mr. Shaun Glenville as Hooker Holdsnitch and Miss Carmichael as the Vengeance. Miss Margaret Thorne is conspicuous as Sal Darling; Miss Violet Hammersley is pleasing as Dorothy Murdoch; and Miss Alice Buckland as Moya is charming. Other principal parts are in the safe hands of Messrs. Charles O'Connor, H. C. Macartney, W. Spinner, Arthur Trail, and Frank H. Dale. The whole performance is much above the average.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. B. Broadhead.—A good programme is presented here this week, the chief attraction being Le Diabelo, whose feat of "Looping the Devil's Wheel" is highly sensational. Ward and Davis are vastly amusing in a musical duologue, entitled Wanted, a Typist; George Young, the blind musician, is well received; Ranji Singi and Valeria contribute a smart magical entertainment; and the Three Panamas are artistic tumblers. Lady Zilla is a capital ventriloquist; Houser, the comedy clay modeller, is very good; Dolly Denver dances daintily; and Blarney and Kennard are smart comedians, with a waltzing dog.

HIPPODROME, HULME. — Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. B. Broadhead.—Richards, a trio of exceedingly smart acrobats, head the bill here this week, and give a most successful turn. Dolly, Agnes, and Maud, the singing box-makers, are pleasing vocalists, and are much appreciated; Dutch Pastimes is a scena in which four lady artists sing and dance in a characteristic and capable manner; George Gulliver, a ventriloquist of ability, contributes a laughable turn; G. W. Kenway, society entertainer, is very good in imitations of leading comedians; and Lorne and Rene, in their Lancashire scena, Capital and Labour, sing well, and patter amusingly. Other good turns are those of Kiaro, a clever hand-balancer; C. H. Charlton, conjurer; and Harley and Harden, knockabouts and eccentric dancers. On Monday night an extra turn was given by an unnamed gentleman artist, "How to become an acrobat," in which he displayed much skill and humour.

RUSHOLME PAVILION. — Proprietor, Mr. Harry Leslie; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles North. — A strong attraction here this week, and one which has drawn good houses, is Mr. D'Arcy Clayton's talented combination, "The Gypsies and their Jester," in a novel scena, A Gypsy Camp.

MARGATE.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Exclusive Manager, Mr. Edward Michael; Business-Manager, Mr. A. Austin-Leigh.—Miss Madge McIntosh and Mr. Lumsden Hare's company opened here on Monday, and for the two following evenings, with Alfred Sutro's play, Mollentrave on Women. The company was an exceptionally good one, including, as the cast did, Mr. Lumsden Hare, as Sir Joseph Balsted, K.C., M.P., and Miss Maud McIntosh, as Lady Claude Derenham, both of whom did remarkably well in their respective rôles. Mr. Michael Sherbrooke was admirable as the far-seeing Mr. Mollentrave, who has made such a close study of the perplexing problem "woman." Miss Gwladys Wynne was pleasing as Margaret Messilent, who, much to the discomfiture of her guardian, Sir Joseph, falls in love with him. Miss Ada King was well placed as Mrs. Martelli, the housekeeper in the Balsted household, and Miss Alice Arden was particularly good as Mrs. Treable. Mr. Murray Carrington deserves a word of recognition for his Everard Swenboys, Miss Messilent's boyish lover, and Mr. Arthur Somers was seen to advantage as Mr. Dexter. Mr. Stockall Ward played the part of Lord Contareen well, and the other parts were all capitally sustained. The play was preceded each evening by the little curtain-raiser, A Savage Encounter, in which Miss McIntosh and Mr. Lumsden Hare appeared with success. For the remainder of the week the comedy, The Duke of Killicrankie was in the bill.

HIPPODROME.—Sole Proprietors, Messrs. F. Mouillot and W. de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—Miss Annette Kellerman, the lady swimmer, who has once essayed, and who is again in training for another attempt, to swim the Channel, made her appearance here this week with a series of biograph pictures of herself in the water, illustrating her various modes of progression and method of feeding in the sea. One of the prettiest items on the programme, which is again a pleasingly varied one, is A Ba Be's living picture postcard album, a really excellent turn. F. V. St. Clair has, of course, up to date references to Chicago in his topical songs, and other contributors include the Sisters Poole, society entertainers; Massona, juggler; Lily Black, comedienne and dancer; Ernest Rees, comedian; Evelyn Taylor, comedienne; and the Biograph Pictures.

HALL-BY-THE-SEA.—Sole Proprietor, "Lord" George Sanger; General-Manager, Mr. Charles Evans.—An all-round good programme is placed before the patrons of this place of entertainment. Ferris and Farnley, eccentric patter comedians, prove amusing; the Snow Family, expert and grotesque skaters, in their absurdity A Spree on the Ice, are mirth provoking; and Wragg and Wragg, in their feats of swordmanship, are fulfilling a second week's engagement; Nellie Farrell, an Irish singer of Irish songs, has a pleasant vivacious way of rendering her contributions, and dances expertly; the Quaint Korries, in their musical mixture, are entertaining; Ossi Souplessi is good as the flying serpent on the rings; and George French's troupe of cyclists are decidedly clever. The ball each evening proves an additional attraction.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—TEMPERANCE HALL.—Manager, Mr. Israel Price.—Animated pictures, both interesting and varied, provide much of the evening's entertainment here. Variety turns are submitted by Max Merlin, the human crocodile; Daisy Davenport, a smart comedienne and dancer; Jimmy Shields, in songs and dances; and R. C. Note in acceptable songs.

MIDDLESBROUGH. — OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Manager, Mr. K. W. Chatto.—An interesting performance of Shadows of a Great City is being given here by a stock company this week. Mr. Frederick Freeman is good as Tom Cooper, and for the part of Biddy Roonan a clever representative is found in Miss Marion Holmes. Mr. Godfrey Tearle does justice to the rôle of George Benson, and Abe Nathan has an excellent representative in Mr. Fred Richards. Mr. Bryce Methven is clever as Arkwright, a detective; and Miss Molly Malone does well as Nellie Standish.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Chas. B. Rembges.—One of the most interesting turns in a capital programme here this week is that of Terry and Lambert in a series of American character sketches. Mark Melford and company cause roars of laughter in their sketch, Only a Wedding; the Three Donals give a remarkable display of feats of strength; Howe and Ardie evoke laughter by their grotesque performance; and Cora Caselli is an excellent dancer. Alberto, Francis Manners, and the Bioscope are other attractions.

OXFORD PALACE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Alf. Graham.—An excellent programme is being submitted here this week. Harry Pleon delights with his latest burlesque sketch; G. W. Hunter causes laughter by his songs and sayings; Alf Holt distinguishes himself in some remarkable mimicry; Tiny Arnold is highly accomplished, and Bessie Willows sings well; the Henreys provide a clever juggling and club swinging turn, and Mystery Gauze and the Bioscope also add to the attractiveness of the programme.

MORECAMBE. — ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE. — Sole Lessee, Lieut. Julian Malvern; General-Manager, Mr. Chas. M. Julian.—Mr. Charles Windermere has been playing to good business with Darnley's farcical comedy, Facing the Music. His really clever acting as the other Mr. Smith is one of the funniest things imaginable, and the audience lavish upon this excellent comedian a full measure of applause. Miss Clare Manifield makes a charming Mabel, and delights the audience; Mr. Norris Mathews is the curate of St. Andrew's, and plays the part admirably; Mr. Wentworth Fane acts with the requisite go as Dick Desmond, and Mr. Graham Morrison succeeds as the uncle, Col. Smith. Other parts are commendably sustained by Messrs. Zoe Davis, Phyllis Leslie, and Evelyn Shelley. The original comedietta, Clause No. Six, by Chas. Windermere, is played as a curtain-raiser, the two characters in the trifle being sustained by Mr. Wentworth Fane and Miss Clare Manifield.

WINTER GARDENS.—General Manager, Mr. Tom Atkinson.—The palm this week must be given to Carter Livesey and Lilian Rosebery, with whom is Albert Mason, in the sketch, The Would-be Actors, an excruciatingly funny skit on the amateur aspirant to the stage. Bennett and Martell are good in their absurdity, The Shipwrecks, and A. J. Rebla will take a lot of beating as a comic juggler. The Falcons are clever people, their balancing and comedy work with the park seats being remarkable. Flo Warner is a dainty singer with a trim figure, and little Maidie Berker has the makings of a society entertainer. The Athlones pose in classic style, and Earle and Melville sing, dance, and patter acceptably; McCann's Irish terriers are cleverly trained. Will Letters has met with his customary success in song and story.

ALHAMBRA PALACE. — General-Manager, Alderman John Gardner.—The Pichel family of acrobats are new to Morecambe audiences, but they are a remarkably good turn. Another big item in the programme is the Daunton Shaw Troupe of Australian trick cyclists, whose dresses are very captivating; Ruby Dahl has a capital mannikin show, and sings pleasantly. Sibbon's Circus is always good, and the animals are well trained, especially the black cat. Little Tim is the comedian this week, and Jack Rae is a most amusing tramp gymnast. Sandy and Carl are old and deserved favourites at this house. The Brontes are to be congratulated upon a really smart sketch, Saucy Maud.

CENTRAL PIER.—Manager, Mr. Emilius Hill.—The Lizzette troupe of lady acrobats have created a most favourable impression here, and their work is certainly excellent. The Five Cumberlands have an up-to-date trick and acrobatic cycle act, which is loudly applauded. The Sisters Brooke are good singers and nice dancers, and Elsie Rubina does some good work on the wire. Ariel and Astarte have an effective pot-pourri in the gymnastic line, and Bonnetti and Corrie are smart eccentric jugglers. Harry Evans has a good tenor voice and Ben Holdsworth mimics merrily. The Wedburns have proved a popular turn with joke and music.

WEST END PIER.—Secretary, Mr. John Baslow.—Herr Wilhelm Morgann's Blue Hungarian Band are retained here for the season, and delight large audiences daily. During the week Miss Nellie Ganthony has entertained in her inimitable way, and Capt. Slingsby has been doing excellent ventriloquial business. The principal vocalists have been Mme. Ambler and Mr. Fowler Burton. Last night (Friday) Mischa Elman, the wonderful young Russian violinist, made a first appearance in Morecambe, and the vocalists were Miss May Peters and Mr. Burton.

NEW BRIGHTON.—TOWER VARIETY THEATRE.—An attractive programme includes Miss Florence Hill, vocalist and dancer; Clem Lisbon, a clever and original comedian; Miss Bertha Duckett, juvenile comedienne and dancer; the Miltons, a skilful and amusing pair of Canadian skaters; the Sisters Bronson, duettists and dancers; Charles Vandyke and company, comedians and pantomimists, in their screaming absurdity Nicodemus; and the latest animated pictures by the Towerscope.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.—PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. T. W. Rowe; Business-Manager, Mr. E. B. Clark.—The engagement of Mr. Charles March and company in the drama, entitled The Gamester of Metz has proved a popular attraction here this week. As Paul Baldot, Mr. March proves his canabilities in no half-hearted manner, and his quick-change business, a la Biondi, is deserving of every praise; Mr. John B. Murray realises to a nicety the part of Captain Badaire; Mr. Fred Aldworth is satisfactorily placed as General de Monparasse; and both Mr. George Paget as Lieut. Hevre and Mr. W. G. Dudeney as Louis Badaire, create favourable impressions. Miss Una Lane looks particularly charming as Lucie Baldot, and delivers her lines with rare expression. Miss Eva Lyndhurst assumes the small part of Countess Baldot with success, and the comedy element is in the hands of Miss Cissy Haighton as Gwendoline Pearson and Mr. Montagu Corri as Goliarth Gron.

GRAND THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Sidney Bacon.—Miss Emma Litchfield and company are appearing here this week in the drama, entitled A London Actress. As Hilda Mannering, an adventuress, Miss Litchfield does excellent work; Mr. Smart Cleveland gives an able rendition as Clive Crawford; and Mr. Richard Vane effectively portrays the rôle of Lieut. Kingstone. Two jovial comedians—Mr. George H. Doyle as Moses and Mr. Charles A. Preece as Pat Maloney—keep the fun going merrily. Miss Maud Steeples presents with much charm the part of Phyllis Crawford.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Leslie Conroy.—We had expected Mr. Wilkie Bard here this week, but the popular comedian is not on the programme. However, a capital bill is being submitted, headed by a new-comer, one Raku, whose exhibition as a ju-jitsu wrestler is about the cleverest and most instructive we have yet seen. Carrie Laurie's kindergarten is always a pleasing sort of entertainment, and the various youngsters disport themselves with credit; Herman Melot has lost none of his deftness in the art of conjuring; Marie Reeve, dainty and charming as ever, warbles a plaintive rag-time melody, and concludes with a neatly-executed dance. As a ballad vocalist, Ada Courtney pleases immensely; the Die Obersteirers (12 in number) blend their voices harmoniously in a number of Tyrolean songs; Harrigan and Holt, a merry couple, receive a goodly share of applause; Dot Hardy, in a character song, creates plenty of merriment; and Georgina Leonard is a favourite burlesque actress. The pictures on the Bioscope are of all-round excellence.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thos. Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Will H. Boardman.—George Gilbey is the shining star in this week's programme, and his songs and patter create much hilarity. A carnival scena is presented by Haley's Prize Juveniles, their act being greatly appreciated; Prince Kuroki, magician, is highly effective with some clever conjuring; Clarisse Henry and company submit a sketch of much excellence, entitled Counsel's Opinion; Rose Harvey returns with good songs; the Sisters Tinsley hit the popular taste in song and dance; Marie Wilton is a capable dancer; and a trio of clever artists are Harry Claff, baritone vocalist; Billy Williams, comedian; and Charles Denton, eccentric vocal comedian. A good picture, entitled "The Smuggler's Dogs," is depicted by the Barrascope.

NEWPORT.—LYCEUM.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Sidney Cooper.—The proceeds of the week's performances here are being generously given by Mr. Cooper in aid of the funds of the Bath and West Show, to be held in Newport in June next. Mr. Eade Montefiore's company in The Streets of London provides the pièce de résistance. The local Fire Brigade, under Lieut. Lyne, gives an interesting display of saving life from fire in the principal scene. Mr. Wm. Rokeby makes quite an interesting character-study of the part of Badger; the villainy of Gideon Bloodgood is well portrayed by Mr. Riddell Robinson; Mr. John Richter is dignified in his treatment of Mark Livingstone; as Paul Fairweather, Mr. Ian Lloyd Mackenzie does well; there is a breeziness about the humour of Mr. Clifford Bower as Mr. Jonas Puppy; and the comedy element is assisted by Miss Violet Vivian, who makes a matronly Mrs. Puppy. Miss Marion Armitage is a lively Dan Puppy; Miss E. Goodall evokes sympathy as Lucy Fairweather; and Miss M. Kynnersley in the part of Alida Bloodgood is most effective.

EMPIRE.—Moss' Empire, Ltd.—Managing-Director, Mr. O. Stoll.—Miss Hettie King is the principal turn here this week. Pat Rafferty, with his Irish songs; Conway and Leland, intensely amusing one-legged artists; Harry Carsdale, farmyard mimic; Spry and Austin, who receive hearty applause; Atroy, with manipulation of the hoops and a juggling performance; Violi, lady instrumentalist; Ambrose Thorne, with a couple of good songs; and the Bioscope are other attractions.

NORTH SHIELDS.—CENTRAL PALACE—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—The Herald Comedy Four, vocalists and dancers, are the principal attraction here this week, and have come in for a hearty reception; Messrs. Hess and Lisbon, in their grotesque speciality act, are greatly liked; and Messrs. Horton and Linder, in their Chinese comedy three bar act, are clever; Mr. T. W. Royal, comedian and clog dancer, is loyally applauded; Miss Kitty Lavigne is a pleasing comedienne and dancer; the Two Crawlies, the comedy couple, are funny; and the Biophotoscope is still a prominent feature.

BOROUGH THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Arthur Jefferson.—U.S.A. and Greater Britain's Animated Photo Company is located here this week, and the enjoyable entertainment provided has attracted appreciative audiences.

NORTHWICH. — PIERROT PAVILION.—Proprietors, the Royal Pierrots Company.—Mr. Bert H. Delmar's "Comets" have been providing the programme this week. Miss Florence Elliott, the possessor of a rich-toned soprano voice, sings in a cultured style; Miss Madge Jerome is a clever dancer; and other items on the programme are given by Mr. Charles Cardle, coon singer; Mr. Arthur Stafford, pianist; and Mr. Delmar, with songs and stories.

NORWICH.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Manager, Mr. Fred Morgan.—On Monday and Tuesday evenings a company of well-known amateurs, led by the Hon. Mrs. Ailwyn Fellowes, gave an excellent representation of Mr. Leo Trevor's clever comedy Brother Officers, for the benefit of the Norfolk County Cricket Association.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. F. W. Fitt.—Some good items appear in the bill this week, the chief being Ben Hur, who displays immense muscular powers; May Edouin and Fred Edwards give their charming sketch, entitled The Bachelor's Dream; Mary Glen receives a hearty welcome as a vocalist; whilst Maud Vera, vocalist and coon artist, is much appreciated; Henderson, the blind musician, gives a clever musical turn; and Vasey and Ramsay, eccentric comedy dancers, are very successful; Harold Hughman, American mimic, is a good turn; and Ernest French is a favourite comedian. The Hippo Bio show some interesting pictures of the tour of the Prince and Princess of Wales in India.

NOTTINGHAM.—EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles H. Bowmaker.—Crowded houses here intently watch and applaud the invincible Hackenschmidt in his various wrestling bouts; a musical comedy, entitled The Prince of Monte Carlo, is amusingly played by Harry Roxbury and company to the delight of audiences; Rose Nayon's large troupe of tropical birds forms a pretty picture on the stage; Alix Lukos calls for high praise in his interesting scena Pictures in the Fire; and the musical item on silver handbells by Will Cornish evokes well-deserved recognition; novel acrobatic feats by Pit and Cute add to the merriment; and the Four Figaros dance and sing with animation. Nancy St. John gives an acceptable song, and a volatile singer is heard in Flo D'Orville.

OLDHAM.—ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. E. Dottridge; Assistant-Manager, Mr. W. Howgate.—Dou Ban, "The Mechanical Head," tops the bill this week, and provides a wonderful turn. Mlle. Von Etta, "an indescribable mystery," here for the first time, gives an excellent performance in the Palace of Electricity; the Kyasyas, with their teeth and hirsute novelty, also take well; the Three Whirligigs, in Fun in a Kitchen, provide good singing and dancing; Nina Gordon is a capital mimic; and Minnie Fenton is a good vocalist. Charles E. Ernest is a capital instrumental mimic, creating roars of laughter; and George Edney, character vocalist, has a good reception.

PLYMOUTH.—PALACE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Manager, Mr. Jock Field.—The principal item, the Globe of Life, is a turn of a daring and highly sensational nature, the artists, Irene Stone and Wizard Stone, riding cycles at break-neck speed at all-angles round a huge iron cage, and culminating with looping-the-loop; Josh Dixon has a fine reception and well deserves a front place in the low comedy business; the Two Neros furnish some weird contortionist business, which is now comparatively rare; Onda and Artell have an acceptable acrobatic act; and Frank Bertram and Co. raise hearty laughter in the sketch The Chaperon, which recalls memories of Charley's Aunt. Others contributing are Fred Maxwell and company in a melodramatic act, Crissie Cross, Fred Collins, and Vernon's pictures.

GRAND THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. C. F. Williams; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy Williams; Assistant-Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Langdon Lee.—In the present state of Russian affairs Siberia naturally forms a strong attraction at the Grand. Mr. Edward Lloyd appears able to adapt himself to any rôle, and distinguished himself as Nicholai Neigoff; Mr. Henry Compton as the Governor General acted with becoming martial bearing; while Zara, the heroine, could have had no better exponent than Miss Ethel Kay.

PROMENADE PIER AND PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. J. Higson.—The Æolian Concert Party, which formed a great draw last season, have lost none of their attractiveness. Mr.

that the management have retained her services for another week. Zetta Grey and company appear in their original comedy act, A Lancashire Lass. Smiler Lee, comedian; Ada B. Kingsley, coloured coon impersonator; H. Vowson, illusionist; and G. W. Nicholson, comedian, all contribute good turns.

PIER PAVILION.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton; Manager, Mr. Jack Macdermott.—The popularity of this place of amusement was evidenced by the crowded audience which patronised the performance on Monday evening. Barney Stuart is a great favourite; his comic songs and patter, and his appearance among the audience as a Woman Suffragette, cause much fun. Kennedy Allen's amusing songs and stories win appreciation; Little Jennie Hartley evokes great enthusiasm by the delightful manner in which she renders her songs; Clifford Morgan's rich baritone voice is heard to advantage in Leslie Stuart's "Rip Van Winkle"; Jack Macdermott has established himself as a popular favourite; and Forshaw Kershaw, pianist, and a clever elocutionist, completes the bill.

E. H. WILLIAMS'S MERRIE MEN.—The weather has been most favourable for outdoor amusements, and the performances on the beach have in consequence been largely attended. New songs and sketches are constantly introduced.

ROCHDALE.—EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves.—Wild, Willie, and West top the bill here with a clever and laughable acrobatic scene, The Bounding Boys; the Three Rubys are graceful and pleasing lady acrobats; Mollie Woolstenhulme submits some well-rendered songs; Angeline is a clever lady juggler, dancing and juggling at the same time; Harry Zetter and Percy Johnson are amusing comedians; the Empire Bioscope completes a capital programme with some up-to-date pictures.

ROCK FERRY.—OLYMPIAN GARDENS.—Lessees, Messrs. Adeler and Sutton.—The popularity of the pierrot entertainments provided by the Adeler-Sutton management continues unabated, and the audiences are large and appreciative. This week, Wee Mona, the clever child actress and vocalist, is at the top of the bill; Mr. Marriott Edgar, who comes of an old and talented histrionic family, as his name suggests, has all the ability to ensure success; Mr. Maynard Dakin unites the rôle of manager to that of humorist, and is eminently successful in both characters; Mr. Austin Mahony's sweet tenor voice in popular numbers, and Miss Emily Tait, an established favourite, are among the principal turns of this week's programme.

ROTHERHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Managing-Director, Mr. Holbery Hardy.—Mr. F. B. Woulfe and Miss Ethel Griffies and company are here with Lady Godiva. Miss Griffies gives a highly-finished portrayal of the title-rôle; Miss Katherine Brook is pleasing as Lady Aldyth; and Elfrida is a sprightly part in the hands of Miss Edith Loraine. Mr. W. Howard Barlow gives a careful rendering of Leofric; Mr. James Duncan is deserving of approbation in the part of Algar; and he is ably seconded by Mr. Ernest Hamilton as Unwolf Unwolfson. Mr. Bob Anderson is amusing as Robin Shakleton; and Mr. Leslie Lingham deserves commendation as Edgar. Tom of Coventry is well portrayed by Mr. F. B. Woulfe.

RYDE.—PIER PAVILION.—Lessee, Mr. J. Herbert Jay; Manager, Mr. F. T. Studd.—The three-day visit of that popular handcuff manipulator, Wishart, has been productive of an interesting entertainment. Large audiences were pleasantly mystified by his varied achievements, among which his double-trunk act met with gratifying success. The Grosvenor Ladies' Orchestra have performed twice daily on the pier in conjunction with the Pavilion management.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden. — The Conscript with its many exciting incidents is forming an excellent attraction. Mr. Harry Cullenford is a fine hero, Karl Truevitch; and another manly fellow is Ivan Manloff, in the capable hands of Mr. W. Steele; Miss Violet Carlyle makes an excellent Nadia Truevitch; Count Paul Hardiski is a good representative of Russian officialdom as portrayed by Mr. Charles E. Johnson; Mr. Tom Breen as Tretch Trotoff, and Miss Connie Meadows as Wanda, give much pleasure by their singing and dancing; Doggervitch and Maxim Fedka are two good character sketches well played respectively by Mr. E. Lowrie and Mr. F. H. Bellwood.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson.—Mike S. Whallen keeps the house in roars with his smart tales and sayings, and also his extempore songs; some clever mimicry of well-known comedians obtains for Violet Morgan much applause. The other turns, which are all of excellent quality, include Queenie West, vocal comedienne; Johnny Walker, comedian; the Solari Duo, vocalists and instrumentals; Goodfellow and Gregson, smart patterers, duettists, and dancers; W. Salmon, trick cyclist; Fred Cullane's Comedy Trio, in the Ladies' School; and Johnson and Pelham (Kidd and Marie), in their "Golf Match."

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy B. Broadhead; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Wentworth.—Schiavoni's Troupe of clever acrobats head the bill and have a good reception. A most amusing picture of country courtship in Scotland is well presented by Lambert and Robertson (Florence and Robert); Dezmonti and Mora give a very smart triple bar performance; some excellent items are also provided by the Errolls, in their clever tumbling act; Tom Kelso and Co., in their comedy sketch, The Silly Servant; Lily Vane, comedienne; Hector and Sultan (Chas. and Will), in their comic acrobatic performance; and Wallace Muirhead, tenor vocalist.

SALISBURY.—COUNTY HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. A. Whitehead; Business Manager, Mr. T. Brinsmead.—On the 20th and 21st His Excellency the Governor was presented here by a good company. Mr. Malcolm Cherry gave a fine impersonation of His Excellency; as John Baverstock, Mr. Lionel Mackinder deserves special praise for the delightful manner in which he handled the part; Mr. H. Marsh Allen was a smart and dashing Capt. Charles Carew; as Henry Carlton, Mr. D. J. Williams was very good; Miss Jean Aylwyn as Stella de Gex won general commendation; Miss Isabel Grey did justice to the part of Mrs. Wentworth-Bolingbroke; Miss Valerie Salberg was a pretty Ethel Carlton, and played the part in an easy and refined manner. The play was preceded by an amusing one-act piece, A Waste of Time.

VICTORIA PARK.—Director of Entertainments, Mr. F. D'Alton Tibby; Manageress, Miss Jessie D'Alton.—Several changes have this week been made in the programme, which is well received nightly by large audiences; Miss Beattie Witham in a budget of new songs, &c., still maintains her popularity; Miss Ramsdale's bright manner in singing and dancing is very pleasing; Mr. Skidmore keeps the ball rolling merrily with his jokes and comic songs; Mr. William Dyar's songs are also highly appreciated; Miss Sylva Mortlake, at the piano, contributes several pleasing solos. This week a good selection of animated pictures concludes the programme.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. A. C. Harrison.—This house was re-opened for the season on Monday, after being thoroughly cleaned and painted. Defending his Honour was presented by Mr. Fred Granville's company. Douglas Bryce is manfully played by Mr. Fred W. Goddard; the villainy of Stephen Graid is vividly shown by Mr. Carthage Caldcleugh (the General-Manager of the company); Mr. Haughton Macaulay does well as Dick Verison; the Irish part of Jack Damish is cleverly drawn by Mr. Evan Roland; Ethel Bryce is delightfully played by Miss Chrissie Dunbar, as Mrs. Verison; Miss Amy Wood is diverting; a vivacious Trixie is found in Miss Ida Mackay; Miss Sybil Haughton is a satisfactory Nurse Sinclair; and as Harry, Miss Amy Manfree does well.

SHEFFIELD.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr. W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—Clean and bright after its annual "doing-up," and well filled with a delighted audience, the spacious interior of the Alexandra presented an exhilarating picture on Monday, when Mr. James Stillwell and his company opened in The King's Secret. Mr. Stillwell submitted a faithful portrait of a modern type of the British naval officer as Captain Fairbairn; Mr. Herbert Bentone's Count von Bernstein was an interesting impersonation; and Arab Hassam was well depicted by Mr. Edward Fryer. Miss Zana St. George made a picturesque and dramatic representative of the beautiful Zanona; Miss Katherine Burnett was a pleasing Lelia; and good comic relief was afforded by the doings of Mr. Paul E. Teulon as the jovial sailor Jack Deadeye; Mr. Robert Earl as Jonathan Newark; and Miss Lattridge as Birdie. The drama was effectively staged. On Thursday the thrilling drama of intrigue, plot, and passion, The Branded Woman, was played.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Proprietors, The Moss' Empires Co., Ltd.; Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—As usual, two big audiences gave a cordial greeting on Monday to the following talented and popular artists: Mr. Ernest Shand, the favourite comedian, who kept his many admirers thoroughly amused by his smart patter, mimicry, and comic vocalism; Mr. Will English, in well-rendered coon ditties; the Mackweys, in a mirth-provoking wire act; Roberts, Hayes, and Roberts, droll American entertainers, in a diverting comedy act; Lord, Murray, and Lord, in a mirthful, and agile display; Miss Esta Stella, an artist full of vim, grace, and refined vivacity; Binns and Binns, two artists who combine instrumentalism with clean buffoonery; "Pilu," the extraordinary canine thought-reader; and that old favourite, Mr. Tom Wootlwell, the successful burlesque actor, dancer, and inventor of funny gags.

GRAND PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. G. H. Beagle.—Miss Carlotta de Yonson and her company are appearing this week in The Russian Spy; and also engaged are the Sisters Daventry, duettists; Mr. Frank Cumminger, the expert sand-dancer; Mr. Harry Royde, comedian; Miss Jessie Watson, serio comic vocalist; and Mr. Percy Curry, Yorkshire comedian.

CENTRAL HALL.—In addition to the animated pictures, the programme is contributed to by Miss Rosa Graham, Mr. Tom Moore, and Mr. Horace Morton.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA. — EMPIRE THEATRE. — Owners, Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Conquest; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—Leah Kleschna is being presented here by Mr. Thomas Sidney. Mr. Paul Rhodes cleverly depicts Paul Sylvaine; as Kleschna Mr. Thomas Sidney gives a really clever impersonation, being well supported by Mr. Christmas Grose as Schram; Mr. Gerald H. Hiller is good as General Berton, and Raoul is well taken by Mr. Edgar Kent. Mr. H. Allistoun Samson and Miss Dorothy Sidney are pleasing as Valentine Favre and Sophie Chaponniere respectively; Miss Aimee de Burgh, who looks exceedingly nice in her costly and beautiful dresses, is a noteworthy and capable exponent of Leah, winning golden opinions.

THE KURSAAL.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. P. T. J. Bacon.—The most popular item in the theatre here is perhaps the one given by the Four Watsons, their comedy and musical act being excellent; the Mayvilles, who have been retained, please wonderfully with their marionettes; Godfrey Carnell is good in his dramatic monologues; Iris Rae, a pretty dancer, also sings well; Johnny Thompson is an eccentric comedian and dancer; the Two Carrs are delightful in their act, entitled My Beat of Love; and to Jenny Venton, American soubrette and dancer, a good reception is given. The Bioscope has a complete change of interesting pictures. The Kursaal Koncert Kompany gives excellent entertainments in the Café Chantant, and Lorenzo's Miniature Circus performs successfully in the Hippodrome.

PIER PAVILION.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. E. Angless; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—A first-class entertainment is being given here this week in the production of the famous comedy, Our Boys. The well-known and popular comedian, Mr. Charles Otley, in his interpretation of Perkyn Middlewick, creates hearty laughter; Mr. Stephen T. Ewart is quite successful as Sir Geoffrey Champneys; Messrs. Arthur Eldred and Herbert Robinson as Talbot Champneys and Charles Middlewick respectively are decidedly good; Miss Olive Palmer as Violet Melrose, Miss Edith Heron Brown as Mary Melrose, and Miss Phyllis Manners as Clarissa Champneys, in their respective parts, give excellent portrayals. Miss Marie Jonquil is responsible for a humorous interpretation of Belinda.

ALFRESCO THEATRE OF VARIETIES, ROYAL TERRACE.—Sole Lessee, Mr. H. E. Angless.—This new place of amusement provides capital programmes, drawing immense crowds at intervals during the day. The Bijou Orchestra, led by Mr. H. Lyme, is an attraction in itself, and Mr. Charles Ellis, an old local favourite, has been engaged for the remainder of the season. Professor Vincent, the well-known illusionist, has charge of these entertainments.

PIER HILL BANDSTAND.—Sole Lessee, Mr. H. E. Angless.—Mr. Ballard Brown is to be congratulated on the all-round excellence of the entertainments that he presents three times daily, when vast crowds are not lacking in their appreciation.

"THE HAPPY VALLEY."—Chirgwin's Concert Party is attracting huge crowds to this ideal "pitch" both afternoons and evenings, and latterly seats have been at a premium. The "stock company," Miss Beatrice Varley, Messrs. Charles Wood, Harry Rose, Bert Dansie, Charles Osborne, and Frank Harris, are all strong favourites, and "I'll meet you at the valley" has become a popular catchword in the town. Mr. Chirgwin may be congratulated on a big success at a charming "pitch" with a brilliant company, under the able management of Charlie Osborne.

SOUTHPORT. — OPERA HOUSE, WINTER GARDENS.—Proprietors, the Southport Opera House and Winter Gardens Company, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Alfred Hemming.—After being closed for the summer vacation since the 11th ultimo, the Opera House was re-opened for the season on Monday, when Mr. Silvanus Dauncey and Mr. M. V. Leveaux presented Mr. Arthur Bourchier's capable company in The Walls of Jerico. The principal rôle of Jack Frobisher was impersonated by Mr. Herbert Brunston with a vigour and manliness eminently suited to the character, the impassioned denunciation of the "Smart Set" being given with power and effect; Miss Florence Jackson was very successful in the rôle of Lady Alethea, playing with charming abandon and pathos; Lady Lucy Derenham had a vivacious and clever representative in Miss Molly Carton; Mr. Cyril Baleine submitted a capital study of the fussy aristocrat, the Marquis of Steventon; Miss Lydia Busch effectively portrayed the character of the sympathetic Lady Westerby; Mr. George Brandram was sufficiently brusque as the Queensland gold-digger, Hankey Bannister; Mr. Sydney Hamilton did justice to the part of Harry Dallas; and the remaining characters were ably represented.

ALBERT HALL, WINTER GARDENS.—Lessee, Mrs. Charles Parker; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. H. Meritz.—One of the principal items in the attractive variety programme presented here this week is supplied by the Seener-Fredkin troupe of Imperial Russian dancers, with a remarkably clever performance; another prominent turn is contributed by Mr. Jack Lorimer, the Scotch comedian and dancer; and other turns include Mamie Iris, comedienne and dancer; Gravetta and Parr, in their Pot-Pourri act; the Bohemians, musical and comedy act; Tennyson and Wallis, comedians; Fancourt and Ruby, sketch artists; Fred Russell, ventriloquial humourist; and a Bioscopic representation of the Spanish Royal wedding, followed by a graphic scene of a Spanish bull fight.

PIER PAVILION. — Proprietors, The Southport Pier Co.; Manager, Mr. Charles F. Johnson.—The bill here is headed this week by James De Voye's educated horse "Billy," with some extraordinary tricks. Other turns include Lottie D'Abbey, soprano vocalist; Vardon, ventriloquist; Mack Ollive, assisted by Miss Daisy Baldry, in his original whistling scena, entitled The Candy Store; the Sisters Eileen and Maynie, instrumentalists and expert dancers; Will Daniels, eccentric comedian; Harry Marlow and May Manton, in their amusing sketch, entitled Other People's Babies"; Conan and Doyle, patter comedians; and the Bio-tableaux.

HIPPODROME, LORD-STREET. — Notwithstanding the counter attractions and adverse climatic conditions, the Royal Italian Circus, which comes direct from Hengler's Cirque, London, opened here on Monday evening to a packed house. The amazing and unique performance of the various highly-trained animals was witnessed with keen interest and pleasure, whilst the humour and merriment of the entertainment had capital representatives in Nip and Wee Wullie, Piccolo, and Fiori.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensees and Managers, Messrs. J. and F. Coulson.—The Days of Cromwell is drawing good houses here. Mr. Henry Belding as Ironhand makes the part stand out by his easy, natural, and forceful acting. Mr. George Milser as the Protector gives a creditable portrayal; the comedy element is supplied by Miss Annie Clunn, Mr. Harry C. Mourber, Mr. John Melton, and Mr. Arthur Mewburn. Miss Gertrude Gilman enacts Ruby Avondale in a charming manner, and Miss Cecilia Crawford is good as Mistress Judith Shadwell.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Thompson.—The place of honour here is occupied by the Poluski Bros., whose never-failing humour meets with well merited applause. The Norman Leonard trio in The Itinerant Musician render a capital musical entertainment; Les Valdos, comedy acrobats, extract fun from their turn; and the whistling of Fred Mason is creditable; the singing of Vi Raynor, comedienne and dancer, is greatly appreciated; and other welcome turns are Brown and Robinson, harmonious vocalists; Lottie Govell, comedienne and dancer; and the Bioscope with interesting films.

TIVOLI. — Lessees and Managers, Councillor J. K. Hall and Mr. Joseph Sweeney.—An ovation is accorded to Mons. Persov, who proves to be an exceptionally clever mimic and necromancer; Gipsy Bard, coon artist and dancer, is a strong favourite; Maggie Dilston, ballad vocalist, sings well; the universal living pictures are still a draw, and the popular "Go-as-you-please" competition is retained another week.

STALYBRIDGE.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Mundill; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Dunford Oswald.—This place was re-opened on Saturday evening, having been cleaned and renovated during the recess. A capital company of variety artists is entertaining. Prince Fee Lung, assisted by Wha Sing Ging and Lee Chung, gives an astonishing Chinese illusory performance; the Sisters Belmore are dainty comedy artists and dancers; Aldro Lukos is good on the swinging perch; Fred Alberto is a quaint patterer and dancer; the Berlin Belles, a trio of burlesque artists, are clever; the Paulo Bros. in their acrobatics introduce a speciality act, "A Scotchman's Dilemma in Hyde Park"; and Miss Janet Swinburne, the lady baritone; Daisy Pearl, vocalist; the Coopers, musical specialists; and Rosie Stuart, soprano, add their share to the attractions of a good programme.

ST. HELENS. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Will Sley, and Fred Wilmott; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. V. Carnell.—A programme of unusual excellence is being submitted here this week. The premier position in the bill is occupied by the Three Schaffers, aptly described as "Herculean Gladiatorial wonders." Smith and Johnson, the society coloured duo, are clever, as are Winona and King in a speciality act; Will Llytton, swell comedian, and Frank Coyle, comedian, both tickle the audiences immensely with their comicalities; Henriette and Selina are well received as vocal and instrumental entertainers, and Mr. Percy M. Stevenson and company are seen to advantage in the dramatic sketch A False Friend. The Bioscope with new pictures is enjoyable.

STOCKPORT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. William Revill. The periodical visits here of Mr. E. Hoggan-Armadale and his capable company are invariably a source of much pleasure to the numerous habitués of Mr. Revill's theatre. Throughout the week a most gratifying reception has been accorded the distinguished actor, who in a repertoire of plays has in each portrayed the chief character in admirable style. On Tuesday night David Garrick formed the attraction, Mr. E. Hoggan-Armadale appearing in the title-rôle, his efforts being heartily appreciated; Mr. Arthur Rose gave an effective impersonation of Squire Overdon, and Joshua Bedford had a capable exponent in Mr. David Beattie; Mr. T. G. Westland as Mr. Hoskins, Mr. Cotton Holmes as Mr. Gamphire, and Mr. Fred Wilberforce as Mr. Peterkin gave excellent support, and as Laura Bedford Miss Georgina Wynter's impersonation was delightfully charming and graceful. On Wednesday The Vicar of Wakefield was given, preceded, for the first time on any stage, by a romantic episode in one act, entitled The Curse of the Cards, a notice of which appears in another column. On Thursday David Garrick was repeated, and on Friday The Lady of Lyons occupied the boards.

EMPIRE.—Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Black.—The Marvellous acrobatic feats of the Avolos, who head the bill this week, have been greeted with genuine applause by large audiences. Among others included in a varied programme are Luigo's Serenadas in a scena Venice by Night, their vocalism being pleasingly received; the Sisters Terry, duettists; Nellie Navette, comedienne, and Dorothy L. Clarke, comedienne, are successful; Mlle. Collard, with her burlesque animal-act, causes abundant amusement; Ziggins and Murlone are coloured American enteratiners of ability; Charles F. Best in his comedy-act; MacBunker, the mountebank, has made a hit, and Railus displays marked cleverness as a ball juggler.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—The well-known humourist Harry Liston opened here on Monday night, assisted by Miss Lord Lumley in highly amusing comedy duets.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.— GRAND. — Proprietor, Mr. John Batty; Manager, Mr. Walter Batty.—The attractive programme presented here this week includes Grant and Grant, American octoroon artists, and Chas. Fisher's Pocket Opera Co. in Maritana. A success is scored by the blind pianist and vocalist, Mons. Slippere, assisted by Miss Ramsay. Gintaro, Japanese juggler and top spinner, gives a clever show; and Harry Bancroft, the Labakans, and Emmie Ames are included in a good programme.

SUNDERLAND.—AVENUE THEATRE. — Director and Manager, Mr. Chas. E. Machin.—The eight weeks' successful stock season finishes here to-night. For the concluding week the bill has included The Octoroon, Caste, Our Boys, and East Lynne, and a grand benefit was given on Wednesday to the stage-manager, Mr. Chas. M. Daly, who arranged a big variety programme, containing no fewer than forty-two turns. The artists included W. S. Hutchinson, ventriloquist; G. P. Lester, in a dramatic episode; Douglas Ettrick, solo pianist; Lawson A. Charles, comedian; Albert Sember, in The Progress of Madness; Dora Hilstrom, song and dance artist; Yardeni, local handcuff and box expert; Phil Falk, vocalist; Mabel Ettrick, solo mandolinist; the stock company in the one-act play, The Fairy of the Glen; Maurice Eyre, sleight of hand expert; Elton Bros., comedians; Bert Ferrell, Dutch and Swiss vocalist; Jack Cranston, comedian; Bros. Chelsea, sketch artists; and, from the Palace, Sunderland, Chas. Bignell, Alema Burton, Lilian Lowe, Albani, Joe Mac, and Keen and Waller. During an interval the prizes won on the Carnival Field on Wednesday afternoon were presented to the successful competitors.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. E. Machin; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hemingway.—Mr. Fred Jarman's Under the Czar company has proved acceptable fare for the habitues of this popular house. Mr. Jack Fortescue, as Nicholas Yeroslaff, the hero, plays with ability; Mr. W. H. Riley scores as Zakhar Kovesky, the unscrupulous Major; Mr. Lawrence Brien acts the rôle of Alexio Petroff; and Mr. R. Tarrant is responsible for that of Victor Kleff; Miss Francesca Strickland excites the sympathies of the audience by her pleasing and effective rendition of Tonia Gregorovitch; Mr. Gerald Smythe is successful as Capt. Johnson; as is also Mr. C. P. Amalia, as Count Yesseldorf.

PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Lessees and Managers, Messrs. Rosen and Bliss; Acting Managers, Messrs. Browne and Syd Stringer.—The chief position on the bill is this week held by Staley's Novelty Combination, in their quick-change from the forge to the drawing-room. Others appearing include Myra Yorman, contralto vocalist; Jack Mills, Scotch comedian; the Albano Troupe, in their high-class musical act; Alma Burton, comedienne and dancer; Joe Mac, comedian; Keen and Waller, acrobatic comedians; Charles Bignell, comedian; and Lilian Lowe, vocalist; concluding with the Bioscope pictures.

TON-Y-PANDY. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessees, Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth; General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth.—A sterling attraction is provided here this week by Mr. W. J. Miller and company in The Throne of Terror. As the incorruptible Robespierre Mr. Miller is excellent; Capt. Eugène de Lisle is ably undertaken by Mr. Roy Milton; Mr. Frank Fuller is well placed as the Comte de Roquefort; and Miss Katherine Maude Davies as Marguerite de Roquefort submits an admirable study.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth.—Messrs. Poole's Myriorama is here for the week, and proves as strong an attraction as ever. The variety turns interspersed are exceedingly good.

TORQUAY.—PRINCESS PIER CONCERT HALL.—Proprietors, the Torquay Town Council; Manager, Mr. A. T. Tremlett.—The Dandies are engaged here this week, and opened on Monday to an appreciative audience. Mr. Henry J. Corner, with a well-cultured voice, is heard to advantage in popular numbers; Miss Lucie Caine scores with lively songs, and Miss Queenie Essex introduces some clever step-dancing. Mr. Harry Russon, the humorist of the party, is well received, and Miss K. Augusta Davies is an efficient accompanist.

TYNEMOUTH.—PALACE-BY-THE-SEA AND WINTER GARDENS.—Proprietor, Mr. J. H. Graham; Manager, Mr. Lindon Travers.—The season here is now at its height, and exceptionally strong programmes are being submitted. The feature of this week's bill is Addie Dorina in her successful sketch, How It Was Done, in which some remarkably quick changes are made, and valuable assistance is rendered by Pat Waddock as Mr. Rich Greenlove. Carl Lynn creates quite a furore with his clever life-like animal mimicry. The Strads' musical sketch is clever as well as amusing. Helen Martin is a popular vocalist that is greatly in favour. The Grand Casino Orchestra still remains a feature. The Ringling Trio comedy and the Bioscope complete a well diversified entertainment.

WAKEFIELD. — HIPPODROME. — Lessee, Mr. Alfred Selwyn; Manager, Mr. Henry Lucas.—Miss Elias, with her well-trained troupe of performing lions, contributes a thrilling performance; Zavan, "the man on the lamp-post," is clever; the Carvers are a couple of smart top-boot dancers; Marie de Paso, lightning clay-modeller, proves popular; Salida and Vone, ragtime dancers, do well; La Belle Lily and Albert appear in a clever gymnastic act; the Two Wambas, in a musical comedy act, and Tom Melrose complete the programme.

WALSALL.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, The Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—Tina Clementa, with her horse and greyhounds, heads the list this week; Miss Florrie Gallimore sings in vivacious style several popular songs; J. W. Rickaby wins favour as a comedian; Lilian, the lady trick cyclist, is decidedly smart; the Bros. Harrison evoke mirth; Myra Stanfield is attractive as a burlesque artist; and the Kashma Brothers also add to the strength of the bill.

WALTHAMSTOW. — PALACE. — Managing-Director, Mr. G. Adney Payne; Manager, Mr. Arthur J. Barclay; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Slatter.—The six Bros. Luck form the main attraction at Walthamstow, where they are always sure of a cordial greeting. They appeared on this visit in The Hotel Grande, and kept the audience in high good humour. The Florodora Girls are three charming damsels, whose voices harmonise sweetly and who dance delightfully; W. H. Clemart is a ventriloquist much above the average, and he contrives to introduce a good deal of acceptable novelty; Sam Mayo's dry humour seemed to be quite to the liking of the audience; Lucy Weston, comedienne; the Gillette Trio, equilibrists; and Gladys Huxley, comedienne, all come in for a due share of recognition; Ruffell's Bioscope shows a very amusing film, depicting the mischief wrought by two boys and a dog. Despite the heat wave, the audiences seem to agree with Mr. A. J. Barclay that the Palace is about the coolest place in the town.

WARRINGTON. — ROYAL COURT. — Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; General Manager, Mr. J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr Fred J. Reece.—Mr. P. Howard Sturgess's company is here this week in the dramatic drama, A Queen of Villainy. In the title-rôle Miss Edith Blande shows all the remorseless nature associated with such a character as Cora Grenville; Stephen Faucit, her partner in crime, is well acted by Mr. Edward Heanley; a dignified impersonation of Sir John Desborough is furnished by Mr. Gordon Carnegie; Mr. Ernest C. Batley is a manly Alec; a clever sketch of Kit, a waif, is submitted by Mr. Laurence Stevenson; and two good character-sketches are those of Mr. Arthur E. Maskell as Reuben and Miss Amy Ross Clyde as Sally Chimes. Mr. P. Howard Sturgess is very amusing as Timothy Kodac, being ably assisted by Miss Jessie Crammonde as Mollie Maggs. Mr. Charles Stirling is well placed as Dick Leinster, and Miss Cecilia Desmond as Rose Delmayne acts charmingly.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; General-Manager, Mr. J. Potter; Director of Amusements, Mr. Fred Willmot.—The Alberto Troupe head the bill here this week, and their entertainment as head and hand balancers and wire equilibrists is one of the smartest seen here. Roden and Bell are talented duettists, and Edie Fodin is a charming comedienne; Ernie Myers is up to date with his patters songs, and Lambert and Hands win approval with their duets. Lily Lonsdale has a good soprano voice, and the Bioscope pictures make up a good programme.

WEST BROMWICH.—HIPPODROME AND THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. P. Moore.—This is the seventh week of continued success of the Kennedy's Komiks at this house. The programme includes Mr. Charles Bayham, known as "Charlie," who had a well-earned benefit on Friday; a welcome return is given by Sands and Vincent, who improve on acquaintance; a good turn is submitted by Ellis and Liston, and the same may be said of the Vervains, Vincent and Verney, and Kino and Kirby.

WEST HARTLEPOOL. — PALACE. — Director General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten.—The excellent array of talent presented here is resulting in well-filled houses. Belrose and De Velin, speciality duettists and soloists, have visited many times, but upon no occasion has their reception been more flattering than now; the acrobatic comedy act by Adams and Ward provokes mirth and admiration, as also does the canine pantomime by Leo Lester's dogs. A pleasing entertainment is provided by Osborn and Brooks, the musical comedy duo; Fyne and Hurley, in a sketch The Coster and the Dude, keep the audience in one continual roar of laughter. The dancing of Lily Gaston is excellent; and illustrated songs by E. O. Fitzgerald have a good reception. Some amusing films are shown on Raymond's Bioscope.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — GRAND PIER PAVILION.—Mr. John Ridding's opera company is paying its fourth visit here this week, and on Monday delighted an exceptionally large and enthusiastic audience by presenting Balfe's evergreen opera, The Bohemian Girl. The interpretation of Count Arnheim proved Mr. John Ridding to be an artist to the finger-tips. Mr. Fred Clendon made quite a hit as Devilshoof; Thaddeus provide Mr. Charles le Sueur with plenty of scope for the use of his rich tenor voice; and Mr. Arthur Fisher made an excellent Captain of the Guard. Miss Kitty Brownless gave an impersonation of Arline that was replete with artistic touches; and Miss Knightley's Queen of the Gipsies was entitled to the highest eulogy. Faust, Maritana, Old Knockles, and The Daughter of the Regiment were staged during the week.

WORTHING. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Manager, Herr C. Adolf Seebold.—Mr. Lionel Rignold and Miss Ada Blanche's company are doing good business here with What the Butler Saw. Mr. Chas. Fawcett is excellent as Jack Barrington, as is Mr. Reddick Anderson as Sir Charles Foden; Mr. P. Williams typically enacts the part of Dr. Clayton. Too much praise cannot possibly be given to Mr. Lionel Rignold as Pink, the Butler, who is the life and soul of the piece. Miss Ada Blanche is exceptionally excellent as Mrs. Barrington. On Thursday Miss Blanche St. Albans and Mr. J. Leicester Jackson's company appeared in Her One Great Sin.

WREXHAM.—EMPIRE MUSIC HALL.—Proprietor, Mr. J. J. Scott; Manager, Mr. Herbert Nicholls.—This week a good company is entertaining the patrons here. Mr. Oliver Conroy, eccentric, provides a good turn; Mr. Charles Coll, vocal comedian, is good; Poole and Poole, comedy couple, are most attractive; Miss Florrie Brooklyn is smart in singing and dancing, and Mr. James Lowrey, the singing furnaceman, is a further attraction. The pictures continue to be well selected.

MR. FRANK E. BURDETT'S company is paying a return visit to the Hippodrome, Wigan, in the military play The Indian Mutiny, which is well staged. Mr. Geo. Steele sustains the part of Lieutenant Manley with dignity; Mr. Cyril Harrison impersonates Captain Manley; and the rôle of Major Ingleby is capably presented by Mr. J. Davidson. Terry O'Brien has a humorous exponent in Mr. George Cully, and Miss Lillie Grey ably plays the parts of Mrs. Major Ingleby and Kate Ingleby, mother and daughter. The chief Hindoo characters are impersonated by Mr. Villiers Stanley (as the leader of the rebels), Mr. Chas. Boult (Ra Goonga, a Brahmin), and Miss F. Melrose Millett (as Ghuz-hah, a Brahmin priestess).

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

SYDNEY, JUNE 19, 1906.—The Little Michus, presented by Mr. J. C. Williamson's Royal Comic Opera Company at Her Majesty's, is attracting full houses. A leading member of the company, Miss Margaret Thomas, who, coming here as the contralto of the Parkinson concerts, was "discovered" by Mr. Williamson, is about to marry Mr. Alexander Gordon, a King's Counsel.

MR. BLAND HOLT continues to do well with excellent representations of For England. A strong company, which includes the evergreen actor-manager and his winsome wife, gains favour amid surroundings where every possible attention is paid to detail.

"THE MAN FROM MEXICO" will cease to make folks laugh at the Criterion after to-morrow night, when Messrs. Willoughby and Ward close their present season. This was the theatre which the late Premier of New Zealand, the Right Honourable Richard Seddon, attended the night before his sudden death. After the performance, he invited Miss Grace Palotta, Mr. Hugh J. Ward, and Mr. George Willoughby to supper with him and Mrs. Seddon at Paris House, so that these artists were the last to see him before he went on board the steamer. He was then, apparently, in good health and spirits.

THE TIVOLI has an important accession in a boy comedian, Little Cliff. His kettle-drumming is excellent, and altogether he took the Tivoli patrons accustomed to "good things," quite by surprise. Another excellent "turn" is that of Miss Lillieth Leyton and Mr. Harry Kendal, whose sketch, The Order of the Bath, is daintily amusing.

MELBOURNE, JUNE 18.—PRINCESS'S THEATRE (under the direction of Herbert Flemming).—Barrie's charming comedy, Little Mary, was repeated on Saturday evening, and, despite unfavourable weather, the theatre was well filled in all parts. Little Mary will only be played for one more night, The Village Priest being billed for to-morrow evening, while Wednesday and Thursday (the last nights of the season) will see a revival of the charming play, Quality Street. The Brough-Flemming season has been a most successful one, and Melbourne playgoers will be sorry to say good-bye to the popular and clever combination. Next Saturday evening the Ward-Willoughby company will produce the farce-comedy, The Man from Mexico, which has recently concluded a successful season in Sydney.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson; Business Manager, Mr. George Tallis.—After a successful run, The Dictator was withdrawn on Friday evening in favour of On the Quiet, which was produced for the first time on Saturday evening. The piece scored an instantaneous success, and bids fair to run to the end of the season. Mr. William Collier as Robert Ridgway was the life of the play, while Miss Mabel Taliaferro lent him able support in the character of Agnes Colt. As the Duke of Carbondale Mr. Grant Stewart became a prime favourite at once. Mr. Barrymore was excellent as Hyde Oglolls, and Mr. Wallace McCutcheon deserves a word of praise for his clever impersonation of the negro servant, the little bits of by play with his master being admirably done

(COPYRIGHT.)

In these columns it is proposed to give a strictly alphabetical arrangement of the titles of plays produced during the last fifty years. It will be the most complete list ever published, and should prove invaluable to authors desiring to discover whether a certain title has ever been used, and when. To members of the dramatic profession it will be useful in determining the dates of plays in which they have achieved successes. Our readers are politely requested to advise us of any omission or inaccuracy which they may notice.

This list as soon as complete will be published in cheap book form.

FUSSY LEGISLATION.

The foundation of all organised life is the family. The old materialistic economists taught the appalling fallacy that the true unit of society was the individual. For this heresy society is suffering almost irrecoverable loss. Some of the most beneficent movements for the betterment of the national life are tinged, and in many cases spoilt by the recrudescence of this old economic fallacy—the individualistic, as against the familistic theory of life. On all sides we begin to see a truer grasp of human relations and a higher conception of national responsibility, as evidenced in the growing care for the sacredness of family ties. It is no longer the individual who occupies the stage as the central object in the national drama, but the family. This consideration has been brought home to us very closely by certain problems that still embarrass and perplex educational experts; in fact, the greater the effort to make education a national care and charge, the more perplexing and complicated the problems become. Nearly all the greatest living educationists agree that it is beyond the power of man to carry out a uniform scheme of education that shall be with justice applicable to all the children in the land.

The very crux of the matter is to foster and develop parental responsibility and to meet its difficulties whenever they arise, with such State assistance as shall not, whilst it helps the child, destroy the parent's supreme responsibility. Of the urgency of this wide-reaching problem we have had in the past few years many striking illustrations, and we have seen how special or class legislation, whilst endeavouring to benefit the child, has only succeeded in inflicting loss and injury, and at the same time destroying the dignity and duty of the parents. We have had the sad exhibition of learned magistrates straining their powers to prevent the children of parents engaged in all branches of theatrical, variety, and show life pursuing the technical education so necessary for their avocation in life, and we have heard parents held up to opprobrium at the very time when they were doing their utmost to promote the best interests of their children.

We gave last week the full text of a new elementary education Bill brought before Parliament by a private member, and backed by some half-dozen well-known members of the House of Commons. The Bill proposes to secure the better protection of vagrant children.

It would be better termed a Bill to deprive children of their parents and to turn the State into a double-headed monstrosity, to father and mother the hapless children of the land. A more inept or impossible proposal it would be difficult to imagine. For the one admittedly grave social wrong—the condition of the criminal and tramp child it aimed at remedying—it created a dozen greater evils, and wrecked the very stability of domestic life by the destruction of parental responsibility. The Bill proposes to create an utterly new offnce, to make it criminal for a family to journey from town to town, and subjects to imprisonment parents so doing.

Consider how this new crime would stigmatise the travelling showmen and itinerant entertainers. Not only these, but the numerous class of traders and travelling craftsmen who earn an honest livelihood and bring up their families as creditably, to say the least, as the settled workers in town or country. It may be all very well to eliminate the wastrel, the criminal, and the confirmed tramp; but whilst you deal drastically with such decadent elements of our complex social life do not make a law that will prove a scourge to honest and God-fearing people who wish to do their duty to the dear little one committed to their charge. It is most unjust to stigmatise as vagrants the large and industrious body of people who follow the fair, and monstrous to assume that children at home with their parents need the protection of special legislation that they may obtain the blessing of elementary education. It is a gratuitous and insulting assumption that the children of van dwellers and travelling entertainers need special legislation.

We repudiate with all the vigour we possess the insinuation of neglect that lies at the root of all special legislation to compel the showman to surrender a parent's highest privilege to the State—the care and education of his children. All that the showman wants, or ever did want, is full access to the schools of the State, the full rights of citizenship, and a share in the educational advantages common to all.

The showman needs at times special facilities, and these are being more and abundantly provided by alterations in the education code; and he demands the inalienable right of citizenship, the protection of the law in the pursuit of an industry as old as the life of the nation.

We are glad to know that the Bill was blocked by friends of the travelling showmen in the House of Commons, and that its introduction again is impossible in the present session. We earnestly hope that its friends will recast it before it is again introduced, and that if it is the criminal and the tramp its author means to penalise, let it be clearly stated as such. The Bill has one definition of vagrancy, moving from place to place. It is absolutely all-embracing. No class in the community is free from its menace. If you travel you are within its possible powers. We have no hesitation in stigmatising the purpose and powers of the Bill as being the greatest invasion of the rights of parents ever attempted, and were such proposals to become the law of the land the children of the fair-ground would suffer the most terrible injury—separated from their parents, deprived, for no fault of their own, of the means of livelihood, driven by a cruel State foster-parent to forsake the freedom and the simple life of their forefathers, and condemned to swell the already overcrowded ranks of the sweated workers or the "out-of-works" in the towns.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—A certain evening contemporary stated in its columns the other day that the Royal College of Music was opened by his present Majesty the King (who was then Prince of Wales) on May 7, 1884. That is an entire error, as the opening of this famous institution took place on May 7, 1883. Perhaps I may be permitted to add that I have been connected with the Royal College of Music ever since the beginning of the year 1885, as one of the teachers of the pianoforte. Possibly I may resign my post in four years' time, when I shall have taught at the Royal College for a quarter of a century.—Believe me, very faithfully yours,

ALGERNON ASHTON.

"THE COUNTRY FAIR."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Many thanks for your kind notice of the Country Fair at the Botanic Gardens, Regent's Park, in which you kindly mentioned "the White Ladies' Orchestra, under the direction of Miss Lilian Berger, and the same lady and her company in The Merry Gitanas, assisted by Miss Nina Martini, who gave charming gipsy performances and dances."

Miss Lilian Behrens is the head of the company The Merry Gitanas and Miss Nina Brentani is the name of the dancer.—Yours faithfully,

IS MUSICAL COMEDY LEGITIMATE?

CHAT WITH MR. EDWARD LAURI.

(BY OUR OWN COMMISSIONER.)

"Australia is a splendid country for an actor to go to and learn his business."

That is the opinion of Mr. Edward Lauri, the well-known musical comedy eccentric character comedian, who has just returned to this country after a five years' active experience of Australasian theatrical affairs. "In this country," argues Mr. Lauri, "a man plays a certain kind of part—say an Arthur Roberts part. He gets known by playing that part, and is not afforded an opportunity of distinguishing himself in another style of business. Now in Australia the actor plays everything, and on the ground of acquiring versatility the training there is admirable."

"The Australian women," continues Mr. Lauri, "possess marvellous natural talent."

The writer recollected that several people he had interviewed recently had had something to say about Australia, and that colony had received a wonderful advertisement. So to a different theme.

"May I lead your thoughts into another groove, Mr. Lauri, by inquiring if you consider musical comedy is legitimate comedy?"

"Well," replies the interviewee, "the common talk of the 'legitimate' on our side of art is generally common claptrap. Drama and comedy are not fixed in style or intention, but change constantly to meet the changing requirements of the new generation that is with us every day. There are not several sorts of comedy. Comedy is one and indivisible. There are, I admit, quite a number of standard forms or manifestations of the comic spirit, but comedy is the thing common to the lot, the vivifying essence of them all. Anything that evolves naturally from antecedent forms is legitimate; and, viewed in the proper light, The Skirt Dancer, in so far as it is good and human, is as legitimate as Twelfth Night."

This objection to certain things in modern comedy as illegitimate is the commonest caw of every little crow that pecks at hard-working playwrights. and we agree with much of what Mr. Lauri says in this respect. It is not real reproach to musical comedy to say that at moments it approaches nearly to burlesque. Can it be said that in the most deliciously comic scene in Shakespeare Dogberry and Verges are not burlesque, and in another play is not the admirable Bottom as broad a burlesque of humanity as you shall find in all literature? Possibly it may be urged that the musical comedy of to-day is artistically defective in that it is disproportionately gay, too lavishly compact of laughter. To this we should be inclined to reply that, in plain fact, we moderns seem to be reverting to the old ideals; and, as pilgrims at the shrine, we kneel with Aristophanes, who has been some long time lonely.

If we were to dissert generally upon comedy, we might say that in the Elizabethan and Restoration comedies the truly comic element was slender. Of course, it has to be admitted that Marlowe's quips at times are artificial and even brutal. Nor, probably, could any man not criminally insane laugh at the bloody jests of Massinger or the fierce humour of Ford. As to Webster and Tourneur—well, imagine any clean human creature laughing at the deliberately comic graveyard scene between Snuffe and Soquette in The Atheist's Tragedy! Then in Jonsonian comedy, most notably in Volpone, the master's laughter rings terribly sardonic. Such plays are not in any sense truly comic, for satire is not always fun, and wit is not of necessity humour. In all our dramatic literature there is nothing else of its kind to equal the scintillating wit of Congreve, but Love For Love is scarcely funnier than The Second Mrs. Tanqueray.

"What do you intend doing over here, Mr. Lauri?"

"I am anxious to get some first-class attractions to take to Australia and New Zealand on my own account and on behalf of a syndicate. You see, one must be careful about producing plays in that colony. So far they have had the best of the pieces from Daly's and the Gaiety, and they expect West-end successes. The pieces are staged in quite as good a manner as in London, and they get a much superior and fuller chorus. In my opinion, the Princess's Theatre, Melbourne, is the finest in the world, and yet the highest price for stall seats is five shillings. As to the managers, there are Mr. J. C. Williamson and Mr. George Musgrove, who look after the musical comedy and operatic side. I consider Mr. Musgrove the best manager I ever worked under. His productions are most artistic, and equal to anything to be seen in the West-End. People over here would be astonished to witness the magnificent Australian production of Veronique, in which the chorus, compared with the Apollo company, was of double strength and volume. Messrs. Bland Holt and Anderson attend to the dramatic branch of the profession, and Mr. Harry Rickards to the vaudeville. Mr. Rickards is very plucky indeed. He takes out the finest talent procurable, and pays any amount of money."

Mr. Lauri left London some five years ago with Mr. George Edwardes' Gaiety Company, bound for India, where they successfully presented musical comedies. After a few months in our Eastern dependency, Mr. Lauri accepted an engagement for Australia offered by Mr. Musgrove, with whom he remained eighteen months, being then commissioned to return home and bring out a fresh company with The Skirt Dancer, A Chinese Honeymoon, Bill Adams, and Rose of the Riviera. Since then he has travelled through Australia and New Zealand. Some of Mr. Lauri's more recent parts are the dancing master in The Fortune Teller, the Duke in The Serenade, Pineapple in A Chinese Honeymoon, Li in San Toy, Pompey in The Gay Parisienne, Sammy Gigg in The Toreador, Biggs in The Circus Girl, Pumpernickel in Daughter of the Regiment, and Giacomo in Fra Diavolo.

MUSICAL COPYRIGHT BILL.

In the House of Commons the Musical Copyright Bill, like the wounded snake you have heard of, has dragged its slow length along. The Government tardily promised to assist it, but it has not assisted it much, and a good many of the members seemed to be anxious only that it should not give too much protection to those who were entitled to protection, and should not interfere too much with the pernicious practices of the pirates. The pirates' advocates met with a big defeat when they attempted to carry an amendment to Clause 1 to the effect that there should be no conviction unless the accused sold music which he knew to be pirated. Later in the week all the remaining clauses were agreed to, and the Bill passed through Committee with cheers. So now "Pirates Beware!" as Charles Reade used to say in all his play advertisements.—The Referee, July 22 ("Caradoc").

HORATIUS T. P. O'CONNOR, M.P.
(MUSIC AND MACAULAY.)

"Lie there!" he cried, "fell Pirate!
No more, aghast and pale
From Ostia's walls the crowd shall mark
The track of thy destroying bark,
No more Campania's herds shall fly
To woods and caverns when they spy
Thy thrice accursed sale."
—The Referee, July 22 ("Dagonet").

At last the Musical Copyright Bill may be regarded as out of danger. If it is not yet safe in port, it is heading directly for the mouth of the harbour with a favouring breeze behind it. In future it is to be "starred" as a Government measure and proceeded with in Government time. Mr. T. P. O'Connor need therefore no longer fear the opposition of the handful of Members whose blocking tactics have lately vexed his soul. Such tactics cease to be effective when directed against a Bill that has the full strength of the Government behind it, especially when that Government has secured the whole time of the House and is not hampered by the ordinary rules as to finishing debate at a fixed hour.—Morning Post.

Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., mentioned by way of an illustrative "aside" at the National Liberal Club function to the Lord Chancellor the other night that his Musical Copyright Bill, which he has been nursing with a patience that is marvellous, has so far been the victim of cranks. That has been so, but lately the "blocking" has been done by Mr. Eugene Crean, the Member for South-East Cork, and one of Mr. O'Connor's own colleagues. Perhaps if it were pointed out to Mr. Crean that such patriotic Irish singers as Mr. Frank Foley and Mr. Alfred Percival Graves, and such a capable Irish composer as Mrs. Alicia Adelaide Needham—all of London—are as liable to the depredations of the pirate as any Saxons, he might repent his obstruction.—Sheffield Independent.

Mr. T. P. O'Connor, who has worked in the interests of the Musical Copyright Bill as though it were his sole concern in life, is naturally in high feather at its adoption as a Government measure. The suspension of the twelve o'clock rule makes it possible that the Bill will get through its Committee stage on Monday night.—Yorkshire Daily Observer.

A word of thanks is due to Mr. T. P. O'Connor for the able manner in which he piloted the Bill through its initial stages. I am afraid the measure suffered in the last Parliament through the injudicious zeal of some of its supporters. Mr. O'Connor relied on tact and discretion, and although he could not conquer the prejudices of a few honourable members, he carefully refrained from strengthening their opposition by exciting their personal ire.—Morning Advertiser, July 21 (Mr. B. W. Findon).

By the persistent efforts of Mr. David Day and Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., the Government has at last been induced to take up the Musical Copyright Bill, which has passed the committee stage, and will now, in the ordinary course of things, become law very shortly.

No more shall the flag of sable hue,
Strike fear to the author's heart,
No more shall the sneaking pirate crew
Sell pilfered goods in the mart.
So let us hail the cheerful Day
Who has driven the night away;
And we'll sing a song and drink a toast—
To him and the brave Tay Pay.
—The Encore, July 26.

THEATRICAL SPORTS AT SUNDERLAND.

In connection with Mr. Charles M. Daly's benefit at the Avenue Theatre, Sunderland, the proprietor, Mr. Charles E. Machin, along with Mr. Daly, inaugurated a theatrical carnival gala and sports in aid of the various charities in the Wearside borough. These took place on Wednesday last, and commenced at two o'clock with a monster bicycle procession, which started from the Avenue Theatre, and wound, or, rather, wheeled its way through the principal streets of the town, towards the Rovers' Football Field in Hendon-road, where the sports took place. Most of the ladies engaged in the town took part in the procession, and assisted in no small degree to swell the funds by the free use of collection boxes.

The results of the sports were as follows:—100 Yards Flat Race Handicap, 1st, Mr. G. B. Lester, of the Avenue Stock Company. Tug-of-War (confined to members of Avenue and Royal Theatres), 1st, Avenue. Tug-of-War (open to all places of amusement), 1st, Avenue; 2nd, Palace. Tug-of-War, Police v. Band, 1st, Band. One Hundred Yards Ladies' Flat Race, 1st, Miss Dora Hilstrom (Avenue). Egg and Spoon Race, 1st, Mrs. Riley (Royal, Under the Czar company). Backwards Race, Costume Race, Baby Competition, 1st, Mrs. Engel.

SHAKESPEARE'S birthplace is, as usual at this time of the year, thronged with eager Americans bent upon showing their reverence for the poet. According to a gentleman connected with the Trust, "the latest type of American visitor is a vast improvement on the old. For the most part they are cultured people, who suffer no delusions as to the possibilities of the 'almighty dollar' purchasing national relics. It is years since an American was caught red-handed carving a chip from a door in Shakespeare's cottage. There are still some who display emotion and kiss the furniture, but the type of visitor represented by the dear old American lady who, finding it impossible to buy a relic of Shakespeare's, rubbed her black kid gloves on the floor of the room where the poet was born, saying: 'At least I will take this dust with me,' seems to exist no longer."

IN the Court of Bankruptcy on Monday, in the case of Mr. E. G. Saunders, it was reported that the debtor had refused to be sworn on the occasion of his public examination, which was appointed for the 17th inst. It appeared that the trustee was selling some of the estate, and desired an adjournment, as a report of the public examination would prejudice the sale, but as this seemed to the registrar to be an attempt to conceal something from the proposed purchaser he declined to adjourn the examination. The Official Receiver now applied for debtor's committal. Mr. Justice Bigham made the order of committal, but directed it to lie in the office for fourteen days, and said that it would not be enforced if in the meantime the debtor paid the necessary fees, together with the costs now incurred, and applied for a further appointment to proceed with his public examination.

CHAT WITH MR. PERCY NORMAN.

"I consider that the actors in the provinces do not sufficiently look forward to the future in order to try and pick themselves up."

These are the exact words of Mr. Percy Norman, himself a provincial actor and touring manager.

"They get into a certain groove," he goes on, "content with £2 10s. a week, and forty weeks of the year out of fifty-two, and, of course, they spend it all and never have anything saved. More than that, they have not the necessary 'push' to demand another 5s. a week."

"Perhaps if some of them were to fall out there'd be plenty more to take their place, even at a lower salary than £2 10s.?"

"I admit that England is overcrowded with actors and actresses. There is far more scope abroad for their services, especially in America and Australasia; and there are many opportunities for good players in South Africa and India. And let me tell you this, that if they worked as hard abroad as they are compelled to do in this country they would make two or three times the money."

"Do you suggest that the provincial actor in the United Kingdom is overworked?"

"A great deal is expected of him; and I can also say that the provincial actor works under much more difficult conditions than the London actor. There are so many companies on the road now who cannot all go to the better-class theatres that the country actor and actress have to put up with all manner of inconveniences and annoyances in respect of bad dressing-rooms, poor travelling, &c. I am complaining, of course, on behalf of the lesser lights in the dramatic profession. They seem to me to be permitted little chance of improving the conditions of their calling."

"In my opinion," continued Mr. Norman, "there are as good actors in the provinces as in the West End of London. An idea I intend carrying out myself is to try and push the provincial actor forward, and to make him as well known and as popular as our celebrated West End men. Hitherto the provincial actor does not appear to have been possessed of the requisite nerve to push himself."

"Then, I take it, you have some definite scheme in mind?"

"I contemplate taking the Princess's Theatre, provided the solicitors acting on behalf of that establishment will meet me in regard to terms. If suitable arrangements can be made I shall produce a big American drama at the Oxford-street playhouse, after which I shall probably run my present show, What Men Dare, and subsequently take it for a long tour of the States. I play heavy lead myself, and my company includes Miss Maud Buchanan, Miss Eileen Devonport, Miss Ida Mackay, Miss May Douglas, Mr. Edward Standish,

MR. PERCY NORMAN.

Mr. A. Balfour Mackay, Mr. Alfred Burrows, and Mr. Theo E. May. I intend, if possible, to bring the entire company as it stands with me to the Princess's Theatre, so as to introduce to the London public a number of provincial actors and actresses whom I consider as good a company as there is on the road. Only one of them, viz., Mr. Edward Standish, has so far appeared in the West End."

Mr. Norman commences his tour of What Men Dare, the five-act drama by Messrs. C. Rann Kennedy and Michael Sherbrooke, on August 6, at the Queen's Theatre, Fleetwood. Mr. Zerbini, the director of the orchestra at the Cambridge Music Hall, has composed some pretty musical numbers specially for Mr. Norman's production of the play, and scenery has been painted by Mr. R. C. Durant. What Men Dare contains an exceedingly interesting—indeed, thrilling—story, and the piece wherever it has so far been presented has met with an enthusiastic reception. The play was produced at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle-on-Tyne, on August 7 last year.

The part in which Mr. Norman considers he made his best effort was that of Dido in the Two Little Vagabonds. Messrs. Hardie and Von Leer, through Mr. Cliff, their general manager, have, Mr. Norman informs us, asked him to resume the characterisation on more than one occasion. "I was advertising with Black Mask, the play by Mr. Marriott Watson," continues Mr. Norman, "as well as in the melodrama entitled A Daughter's Crime, Mr. Garrett Todd's company. I think I have played every class of part in various sketches and plays. Previous to a short stock season, my last enterprise of any note was a share and the part of Adolf in Man's Enemy."

Theo E. May, who is Mr. Norman's manager, informs us that he has risen from chorus and small parts to principal parts and management. "I was," he says, "with Miss Lilian Rossell and Mr. George Edwardes in the States, Mr. Edwardes's piece being His Excellency the Governor. I practically reproduced The Greek Slave for Messrs. Morell and Mouillot, in addition to stage-managing the show and playing the part of a Roman noble. Then I had a small part in The School Girl with Mr. George Edwardes and Mr. Charles Frohman, was also in The Country Girl, and appeared in the rôle of Yan-Haw in San Toy for a couple of years. My last enterprise was a share and an acting part in Man's Enemy with Mr. John Power, leaving that for a stock season."

"LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT," a play in a prologue and four acts, by Ernest Martin and Fewlass Llewellyn, was produced for copyright purposes at the Bijou Theatre, Bayswater, on Thursday.

THE Bayreuth Festival opened for the fifteenth occasion on Sunday afternoon with a fine performance of Tristan and Isolde. Mme. Wagner, Siegfried Wagner, and her two daughters, and the composer, Humperdinck, were among the distinguished audience. Herr Felix Mottl ably conducted, and a feature of the performance, as ever, was the beautiful lighting and artistic scenery of Herr Ernst Braunschweig, the stage-manager. Herr Bary and Mme. Marie Wittich appeared in the principal parts.

"AUDREY THE ACTRESS."

By HORACE WYNDHAM. London. E. Grant-Richards.

In "Audrey the Actress" Mr. Horace Wyndham relates the stage career of a girl who joins the theatrical profession with illusions which are quickly dissipated by the hard experience gained by two provincial tours. When Audrey Standish's rich maiden aunt heard that her niece had finally decided to become a play actress, she disinherited her, but at the same time sent the young lady a £5 note and a tract bearing the title, "Footlights and Folly," which dealt with a damsel who resigned her post as a missionary in China in order to become an Empire ballet girl. Mr. Wyndham's novel may also be regarded as a warning to young ladies who, to use a common phrase, are "mad to go upon the stage." The hardships, the disappointments, the uncertainty, and other disagreeable phases of theatrical life are described with quite a wealth of detail. It is, in fact, Aunt Elizabeth's tract over again in the form of a novel. With a few exceptions, the stage people we are introduced to in these pages are not a nice set. The libertine actor-manager and the wicked theatrical agent loom darkly in the background, and the petty jealousies of the women folk are mercilessly exposed. That Mr. Wyndham has not considerable knowledge of certain phases of the actor's life we do not deny, but the picture he paints is, generally speaking, overcoloured and exaggerated for the purposes of securing a cheap effect. Nor does Mr. Wyndham spare the dramatic critics. Under a thinly-veiled cognomen he drags in a once famous critic, and thereby displays a lamentable want of good taste and good feeling. Another theatrical journalist that he introduces is a caricature—his Vaughan Jackson has no existence, except in the brain of an imaginative novelist.

When we first meet Audrey Standish, she is living at home, which, however, she is eager to leave, for her father is a selfish and hypocritical individual, her mother a nonentity, and her two sisters are quite unsympathetic and uninteresting. She informs her friend, Eliot Archdale, a theatrical manager, of her intention to go on the stage, but he discourages the idea. However, the girl makes the acquaintance of Harcourt Revell, a popular actor-manager, and eventually becomes a member of his touring company. She is given a small part in A Man of the World; the leading character being, of course, played by Revell, who is described as "a tall, clean shaven man, with grey hair, that contrasted curiously with his youthful features." Audrey was surprised at her success. "The most she had expected had been a word or two of encouragement, and perhaps a promise of assistance at some future time. Now, however, that she was actually a member of a company of repute, and her foot was firmly planted on the ladder, she felt that her troubles were over. Yet, at the back of her mind she had an uneasy sensation that Harcourt Revell had not given her an engagement solely on her merits. For one thing, he did not know what these might be. Even if she possessed the talents of a Mrs. Siddons he could have no real knowledge of them. It was something else in her, then, than histrionic genius that had appealed to him. Eliot's cynical observation, 'On the stage a pretty face in a woman counts for more than any amount of talent,' recurred to her with disquieting persistency. She tried to dismiss it with the reflection that Harcourt Revell had only seen her twice, but the effort was not entirely successful. His eyes had said too plainly what his tongue had only hinted at."

Audrey encounters a curious kind of theatrical journalist who, although connected with an important journal, drops his h's and whose appearance "suggested a blend between a pawnbroker's assistant who was airing the stock and an overdressed shop-walker in the enjoyment of a half-holiday." She snubs the "Planet" man and makes him her enemy. Audrey's first experience of theatrical apartments are startling enough, and she leaves them for an hotel. The young actress's debut at the provincial theatre where the tour starts is thus described:—

"A sudden tap at the door made her jump up with a start. The critical moment had come.

"'Your call, miss,' exclaimed a warning voice.

"She left the room, her heart beating furiously, and walked on to the stage. Through the curtain came the muffled sound of the orchestra. Then Tyler signalled to some one in the flies and, in response to a shrill whistle, the sheltering screen of canvas rolled slowly up above the proscenium. The music stopped with a final crash, and a blaze of light was suddenly focused on the spot where she stood.

"For a moment the strong glare dazzled her. She raised her eyes furtively and glanced appealingly at the auditorium. A great sea of faces eddied and swam in the stalls and pit. There was a look of strained expectancy on all of them. She felt as though she were a mouse being watched by a thousand hungry cats. The spectacle completely unnerved her. She tried to speak, but her throat had suddenly grown dry and her tongue refused to utter a sound. Turning aside she saw Bernard Marlowe standing in the wings a few feet away. His stimulating nod had the effect of a tonic. She faced the audience boldly, and, fixing her glance on the big man in the pit who had greeted Revell so effusively, delivered the opening line.

"'Speak oop la-ss—aw canna hear thee,' he shouted back in reply. As he did so a titter ran through the occupants of the stalls. Audrey heard it and for a moment thought she would break down. Her face flamed, and she clutched desperately at the arm of a chair, wishing devoutly that the stage would suddenly open and swallow her up.

"'Take your time,' whispered Marlowe encouragingly.

"The sound of his voice sent confidence back to her. With her self-control completely restored, she raised her voice slightly and finished the sentence. The victory was gained. During the remainder of the act she was untroubled by the slightest trace of nervousness."

One night Revell reveals himself in his true character, and there is an exciting, unrehearsed scene in his private room at a provincial hotel.

After this disagreeable experience and the loss of her engagement Audrey has a bad time of it. In search of work she calls upon a theatrical agent, who grossly insults her; but she gives him cause to repent his caddish conduct. After undergoing sundry trying experiences as the leading lady in a third-rate company that is on tour with a lurid, sensational drama called The Lady Convict, Audrey eventually promises to become the wife of the man she loves—Eliot Archdale—and at the same time expresses her resolve to leave the stage for ever.

Mr. Wyndham has, possibly, had some personal experience of the seamy side of the actor's life. He is particularly hard on the theatrical landlady, who, as depicted in these pages, is a very terrible person. Whether she is quite so bad as she is painted we must leave those of our readers who have had experience of her to decide.

PRESENTATION.—Luigi Quaglieni's son Salvino presented his father on his birthday with a case containing two violins—a Francesco Ruggeri (1664), and a Strad (1690). The instruments, which are valued at £500, are intended to be used in a musical sketch which is about to be produced in this country.

Mr. G. Carlton Wallace's drama was produced at Leigh (Lancs.) on July 24, 1905, and has since that date had a successful tour in the provinces. The author has invented an interesting love romance, such as cannot fail to make a direct appeal to an ordinary audience; the characters are well drawn, and the dialogue is crisp and natural.

The play opens in a hayfield. The last load is carried, and after dancing and other rustic revels, the Squire invites all to Alton Manor to give "welcome home" to his son Richard. Sybil Thorburn is an heiress, though the knowledge of this fact has been kept from her, and under the guardianship of Squire Abingdon, who desires her to marry his son Richard. Sybil, however, rejects his offer of marriage, and seeks the assistance of Philip Carnaby, a good-hearted young farmer, who has become bondsman for a loan of £2,000, borrowed from the Squire by Adam Frere, an old friend of Philip's father. That evening the news is brought that Adam Frere has committed suicide. The Squire, incensed at Sybil's rejection of Richard, resolves to foreclose on the bond, and thus turn Philip out of his farm. Philip repels insinuations made against him, and the angry Squire orders his servants to drive him from the Manor. Sybil protects Philip from their violence, and openly avows her love. Thenceforth she is kept a close prisoner in the house. However, Dennis and Pattie, a couple of sympathetic servants, contrive a meeting between the lovers. A charming love scene follows, during which Philip and Sybil plight their troth. The Abingdons resolve to separate the young couple by means of a trick. Madge Abingdon persuades Sybil into writing a letter to Richard, in which she declares that she can never love him. This letter is delivered to Philip instead of Richard, and the former, seeing a notice in the newspapers to the effect that Richard and Sybil have become engaged, is disgusted at the girl's supposed unfaithfulness, and accepts an offer made by a tramp named Frank Hardy to exploit diamond beds in Brazil.

The scene changes to a lonely camp on the Rio Branco. Philip, Hardy, and Dennis are seen at work finding diamonds. When the miners retire for the night an Indian enters with Richard and a gang of desperadoes, who try to kill the sleeping men. During the struggle Philip and Dennis are wounded, and all are overpowered, but are assisted to escape by an Indian maiden, who directs Philip and his friends through the forest. Dennis's wound commences to bleed afresh. His companions tear the linen off his coat for bandages, when a note falls out, which proves to be a letter given to Dennis by Sybil explaining all. Philip, overjoyed, resolves to return with the greatest possible speed to England.

In the meantime, Richard has returned and declared that Philip is dead. Sybil has been so ill that her mind is unhinged. She does not believe in the reputed death of Philip, and the Abingdons resolve to get Richard to take his place at the altar. They thereupon get the banns of marriage published between Richard and Sybil, unknown to the latter. On Philip's return he learns from the doctor attending Sybil of her mental infirmity, and, procuring a special licence, he arrives at the church door just in time to take his true place as bridegroom and so defeat the wicked schemes of the Abingdon family. There are one or two strong subsidiary themes and an abundance of comic relief in the drama, which has been well received at the Islington house.

Mr. Fred Lloyd plays with admirable firmness and sincerity the part of the hero, Philip Carnaby. The author of the drama appears as Frank Hardy, an adventurer, and makes good use of his opportunities. Mr. Charles Herbert is well placed as Squire Abingdon, and Mr. Alfred Grenville does justice to the rôle of the despicable Richard Grenville. Miss Lalla Stanhope, in the important rôle of Sybil Thornburn, plays in a manner that meets with the entire approval of the audience, and her efforts receive due recognition. Miss Alice N. Livesey acts well as Madge Abingdon. Mr. John Highnett as Dennis O'Rourke, and Miss Helen Richmond as Pattie Swift, portray comic parts with undoubted success. Mr. J. W. Wilkinson as P.C. Sowerberry also contributes his share to the humorous scenes, and Mr. Gilson Brooke (Dr. Brandreth), and Mr. E. Wallace (Rev. Arnold Cathorne), and Mr. E. Morris (Amos Gibson) give adequate support. The scenery, which has been specially painted for this production by Mr. Francis E. Bull, is excellent, notably the sets representing the Terrace, Alton Manor, the Virgin Forest, and the Camp on the Rio Branco. Mr. W. T. Gliddon's incidental and entr'acte music also deserves favourable mention.

Mr. C. Watson Mill's latest drama, originally produced at the Lyceum Theatre, Eccles, on May 28, is an excellent specimen of the play that pleases a popular audience, containing as it does an abundance of sensation and plenty of comedy relief, and its reception on Monday at the Stratford Theatre Royal was decidedly favourable. A prominent character in the play is a diabolical doctor, Marcus Dread, whose advent at Castle Manor, Ireland, so quickly brings sorrow to the genial Squire Kennion and his daughter Moira. Moira is to be married almost immediately to young Fergus M'Naughton, but the doctor discovers the perforation of a hypodermic syringe on her arm, accuses her of drug-taking, and loses no time in telling her that her mother was a dipsomaniac, and died raving mad, her father, when taxed, having to admit the truth of the statement. The doctor sees in Moira a likely victim for his villainy, and endeavours to persuade her to leave her village home for the gaieties of the city, promising to cure her of her drug-taking habits if she will place herself in his care. The weak-willed and distracted girl reluctantly consents, but the appearance of her lover decides her to marry, in spite of the taint that is in her blood. Moira has taken a phial containing vitriol from the doctor's chest, and when he taunts her she turns on him with the intention of throwing it in his face, but Fergus, coming in the room, receives the blinding fluid instead, and is at once rendered sightless. In the next scene Moira is staying at the cottage of Molly O'More, the wise woman of the village, whose little crippled son Myles the doctor has promised to cure. Moira's father comes to plead with her to return home, and her blind lover also begs her to go back with him; but the doctor's influence is too great, and she tells them that she has caused quite enough misery, and is better away. Ere she departs she goes to have a last look at the old home, and Shaun, a wandering minstrel, promises to be always near her should assistance be needed. In the first scene of the third act we see her in Dr. Dread's rooms at a London hotel. Instead of curing her, the doctor has encouraged her in her drinking and drug-taking habits, and Moira, who longed for the gaieties of the city would welcome once more the solitude of her old home. Dread has tired of her, and tells her she is no better than his own mother—a wanton. She learns she is not his wife as she imagined, and again seeks oblivion in the brandy bottle. Dread's last scheme is a truly diabolical one. He gives Moira something to inject into her arm which he afterwards explains is a plague virus. She shall contaminate the whole of London, and the doctor—who owes society in general a grudge for treatment received in his struggling days?will be avenged. Ere the curtain falls on the third act the unnatural son accidentally discovers his mother—a drunken hag—and his interview with her ends with her throwing herself in the Thames, such is the bitterness of his tongue. Moira would do likewise, but her father and the minstrel Shaun find her, and she gladly consents to return to Erin. Shaun has forced an antidote from Dread, so Moira escapes the plague—and London is saved! In the last act Dread is killed by Shaun, Moira dies, and Fergus M'Naughton, recovering his sight, marries Sheila Kennion, Moira's half-sister.

The drama was admirably presented by Mr. Watson Mill's company, the important rôle of the satanic Dread being most impressively enacted by the head of the combination. Elocution and facial play were alike excellent, and Mr. Mill is to be congratulated on his convincing portrayal of such a difficult part. Another arduous rôle was that of Moira Kennion, a character undertaken by Miss Rosalind Tate in a most meritorious manner. Especially good was the actress in the scene with Dread in the third act, and throughout she succeeded in suggesting the craving for drink and drugs the unhappy woman has without making the character repulsive. A manly and sincere rendering of the faithful Shaun was given by Mr. Henry Lonsdale; and Mr. Wingold Lawrence won sympathy for Fergus M'Naughton, being admirable throughout. Mr. Henry Rutland is to be commended for a sound and natural embodiment of the sorely-tried Squire, very pathetic being the scene where the father begs his daughter to return home. Sheila Kennion, the Squire's younger daughter, had a charming representative in Miss Emmie Barton; Molly O'More was satisfactorily enacted by Miss Ellen Beverley; Miss Ida Fane sufficiently suggested the hopelessness and depravity of Hildred (Dread's mother); and an especially clever and natural bit of acting was the cripple boy Myles of Miss Edith Rutland, the gratitude of the youngster to Dr. Dread (whose one humane action is the curing of the lame lad) being very feelingly depicted. Many merry moments there are in the play to relieve the morbidness of the principal theme, and Mr. N. Carter Slaughter as Lord Eversleigh, a sprig of the nobility, is responsible for a goodly number of them. His portrayal of the "Johnnie" is funny without being overdone, and his many amusing lines and absurd bits of business were heartily welcome. Another very funny impersonation was the Ferdinand de Joules of Mr. W. Palliser Acock, his interview with Dread being particularly mirth-provoking. Mr. George Scully also contributed to the success of the production by his admirable impersonation of Mike McQuade; and the other characters in the long cast were all capably undertaken. The many stage-pictures shown were much admired, a very pretty scene being the exterior of Castle Manor; and the piece went very smoothly for a first production.

PRINCE'S, POPLAR.

On Monday, July 23,
the Domestic Play, in Four Acts, by Lingford Carson, entitled
"THE DRAMA OF LIFE."

Wholesome melodrama flourishes at this handsome theatre, and the efforts of Mr. Lingford Carson's No. 1 Company in The Drama of Life are received with much appreciation. As Harry Beech, the rich banker, Mr. Edward M. Hamilton provides a clever bit of acting of a man who is tortured with remorse because he thinks he is the cause of another man's death. This, together with the loss of his wife, drives him to drink, and Mr. Hamilton's impersonation of the character is vivid and powerful. As Walter Beech, the scheming villain, Mr. J. Hooker makes a handsome desperado, and acts the part naturally; Mr. Harwood Roberts as Sir Dobson Wilde causes much merriment by his portrayal of a poor henpecked husband; and Mr. H. Maxwell Payne and Mr. Sydney Fiennes as Jack Lawton and Dave Crane respectively, both do good work. Mr. Horace Booth as Richard Brenton makes an ideal detective; and Mr. Edward Van Biene has the necessary Gallic touch to make his representation of the Count de Foi effective. As Sylvia Beech, Miss Kate Hallam is intensely dramatic, and her scene in Act I. when leaving her home is pathetic and touching. As the bride of Sir Dobson Wilde of the "strong woman" variety, Miss Florence French is clever, and greatly aids in providing the necessary humour of the play; Miss Nellie Birchenough as the old virago Bessie Black is very good; and Miss Elsie May as Robert Beech, the little son of the hero and heroine, acts very cleverly. All the smaller parts are well played, and the production is admirably staged.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, July 23,
the Drama, in Four Acts, by Sydney Spenser, entitled
"THE HERO OF THE FLAG."

The breezes of the briny are wafted agreeably into the West London this week by means of the drama above-named, which teems with exciting situations on board ship and is filled with the gallant deeds of sailors. The fact that one of the bluejackets is impersonated by a lady makes no difference to the thrilling nature of the piece, and deafening cheers greet the plucky heroine when, emulating historic precedent, she nails the colours to the mast in the thick of the fight. The lady who performs the intrepid feat is Mabel Forrester, a youthful widow, who is charged with the murder of her husband, and takes refuge on H.M.S Defender, where she adopts the rig-out of a sailor. The adventures that befall her are throughout of the most exciting kind, and well is the interest maintained by Miss Lizzie Hall, whose long association with the character of Dick in Two Little Vagabonds enables her to enact a boyish part par excellence. She is tender and sympathetic as the sorely tried wife of the first act, and her appearance later as the bold sailor lad makes her a popular personage. The author has created a thorough-paced villain in Paul Mansfield, whose vile schemes gives impetus to the action, and Mr. Spenser, whose company is responsible for the performance, embodies him with all the malevolence possible. The part of Jack Lawrence, who is credited with "a light, free heart," is acted with appropriate buoyancy by Mr. William Heilbronn, whose prepossessing appearance and vigorous utterance make him an ideal sailor-man. The evil wrought in the piece is partly borne by Ruth Clifford, the discarded wife of the villain, acted with passionate vehemence by Miss Roma Tremayne, who does not hesitate to distort her fair features to the proper degree of malignancy. The besotted Stephen Clifford is made very repulsive at the hands of Mr. G. F. Royd, and Captain Hilliard is finely played by Mr. Alfred Goddard, whose dramatic skill and practised elocution bring the part into pleasing prominence. A plentiful supply of comic relief is forthcoming at the hands of Mr. Sydney Benson, who plays Johnny Truckle, first a farm labourer and then a jolly Jack Tar, with unfailing humour. He also breaks forth into song, giving a lively rendering of "Good-night, Mr. Brown," with a skilful dance, which might well have been encored. Some neat stepping is also done by Miss Amy Maitland, who as Jenny Stubbs acts vivaciously, and sings "The Owl's Love Song" in good style. Mr. Lionel Thompson plays the unfortunate Mark Forrester with striking intensity, Mr. Unwin Crafton as Blue Jake acts an "unwilling accomplice" realistically, and Messrs. Wilton Hardcastle, Edward Allardyce, J. Porter, and Edwin Addison complete a cast of undeniable excellence. New scenery and effects serve to heighten the interest of the piece, which is received throughout with delight. Mr. James Sinclair is Mr. Bailey's courteous manager at the West London, which closes to-night for a short vacation, reopening on August Bank Holiday.

THE STANFORD QUARTETTE.

The Stanford Quartette (under the direction of Mr. Lloyd Stanford) are now on their summer tour of seaside resorts, and are giving charming concerts, their programmes consisting of all the latest and most popular ballads, duets, &c. They make a speciality of unaccompanied quartette singing, also of ballads specially arranged for themselves, and sung as quartettes. Audiences everywhere show keen appreciation of these musical selections. The voices of the party blend so harmoniously that it is a delightful experience to listen to these well-trained vocalists. Mr. Stanford himself has an excellent baritone voice. Indeed, each member of the quartette is a capable soloist, and included in their répertoire are a number of humorous duets and trios, some of these selections being from comic opera, musical comedy, &c. The quartette, whose services can be secured for every kind of social function, are able to give a varied programme, lasting from fifteen minutes to two hours, according to requirements.

Their tour started at Whitsuntide at Devonshire Park, Eastbourne, and extends until Sept. 30 next, when they finish a fortnight's engagement with Mr. Payne Seddon at the Spa, Whitby. The places visited on tour include appearances at Eastbourne, Dover, Herne Bay, Bexhill-on-Sea, Bognor, Ryde, Sandown, Shanklin, Ventnor, Minehead, Tunbridge Wells, Teignmouth, Torquay, Cleethorpes, Skegness, and Whitby. Such an excellent, refined, musical entertainment has everywhere been received with the most flattering demonstrations of appreciation and delight, double encores being no uncommon occurrence.

Mr. Lloyd Stanford has been approached by a well-known syndicate, with a proposal for an engagement of his quartette on the music hall stage for the autumn season.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, July 23,
the Drama in Five Acts, entitled
"SHADOWS OF A GREAT CITY."

Messrs. Joseph Jefferson and R. L. Sewell's successful drama, Shadows of a Great City, is the attraction at the Shakespeare Theatre this week, and is meeting with great success. The play is excellently interpreted by a capable company, and the whole performance from start to finish is thoroughly enjoyable. Mr. Horace Hunter, as Tom Cooper, is manly and straightforward, and contributes an earnest performance. Mr. E. H. Brooke is seen to advantage as the villainous Geo. Benson, and Mr. George Ross is well placed as Jim Farren. Mr. Willie Scott is successful in his portrayal of Abe Nathan, and in the rôle of Mr. Arkwright, a detective, Mr. George Claremont is thoroughly satisfactory. The two warders Hammond and Doroney are capably acted by Mr. Martin Brocklebank and Mr. Felix Coates respectively. Miss Daisy Marsh in a dual rôle first gives a natural representation of the sorely tried Annie Standish, and afterwards makes an attractive appearance as Nellie Standish, acting both parts with marked success. Miss Blanche Stanley is to be congratulated on a sterling impersonation of the good-hearted Biddy Roonan, and her Irish witticisms evoke much laughter. The minor parts are capably acted, and the scenery and general effects leave nothing to be desired.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, JULY 19.—It cannot be said that Le Prétexte, the two-act comedy by M. Daniel Riche, produced at the Comédie-Française, is a satisfactory work. In fact, it is surprising that M. Claretie should have deemed it worthy of the House of Molière. The slender plot is as follows: M. and Mme. de Terney, having spent the first years of their married life quarrelling with one another, are divorced. But they have a daughter, Jeanne, brought up by her mother, who has done all she could to make the girl detest her father. As to the latter, he has returned the compliment; and has made every effort to poison his child's mind against her mother. It is this action on the parents' part that surprises us. Being separated, and not having wronged one another in any way, their attitude toward Jeanne is perfectly incomprehensible. When Jeanne is eighteen, her mother wants her to marry Laperche, a grotesque, bashful individual whom the mother thinks she will be able to manage. But Jeanne loves André Le Brizard, and is allowed to marry him. Fresh trouble, however, now arises. M. de Terney and his ex-wife do not leave the young couple a minute to themselves. Le Brizard finally loses patience, and wants to forbid his parents-in-law to enter his house. Jeanne, of course, takes her parents' part, and we do not know how things would have ended if Le Brizard's old aunt had not given him good advice. Without a moment's notice he takes his wife away with him to Italy. The parents are upset. They have lost the child who was the cause, or the "pretext"—which explains the title of the piece—of their incessant quarrels. In their common grief they are inclined to seek consolation from one another; and we foresee the moment that these two people will be brought again together. The piece was fairly well acted.

WHEN Mme. Sarah Bernhardt becomes enthusiastic she does not do things by halves. Unfortunately, these fits of enthusiasm are sometimes rather expensive. To accept an author's play and not produce it within the stipulated time costs exactly 10,000 francs (£400). Not a penny more, not a penny less. The last time Mme. Sarah grew excited over a piece happened not very long ago. It was by a well-known Belgian writer. But the great actress grew tired of it, like she often does, and she was condemned to pay the above sum. This time it is M. Réné Fraudet, a young unknown author, who has been fortunate enough to have found favour with Mme. Bernhardt. She has not only accepted his play, La Nuit perverse; she has done more. She insisted on his impersonating one of the characters in the play, and at once signed his engagement. This is not the first time that an author will have appeared in one of his own works. In 1883, when M. Jean Richepin's Nana Sahib was produced at the Porte-Saint-Martin, Mme. Bernhardt insisted on M. Richepin accepting a rôle therein. M. Richepin, proud to appear with the great actress, consented to the arrangement.

"LA COURTISANE," five acts, in verse, by M. André Arnyvelde, will be the first novelty brought out at the Comédie-Française. It will see the footlights very likely in the beginning of October next.

M. ALPHONSE FRANCK, manager of the Gymnase, has accepted L'Irrégulière, a comedy in four acts, by M. Edmond Sée. It will be the third new work to be produced at that theatre.

MLLE. NINA CAVALETTI, the young, pretty actress whom we had occasion to applaud at the Folies-Dramatiques, has just been engaged by M. Deval to make her début at the Athénée.

THE Théâtre Antique de la Nature at Champigny has brought out a very interesting play by M. Charles Méré. It is called L'Hydre, the name the author gives to the mob, which devours those who furnish them with arms. The story is somewhat similar to the plot of Lorenzaccio. Hiéronyme, the cruel youth who reigns over Sicily, has entered into an alliance with Carthage. Hartémidore, the Carthaginian General, has become the lover of Massala, Hiéronyme's sister, and she prevails upon her lover to assassinate the young tyrant. But the General, unwilling to kill a boy, entrusts this task to a stranger. The latter performs the deed. Whilst the Carthaginians are discussing the new form of government they will select a cry of alarm is raised. The Romans are marching upon the city; the stranger makes an eloquent appeal to the mob, and he is nominated dictator. But the wicked Massala is in league with the Romans. She prevails upon the Dictator and Hartémidore to abandon their posts; and the Romans make themselves masters of the city. The Dictator is tied by the infuriated mob to a stake, and will be slowly put to death. Massala, however, has had an interview with him. She has discovered that she loves him, and, to save him from a horrible death, stabs him. The Romans, grateful for the services she has rendered them, proclaim her Queen; but it is with a sad heart that she accepts this honour. Were it not for the sonorous speeches that abound in it, the work would be of a high order. But the long-winded declamations cause the action to drag. It was beautifully acted. M. Paul Mounet, from the Comédie-Française, was most impressive as the Dictator; Mlle. Jeanne impersonated the perfidious Massala with much power; M. Alexandre imparted much colour to the rôle of Hartémidore; and, as the youthful tyrant Hiéronyme, M. Maurice Roger was really admirable. The work met with an excellent and well-deserved reception.

THIS week's theatrical lawsuit has been an action in which M. Perel, from the Vaudeville, sought to recover £400 from M. Gémier, of the Théâtre Antoine, because the latter had violated his agreement. M. Gémier argued that he had been within his rights, inasmuch as he had been engaged to fill one of the leading rôles in La Marche Nuptiale, whilst M. Perel had sought to impose upon him an insignificant part in which he declined to appear. As usual, the tribunal asked a week for reflection.

PARIS, THURSDAY, July 26.—During the dogdays, when everybody here seeks shelter from the heat either in the country or at the seaside, the tired and over-worked dramatic critic has to remain in town to devote his attention to the "Concours," the Conservatoire competition, which in the theatrical world is one of the most important functions of the year. The old concert-room in the Rue Faubourg Poissonnière having proved too small the competition is held now in Opéra Comique hall. But no place in the universe, be it ever so large, will ever accommodate the number of those clamouring for seats. Strange as it may seem, people flock back from their country residences and seaside villas to stew in a stifling atmosphere, not so much to have a look at the young rising stars, but to see the audience, which, it must be owned, presents a curious spectacle. All prominent men and women are there; and then come the mammas of the pupils. Each mamma has an exalted idea of her own offspring's talent, and, consequently, holds the other girls in contempt. And as each expresses her opinion very freely, both in private and in public, the result is that, with few exceptions, the mammas hold no intercourse with one another. A blood-curdling pun has even been made on one of these matrons, nicknamed "'La mer Caspienne' parcequ'elle ne communique pas avec une autre mer." These peppermint-drop-sucking mammas are the terror of professors and pupils, and even the members of the jury quail before them. Many society women also find their way into this furnace—all lace and muslins—whose tasteful toilettes offer a curious contrast with the antiquated finery of the mammas. Finally, discreet in the background, we notice several gentlemen, well-known men about town, the "friends" of some of the pupils. These "friends" are rarely young, but invariably rich; "and this," the mammas will tell you, "is the principal thing."

The psychological moment at the Conservatoire competition arrives when the names of the prize-winners are read out. It is then that storms break loose—storms that would startle the law-abiding English citizen, taught from his early youth to respect the "chair." The noise is made by the opposition jury in the hall, who have settled among themselves to whom a prize should be awarded, and as it invariably happens that their prognostics prove wrong, they raise their language to a high temperature, and overwhelm the gentlemen of the jury with reproaches. I remember two years ago seeing a stout lady mount a chair and, in a stentorian voice, announce to the world that, as regards lady pupils, "good looks take precedence over talent," and that an ill-favoured girl stands no chance with those "reprobates" on the platform. "This is not a beauty show," shouted the irate lady, and, gathering up the train of her moire antique dress, she strutted out of the room.

This year again we have had a few amusing incidents. The first occurred at the competition of the Opéra Comique class. M. Francell, a youth with a fine but somewhat uncertain voice, had to sing Des Brieux's air in the second act of Manon. Mlle. Martyl, who last year obtained a first prize, had promised to give him his cue; but someone came forward and announced that this young lady had fallen ill and could not, to her regret, appear. A shrill voice then called out: "She's all right, but is gone motoring," a statement that was received with loud cries of "Shame! Don't speak ill of a sick person." In the meanwhile, M. Francell stood on the stage waiting for a good angel to help him out of the difficulty. And the good angel appeared in the person of Mme. Marguerite Carré, the well-known singer, the wife of M. Albert Carré, manager of the Opéra Comique. She had only a few bars to sing, but she sang them so admirably and was such a delightful Manon that M. Francell became electrified, and, possibly thanks to that lady, secured the first prize. The audience cheered and shouted, but Mme. Carré, an ex-Conservatoire pupil, knowing the rules of the "house," refused to answer the call.

Incident number two happened the same afternoon. Mlle. Lamare and Mlle. Lassalle—who secured a second prize last year—were awarded the first prize. Mlle. Delimoges came in for a second one. Then came the turn of the "honourable mentions," and the name of Mlle. Comès was called. There was no response. Another call; and then the young lady slowly, very slowly, came on to the stage. She had expected at least a second prize. She was in a rage, and she showed it. With her arms akimbo, she assumed a defiant attitude, and stood motionless whilst her sentence was read, contempt and anger expressed in every line of her face. Suddenly her lips parted—but we shall never know what she might have said, for a friendly hand dragged her away, although not before she had made an ironical bow before the jury. Mlle. Comès had many sympathisers in the hall. In her delivery of a song in Carmen, and especially in her unrehearsed scene with the jury, she showed plenty of temperament. Her voice, too, is good, and, I must confess, I considered that lady's disappointment somewhat justified.

M. JULES CLARETIE has accepted a new comedy by MM. Gustave Guiche and Gheusi. It is called Chacun sa vie, and will probably be produced at the Comédie Française in the course of next year.

IF M. Claretie does not secure for the Comédie Française M. Rollan, a young man, barely eighteen, who won the first prize in comedy this year, M. Antoine is sure to engage him for the Odéon. In that case M. Antoine intends to revive Alfred de Vigny's masterpiece, Chatterton, of which M. Rollan recited a scene at the recent competition.

THE LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, July 23,
the Drama entitled
"SIBERIA."

At this critical time in the history of Russia a play of Siberian life is specially interesting, and the patrons of the Lyric are fortunate in having the opportunity of witnessing so powerful a drama as Siberia. Mr. Lewis Gilbert is an actor who is always appreciated by Hammersmith theatre-goers, and in the part of Nicholai, the gallant Russian who willingly journeys to Siberia to save his sweetheart, he scores a decided hit. Miss Nellie Fletcher appears as Sara, the unfortunate girl who is sentenced to life-long exile for defending her sister, and she proves that she is a really capable actress. The Ivan of Mr. Leonard Lawrence is a clever study of a true son of Russia. Miss Minnie Grey as Marie gains a distinct success; her acting throughout is characterised by a quiet grace that is very pleasing. Mr. Fred May makes a capital Tolsky, and, assisted by Miss Ella Leton as Vera, causes much hearty laughter. Mr. Fred Morgan is well-placed as Jarakoff, and Mr. J. E. Manning is quietly successful as Count Stanislaw. A word of commendation should also be given to Mr. Geo. K. Ashby as the Governor-General, while Mr. Beresford Whitcomb as Sparta deserves special mention. Others to whom praise is due are Messrs. Bert Morley, E. Tresoner, J. Booth, Blygh, and C. J. Thompson and Miss Florence Lovell.

OWING to the large increase in their business, the Hackney Furnishing Company, Limited, have just commenced building a warehouse and showrooms. When completed, this will be the largest and highest building of its kind in the North-East of London, and will, together with their other premises, go still further towards making them the "Maples of the North-East."

IRVING—PEN AND PENCIL.

"HENRY IRVING." By MORTIMER MENPES, R.I. R.E. London: Adam and Charles Black.

Mr. Mortimer Menpes' recollections of Sir Henry Irving will be read with deep interest by all admirers of the great actor; and the twelve colour-drawings by the author which embellish the little volume are all clever portrait studies of the late leader of the theatrical profession in this country. The anecdotes related of Irving present him in no new light. They only tend to increase one's admiration for the character of the man who did so much to raise the drama in the estimation of the public. His generosity, his genial humour, his thoughtful tact, and his unfailing kindness to every one with whom he was in any way associated have already received full recognition from those who have written of Henry Irving, and the stories scattered throughout this little book only confirm the general estimate of a rare character, with a remarkable gift of personal magnetism which added to the number of his friends wherever he went.

The first time that Mr. Menpes had the privilege of sketching Sir Henry was just before one of the actor's visits to America, when he gave the artist several sittings. "My immediate impression as he entered the studio was of a lithe, graceful figure, in a rough pepper-and-salt tweed dress, loosely fitting, quite two sizes too large, yet falling in noble folds about the slim body. Sir Henry seemed by the greatness of his individuality to walk his very clothing into character. One felt immediately one saw him the generous soul of the man. Irving's was not a character that held itself aloof. The first act was to put himself in touch with you—to turn you over, to make his sympathies your sympathies, his cause yours or yours his."

The artist did not find the actor a very good model. He says:

"During the first sitting Sir Henry scarcely moved his body at all; but his face was alive with movement. The expression in the eyes! I have never seen anything like it. I have never seen a face change so much: not for more than a moment did it retain the same expression. Now and then he would turn round and look piercingly to see if I had caught the joke. When he was telling a story I could almost follow it by watching the movements of his face, with its changing brows, now up, now down. Then, that wonderful mouth—how expressive the curves of it were; how sweet the smile! At the beginning of the sitting I felt hopeless. To be sure, there was the restful, graceful figure, and there were the hands. I could have drawn them; but it was the head I wanted, and that was never at rest."

It was at the first sitting, too, that "Sir Henry spoke of his old friend Toole. His face lit up as he spoke. He told us how shocked he was at Toole's state of health; the dear old chap could scarcely speak. Toole longed to talk; but his voice was muffled and he could scarcely articulate. Irving said that the last time he saw Toole he took him to a specialist physician, with whom Toole stayed for some little time by the sea; but instead of getting better he became worse. Irving brought his friend back to the hotel. Just near there was an undertaker's shop with "Johnson, monumental sculptor,' written up. Toole paused, and, with his thumb pointing back to the shop, shrugged his shoulders hopelessly. Nothing more was said. Irving little thought that he would be the first to die."

The tale illustrative of Irving's kindness of heart and concerning a dear old lady who was in pecuniary difficulties, has been related before, but will bear repetition. Irving telephoned to his business-manager inquiring if there was any employment at the theatre that could be found for her. The business-manager answered, "Absolutely nothing—nothing at all." Irving suggested that she might look after the cats. The manager telephoned back that there were already three women looking after the cats. "Well," said Irving, "you must find her something. Let her look after the three women that are looking after the cats."

But there was at least one occasion when Irving's generosity was ill-rewarded.

"There was an old actress for whom he had arranged a benefit. She wanted him to be at the performance as a 'draw,' and reserved a box for him. At the last moment Irving found himself unable to be present, and gave his box to friends. The benefit was a great success. When Irving began to talk over with the old actress the amount of money that had been collected, and was about to hand her a cheque, she said, 'But in that account I do not think you have included your box.' Irving was nonplussed for the moment; but he quickly grasped her meaning, and said, with that deferential courtesy so characteristic of him, 'O, of course,—how thoughtless of me! I forgot to add the price of the box'; and with that he corrected the cheque."

The second chapter is devoted to Miss Ellen Terry's impressions of Irving. Curious to know which of the great actor's different impersonations had created the greatest impression on Miss Terry, Mr. Menpes asked her which she considered to be Irving's biggest success.

"She answered without hesitation: 'His rehearsal of The Merchant of Venice and his reading of Hamlet at the Birkbeck Institution. I came to the rehearsal with ideas, with my own conception of the part as it ought to be played; but the moment Irving began I was hypnotised. I couldn't budge. I was enthralled. His conception of the part and the way in which he unfolded the plot were so extraordinary that all those who had the privilege of hearing the rehearsal and the reading must agree that never before or afterwards did Irving do such fine work.'"

Miss Terry told Mr. Menpes a story that showed the boyish side of Irving's nature.

"Seeing a child's paint-box and brush on a table, he took from a bowl in the room a white flower, and tore off one of the petals, making it quite a different shape, and striped the leaves with colour. He was holding the flower in his hand and looking at it, when there arrived a friend who prided himself on his botanical knowledge. Irving handed the flower to him, and said, 'What do you think of this specimen?' The friend turned it about between his finger and thumb, and said that he had for the moment forgotten the Latin name, but that it was a most unusual blossom, very rare, and he would like to take it away with him. Irving was greatly delighted at having 'taken in' his learned friend so completely."

In the chapter headed "Off Duty" Mr. Menpes remarks: "To see him at his best one had to be with Irving when he himself was host. Attached to the Lyceum Theatre there was a set of rooms in which he was wont to entertain, now and then, after the play. Behold, then, twelve or fifteen persons sitting down to a banquet at midnight. 'Supper' Irving called it; but it was really a dinner of the most stately kind. Food, wine, fruit, flowers, plate—everything in the spacious old hall was choice and abundant; the servants were as perfectly trained as the stewards on a man-o'-war. The place seemed to be the banqueting hall of a king. There sat Irving in the middle of the long table—tall, impressive, a very king to look at. On his right hand would be someone eminent in some other walk of life. On the occasion specially in mind, this chief guest was Lord Goschen. Let it not be thought that the strange quietude of the company was due to the presence of such a distinguished man. What kept the guests so decorous was that they were in the presence of Irving. He radiated some subtle force before which all men became modest and even reverential."

The volume, which is dedicated to Miss Ellen Terry, concludes with a facsimile of a letter addressed by Sir Henry Irving to Mr. Menpes, dated from Grafton-street, Dec. 15, 1898, acknowledging the gift of a picture.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

A large audience assembled at Queen's Hall on Friday afternoon, July 20th, in honour of the "Prize Day" of the Royal Academy of Music. This year the institution has been specially honoured, for His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, the president of the school, had kindly consented to give the numerous prizes and awards to the successful students. The order of the proceedings were: The reception of His Royal Highness by members of the governing body, a short selection of music by the students, an address by the principal, the presentation of awards and prizes, and a vote of thanks to His Royal Highness. The concert began with Sir Alexander Mackenzie's harmonious Benedictus and Paganini's well-known Moto Perpetuo, both of which were admirably played by the thirty-five young violinists, who gave a most spirited performance of Paganini's work, the accompanists being Mr. B. J. Dale and Miss Mary Burgess, Mr. Hans Wessely conducting. Following this came Mr. Hubert Bath's sea-picture Orpheus and the Sirens, sung by the female choir with string, harp, organ, and pianoforte accompaniment, the soloist being Mr. John Bardsley, Sir A. C. Mackenzie conducting. Great applause was awarded to the singing of this by the choir, and Mr. John Bardsley, who took the solo part of Orpheus; the composer, who may rightly be considered one of the Academy's foremost pupils, being called to the front and warmly greeted. After the concert the Principal gave his annual address. In the course of Sir A. C. Mackenzie's humorous and eloquent speech, he remarked on the rapid advance music is making in this country, and "that amazing technique which is one of the distinctive qualities of the younger generation of musicians. It was reassuring to know that this astonishing new development does not, by any means, move entirely in the direction of mere mechanical dexterity. I say reassuring, because this fact dispels the rather grisly idea that the musician of the future may become a mere automaton, and that we are helping to produce a race of human pianolas. Nothing of the kind. None are so competent to take note of the present early ripeness of the talent for musical composition as those who live among our young musicians. The eighty-four years old school has helped to bring this about." The Principal remarked that tranquillity and prosperity have attended the Academy throughout the year, and found cause for congratulation that Mr. Thomas Threlfall, to whom the Academy owes much, now filled the office of director and chairman of committee. Sir Alexander also spoke of the useful and flourishing opera class which has lately given proof of its vigour by performances of Orpheus, Martha, and Carmen, and the greater part of Verdi's difficult Falstaff, and those students who have elected to seek their fortune on the dramatic stage had ample opportunity, under Miss Filippi's able direction. Speaking of the awards which His Royal Highness would shortly bestow, Sir Alexander specially mentioned the Dove prize, given to that student who shall have most distinguished him or herself in general excellence, assiduity, and industry during the past year. Amidst great applause Mr. Rousby Woof was announced as the winner of this prize. Miss Vera Cockburn, of the dramatic class, and Mr. Bertram O'Donnell, violinist, took the two medals given by the Society for the Encouragement of Fine Arts for vocal or dramatic excellence, or excellence in instrumental music. The Anne E. Lloyed exhibition for Elements of Music and Singing was won by Miss Ethel Hedwig Hantke, whom the Principal spoke of as a singer who has already been marked outside our walls. Finally, Sir Alexander mentioned Miss Constance M. Dugard, who secured the Ridley Prentice Prize, to the sub-professor who had obtained the best results in teaching during the year. The Principal concluded his address by announcing, amid hearty cheers, the gift by Mr. Ridley Bax of a hundred guineas to the school in recognition of the benefits his son had received from it as a pupil, and the bequest to the Students' Aid Fund of a hundred pounds under the will of the late Walter Macfarren. The Duke of Connaught, after the distribution of prizes to the successful students, received a vote of thanks, which was moved by Lord Kilmorey, and seconded by Mr. Threlfall. In replying to this His Royal Highness, in a few well-chosen words, expressed, as President of the Royal Academy, his great satisfaction with the tale of prosperity unfolded by the Principal; he also spoke of the pleasure in which he had listened to the "charming music" of the students. The Duke of Connaught then mentioned Mr. Bath, whose composition he found full of melody and light and shade. "I have always thought," he said, "there was plenty of music latent in the English character, and that it only needed chances of being cultivated and perfected. There was nothing in this world more humanising than music, and therefore the more we English women and men did to encourage the art, the better it would be for the nation at large." The Duke's little speech was heartily cheered, and with the singing of the National Anthem the proceedings closed.

MME. CELLINI'S MUSICAL MATINEE.

Under the patronage of her Majesty the Queen, and in the presence of a large and stylish audience, Mme. Cellini gave a musical and dramatic matinée at the New Theatre on Friday afternoon, July 20. Several distinguished lady amateurs who are pupils of Mme. Cellini appeared, among them being the Countess of Huntingdon, the Countess of Arran, Mrs. Naper of Loughcrew, also many well-known professionals. The small orchestra under Signor Scoma also did good service. In the first part of the programme the Countess of Arran was first heard in Carl Bohm's song "Still wie die Nacht," which was encored. Mr. Charles Magrath, from the Moody-Manners Company, was well received in Prince Gremin's song "In every age sweet love is master" from Tschaikowsky's Eugène Onégin; and Mme. Newbold Thorpe, a pupil of Mme. Cellini, made a favourable impression by her singing of "Ah! Rendimi quel cor" from Rossi's Mitrane, 1608. Mme. Rosetti, from the Opera Comique, Paris, gave Gluck's classical song, "Paris et Hélène," and in the second part of the programme an air from Massenet's Manon, which was most effective. Mr. Charles Magrath was also at his best in his second song, "Molly Bawn." Herr Claus, from the Royal Italian Opera, Rome, gained a hearty recall for his rendering of "O Star of Eve" from Tannhäuser, the 'cello obbligato being cleverly played by Herr Eugène de Kerpely. Mme. Margaret Izat sang Gounod's "Le Printemps," and Mrs. Naper of Loughcrew gained an encore for "The Jewel Song" from Faust. The Countess of Huntingdon received much applause for the ballad "My Rosary," and the audience insisted on an encore in Mme. Newbold Thorpe's second song "The night has a thousand eyes," to which she responded with Sullivan's familiar "Let me dream again." Relief was given to musical items in a recitation of "The lesson of the fan" by Miss Lilian Braithwaite, who, being encored, gave the popular "In the usual way" and a pretty tableau of "Then and Now" in two pictures, "Then" and "Now" contrasting the past and present, greatly pleased the audience. The conductors were Lady Willshire, Mme. Cellini, and Herr Conraed Von Bos.

SIR ALEXANDER MACKENZIE has been elected president of the English section of the International Musical Society, the vice-president being Mr. Otto Goldschmidt.

MISS DOT STEPHENS' SAD CASE.

Miss Ellen Terry sends a subscription, with these womanly and sympathetic words:—"For the poor child Dot Stephens, with loving sympathy from Ellen Terry."

Miss Edna May writes:—"I am more grieved than I can say over this dreadfully sad case. I have sent to all my friends; have also asked for assistance from The Belle of Mayfair company, and hope to be able to send you a good sum by Friday or Saturday. I don't remember ever having heard of anything so sad as this little girl's accident. Please let me know if I can do anything else."

Miss May Lewis encloses a cheque, and writes:—"I cannot tell you how glad I am to see that the poor unfortunate lady's case has been taken up. It has my most sincere sympathy."

Mr. Chas. E. Machin accompanies his cheque with the following note:—"I beg to enclose my little cheque for the Dot Stephens Fund. It is a terrible calamity."

Mr. Martin Harvey.—"I have much pleasure in sending you a cheque for £1 1s. for your admirable fund for the poor little lady."

Miss Louie Freear.—"Enclosed please find cheque for £1 for dear little Miss Stephens, with whom I most heartily sympathise. What a terrible accident, poor little girl!"

Mr. Weedon Grossmith.—"I enclose a cheque for £1 1s. for the little fund you are raising for the poor girl, Miss Dot Stephens. I only regret my cheque is obliged to be so small. It would have been larger, but there have been so many things one has had to contribute to recently, only not so deserving, that one has little left for the really sad cases."

Mr. H. B. Irving.—"I have much pleasure in enclosing a cheque for one guinea as a small contribution to the fund you are getting up for poor Miss Stephens."

Miss Nora Lancaster.—"I am so sorry to hear of the terrible accident that has fallen upon Miss Stephens. I enclose cheque for a guinea, and wish I could have made it more."

Miss Edith Wynne Matthison (Kennedy).—"Enclosed please find cheque for one guinea towards the subscription for Miss Stephens. It is an exceedingly sad case; and she has my deepest sympathies."

Mr. Herbert Beerbohm Tree.—"The case of Miss Dot Stephens is certainly a very distressing one, as you say. I enclose you herewith £2 2s. on her account. I hope you will get a substantial sum."

MISS DOT STEPHENS.

Mrs. J. Warden (widow of the late J. F. Warden).—"I send cheque as a trifle towards the fund you have opened for Dot Stephens. Poor girl, such a sad fate for her to be suddenly put aside in the days of her youth and strength. It is a sad ending to her bright dreams and hopes she had for the future. My heart's deep sympathy is with her and her mother in this their dark hours of sorrow."

Mr. T. Allan Edwardes (of Derby), writing from Interlaken, says: "I enclose you cheque for £2 2s. towards the fund for poor little Dot Stephens. Among the thousands of her brother and sister artists, it should be an easy matter to purchase her an annuity of at least £50 per annum. If all the sympathisers with her in her dreadful accident would send their mite this would be easily accomplished."

Miss Doris Stephens, best known in the professional world as Dot Stephens, a very clever vocalist and dancer, met with a terrible accident late on Saturday night, the 30th ult. She had fulfilled an engagement at H.M. Theatre of Varieties at Walsall, and left on Saturday night to go to Glasgow, where she was to have appeared this week. On reaching Wolverhampton she had to wait some time to join the midnight mail on the London and North-Western line, and there met some professional friends. She went to the Hippodrome, Wolverhampton, and was afterwards accompanied to the High Level Station by a gentleman, who secured her a seat in a second-class compartment, and saw that the door on the platform side was properly fastened before the train started. On arrival at Stafford the door on the offside was found to be open and the compartment empty. There was a quantity of luggage on the racks and seats, and as there appeared to have been an accident a light engine was at once despatched up the line to search the track. On reaching Fordhouses, about three miles from Wolverhampton, the unfortunate young lady was found lying in the six foot way in an unconscious state, and terribly injured. She was conveyed to the Wolverhampton station, and thence to the General Hospital, where it was found necessary to amputate one foot and part of the other. She was also found to be seriously lacerated about the head and body. On Sunday afternoon she had recovered consciousness, but had no recollection of how the accident occurred. It is supposed that she was under the impression that she was travelling in a corridor car, and on opening the door fell to the ground. Asked how she could account for the accident, Miss Stephens remarked, "The railway carriage was stuffy, and I went to open the window. After that I recollect nothing more till I regained consciousness in the hospital."

Miss Stephens is a clever vocalist, dancer, and actress, and first appeared with Mr. Bannister Howard as the Salvation Army lass in The Belle of New York, remaining with the company three years. She then joined Mr. George Dance for the part of Mrs. Pineapple in A Chinese Honeymoon and afterwards Mr. C. P. Levilly, understudying Miss Stella Gastelle as Alesia in La Poupée, a part she subsequently played, and was to resume in the autumn in Mr Herbert Ralland's company, lately on tour.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I am very glad to be able to say I am progressing as well as could be expected, and hope to be able to leave the hospital in a few weeks now.

I cannot express my thanks to everyone for the way they have come forward to help me in my affliction, and for all the sympathy they have shown, it is indeed very, very good of them, and I only wish I could express my feelings of gratitude as I would and feel.

Every one here in Wolverhampton have been very good to me, and to Mr. Lennon, of the Empire Theatre, I cannot express my feelings of thanks. He has not only got up a cricket match on my behalf, but also gave me a matinée benefit at his theatre, and to him and the many ladies who so kindly assisted and worked very hard in my interests I owe a deep debt of thanks. Again, with the best thanks to everybody, more thanks than I can express now.—Yours sincerely,

DOT STEPHENS.

The General Hospital, Wolverhampton.

It is intended that the proceeds shall be devoted to the purchase of an annuity for Miss Stephens, whose terrible misfortune has already excited the greatest commiseration.

So sad a case has rarely, if ever, been brought before the dramatic and musical profession, whose record abounds in deeds of charity. The name of Miss Stephens is now to be added to the already full scroll of benevolent actions.

All subscriptions will be duly acknowledged in these columns. Subscriptions may be sent to Mr. J. Bannister Howard, Hon. Treasurer, 3, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.; to the "Dot Stephens Fund," at the Capital and Counties Bank, King-street, Covent Garden; or to the Assistant Hon. Treasurer, Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, The Era Office, 5, Tavistock-street, W.C.

STEINWAY HALL.

Miss Dorothy Wren and Mr. Charles Sparrow, assisted by Miss Myrtle Meggy, gave a dramatic and musical recital at Steinway Hall on Thursday evening, July 19, before a large audience. Miss Wren, who has a pleasing and well-trained light soprano voice, was first heard in Recit and Aria, "The Jewel Song" from Gounod's Faust. Miss Wren was also heard in two new songs by Signor Achille Tramezzani, "La jeune fille et la rose" and "Love me again," the latter being encored, but the concert-givers' most effective efforts were in Sullivan's "Dearest heart" and Handel's "Angels ever bright and fair." Mr. Charles Sparrow's first recitation was Shakespeare's "All the World's a Stage," which was followed by "The Statue of Saint George," taken from a Scottish Annual. The recitation describes how the statue on view in the artist's studio is visited by all artistic Florence, including no less a personage than Michael Angelo, then a young student of the sculptor. Mr. Sparrow has a good presence on the platform, and shows dramatic ability. He may also be commended for his pathetic "Death of Little Joe," from Dickens' Bleak House, and his humorous rendering of "The Bishop and the Caterpillar." Other and more serious work done by Mr. Sparrow was Tennyson's "Break, break, break," "Little Boy Blue," and "Tragedy in Five Acts," with clever incidental music, composed and admirably played by Mr. G. Lardelli, F.R.C.O. This being encored, Mr. Sparrow recited "The Lesson of the Watermill," with musical accompaniment by Mr. Lardelli. Miss Myrtle Meggy played several piano solos, being well received in "Les Sylvains" and "Valse," by Chaminade, Chopin's "Etude in A flat," and "Intermezzo in Octaves" by Leschetitzky. Signor Achille Tramezzani presided at the piano. The concert was given under the direction of the British and Foreign Concert Bureau, Titchfield-terrace, Regent's Park.

T.R.H. THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES, the Duke of Sparta, and Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck were present at the performance of La Bohème at the Royal Opera, Covent-garden, on Saturday night.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

THE rebuilding of the Avenue Theatre, which Mr. Cyril Maude is to rechristen the Playhouse, is now in progress, the débris which covered the site since the accident at Charing Cross last December having now been cleared away. The theatre will have to be almost entirely rebuilt externally, all the walls having been more or less damaged. There will be a new iron roof of modern construction, and the colour scheme of the interior will be brown and gold. The stage will be found to be somewhat enlarged, and the seating accommodation slightly altered. Originally the cost was to have been £17,000, but now the work will amount to over £20,000.

THE first term of the Academy of Dramatic Art under its new government by a Council comprising Sir Squire Bancroft (the president), Mr. John Hare, Mr. Tree, Mr. George Alexander, Mr. Forbes Robertson, Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. Pinero, and Mr. J. M. Barrie has ended very successfully. There have been over eighty students, with the practical result that many professional engagements have been secured. In addition to those given by the regular staff of instructors special rehearsals in the "Final School" have been held by Mr. John Hare, Mr. George Alexander, and Sir Squire and Lady Bancroft. The usual rehearsal classes, both for junior and senior students, have been conducted by Mr. Lyall Swete and Mr. Fisher White, who have been appointed by the Council to the teaching staff of the Academy, and an additional class in the "Final School" has been instructed by Mr. James Fernandez. There has been added to the curriculum a course of introductory lectures upon "The History of the English Theatre," delivered by Mr. Harold Child. The Council have appointed Mr. George Bancroft administrator of the Academy, the next term of which will begin on September 29.

MR. WALTER EMDEN, J.P., late Mayor of Westminster, the well-known theatrical and hotel architect, is retiring after nearly forty years' practice as an architect. He is presenting the business to his manager, Mr. S. H. Egan, and his nephew, Mr. W. S. Emden, and the firm will be known as Messrs. Emden, Egan, and Co.

MR. STEPHEN PHILLIPS, one of the most distinguished of the many old Bensonians who have done such good work in connection with the stage, celebrates his birthday to-day. Born in Oxfordshire, the author of Nero was educated for the Civil Service, became an Army tutor at one period of his career, and published his first book, "Marpessa," fifteen years ago.

A NEW volume of essays by Mr. H. B. Irving, entitled "Occasional Papers, Dramatic and Historical," will be published early in September by Messrs. Bickers and Son. The essays will contain, among others, "The Art and Status of the Actor," and one read before the Royal Institution on "The English Stage in the Eighteenth Century." Other papers are of a criminological character, as a student of which Mr. Irving is well known, his earlier books on "Judge Jeffreys" and "French Criminals" having enjoyed much popularity.

MR. J. L. TOOLE'S strength has been gradually diminishing during the past fortnight, and his inability to take more than the slightest amount of nourishment makes his state extremely critical. Fortunately, he is in no pain, but a cough has proved troublesome during the last few days. After a quiet night he passed a fairly restful day on Thursday, but his health showed no improvement.

ENGLISH playgoers who have visited Paris will remember that excellent actor M. Raimond, whose death at the age of sixty-two, after a long and painful illness is chronicled. He was the last of the famous Palais-Royal cast that included celebrities like Lassouche, Geoffrey, Lhéritier, Milher, Saint-Germain, Mme. Céline Chaumont, Mme. Alice Lavigne, &c. When as a young man he joined the Palais-Royal company he had to encounter many difficulties. The members of that house did not like newcomers, and poor Raimond was very badly treated by them. Kept in the background, his salary was so small that he tried to increase his revenue by trading in lamps. But, as he often used to remark in after years, he never sold as many as he bought.

RAIMOND used to be fond of relating a story of M. Perrin, manager of the Comédie-Fraçaise, who to his surprise and joy one day sent for him. "Perrin," he said, "made me wait over an hour downstairs; and when, at last, I was admitted to his sanctum, he said he was happy to have seen me, and sent me about my business. But it was a clever trick of Perrin to ask actors from other theatres to call on him. He did the same thing to Dupuis, and to others. He made them wait downstairs, where the artists of the house could see them; and by so doing managed to keep his somewhat unruly flock in hand."

IT was not until M. Mussay—the husband of Mme. Céline Chaumont—took over the Palais-Royal that Raimond's position became good. Instead of playing insignificant rôles he was made a star; and his name is intimately connected with all the successes of that once so popular house. When M. Mussay retired from the management and the Palais-Royal's good fortune began to desert it, Raimond, despite the tempting offers from other managers, refused to leave the house where he made a great name for himself. Known by many, respected by all, this kind-hearted gentleman's death is a great loss to the theatrical world in Paris.

MR. W. S. GILBERT had his little joke at the Edgware Petty Sessions this week, when two men were convicted of trespassing on land in search of conies. The police evidence showed that the defendants, who were beating a hedge, were accompanied by a dog. Upon being searched, a ferret and nets were found in their possession. Defendants denied that the dog was theirs, and said it had followed them into the field. "Did the ferret follow you?" inquired Mr. Gilbert, with twinkling eye.

MR. LEWIS WALLER, who will appear at the Gaiety Theatre, Douglas, in Brigadier Gerard, has been extensively advertised in the local press, and his first visit to the island is looked forward to with interest. There is a circumstance, however, connected with Manxland, as with other popular resorts, that few advance agents apparently grasp. The people who flock to Douglas seldom stay more than a week, and the early puff preliminary has small utility. The people who had Saturday's papers usually depart on Monday. The first to be caught are the shoals who arrive on the last day of the week, and, after glancing at Monday's issues, determine their plans.

MR. HALL CAINE, the popular novelist and playwright, is spending laborious days and nights in his study at Gruba preparing his theatre-version of his earlier novel, "The Bondman," for Drury Lane stage. A real farmyard, with veritable cows and haystacks, will be represented in The Bondman, and the properties will also consist of a genuine Sardinian donkey scarcely bigger than a dog. Mr. Caine and Mr. Arthur Collins have braved many perils in their search after local colour, fearlessly standing on the brink of the crater in order to secure the correct impression of a volcano in motion.

MR. H. B. IRVING will make Paolo and Francesca the opening attraction of his tour, which starts at the Prince's, Manchester, on Aug. 6. Stephen Phillips's poetical play will be replaced on Friday by a double bill, composed of Markheim and Mauricette, Saturday being reserved for a revival of The Lyons Mail, in which Mr. Irving is to appear as Dubosc and Lesurques. On Sept. 19 Mr. Irving sets sail for New York, where he will start operations at the New Amsterdam Theatre in Paolo and Francesca about Oct. 6. In addition to Miss Dorothea Baird the company includes Miss Maud Milton, Mr. Harcourt Williams, Mr. Frank Tyars, and others of the late Sir Henry's company.

"LOUIS XI.," and possibly The Bells and Charles I., will be included in the répertoire, and with these reminders of the late actor's most notable productions it may be imagined that the warm-hearted Americans will give a royal greeting to the worthy son of an illustrious sire.

MR. W. H. C. NATION is the latest tenant of Terry's Theatre, having obtained from Mr. James Welch a six months' lease, starting from September 29. A play is now being written for the new lessee, but the actual character of the entertainment has not yet been definitely decided upon. Mr. Nation has an extensive and varied experience of Metropolitan amusements. He is the author of innumerable songs which have been heard on the London stages. In 1871 he was the manager of the Royalty, where he produced a comedy entitled Lamed for Life, by Westland Marston, in which Miss Ada Cavendish appeared, together with a musical extravangaza, entitled Nell Gwynne; or the King and the Actress, Mr. Nation himself being responsible for the various songs. Mr. Nation has also been connected, in a managerial capacity, with Sadler's Wells, Astley's, the Holborn, and the Charing Cross theatres, the latter of which subsequently became Toole's.

MR. MARTIN HARVEY takes much pardonable pride in the requests for performances of Hamlet, which have emanated from all part of the country. Attention has before been drawn to Mr. Harvey's marked success as the Prince of Denmark in many towns, but the requests for the maintenance of the tragedy in his repertoire show that the impression created was one not easily removed. Mr. Harvey has been delighted to accede to the numerous requests, with the result that Hamlet will be played in all the more important centres. As we have already stated The Corsican Brothers will be Mr. Harvey's autumn tour novelty.

MR. C. W. ERCOLE, the Parisian impresario, has just concluded all arrangements for producing Cinderella, the gorgeous Drury Lane pantomime, at the Théâtre de la Porte St. Martin, Paris. This is the first instance of such a vast transcontinental undertaking. Mr. Arthur Collins, Mr. J. Glover, and Mr. Bruce Smith are leaving for Paris to superintend the rehearsals. This is a real example of the "entente cordiale."

MRS. LANGTRY obtained a success on the Turf on Wednesday, when "Mr. Jersey's" five-year-old Vergia won the Grasmere High Handicap at Liverpool. Minor honours have been secured by Mr. George Edwardes, whose three-year-old Marie Blanche took second place in the Forest Selling Handicap, while Red Heart's Pride, another from the enterprising manager's stable, ran up to the winner of the Thursday Selling Plate at Windsor.

MANY will regret to hear of the death of Mr. Charles Wybert, of Liverpool, a well-known actor and agent. For some time Mr. Wybert had been an inmate of the Royal Infirmary in that city, and died on Saturday from cancer of the stomach. The deceased, who had reached the age of 60 years, had spent the whole of his life in the profession, having, in former times, travelled his own company in all part of the United Kingdom. For some years, however, he devoted his energies towards "dressing" theatrical ventures and conducting an agency. He was a delightful teller of stories, and some of his adventures were most interesting. Included in his experience was a slight acquaintance with Charles Dickens, with whom he played in amateur work, and to whom he bore a remarkable facial resemblance. Mr. Wybert had many excellent qualities, and was very popular. His numerous friends will hear with genuine grief of his demise at an age when all his faculties were undiminished.

MR. JERROLD ROBERTSHAW is about to embark on a managerial enterprise, and will produce two plays, both by F. Kinsey Peile, at the Opera House, Tunbridge Wells, on Thursday next. The first is a one-act piece called The Mummer's Wife, suggested by Catulle Mendès' Femme de Tabarin; and the second is a comedy-drama in three acts, entitled The Adventurer, the original production of which took place at the Gaiety Theatre, Hastings, on July 10, 1905. Mr. Robertshaw himself will be in a cast of exceptional strength, which will also include Messrs. E. M. Robson, Harvey Long, and Percival Stevens, and Miss Marie Löhr. The following Monday the company will be at the Theatre Royal, Bradford, and London playgoers will have an opportunity of enjoying the interesting performance at the Shakespeare, Clapham, on Aug. 13.

"THE ADVENTURER," it may be well to state, already figures in theatrical annals as the name of a play founded on a story of Eugene Sue, and produced at Drury-lane just upon half a century ago. The play, in which no less a celebrity than Mr. Barry Sullivan appeared, deals with the alleged escape of the Duke of Monmouth, the illegitimate son of Charles II., while the period of Mr. Peile's comedy-drama is laid in 1830. A change of title would, however, seem expedient.

MR. NORMAN V. NORMAN, who, with Miss Beatrice Wilson and his full company, has been playing a special week at Lowestoft, has succeeded in crowding the local theatre, in spite of the heat, each evening. This is Mr. Norman's first visit to Lowestoft for some years.

A FLORAL fairy play, entitled The Garden of Roses, will be produced at a fancy fair to be held on Tuesday and Wednesday next at Buckhurst, Wokingham, by permission of Mrs. Murdoch, in aid of the League of Mercy and the County Hospitals.

MDLLE. DONALDA, the Canadian soprano, and M. Seveilhac, the French tenor, were married on Monday in the Registry Office of St. Giles, close by New Oxford-street. Both artists are members of the Covent Garden Opera Company, and in the evening Mme. Seveilhac appeared in Don Giovanni.

MR. JAMES CAREW is to be Miss Ellen Terry's leading man during her American tour. He was the Captain Kearney of the Court revival of Captain Brassbound's Conversion, but in America he will play the title-rôle.

MISS MADGE CRICHTON has been engaged by Messrs. Shubert to appear as Lady Madcap in New York this season, and leaves on the Oceanic next Wednesday.

MR. WELLESLEY DRAPER has been engaged by Mr. Mark Blow for an autumn tour of the popular drama Under Two Flags, commencing August Bank Holiday at Queen's Theatre, Swindon.

AFTER a successful run of five weeks, "Kennedy's Komiks" terminated their engagement at the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Nuneaton, last week. The house is now closed till August Bank Holiday, re-opening with When London Sleeps.

MISS LENA ASHWELL is about to go on tour with The Shulamite, in which she will play her original part, under the management of Mr. William Greet, beginning on August 20th at Plymouth. Miss Ashwell will tour in this country for a month, after which she sails for New York to fulfil a twenty weeks' engagement with the Messrs. Shubert, who have acquired the American rights in Messrs. Claude Askew and Edward Knoblauch's drama. Deborah will then be taken up by Miss Evelyn D'Alroy. Mr. Charles Weir, Mr. T. W. Lovell, Mr. Reynolds Denniston, and Miss Mary Griffiths will also be in the company.

MISS VALERIE SALBERG, who took up the part of Ethel Carlton in the little "Commonwealth" company travelling His Excellency the Governor, when Miss Janet Alexander relinquished it to go to the Criterion, has had a varied and extensive experience, to which her evident youth hardly lends credence. Since leaving His Majesty's Theatre she has played ingénues and children for Mr. Edward Terry, Mr. Forbes Robertson, Mr. Peter Davey, and Mr. Ben Greet, and was with Sir Charles Wyndham's company throughout his last season. Miss Salberg's accomplishments include that of acting in German, for which purpose she was engaged by Mr. Hans Andresen, and she has also figured with success as one of the Pierrettes in Prunella at the Court Theatre, where she understudied Miss Dorothy Minto.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE HOWARD have been re-engaged by Mr. Edward Terry for his autumn tour. This is the fifth year Mr. and Mrs. Howard have been associated with the eminent actor, having accompanied him on his recent tours to South Africa, America, and Canada.

ARCHITECT and contractors are agreed that in the ordinary course of events the new Hicks' Theatre in Shaftesbury-avenue will be finished early in December, and can be opened the week before Christmas, when a second edition of The Beauty of Bath, now running at the Aldwych, will form the attraction. In addition to the Beauty for the evening programme, Mr. Seymour Hicks proposes to revive at afternoon performances daily Alice in Wonderland, himself taking the part of the Mad Hatter, and Miss Barbara Deane, whose singing of "All the world's a stage" has been such a success at the Aldwych, appearing as Alice. Nearly all the other parts will be played by children, the version of Lewis Carroll's charming story being that of the late Savile Clarke, with additional lyrics by Mr. H. Chance Newton, and the music by Walter Slaughter.

MR. TEMPLER POWELL, who will be remembered for his performance of Romeo in the London suburbs a little while back, is concluding this week his engagement in Cousin Kate. He is engaged to play the leading part, supporting Miss Mabel Love, in the autumn tour of The Freedom of Suzanne, commencing Aug. 13.

THE Lyceum Theatre, Crewe, after being closed for several weeks, during which the building "fore and aft" has been cleansed and redecorated, will be re-opened on Monday by the local Amateur Society, as has been the custom for several years past, and on August Bank Holiday the regular season will be inaugurated. Three Little Maids pay only a return visit. December will bring the twenty-fifth anniversary of Mr. Taylor's opening of the theatre and continuous management since. The veteran is contemplating a benefit on one of the Christmas week nights, when it is expected many who have visited the Lyceum in the past will appear for a short time once before the curtain.

MISS GRACE LESTER is re-engaged by Mr. James Willard to star in his forthcoming tour of A Woman's Pluck, commencing Aug. 6, at Worcester. Miss Lester recently concluded a twenty-four weeks' tour with the same management, playing the leading part in The Midnight Mail, this autumn tour making her third engagement with Mr. Willard.

M. COQUELIN, the famous French comedian, is the founder of Actors' Almshouses in France, and an open-air theatre in connection with the institution was opened on Wednesday at Pont-aux-Dames.

WE understand that Mr. Henry George, so long associated with the Drury Lane and Adelphi dramas, has been engaged by Mr. Arthur Collins as stage-manager for his forthcoming tour of The Prodigal Son.

LIEUT. JULIAN MALVERN, the lessee of the Royalty Theatre, Morecambe, appeared in A Wife's Peril on the evening of the 19th inst., and gave a capital interpretation of the Hon. Gus Cholmondley, a part he has sustained in the course of his career no fewer than 600 times. There was a capital house, and Mr. Malvern's reappearance behind the footlights "for one night only" was made the occasion of a popular demonstration.

MR. FREDERICK FORREST, stage-manager of The Squawman company, under the management of Messrs. Liebler and Co., the well-known New York theatrical firm, was in London this week. Mr. Forrest is enthusiastic in his praise of The Squawman, which he considers to be one of the greatest plays of its class.

MR. LEONARD PAGDEN, who is playing Col. Brinthorpe in Sunday, took a complimentary benefit at the West Pier, Brighton, on the 19th inst., the occasion of his 350th appearance there in a little over six years. The house was packed in every part, and Mr. Pagden received an enthusiastic reception.

MR. LESLIE FABER has been engaged by Mr. Chas. Frohman to play the leading juvenile part in Mr. Henry Arthur Jones' new play The Hypocrites, which is to be produced in the early autumn at the Hudson Theatre, New York. The company also includes Miss Millward, the popular Adelphi heroine, who recently reappeared in London in A School for Husbands after her long stay in America.

MR. LOUIS CALVERT has fixed upon Thursday, August 9, for the opening of his season at the New Theatre with Amasis. The central figure in Mr. Fenn's play is an Egyptian Princess unknown to history, on whom a masculine name is bestowed by a parent who had hoped for a son. The traditional Amasis was the son of a poor captain who was put on the throne by the army, with whom he was very popular. In addition to Miss Ruth Vincent, Mr. Rutland Barrington, Mr. Norman Salmond, Mr. Roland Cunningham, and Mr. Whitworth Mitton, the cast includes that clever comedian, Mr. Herbert Ross, and Miss Madge Vincent.

MANY habitués of the new Opera House, Doncaster, will regret to learn of the decease of Mr. John Martin Chapman, the father of the popular managing-director of the theatre. He had been ill only a week, but complications arose, and he passed away on Saturday at the age of seventy years, death being due to leucocythæmia and abnormal increase in the corpuscles of the blood. Mr. Chapman, sen., was invariably to be seen about the theatre, and was deservedly held in the highest esteem by his fellow-townsmen, and also by the members of the various companies who have visited Doncaster. The founder of the Doncaster Billposting Company, he began in a small way about eighteen years ago, and, after working up a colossal business, handed it over to his son, Mr. J. W. Chapman. The funeral took place at the Doncaster Cemetery on Wednesday afternoon amid every manifestation of sympathy and respect.

MR. CHARLES MANNERS is reaping a rich reward for his enterprise in running an operatic season at the slackest period of the year. Brilliant and enthusiastic audiences have been attracted to the Lyric Theatre, and the efforts of the cultured artists, together with those of the superb chorus, have resulted in the bestowal of lavish tokens of approval. The programme for next week will be as follows:—Monday, Eugene Onegin; Tuesday, Lohengrin; Wednesday matinée, Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci; Wednesday evening, Tannhäuser; Thursday, Lucia di Lammermoor; Friday, The Huguenots; Saturday matinée, Faust, and evening, The Bohemian Girl.

MR. MARK H. LINDON, the managing director of the Theatre Royal Co., Ltd., Stanley, took a benefit on Monday, when a full house assembled. The programme included the fine old drama, The Flowers of the Forest, in which Mr. Lindon played Ishmael, and gave a striking performance. Mrs. Lindon was a charming Starlight Bess, and other prominent parts were played by Mrs. A. W. Wilson, Miss Minnie Holmes, Mrs. McGoldrick, Mr. George Clark, Mr. John McGoldrick, Mr. Frank Rock, Mr. James Gates, Mr. R. D. Grundy, and Mr. James Fairley. A miscellaneous entertainment was contributed to by the Sisters McIntyre, Miss Lily Lindon, the Albion Glee Singers, and little Lily Robertshaw.

TOWARDS the close of the performance Mr. Lindon came forward and said it was most gratifying to one like himself, who had catered for the public in Stanley for thirteen years, to see how they had turned out on the occasion of his annual benefit. He could never forget their appreciation and kindness, and he only hoped that they would have many more such annual gatherings, the friendly character of which was of far higher value than any monetary residue left after the heavy expenses had been paid. He thanked the artists who had taken part in the performance, which he thought they would agree with him had been exceedingly creditable, and showed that they had talent in Stanley and the district and amongst their friends. He also thanked the gentlemen of the orchestra for the beautiful music and its admirable rendering. Once more, in Shakespearean phrase, he would say, "I'm e'en poor in thanks, yet I thank you."

THE ways and means of autograph hunters are varied and comprehensive, but we have lately come across one whose ideas and methods are delightfully simple and refreshing. The victim, in this case was Miss Millie Legarde, the charming actress, who is about to tour the suburban theatres shortly with Mr. Popple (of Ippleton), and we are indebted to her for permission to use the following epistles:—

"Dear Miss Legarde,—I beg to enclose herewith half a dozen photos of yourself, and to ask if you will very kindly do me the favour of signing them for me, on the mount below the pictures, whenever you have a minute to spare. I ask you to sign on the mount specially because I am told that the ink is detrimental to the film of the photographic paper, and I do not wish this, and I shall esteem it a further favour if you will do this for me. I send in addition a stamped addressed envelope, in which the photos may be returned, and thanking you in anticipation, believe me to remain, Truly, Mr. H—— H. H——."

"To Miss Millie Legarde, the Prince of Wales's Theatre, W. Mr. H—— H. H—— has received the note containing a request for half a crown. He regrets to state that he does not see his way to contribute to this society in return for the signature of Miss Legarde, which he requested in his letter of yesterday's date. He does not think the same worth it, and will, therefore, be obliged by an immediate return of his pictures, when they will be destroyed, as Mr. H—— does not collect unautographed photos."

THE report stage of the Musical Copyright Bill was concluded on the 20th inst., when Mr. Crean moved an amendment providing that a man could be arrested only if he had been previously convicted of selling pirated music. Mr. Healy supported the amendment, which was rejected by 151 to 50.

ON Monday Mr. J. D. White asked the Prime Minister whether, seeing that the Musical Copyright Bill was introduced as a private member's Bill, and in view of the character of its provisions, he would leave the decision on the third reading an open question, and not put on the Government tellers. Sir H. Campbell-Bannerman replied that the Bill had been thoroughly discussed since its adoption by the Government, and he saw no reason for taking the course suggested.

THE new Gaiety Theatre, Ayr, opens on Monday evening with The Youngest of Three, the author, Mr. H. F. Maltby, taking an important part in the piece. Mr. R. C. Buchanan, the managing-director, has secured many fine companies for the ensuing season.

MANAGERS evidently know a good thing when it comes their way. The anouncements of W. Scott Phipp that Servais Le Roy would shortly tour Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco, the World's Monarchs of Magic, in an entirely new mystical play, has been followed by innumerable offers of dates for the novelty.

THE matinée at Her Majesty's Theatre, Walsall, on July 14, in aid of the fund being raised on behalf of Miss Dot Stephens, who met with such a terrible accident five weeks ago, drew an immense house. The programme of thirty-nine turns was contributed to by M. Van Biene, who was heartily greeted in his one-act play, The Master Musician. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finden gave their droll sketch Two to One. Miss Mabel Sinclair was responsible for a clever ventriloquial performance, and among other talented turns were those of Mr. Mike Whallen, whose patter was greatly effective, and Mr. George Adams, who sang a stirring Colonial song.

MR. GEORGE MUSGROVE'S Prince of Pilsen company has been secured by Mr. Cecil Beryl as a special attraction for next week at the Theatre Royal, Brighton. This will mark the inauguration of the third tour of this popular transatlantic musical comedy. To fittingly celebrate the occasion, several numbers of a novel nature have been interpolated, and elaborate new scenery and dresses have been provided. With the exception of Mr. Martin Adeson, the popular comedian, who will enact the brewer from Cincinnati, and Mr. J. B. Fox, who plays the title-rôle, Miss Isa Bowman as Nellie, and Miss Adele Roze, the Vassar girl, the cast remains unchanged. Miss Millicent Marsden will resume her original part of Mrs. Crocker. Mr. Thomas M. Tunbridge is musical director, Charles A. Wenman, stage-manager; Hugh Fleming, advance-director, and the general management of the company is once more in the hands of Mr. Charles Thorburn.

SIGNOR PUCCINI, the eminent composer, who paid a flying visit to London this week, found in an unexpected quarter a libretto, which he has already started to set to music. "I received a mysterious parcel one morning," he says, "and found it to be a typewritten manuscript of a scenario. I carefully read it, and was so enchanted with its plot that I communicated with the author, and for the last few weeks we have been hard at work in arranging details. The story is of a Spanish nature, but in no way related to the adventures of Carmen, the heroine of Bizet's great opera. I hope to have this opera completed before next June, and I trust I shall have the honour of giving London musicians the opportunity of hearing it before it is produced elsewhere."

THE body appointed to control the operations of the Commissioners of the Actors' Association held a special meeting on Monday last, when the chair was taken by Mr. S. Major Jones. There were present Miss Georgina Hamilton, Messrs. Cecil Barth and Leslie Carter, and C. B. Rivington representing the secretary. The new set of seven reasons for joining the Association were again under discussion, and the further consideration of the matters was referred to the next meeting of this body to be held on Monday, the 30th inst. It was agreed that a special whip should be sent to the members of the Organising Committee, requesting them to attend the next meeting to consider a circular to be sent to all commissioners, pointing out the various duties they have undertaken and the best way of carrying them out.

THE usual weekly meeting of the Council of the Association was held on Tuesday last. There were present—Mr. Burton Cooke (in the chair), Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Mesdames Kate Bishop and Saba Raleigh, Messrs. Cecil Barth, J. Cooke Beresford, Acton Bond, Thalberg Corbett, F. Cremlin, M. R. Morand, Spencer Trevor, and C. B. Rivington (for secretary).

THE hon. solicitors reported progress in several matters, and also that they had advised members on points submitted. They were requested to write letters on behalf of several members' claims, and, if necessary, to enforce payment. A framed picture of the late Mr. William Terriss, presented to the Association by Mr. Frank Melrose, was accepted by the Council. A letter was read from a member, who, after tendering his resignation and had been written to by a commissioner, in which he expressed his willingness to continue his membership. The report of the Finance and General Purposes Committee was received. Marion Beresford and Rose Hélène were nominated for election to the Association.

THE Finance and General Purposes Committee held a meeting on Tuesday last. There were present—Mr. Acton Bond (chairman), Mrs. Cecil Raleigh, and Messrs. J. Cooke Beresford, M. R. Morand, and C. B. Rivington (for secretary). Several matters were under discussion, and the secretary received instructions.

MISS FLORRIE GROVES desires to thank her friends for the many kind inquiries during her recent illness. She is now favourably recovering, and hopes to resume her part in the course of a few days.

MR. JOHN GERANT began yet another tour with that popular military play At Duty's Call on Monday last, at the Theatre Royal, Scarborough, with every sign of continued success. The piece has now been before the public under Mr. Gerant's management for more than eight years, and its popularity shows no sign of diminishing. For the present tour several old members of the company have been re-engaged, among whom are Messrs. Harry Scott, Harry Ugar, Ernest St. John, and Ivan Mavis; while the new-comers include Misses Lillie Crammonde, Beatrice Western, Eva Belle, and Mr. Julian Bainbridge.

MISS MARY NEIL and MR. GEORGE KIRK began the second tour of their successful drama Her Luck in London at the Hippodrome, Wigan, on the 16th inst. A packed house greeted the opening performance, and the continuous rounds of applause testified the audiences' keen appreciation of this remarkable play. The Mayor (Mr. Hugh Ross) was present on the Thursday night, and expressed himself in glowing terms in regard to the play, which he declared to be a capital one, "beautifully acted, and teaching a lesson to the rising generation with as great an effect as the most powerful sermon."

MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER was honoured by Royalty at the first night of Down Our Alley at the Garrick on Wednesday, when Princess Louise Duchess of Argyll was present. The proceeds of the performance are devoted to the funds of Charing Cross Hospital.

MR. HARRY EMERIC has been engaged for the part of Pip in Mr. Frederick Paul's forthcoming production of The Lord of the Last.—Mr. Alfred Martin, who recently concluded his second engagement with Mr. Cyril Maude's Beauty and the Barge company, has been specially engaged as advance director by Baron H. Harriss for his principal company of The Prince of Pilsen.—Miss Polly Marsh has been re-engaged for the autumn by Mr. Walter Melville for her original character of Elizabeth Burke in Her Second Time on Earth, a part she has played 900 nights.

Two novelties are promised during the autumn season at Covent-garden, under the direction of Messrs. Frank Rendle and Neil Forsyth. One is Alfredo Catalani's Loreley, which was played in Turin in 1890, and is a revised version of his opera Elda, brought out in the same city in 1880. The other new work is Umberto Giordano's Fédora, a setting of Sardou's great drama, which was composed in 1898, two years after the produciton of his André Chenier, at Milan.

LATAINER'S successful historical opera The Hero of Jerusalem was repeated at the Pavilion Theatre on Monday evening by the Jewish Operatic and Dramatic Company, which again gave a very fine performance of this interesting play. Special mention must be made of Mesdames Zwiebel, Kayzer, Bruh, Messrs. J. Fineberg, Schapira, Schilling, Gusofsky, J. Scherman, Zeidel, and Isaacowitz. During the week The Bielostock Massacre, Blimele, The House of David, and Hannah, the Finisher, have been produced.

THE French play season at the Royalty terminates this evening with a performance of L'Honneur, in which M. Antoine will make his farewell appearance in London as an actor. According to present arrangements, Mr. Gaston Mayer will not begin his next season of French plays until January, when he hopes to include M. Guitry among his attractions. M. Mayer has provided Londoners with a dazzling array of Parisian celebrities, and his enterprise well deserved the brilliant patronage which attended it.

MR. PAUL RUBENS' visit to Holland has given him a wealth of ideas for his new musical play, Miss Hook of Holland, which is to be produced in London in December. "I shall set my piece," he says, "near the Zuyder Zee. I shall show you the Market Place as I saw it—with the Customs officials all in different coloured helmets; the cheese-carriers, all with different-coloured trays; the maidens and widows of the place, each class with ribbons of distinctive colours. I shall reproduce the amazing politeness of everybody. You raise your hat to the man who carries your trunk, to the waiter who hands you a light. Then the Polder country is a huge flower-bed of tulips and hyacinths. Everyone cultivates his garden in Holland, and in the evening the family foregather in the garden and take their rest." A very inspiriting prospect is thus held out by the talented author.

M. POREL, manager of the Paris Vaudeville, has lost the action in which he sought to recover £400 from M. Gémier, of the Théâtre Antoine, because the latter had violated his agreement. M. Gémier argued that he had been within his rights, inasmuch as he had been engaged to fill one of the leading rôles in La Marche Nuptiale, whilst M. Porel had sought to impose upon him an insignificant part in which he declined to appear. The Court held that M. Gémier was justified in the breach of contract, as his engagement was for principal rôles only.

In such a production as Down Our Alley success is mainly dependent on three points—clever character-drawing, a nice sense of proportion, and a truthful realisation of environment. These essentials have been supplied by Mr. Bourchier, who having chosen as the foundation of his play M. Anatole France's story of Crainquebille, shows throughout this most interesting production that he possesses the invaluable quality of sympathy with his subject. In his little drama he tells the simple annals of the dosser, the wastrel, and the street vendor with the convincing force of the accurate, unbiassed observer, and interests one thoroughly in the lower deeps of London life in which the tragic, the serious, and the mirthful elements are so inextricably mixed.

The story of Down Our Alley opens in the squalid neighbourhood of Titchmarsh-street—a mean thoroughfare that may be recognised as one of the purlieus of St. Giles's. Here we get some thumb-nail sketches of street life in the doings of a cheap-jack, a kerbstone conjurer, and the newspaper boy. There are the flotsam and jetsam of London—to be found everywhere in its meaner streets—the gutter kiddies, whose cheeriness is invincible, and rises superior to their sordid surroundings; the coster with coat and kicksies "impearled," the befeathered donahs, the sneak thief, the sharper, the sailor and his lass (a light o' love), and the old vegetable vendor with his barrow. This is Joe Parrot, who has apparently many regular customers from the neighbouring alleys. Poor old Joe has been forty years getting his living in the street, and has never in the slightest degree obstructed the police in the performance of their duty; but strange ill-luck overtakes him now. Mrs. Pauline Bollet, a regular customer, after haggling with him over the price of a cabbage and a bunch of leeks, goes to fetch the money to pay for them. While waiting he is asked to move on several times by Police-constable Richard Pepper, who, becoming enraged at being struck on the helmet with a bunch of greens, arrests the old man and charges him with riotous conduct, and with shouting, "Down with the police, the swine!" Notwithstanding the manly protest of a kind-hearted medical man, Dr. Matthews, the malevolent "rozzer"—the slum name for a policeman—runs in poor old Parrot, who is brought before the magistrate, Mr. Fiddler, at a metropolitan police-court, to which the action is transferred in Scene II. Mr. Fiddler's administration of justice leaves much to be desired, and would cause numberless questions in the House and no little heckling of the Home Secretary if he were a real personage, which, fortunately for the prestige of British justice, he is not. It is a theatrical convention, perhaps, that there should be a spice of farce in a police-court scene on the stage, and it must be confessed that reports of humorous dialogues in our courts of summary jurisdiction often afford the public lively reading. For Mr. Fiddler's treatment of poor Joe Parrot, however, we hope there is no precedent in real life. The good-hearted doctor pays a barrister to defend him, but the stipendiary, with unlimited faith in the police evidence, sentences the inoffensive old coster to fourteen days' imprisonment.

In the third scene—the mean street at night—we find the old man broken down and deserted by his former pals, who jib at the taint of gaol-bird. Even Sailor Sal, the unfortunate, refuses to recognise him. Joe, starving and reckless, endeavours to get himself locked up by repeating "Down with the police, the swine!" but the good-natured "bobby" refuses to run him in, and in despair he seeks the river. A better fate than suicide is in store for him; for the Rat—an old pal who sells newspapers—has kept his barrow, and has the necessary cash to stock it, so that we take leave of poor old Joe, who at last rejoices in the prospect of peace and contentment.

Mr. Arthur Bourchier's sketch of Joe Parrot has a Meissonnier finish that leaves us wondering at the versatility of the gifted actor-manager. In the police-court scene especially Mr. Bourchier was particularly admirable. The bewilderment of the old man, his artlessness, and his pathetic appeals to the magistrate all sound the true note, and proclaim Mr. Bourchier to be one of the first character-actors of the English stage. His portrait of the old coster, indeed, will rank with his Dr. Johnson, and will go to prove his remarkable versatility. In the lengthy cast there are but few parts of any importance. In the scheme of melodramatic beneficence Mr. Walter Pearce takes a prominent position as the Rat, a poor street newsvendor with a heart of gold, and agreeably impresses one by his alertness and command of the volapük of the gutter. Mr. Charles V. France is amusing as Mr. Fiddler, with his mild attempts at jocularity; Mr. Arthur Whitby is decidedly good in the genial rôle of Dr. Matthews; Mr. Lawson Butt suggests with just sufficient obviousness the methods adopted by the worst sort of policemen in the overcolouring of their evidence; Mr. Julian L'Estrange gives the barrister's address with an air of profound conviction in the complete justice of his plea; Mr. J. H. Brewer is amusing as the somewhat obtrusive Usher; Mr. Frank Lacy makes a droll Bill Radford; the experienced Miss Madge Johnstone presents a whimsical portrait of the elderly Mrs. Radford, giving evidence against her husband of assault; and the proceedings at the police-court are also enlivened by the acting of Miss Kate Phillips as Pauline Bollet, Master Thomas Lipton, a promising youthful actor, as Henry Wilson, Mr. Harrison Carter as Timothy Wilson, and Mr. George Trollope as Herbert Freak. Miss Cecilia Powis may be praised for her artistic restraint in her delineation of Sailor Sal; and Miss Vivienne Whitaker, Miss Kate Harwood, Mr. O'Brien, Mr. Charles Goodhart, and Mr. Douglas Imbert may be singled out for their good work in parts of small opportunity. The realisation of a mean street in the poorer part of London is excellent.

As a preface to the new piece, Mr. Bourchier revived the play, in one act, by Alicia Ramsay and Rudolph de Cordova, entitled

"MONSIEUR DE PARIS."

Georges Delpit ..... MR. CHARLES V. FRANCE
Henri le Febvre ..... MR. JULIAN L'ESTRANGE
Mere Lisette ..... MISS MADGE JOHNSTONE
Jacinta ..... MISS VIOLET VANBRUGH

This powerful little piece again held the attention of a West-End audience, and repeated the triumph that it secured on its original production. Miss Violet Vanbrugh, as Jacinta, the daughter of the executioner, is again responsible for a moving and impressive impersonation of the girl to whom fate is so relentless. The actress displays a command of deep feeling in her expressions of joy at the love that has come into Jacinta's life, and makes us understand the fury of disappointment that prompts her to kill her lover.

Mr. Julian L'Estrange is a warm and impassioned lover; Mr. Charles V. France makes a sinister and weird figure of the Executioner; and Miss Madge Johnstone is a motherly and sympathetic Lisette.

"THE BIELOSTOCK MASSACRE."

A Tragedy in Five Acts, in Yiddish, written by John Jackson, with music by F. Staub, produced at the Pavilion Theatre, Mile End, on Friday, July 19, for the first time.

Although it seems that from time immemorial to the present day we have been destined to hear of massacres of the Jews, yet it must be a source of wonder, to say the least of it, why such a state of affairs should exist; for with the soberest of peoples—those not given to rabid anti-Semiticism, no just cause can be found for such outbreaks of savagery as we too often hear of in Russia. It is upon one of the most recent events in that country that Mr. John Jackson has based his latest effort, The Bielostock Massacre, which was produced on Friday evening at the Pavilion Theatre, with unqualified success.

Seremeteff, Chief of Police, having conceived a passion for Dinah Sheingold, and also intensely hating the Jews, has arranged with his agents for a pogrom to take place on June 14. In the meantime he calls upon Abraham Sheingold, and demands one hundred thousand roubles, as the price of his friendship towards the Jews in Bielostock, which amount must be forthcoming by the following morning. Meanwhile David Sheingold, who is a Nihilist, is away organising a Committee of Defence in case of the pogrom taking place, and returns home in time to see his sister Dinah arrested on a false charge of Nihilism, brought about by a bundle of incriminating papers having been secretly placed in her room by a police officer. In the second act Seremeteff offers Dinah freedom at the price of her honour, which she indignantly and scornfully repels, and is then ordered to be lashed for her refusal. At this moment Rebecca Löewinthal, the affianced of David, enters and pleads for the release of her friend, but Seremeteff, with an eye always to beauty, decides to keep her also under restraint. Just at this time there comes David, who, having disguised himself as a general, now demands Dinah, in the name of the Governor-General of Grodno, but Petroff, having purposely misunderstood, produces both the women, who depart with the pseudo general, completing the discomfiture of Seremeteff, who vents his wrath on Petroff. Dinah and Rebecca are now being brought back to the house of Sheingold, and David having revealed his disguise, they all proceed to the synagogue, where the Jews are exhorted to arm themselves and prepare for action.

The fourth act deals only with the actual massacre, a highly sensational scene, and represented with such graphic detail as to be painfully realistic. The principal personages having now been killed or wounded in the pogrom, the last scene of the tragedy must of necessity be one of despair, the play terminating with the pathetic appeal of the dying Abraham to Christian Europe for protection to the defenceless Jews.

Although Mr. John Jackson has indeed scored a very great triumph in his latest contribution to the Yiddish stage, yet it will be seen that the play is entirely episodic, with an absence of love interest and a very slight element of humour. For the acting we have nothing but the highest praise, Mr. M. D. Waxman making a handsome David, and using his fine, resonant voice with great effect, his elocution being especially good in his declamatory speech in the synagogue. Mr. Schapira was the wealthy Abraham Sheingold to the life, his acting in the last scene being marked by great power. Seremeteff, the Chief of Police, was capitally portrayed by Mr. J. Fineberg, who had the most difficult character to perform in the piece. The execrations which this talented artist evoked from the enraged audience were ample tribute to the great efficiency with which he rendered this repellant part. Mr. Fineberg must be congratulated upon a very successful impersonation. Mr. J. Scherman was a very happy Petroff, his "business" in the second scene with Seremeteff bringing down the house. Mr. Streng looked a venerable Rabbi, and made the most of his opportunities. Madame F. Waxman was pleasing as Dinah, and roused the audience to enthusiasm, and Madame Rose Waxman as Rebecca was seen to great advantage. Madame J. Kayzer was a satisfactory Mariana, her song and dance with Petroff being vociferously encored. The Rose and Bluma of the Misses Lubritzky were played with charm and naïvete; Mr. Isaacowitz was a stern and forbidding Governor-General; and Ivan was suitably enacted by Mr. Zaidel. As is usual with this management, the mounting, scenery, dresses, and accessories were of the best possible description, the stage management being also beyond reproach. The special music written for the production by Mr. F. Staub, was full of local colouring and added to the success.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF MUSIC.

At the Royal College of Music on Wednesday night a very long programme of Chamber music was given by the students. Owing to the extreme length of the programme, consisting of fifteen items, it is impossible to do full justice to all the clever performers. The concert commenced with an organ solo, "Intermezzo and Fugue" (from Sonata in E flat), by Rheinberger, ably performed by Mr. Eric Gritton. Miss Minnie Arnold sang two songs by A. Somervell, "O that 'twere possible" and "A voice by the cedar-tree," with capital intonation; and Miss J. Bertha Dawe did full justice to Marcello's "Quella fiamma," being rewarded by hearty applause. She has a fine and most expressive voice. In the Sonata for 'cello and piano, in F, Op. 99, by Brahms, Miss Beatrice Jones and Miss Agnes Stevens greatly distinguished themselves. Miss Majorie Beer was also eminently successful in her violin solo of Guiraud's "Caprice," being at the close recalled many times; and Miss Jane Robinson was well received for her song, "Les Oiselets" (Massenet). A youthful and clever student, Miss Ellen Edwards, was most enthusiastically recalled several times for her able rendering of Brahms' "Variations" (Paganini), first set. Other clever performers were Miss Grace Trautz, Miss Geraldine B. Wilson, Mr. Charles Warwick-Evans, Miss Lucy Polgreen, Miss Florence S. Taylor, Mr. Edmund Weeks, and Mr. Robert Chignell. The accompanists were Miss Alice Cotton, Miss Margaret Hulme, Miss Ellen Tuckfield, and Mr. Harold Samuel.

THE MOODY-MANNERS OPERA CO.

At the Lyric Theatre on Saturday night last, the Moody-Manners Opera Company opened their five weeks' season of opera in English before a large and enthusiastic audience with a performance of Lohengrin—a most happy choice, as Wagner's earlier opera, for some reason, has not been heard this season at Covent Garden, and the story is a familiar one to all opera-goers. It was a bold stroke giving an opera season in midsummer, but Mr. Charles Manners, that staunch advocate of English opera, has the courage of his convictions, and as London even in the dog-days is never empty, no doubt there will be numbers who will gladly welcome the chance of hearing grand opera done—and well done, too—at most moderate prices; and if we may judge from the large numbers who flocked to the Lyric on Saturday night there is every prospect of a most successful season. Although there was no restriction in the matter of costume, the majority came in full evening dress, and the house presented a brilliant appearance when the curtain rose on Lohengrin. Mme. Fanny Moody made a most charming and sympathetic Elsa, while her acting and singing and the delightful purity of her intonation deserve the warmest praise. Miss Toni Seiter, although her vocal powers were hardly equal to the demands of the part, gave a fine dramatic rendering of the intriguing Ortrud, being most ably supported by Mr. Lewys James, who displayed a fine voice and great histrionic ability in the character of Telramund, the duet especially in the second act between Ortrud and Terlamund going remarkably well. Mr. Wilson Pembroke's pleasing voice and fine commanding figure made an imposing Lohengrin, while his artistic restraint and dignified acting in the part may be warmly commended. Mr. Charles Manners made a most regal King, the music giving ample opportunity for the display of his fine sonorous voice and capital enunciation. Mr. Marshall Vincent gave due importance to the character of the Herald, and the chorus, always a strong point with the Moody-Manners Company, showed great animation and intelligence, thereby adding greatly to the interest of the opening scenes. All the principal artists were enthusiastically applauded at the close of each act. The orchestra, under Herr Richard Eckhold, were, on the whole, satisfactory, and will no doubt do still better when more accustomed to their surroundings, as it was evident they were somewhat cramped for space, two side boxes being brought into service for the extra members of the band. The costumes were new and handsome. Mr. Manners appeared every inch a King in his fine gold armour, while the picturesque mediæval array of Telramund evidently showed that he came prepared for the worst and determined to run no risks in case a champion did arrive for Elsa. The dress also of Ortrud was a perfect feast of colours, making a fine contrast to the virgin simplicity of Elsa's costume. The dresses also in the bridal scene were both handsome and varied, in particular Elsa's bridal robes and the pages' costumes. Mr. Pembroke's silver armour in the first act also made a dazzling appearance in the limelight.

The Lyric Theatre proved well adapted for operatic purposes, and Mr. Manners, who warmly deserves the support of the musical public, should have a most successful season.

On Monday the performance of Tannhäuser attracted a very large audience to the Lyric Theatre, and really it would seem that at last success will attend the present season of opera in English. Mr. Manners has that one quality which always commands respect even in these degenerate days, namely, courage—that dogged determination never to be beaten which is so characteristic of the English, winning them renown in all parts of the world. Another reason that gives promise of a good season is the fact that even in the short time that has elapsed since the Moody-Manners Company were last with us, the public have advanced in musical knowledge and good taste, and like to take their English opera seriously and in strict accordance with the traditions of Covent Garden. The rapt attention paid by the large audience on Monday night to the fine performance given of Tannhäuser showed that we are indebted to the Germans for other things besides fine music—they have given us hints how to behave in the presence of Art. It was only after the curtain fell on each act that the audience broke into loud and long-continued applause, and called the principal artists to the front. The cast of Tannhäuser was excellent. Mr. Joseph O'Mara admirably sang the music of the hero, and although some slight exception might have been taken to his acting, it was quite in keeping with the character of the weak-minded knight, swayed with every passing emotion, and, as before said, it was a pleasure for once to hear the part sung and not declaimed. Mme. de Vere made a womanly and effective Elizabeth, her fine high top notes being skilfully employed, especially in the invocation to the hall of song in the second act. She shared the honours with Mr. Joseph O'Mara in their fine rendering of the duet in the same scene; her acting also deserves praise. Mr. William Dever as Wolfram sang and acted with grace and distinction; and Mr. Charles Magrath's fine voice and dignified bearing made an imposing figure of Hermann, recalling pleasing memories of that great artist M. Plançon. Miss Toni Seiter proved quite equal to her task in the character of Venus. The other parts of Henrich, Reinmar, Walter, and a young shepherd were well filled by Mr. Tattersall, Mr. H. Brindle, Mr. R. Brookes, and Miss M. Wilcocks. A word of hearty praise also ought to be awarded to the fine and animated chorus and to the clever stage management for the effective arrangement and grouping in the Hall of Song scene. The orchestra, under the able control of Herr Eckhold, even in the short time since the opening night, have greatly improved. The fine house and abundant applause evidently stimulated all in their efforts on Monday night. Tannhäuser should prove quite a trump card in the Moody-Manners' present season.

Gounod's Faust was performed at the Lyric on Tuesday evening, a large audience being present. Mr. Wilson Pembroke appeared as the hero. Although Mr. Pembroke's voice is not powerful, it is sweet and pure in quality, and he sang the lovely "Salve dimora" like a true artist. His acting also is convincing and natural, showing Faust, as Gounod intended, as a young and impulsive lover rather than a hardened roué, and showing impatience at times of the restraint exercised over him by Mephistopheles, rather than making a bon comrade of the evil one both seeking the ruin of a fair maiden. Mr. Charles Manners's Mephistopheles has always been considered one of his finest creations, both vocally and histrionically, his clever business in the part, and the sardonic contempt shown throughout the opera for anything pure or holy are the gifts of a true artist; his costume in the orthodox scarlet was strikingly picturesque. Madame Fanny Moody made a most charming and girlish Marguerite, her greatest achievements being, of course, made in the garden scene, with its delightful King of Thule air and the famous "Jewel Song," the latter being sung in the most brilliant manner. It seems a pity that Gounod's and Verdi's operas could not be treated with the same respect shown to Wagner's works, namely, leaving all applause till the fall of the curtain, a method that so greatly enhances the artistic effect; but this is not the rule at either Covent Garden or elsewhere when the older operas are given. Mr. Lewys James proved an excellent Valentine, singing his solo, "O loving smile of sister kind" (the dio possente of the Italian version) with much charm and artistic feeling. Miss Mildred Baker made a most effective Siebel, and Miss Arnold's Martha may be commended. The part of Wagner was skilfully undertaken by Mr. G. King. The opera was handsomely mounted, and the life and bustle of the Kermasse scene, which owes so much to the splendid chorus Mr. Manners has at his command, came in for its share of the abundant applause bestowed during the evening. The ensemble generally was excellent, and the famous old opera went smoothly under the conductorship of Signor Romualdo Sapio.

At the matinée performance on Wednesday afternoon at the Lyric Theatre, Verdi's Il Trovatore was given, and, to judge by the frequent applause, it would seem that even in these days of advanced musical culture, melody still retains its hold over a large number of the public. The performance of the old opera, affectionately styled in past days "good old Trovatore," by the English Opera Company on Wednesday was an excellent one. Madame Blanche Marchesi gave a most dramatic reading of Leonora's part, besides rendering the many florid passages with which the music abounds in the most brilliant manner. It was mainly due to her efforts, and those of Mr. Joseph O'Mara, whose Manrico was excellent, that the Miserere scene was repeated. Mr. William Dever acquitted himself well in the character of Count de Luna, and Miss Toni Seiter gave ample proof of her versatile abilities as the witch Azucena. Ferrando was skilfully undertaken by Mr. Marshall Vincent. The chorus, as usual, was excellent, and the orchestra, under Signor Sapio, performed admirably.

Tschaikowsky's much-discussed opera, Eugene Onegin, was given on Wednesday evening, proving far more attractive by reason of the smaller stage than when produced at Covent Garden, and the performance of the opera by the Moody-Manners Company was certainly a fine one. The cast was the same as when recently given at the Coronet Theatre, Madame Moody making a delightful Tatiana, her singing of the latter song in the second scene being one of the most charming incidents of the opera. Mr. Manners was the Prince Gremin, his fine singing of the air in praise of love being one of the many successes of the evening. Mr. Lewys James made an excellent Eugene Onegin, and the part of Lenski, his friend, lost nothing in the hands of Mr. Wilson Pembroke, who acted with skill and dignity. All the smaller parts of Gilliot, Saretzki, a Colonel, and Larina were well filled, and a word of praise must also be given to Mr. V. Brodo for his capital Triquet. Miss Mildred Baker as Olga greatly distinguished herself. The opera was well mounted, the dainty dresses and charming orchestration of the ballroom scene at Larina's house doing great credit to this clever company, while the realistic manner in which the duel scene was performed also deserves acknowledgment. The orchestra, under Herr Richard Eckhold, gave a good account of Tschaikowsky's delicate score, and Mr. T. C. Fairbairn is to be commended for his able stage management of the various scenes.

PRIZES AT THE GUILDHALL.

The following students have passed the highest grade examination set by the school, and are duly elected Associates for the year 1906. The first three in the order of merit are awarded the school medals, as below:—Gold medallist, Dorothy Cummings (singing); silver medallist, Lillie E. Selden (mandoline); bronze medallist, Fanny L. Cuthbert (singing); Winifred Johnson, violin; Nan Stewart, elocution; Gordon D. Hodge, singing; Vera E. Wise, pianoforte; Margery E. Hope, theory; Edith L. Hieber, singing; Mildred W. Percy, pianoforte.

Special prize winners consist of the following:—The Lord Mayor's prize, a purse of £5 5s., for soprano vocalists, won by Beatrice Jefferys; the Lady Mayoress's prize, a purse of £5 5s., for pianoforte students, won by M. Gordon Burgess; the Sheriff's prize (Alderman and Sheriff, Sir Henry G. Smallman), a purse of £5 5s. for mezzo-soprano vocalists, divided, won by Ethelmay Barwell-Holbrook and Maude Willby; the Sheriff's prize (Sheriff, Sir Thomas V. Bowater), a purse of £5 5s., for contralto vocalists, divided, won by Dorothy Crompton and Alice Stroud; the Chairman's prize, a purse of £5 5s. for tenor vocalists (presented by Mr. James Roll, C.C.), divided, won by Wallis Anderson and Leonard Gowings; a special prize of £2 2s. for organ students (presented by Mr. James Rolls, C.C.), won by Joseph H. Lee; the Knill Challenge Cup, with silver medal, for an eminently deserving student (presented by the late Alderman Sir Stuart Knill, Bart., LL.D.), awarded to Jenny Hyman; the Davies gold medal, for a deserving student, male or female (presented by Mr. Richard Davies, J.P., C.C.), awarded to Frederick J. Daff; the Tillie gold medal, for a distinguished lady violin student (presented by Mr. Alexander Tillie, C.C.), awarded to Hilda Lett; the Summers prize, a purse of £5 5s., for contralto vocalists (presented by Mr. H. A. Summers, C.C.), won by Ada Eshelby-Phillips; the Brinsmead prize, a pianoforte value 60 guineas, open to all students, won by Ethel Harman; the Knight prize, a purse of £5 5s., for bass vocalists (presented by Lady Knight), won by D'Arcy Woollven; highly commended, C. Freeman Chadfield and Bevington Rosse; the Lady Jenkinson prize, a purse of £5, for pianoforte students (presented by Mrs. Sartoris), won by Jenny Hyman; commended, Miss Mabel Rutland; the Alexander prize, a book of poems, for elocution students (presented by Mr. George Alexander), won by Enid Rose; the Tubbs prize, a gold-mounted violin bow of the value of £10, for violin students (presented by Messrs. Tubbs and Son), won by Doris Cloud; the Hart prize, a violin bow and case, value 30 guineas (presented by Messrs. Hart and Son), won by Anton Tschaikov; the Max Hecht scholarship, £10 per annum, for British vocalists studying German classic songs, won by Edith Romea; the Libotton Memorial prize (founded by public subscription), a violoncello bow (with inscription) and bronze memorial plaque, won by George R. Watt.

The school prizes were awarded as follows:—Pianoforte, Metia Levin; soprano, Dora Palmer; contralto, Ella Kay; tenor, Frederick Blamey; baritone or bass, D'Arcy Woollven; violin, Audrey Richardson; violoncello, divided, Violet E. Doughty and George Watt; elocution (ladies), Nellie Lake; sight singing, Elizabeth Tarttelin; harp, Agnes Comyns Tucker; flute, Amelia Heiser; accompanying, Evelyn R. Harrison.

Principal scholarships for 1906-7 were secured by the following:—Knoop scholarship, value £75 per annum (given by Baron Johann von Knoop), Mr. Eric Leftwich (violoncello); the Mercers Company scholarship, 50 guineas per annum, Miss Ethelmay Barwell-Holbrook (soprano); the Merchant Taylors scholarships, £40 per annum, Miss Audrey Richardson (violinist); the Andrew Carnegie scholarships, Misses Elizabeth Tarttelin and Ethel Harman (vocalist and pianist respectively); the Palmer scholarships, Mr. R. J. Stannard and Muriel Herbert; the Corporation scholarships, £50 per annum, Stuart Welch and Dadine Sutherland.

The judges in the various competitions were Mesdames Louisa Sobrino, Fanny Davies, and Miriam Timothy, and Messrs Lloyd Chandos, E. Jackson, Herbert Waring, John Saunders, Percy Such, and H. Warner Hollis.

PRESENTATION.—On the occasion of the benefit to Mr. C. M. Daly at the Avenue Theatre, Sunderland, on Wednesday night, the beneficiare was the recipient of a fine case of silver-mounted briar pipes from the members of the Royal Order of Buffaloes in the town. The Avenue Stock Company also presented their stage-manager and producer with a gold-mounted umbrella.

"THE CURSE OF THE CARDS."

A Romantic Episode in One Act, by Messrs. E. Hoggan-Armadale and A. Shelton, produced for the first time on any stage at the Theatre Royal and Opera House, Stockport, on Wednesday, July 25.

Lady Christie ..... MISS VIOLET MACAREE
Sir Philip Christie ..... MR. ARTHUR ROSE
Lord D'Arcy ..... MR. COTTON HOLMES
Tresham ..... MR. JAMES FOX

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Gambling at cards has often been a theme for exemplification on the stage, displaying the ruin and disgrace that invariably follow in its train. The present little play similarly and admirably illustrates the evils of card-playing for money, and offers, to those who will accept them, a few commendable lessons.

The opening of the act shows Sir Philip Christie and his two friends, Lord D'Arcy and Tresham, seated at a table playing cards. With a remark, as he throws down his last card, that "he thought he would have won that trick," Sir Philip rises and commences to read a letter which purports to be from one Lord Denbigh, stating his intention of paying him a visit. His lordship, wearing a mask over his eyes, enters, and is invited by Sir Philip to have a game of cards, and suggests a hundred-guinea stake, which is agreed to. Sir Philip loses, and with the true gambler's spirit, presses for another game, and at his desire the stake this time is for five hundred guineas. During the play Lord Denbigh—whom we may as well at once say is Lady Christie in disguise—annoys Sir Philip by inquiring sarcastically about his charming wife. Sir Philip again loses, and producing a bunch of bank notes, representing twelve hundred guineas, pays over his losses and offers to play for the remaining six hundred guineas.

Whilst Sir Philip is intently studying his hand, Lord Denbigh manages to drop a card on the floor, and then draws Sir Philip's attention to it, saying he (Sir Philip) had dropped it, and whilst Sir Philip is in the act of picking the card up, Lord Denbigh takes up another trump card from the table, which enables him to win again. Lord Denbigh taunts Sir Philip on his losses, and reminds him that he has property and estates which, however, Sir Philip acknowledges are mortgaged; but he remembers that he has the estate his wife brought him on his marriage three years ago, which he makes himself believe is his legally, and he agrees to wager this, but suggests hazarding with the dice. This is not acceptable to Lord Denbigh, and Sir Philip gives way, and they continue to play at cards, Lord Denbigh again resorting to the card dropping and changing, and as a result becomes the possessor of the estate. Sir Philip assigns the property over, and then Lord Denbigh offers to stake his winnings against the favours of Sir Philip's charming wife. This insult is hotly resented by Sir Philip, who calls him a cheat, saying only a cheat could have such luck, and an arrangement of a duel is the outcome.

As Lord Denbigh is departing, he removes the mask from his eyes, and says, "My work is done." Sir Philip, struck with remorse at his ruined state, contemplates suicide, and whilst deliberating with himself, his wife, Lady Christie, enters, and she is informed of his having gambled away her estate. She does not reproach him, but pleads with him against taking his own life, and says she has something to give him, at the same time placing in his hands the bank notes and the assignment of the estate, saying, "I would stop at nothing to save you." Sir Philip, concluding that Lord Denbigh has bought his wife—"the price of my darling's shame"—and frenzied at the thought, is about to shoot himself, when Lady Christie rushes to him and in a brief struggle the pistol goes off, but no one is hurt. Lady Christie explains that it was she who impersonated Lord Denbigh, and extracts a solemn promise from Sir Philip never to play cards again. Thus all ends happily.

Beyond signing the assignment, Lord D'Arcy (Mr. Cotton Holmes) and Tresham (Mr. James Fox) have very little to do, but Mr. Arthur Rose gave a remarkable display of talent in his portrayal of the character of Sir Philip Christie, and Miss Violet Macaree acquitted herself most creditably as Lady Christie. The excellence of the acting assisted largely to maintain the interest until the end.

MISS ELSIE FOGERTY'S PUPILS.

Examination by Mr. F. R. Benson.

It was an attractive little programme that was presented on Thursday afternoon by Miss Elsie Fogerty's pupils at the theatre in the Royal Albert Hall. A special interest was imparted to the proceedings by reason of the presence of Mr. F. R. Benson, who attended for the purpose of examining the young ladies taking part in the different scenes. There were some fifteen or sixteen students who for the time being could claim to be leading actresses, though amateurs. Most of the youthful aspirants to histrionic honours gave evidence of careful training and dramatic ability, and Miss Fogerty is to be congratulated upon the results of her system of education in elocution. The tests in which the various competitors engaged were by no means the easiest that could have been devised, speeches and conversations being taken from King John, Twelfth Night, Much Ado About Nothing, Midsummer Night's Dream, "Nicholas Nickleby," the works of Mr. Austin Dobson, and the one-act play, In Honour Bound, which was presented in capital style.

Mr. Benson, in addressing the audience at the conclusion of the performances, stated that Miss Fogerty had laid special stress on the examination being chiefly of an elocutionary character. A point which should never be lost sight of in an actor's early education was audibility of utterance. Whatever talent a student otherwise possessed, if he or she did not attend to the important principles of voice production, it was an absolute waste of time to continue the training. The awards he was making were, therefore, based upon virtues of elocution. He could not too strongly urge upon young people whose ambition was centred around a stage career that their every syllable should be distinctly audible to members of the audience in all parts of the theatre. It was also extremely necessary than an actor should throw himself into a part, even to the sacrifice of a little correctness.

In mentioning the name of each successful candidate, Mr. Benson proffered many kindly and useful hints, which were much appreciated by the students to whom they were addressed. The unsuccessful pupils, too, received good words of advice; and it was admitted on all hands that Mr. Benson had conducted the examination in a masterful and impartial manner. He handed first-class certificates to Miss I. English, Miss B. Jeffreys, and Miss S. Dawson; second-class to Miss W. Baily, Miss Bradgate, and Miss Marzetti; and third-class to Miss C. Oppenheim, Miss Calaminus, Miss P. Ledward, and Miss Goodchild.

THE promenade concerts start on Aug. 18 at Queen's Hall. The list of novelties issued by Mr. Robert Newman includes new works by Messrs. Joseph Holbrooke, George Halford, Granville Bantock, Norman O'Neil (an overture "In Springtime"), and R. Vaughan Williams. A number of works by foreign composers will also be introduced.

M. ANDRE MESSAGER has written the music to a new opera founded by Messrs. Robert de Flers and Gaston de Caillavet on Alfred de Musset's Le Chandelier, which will be produced at the Paris Opéra-Comique during the forthcoming season.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT.

It does not require a very profound acquaintance with English life to know that the horror expressed in many quarters at the sound of the syllables "Guy de Maupassant" is the result not of mere convention, but of a monstrous moral and emotional obtuseness which blinds many otherwise well-meaning people as closely as though a hand were placed before their eyes. The average Englishman looks as askance and ashamed when this great Norman's name is mentioned as his ancestors did at the mention of the name of William the Conqueror.

There is no reformation, no conversion more desirable in the mind of the British Public than one which would imply an entire change of attitude towards "The History of Pantagruel," "The Droll Tales," and "Madame Tellier's Establishment."

There are no doubt many people in this country who read these books simply because they think they ought not to read them, and one cannot help feeling a certain pity for these poor obsessed ones when, thirsty for forbidden Priapian apples, anxiously anticipating an uninterrupted banquet of Lampsacene delights, they discover instead the same old obstinate cosmic wine-jar they have long grown too listless to enjoy, engraved with the same old cosmic hieroglyphs they have long lost the power of translating. There is something almost heroic about the perverted perseverance of these poor dilapidated ones. It must be really dreadfully disconcerting to them, poor old Satyrs, when one after another of the flying wood-nymphs, brought thus to bay, pulls off the mask and discovers, always the same, the wrinkled adamantine features of the oldest of the Fates!

But is it not a strange thing that the British Public should have left these Sybilline books, these master-realists, to the furtive hands of such poor forlorn madmen? Well, this present article is an appeal to the great sane, normal, well-balanced, respectable, moral, self-controlled, cautious, far-sighted gentlemen of this town, whose pure spirits are usually buoyed up by such innocuous imbibings as some of the present-day journalism presents. It is really most important that these good people should purchase at once, in Charing Cross-road, or wherever else they can, as many translations of the short stories of Guy de Maupassant as they have money to buy or leisure to read. It will be an antidote to so much. It will explain so many things. It will be such a humanising influence. It will make their eyes open so wide that even Clapham Common will seem bounded and the horizons of West Kensington no more co-extensive with the world. Well, what are the discoveries we shall make when we enter at last upon this daring voyage? First of all we shall come to the conclusion that there is only one writer of short stories. Kipling would come, we may still suppose, second; but the superior dignity of de Maupassant's style, combined with the superior largeness of his scope, makes the gulf between the Englishman and the Frenchman as wide as between an aristocratic and a bourgeois manner of expression.

De Maupassant has the last and supreme endowment of the great writer—he knows what not to say. His short stories are masterpieces in the daring and difficult art of leaving out. It is not that he works by suggestion or by allusion. He does not leave it to our imagination to fill up details. All that has to be done he does. Nothing is left vague; all is clear of mist and blurrings; all is opaque, tangible, visualised; to be seen and felt, one might say, in the round.

Like Dean Swift, this unscrupulous Norman does not beat about the bush. He runs his quarry straight down and knocks it on the head, heedless of game-preserving laws. Nor does he deal in subtle phrases glimmering with opalescent interpretations. No exquisite archaisms, no recondite preciosities, no rich spoils of Arabia or Saba adorn his outspoken narrative. It is rather by the arrangement of the words, by the rhythm of words as the very body of thought, that he arrives at the impression he desires. How wonderfully he marches over every obstacle to the appropriate end, not bringing out the full meaning of it all until the very last sentence. Colloquialisms, too, and the rough, quaintly-expressive dialects of the people, how admirably he uses these—fusing them in with the rest, and yet holding himself detached from them!—not a slave (like Thackeray), but a master of the vulgarity and commonplace atmospheres in which he chooses to breathe. It has been said by one who might himself be regarded as a descendant in the direct line of this unequalled ancestry that Rabelais, Balzac, and Guy de Maupassant are related to another in the relation of grandfather, father, and son. This certainly expresses one aspect, at least, of the short stories. They inherit the traditions of the old Gallic gaiety.

This is an element that might easily be overlooked in de Maupassant's work, what is stark and austere and tragic and ferocious being more obviously prominent; but it is nevertheless a noticeable part. What, then, is this Gallic secret that links the author of "Mme. Tellier's Establishment" to the creator of "Panurge"? It may perhaps be said to consist in a sort of elemental earth-humour by which the most gross and material things—the débris and drift and flotsam and refuse and scum of the visible world—are transfigured and transformed until, not by elimination, but by exaggeration of their grossness, they come to be, for those who have had the right initiation and a "good lantern" to lead them, steps and approaches to he very Beatific Vision itself. "To communicate ecstasy," to raise the emotion best described as "cosmic," such is the process and working of the Gallic secret, and it is one which well justifies its existence. To be reconciled to the Universe, to apprehend the great subterannean tides and occult rivers flowing—flowing ever from the unknown mother's breast—such is the gift of the Gallic gaiety. Carlyle grumbled at what he called the grotesque phallic worship of these writers; but it would have been with a somewhat alien eye that this Scotch prophet would have regarded the Eleusinian mysteries themselves, and we know what profound wisdom lurked under those symbols—stranger still, perhaps, to the profane!

There are many among the short stories of de Maupassant that are Rabelaisian in this sense, and it is here as much as anywhere that the English public requires what he can offer, for our grossness is so dreadfully unredeemed, so lamentably wanting in "ecstasy" or "gaiety."

It must be admitted that the spirit of such stories as "The Mother Superior," "The Rabbit," "Margot's Tapers," "Kind Girls," "My Uncle Sosthenes," "The Little Cask," "A Cock Crowed," "That Pig of a Morin," "A Family Affair," "Christmas Eve," "Madame Tellier's Establishment," "Epiphany," "The Marquis de Fumerol," is not as deep or world-wide as any chapter or interlude from "The Pantagruel." The humour is tougher, more stringy, not so redolent of the wine-cask—less abandoned; but there is the same earthiness and the same frankness. Guy de Maupassant is a true Norman. His country stories have the veritable smack of the soil—the farmyards with their manure-heaps open to the sky and their cocks crowing; the desolate marshes full of strange birds; the lonely villages; the long white roads between the cornfields—all these are described in such telling strokes that the scenery becomes, as in the case of Mr. Hardy's books, the most important character in the story. Yes; Guy de Maupassant's rural tales are his best, and the tragic-comic humours of these avaricious, lustful, shrewd, unscrupulous, revengeful peasants is a well-deserved rebuke to the fanciful arcadias of many a poetic visionary.

But I have not yet mentioned the quality which, as far as I am myself concerned, gives me most satisfaction in reading this great writer. This I call the "humanism" of Guy de Maupassant. I mean by "humanism" that profound sympathy with flesh and blood as such, that overrides all distinctions, whether of country, respectability, or merit, and goes straight and single-eyed to the mark. This "humanism" is one of the rarest and most valuable qualities in literature. Chaucer has it, and Shakespeare and Cervantes and Sterne and Charles Lamb; but no one can have it in its completeness without something of that outspoken, friendly earthiness which is usually, for want of a more exact epithet, entitled Rabelaisianism. This Rabelaisian humanism has far too much sympathy to be sentimental. It realises that sometimes even pity is an insult. And it is this mood—a little embittered, perhaps, and saddened by an overpowering sense of the hopeless issues of human life—that de Maupassant displays. It is in this mood, in a sympathy that has become perhaps a little savage, that he tells the story of the countless victims of oppression who file along the dreary high-road of our existence or fall exhausted and worn-out by the wayside. He has observed, with his irresistible Norman eye, how stupidity and cruelty are nearly always found together. He has observed the tragedy of weak and sensitive people given up to the mercy of the strong and the obtuse. He has observed also the tyranny of good people, of respectable people—how remorseless they are, how hard! How pitilessly they treat, especially the women among them, the old, the unmarried, the unfortunate, the vagrant. But it is above all the profound, relentless cruelty of stupidity that de Maupassant finds responsible for so many tragedies. In stories like "Boitelle," where a poor despairing fellow becomes a specialist in clearing out cesspools because his parents found the little exotic girl his soul desired "too black"; in "The Blind Man," where a poor beggar is driven to death by the savagery of his friends; in "A Vagabond," where the real cause of the criminality of the submerged tenth is indicated firmly enough; in "A Night in Whitechapel," where the grim forlornness, too grotesque to be merely pathetic and too tragic to be merely grotesque, of the nightly encounters of a London slum, are hit off with an eye that shirks nothing. In stories like these he shows, this reckless de Maupassant, a rough, coarse, profound pity—such a pity as we wish in vain might belong to Nature herself—for the crippled, inarticulate animal offscouring of civilisation. It is not de Maupassant who could draw back from any poor wretch, however sunk in the abyss, with such words as "What a degraded criminal!" "What an abnormal monster!" He fixes his searching eye upon each waif, upon each wounded one, and if he does not "pour in" actual oil and wine, he carries him into that house of the future which is called the pity of the just and leaves him there for posterity. Whether he has acquired this admirable point of view from the Catholicism he renounces, or whether it is in his blood as an inalienable and inexplicable inheritance, who can say? There it is, and it finds him a place near that old Manhattan poet who remains, in these modern times, the king of those who reject nothing on account of anything.

One class of luckless people this great amorous artist holds in special respect—a class not often celebrated by novelists—I mean old maids. Some of his most pathetic stories have to do with these patient victims of monogamy, and no writer has treated them more sympathetically. Take, for instance, the story called "Miss Harriet," about the poor English lady who loved the artist. "What secrets of sufferings and of despair were sealed up in that disagreeable body, in that spent, tarnished body—tarnished during the whole of its existence—that impenetrable envelope which had driven her far away from all affection, from all love? How many unhappy beings there are! I felt that there weighed upon that human creature the eternal injustice of implacable Nature! It was all over with her, without her ever having experienced that which sustains the miserablest outcasts—the hope of being loved once!" "Mademoiselle Perle" is another instance of the same sort; but more pathetic, in a certain way, than either of these is the story about poor Aunt Lison, called "A Night in Spring." "The young people never went up to her room to kiss her. The maid-servant was the only person who entered the apartment. She went to fetch Aunt Lison whenever they wanted to talk to her. It seemed as if they did no know where this room was situated. They paid little attention to her. She was one of those retiring creatures who remain strangers even to their kinsfolk, as if they belonged to an unexplored region of humanity, whose death would cause no gap. She always went about with short, quick steps, rarely opening her lips, never causing the least disturbance or giving annoyance to anyone; and it seemed as if she communicated to inanimate objects the quality of making no sound. Her hands appeared to be made of some species of cotton-wool, so lightly and delicately did they handle whatever they touched. When they pronounced the two words 'Aunt Lison' it might be said that the name awakened no thought in anyone's mind. It was as if one had mentioned the 'coffee-pot' or the 'sugar-basin.'" One night this old maid was left up alone to watch until the two lovers came in. "When they reached the parlour Jacques said to Jeanne: 'Don't you feel your dear little feet cold?' And all of a sudden the aunt's fingers began to shake so much that her work slipped out of them; the ball of woollen thread rolled down on the floor, and abruptly covering her face with her hands, the old maid began to weep with great convulsive sobs. 'What's the matter with you, Aunt Lison?' Then the poor old maid, in a faltering voice broken by her sobs, and with her face shrivelled by grief, answered: It was—it was when he asked you, "Don't you feel cold—in—your dear little feet?" Nobody ever said that to me—never—never—never!'"

Guy de Maupassant has also a feeling of sympathy for the primitive lives of creatures nearer the earth than we are. Not that he has any objection to what is called "sport." Indeed, some of the stories which display his peculiar power to its best advantage are stories about shooting and fishing. But even with gun or rod in his hand this Norman Conqueror has a broad, earthy, tragic-comic understanding of the creatures he slays. He is certainly much nearer to them than many sentimentalists. He and they are of the same blood. He has the hunter's sympathy for the hunted, which is often a deeper and subtler thing than the idealistic onlooker realises. But, to sum up, what we would emphasise as the chief merit of Guy de Maupassant is that by the enchantment of his style he has compelled us to become acquainted with the essential sacredness of the earth as earth, with the essential honourableness and pathos of flesh and blood as flesh and blood, with the essential naïveté of instinct as instinct, shared equally by philosopher and wastrel. All this he has achieved easily, magnificently, largely, in his invincible Norman manner, so that those who read him get no sense of effort or laborious self-consciousness, and art becomes what it ought always to become, the inner reality of the real and the inner truth of the true.

In reading books like these short stories, and associating them with Rabelais and with Balzac and with Walt Whitman, who does not come to feel that there is a sort of catholicity in literature, a catholicity at present but dimly adumbrated forth in the circle of the churches of this world? Who does not come to feel that here, at any rate, here, in the presence of these great earth-intoxicated ones, there is a sanctuary and a refuge, from the steps of the altars of which none can drive us away, whatever we have done, whatever we are?

It is this catholicity of de Maupassant's mental horizon that really necessitated his direct ploughshare style. For one who had so profound, so humorous a respect for every individual, how insolent an impertinence would any ready-made "explanation" of their actions be! He is too great a dramatist to be "a psychologist." He accepts the mysteries and limitations of our existence. He describes and does not explain; and it is by description and not by explanation that art creates that sympathy which perhaps may turn out to be the greatest interpretation of all! And for the rest—for the world beyond the world? Ah! there a silence falls upon him, as it fell upon Angel Clare among the shadows of Stonehenge. Like some massive ironclad vessel, raking the harbours of the earth with his formidable searchlight and discovering strange orgies in the narrow lanes, he coasts our shores for a little while and then sheers off, with a tragic groaning from all those invincible engines, hull down and a long train of black smoke behind him, into the darkness of the unknown sea.

J. C. POWYS

A PLEA FOR STOCK COMPANIES.

CHAT WITH ERNEST E. NORRIS.

(BY OUR OWN COMMISSIONER.)

"My opinion is that the stock seasons have got to come back to us."

The gentleman who advances this opinion is Mr. Ernest E. Norris, well-known for his work in connection with the management of and the production of plays at the Elephant and Castle Theatre. And Mr. Norris, who has had twenty-seven years' active experience of stage matters, should be in a position to speak on this subject. He claims to have played more parts than any other actor of his age. Certainly his life has been a busy one. Last autumn he produced fourteen plays at the Elephant, played a leading part in each of them, involving in nearly every case a fresh study, wrote a couple of pantomimes, engaged the artists for them, and produced them at Christmas, and also booked and managed a provincial tour of Tommy Atkins. That is a good record for a few months.

To return to the stock argument. "The thin end of the wedge," says Mr. Norris, "has already made itself apparent. This summer Mr. John Hart is running his own companies, and Mr. Robert Arthur has done so for some time. But it is not the summer alone that is going to bring back the stock system. Managers nowadays complain that stock does not pay them. The reason is that they do not give it a fair chance. They get a scratch company together for one week—that week generally the worst in the whole year, and at a time when they could not book a travelling company—and then they are surprised that the enterprise does not pay. If they acted upon the principle which I carried out at the Elephant and Castle and reserved their best weeks for a properly augmented stock company, keeping the same people and allowing the audiences to get familiar with them, and not forgetting the important matter of the adequate mounting of the plays, they would then find that stock would not only pay, but show a big profit."

"Tell me the lines on which you would run a modern stock company."

"I would take the best of the up-to-date comedies and dramas, in addition to reviving the old favourites of the Adelphi, Drury Lane, and Princess's theatres. A new generation want to see the plays their fathers admired so much in their youth. Then, don't forget that in a stock company your principal actors and actresses must be people who are likely to become favourites with the audience. Many members of my regular Elephant company gained immense popularity with the patrons. I had Mrs. Bennet there as my leading lady, and she was supported by an all-round sound company. But I must admit that I experienced difficulty in securing people who were used to the work or at all adapted to it. Of course, I found any number of people who were willing to acquire the experience, and I was simply bombarded by artists who had played big parts, but had not been trained in the ground work so necessary to the development of a stock actor. If provincial and surburban managers, instead of giving their best dates to travelling companies, who want 60 and 65 per cent. of the takings, were to venture into stock they would make infinitely more money."

"Do you give that as a reason for what some people call the theatrical slump?"

"Unquestionably there is a slump in theatrical affairs, and it is attributable to various causes. First of all, I am afraid that the managers themselves are in a great measure to blame. Their motto is, 'Cut down expenses.' On the other hand, the music hall manager does all he can to increase his expenses, and thereby his receipts are increased. Then there cannot be the slightest doubt that our standard of acting has deteriorated considerably. Go round now and see some of the pieces, and compare the actors of to-day with those of twenty years ago. The leading men in the provinces a couple of decades since were Henry George, William Sutherland, and George Harker, who all got double-figure salaries. Where are the men who get those salaries now? There is only one that I can think of."

"Do you think that people fight shy of entering the theatrical profession nowadays? Or, having once joined it and found that there was a good deal of arduous work and uncertainty of success behind the gilt and the glitter, do they the more readily than was wont to be the case relinquish the calling?"

"The same idea just struck me. Only a few years ago one recollects seeing a number of names on programmes and playbills, and now they seem to have vanished completely. There can be no question that a lot of actors and actresses do drop out of the profession altogether every year. At the same time, while there is not at the present moment an overwhelming rush of applicants for histrionic honours, we are never without a crowd desiring enrolment within our ranks. But the curious thing is that nowadays you can be a leading man in two years and a few months after that never be heard of again. I had to play small parts for six years before I dared to assume many lines of business."

The plays in the authorship of which Mr. Norris has collaborated are A Gentleman of England, a romantic play; Fighting Her Fate, a strong drama; Like Father, Like Son, also a drama; and a version of The Three Musketeers. As to acting, he prefers romantic drama and old English comedy. He underwent his first stage experience at Saddler's Wells as a boy in 1879. He has been leading man at nearly every theatre in London where a stock company has been instituted. Only on one occasion has he disappointed the public, and that occurred when he smashed his ankle at the Surrey Theatre while playing the detective hero in Hue and Cry. He is a quick and accurate "study," and during his season at the Elephant most of his parts had to be learned on a Sunday. "Charles Surface, in The School for Scandal, is, I suppose," he remarks, "my pet part; but I delighted in the characters I played in Miss Fortescue's repertoire, such as Sir Horace Welby in Forget-Me-Not, Dr. Thornton in Peril, Correze Zuroff in Moths, Young Marlowe in She Stoops to Conquer, Orlando in As You Like It, Count Tristram in King Rene's Daughter, and Pygmalian. I have also appeared in many of the better-class dramas and romantic pieces, having taken the title-rôle in Jim the Penman, Gil de Berault in Under the Red Robe, and D'Artagnan in The Three Musketeers."

Mr. Norris, who no longer is connected with the Elephant and Castle Theatre, tells us that although he is extremely fond of management, he would not like to give up acting altogether.

A WELL-REGULATED THEATRE.

The following quaint and precise review of the functions of a well-regulated theatre certainly shows a breadth of view on the part of the writer—a German—regarding the stage that was none too common at the time of publication in an ancient magazine, dated 1807. The sentiments are worthy of the late Sir Henry Irving or Mr. Beerbohm Tree.

"Sulzer observes, in his Theory of the Fine Arts and Sciences, that an universal and irresistible inclination to novel and extraordinary scenes, a desire of feeling ourselves in a state of mental commotion, has given rise to dramatic exhibitions. Being exhausted by a too strenuous exertion of the mental faculties, enfeebled by the sameness and pressure of his professional occupations, and satiated by sensuality, man could not but feel a vacancy in his soul totally repugnant to the unremitting impulse to activity inherent in human nature. Our nature, equally incapable of enduring for any length of time a state of mere animal existence, as of continuing the exertions of the higher faculties without intermission, panted after an intermediate state, uniting these two opposite extremes, relaxing the mind from a too intense bent of its powers, and facilitating the alternate transition from one state to the other. This advantage is invariably produced by a susceptibility of the impressions of beauty. But as a wise legislator should exert himself, above all things, to select from two effects that which is most efficacious, he will not be satisfied with having only disarmed the inclinations of his people, but, if possible, render them instrumental to the accomplishment of noble designs, and endeavour to convert them into sources of happiness. Actuated by these motives, legislators gave the preference to the stage, which opens a spacious field to a mind eager for exertion, affords nourishment to all the faculties of the soul, without overstraining any one of them, and unites the refinement of the understanding and the heart with the most innocent kind of amusement.

"The person who first observed that religion is the strongest pillar of the state, and that it alone renders the laws effectual, has by this assertion, perhaps without intending or being sensible of it, defended the stage in the strongest manner. That very insufficiency and instability of positive laws, which render religion indispensably necessary for the State, determines also the whole influence the stage can produce. The laws confine themselves merely to negative duties, whereas religion extends its precepts to real actions. The laws counteract only those effects that dissolve the social bonds by which mankind is united, whilst religion prescribes such actions as render these bonds stronger. The laws decide only upon the visible effects of the will; deeds alone are subject to their exertion, whilst religion extends its jurisdiction to the inmost recesses of the heart, pursuing the thoughts of man to their primary sources. The laws are pliant and as changeable as the humours and passions of man, whereas the bonds of religion are strong and eternal. Suppose that religion did actually exercise this powerful sway over every human heart, will and can it complete the entire refinement of man? Religion (which I distinguish here between its political and divine part)—religion, in the aggregate, operates chiefly upon the sensual part of the people; but its efficacy would be lost were we to purify it entirely from whatever strikes the senses. And what else is it that renders the stage efficacious? Religion ceases to operate upon the majority of the human race, if we divest it of its awful pictures and problems, of heaven and hell, which operate alone by the influence they exercise over the imagination. What addition of strength must religion and the laws acquire by a close alliance with the stage, where all is intuition, where vice and virtue, happiness and misery, folly and wisdom, are represented to man in a variety of comprehensive and faithful pictures; where Providence unfolds its riddles and solves the mysterious knots of fate before our eyes; where the human heart, stretched on the rack of passion, confesses its inmost emotions; where all masks are stripped off, every gloss is wiped away, and incorruptible truth is awfully sitting in judgment.

"The jurisdiction of the stage begins where the dominion of the civil law terminates. When justice is blinded by the charms of gold, and riots in the pay of vice, when the crimes of those that are in power laugh at its impotence, and fear of man fetters the arm of the magistrates, then the stage takes up the sword and balance of justice, and drags vice before its dread tribunal. The spacious regions of fancy and history, the times past and future, are obedient to its nod. Daring criminals, long mouldered in dust, are now summoned by the omnipotent voice of poetry, and repeat an ignominious life for the awful instruction of posterity. Wretches, once the terror of their contemporaries, pass before our eyes, impotent like the phantoms produced by a magic mirror, and we curse their memory with a voluptuous horror. Though morality should be taught no longer, religion lose all credit, and the power of the law be dissolved, yet man would continue to be seized with awful dread on seeing Medea stagger down the steps of her palace, and be agitated with powerful emotions when the murder of her children is accomplished. A salutory tremor will seize the beholder, and he will rejoice at having preserved his conscience pure, when Lady Macbeth, a dreadful night-walker, washes her hands, and calls in vain for all the perfumes of Arabia to dispel the odious scent of murder? It is no exaggeration if we maintain that these pictures, exhibited on the stage, finally incorporate themselves with the morals of the multitude, and in individual cases influence their sentiments. The impressions, produced by such exhibitions, are indelible, and the slightest touch is sufficient to resuscitate, as it were, the whole terrifying picture in the heart of man. Certain as it is that intuitive representation operates more powerfully than dead letters and cold recitation, it is equally certain that the stage produces a more powerful and lasting effect than all systems of morality and the written law.

"But the stage in this does not merely aid the law—it has a much more spacious field to act upon. Thousands of vices, suffered by the law to remain unpunished, are chastised without mercy on the stage; and numerous virtues, of which the legislature is silent, are recommended from the stage. In this it faithfully follows the directions of wisdom and religion. It derives its principles and examples from this pure source, and enrobes rigorous duty with a charming and enticing garment. How noble are the sentiments, resolutions, and passions, with which it swells our soul, how heavenly the ideas which it exhibits for imitation. When the benevolent Augustus, great as a god, offers his hand to the perfidious Cinna, who imagines to read the sentence of death on his lips, and utters the generous request, "Cinna, let us be friends!" who among the spectators would in that moment not be inclined to shake his mortal enemy kindly by the hand, in order to resemble the great Roman? When Francis Sickingen, going to chastise an oppressive prince, and to defend the rights of a fellow-man, on the road chances to look round, and descries the smoke of his burning castle, where he left his wife and child unprotected, and proceeds on his road, in order to be faithful to his word, how great must man appear in such a moment, and how contemptible the dread of invincible fate!

"Useful as the stage proves itself by representing virtue in the most amiable manner, it produces effects no less salutary by exhibiting the deformity of vice in its dreadful mirror. When the helpless and childish Lear, in a nocturnal tempest, knocks in vain at the house of his daughters, scattering his white locks into the air, and tells the furious elements how unnatural his reign had been; when he at last vents his furious pangs in the dreadful words, 'I gave you all I had to give!' how abominable then must ingratitude appear to us, and how solemnly do we vow to love and to revere our parents!

"But the effects which the stage can produce extend still farther. It is active for our improvement, when religion and the law deem it beneath their dignity to bestow their fostering care upon human sentiments. Social happiness is as much annoyed by folly as by crimes and vices. Experience teaches us that, in the texture of human affairs, the greatest weights are frequently suspended by the smallest and most tender threads, and that we, on tracing human actions to their primary sources, must smile ten times before we are once struck with horror. The more I advance in years, the smaller grows my catalogue of villains, whilst my register of fools grows more complete and numerous. If all the mortal transactions of one sex arise from one source, if all the enormous extremes of vice, which ever have branded individuals, are only altered forms, only higher degrees of one quality, which we at last unanimously behold with a smile of pity, why should nature not have led the other sex the same road? I know but one secret of preserving man from depravity, and that is this—to guard his heart against weakness.

"The stage is highly capable of performing a great part of this momentous task. It presents the mirror of truth to the numerous classes of fools, and with salutary ridicule lashes folly under whatever form it may appear. It effects in such instances by means of satire what in others it performs by exciting tender emotions or terror. If we were to attempt to estimate the respective value of tragedy and comedy by the measure of the effects which they produce, experience would perhaps adjudge the preference to the latter. Ridicule and contempt wound the pride of man more severely than indignation tortures his conscience. Our cowardice flies from the dread of horrors, but this very cowardice betrays us to the stings of satire. The laws and our conscience preserve us frequently from crimes and vices, whilst the perception of our follies requires a more refined sense which we can sharpen nowhere more effectually than at the theatre. We may, without much reluctance, empower a friend to attack our morals and our heart, but we find it more difficult to forgive him a single laugh at our expense. Our transgressions admit of an observer and censor, but our follies scarcely can bear a witness. The stage alone is permitted freely to lash our weakness, because it spares our peevishness, and does not desire to know the guilty fool. We see in its mirror, without blushing, our follies drop their mask, and in general are thankful for the gentle reprimand.

"The effects produced by the stage do not, however, terminate here. The theatre is in a higher degree than any other public institution a school of practical wisdom, a guide through civil life, an unerring key to the most secret recesses of the human soul. I will not deny that infatuation and callousness of conscience frequently destroy its best effects; that these barriers to truth enable numerous vices to stand undaunted before its mirror, and that thousands of generous sentiments recommended from the stage make no impression upon the icy heart of the spectator; and I am inclined to believe that Molière's Harpagon may not have reformed one usurer, and that the suicide Beverley has reclaimed but a few of his brethren from the dreadful vice of gambling; but though we should admit this to be the case in most instances, or even be so unjust to maintain that the stage contributes nothing at all to restrain the progress of vice, we cannot deny that its salutary influence is very great in many other respects.

"The stage presents to our view a variegated scene of human sufferings. It involves us artfully in foreign distresses, and rewards us for momentary pangs with voluptuous tears and a most valuable acquisition of courage and experience.

"Thus extensive is the influence of the stage upon moral refinement; but its merits, in illuminating the human mind, are no less important and obvious; and it is in this higher region where a great genius and zealous patriot turns it to the best advantage. He casts a scrutinising look at the whole human race, compares nations with nations centuries with centuries, and observes how slavishly the great mass of the people bend their neck beneath the yoke of prejudice and opinion, which continually counteract their happiness—observes that the purer rays of truth enlighten only a few solitary individuals, who purchase the small gain, perhaps, at the expense of a whole life. By what means can a wise legislator make a whole nation partake of the salutary light emanating from these purer rays of truth?

"The stage is the common channel by which the light of truth emanates from the more enlightened part of a nation, and diffuses its gentle rays through the whole state. Notions more correct, principles more refined, and purer sentiments, flow from her through all the veins of the great bulk of the nation; the mephitic mist of barbarism, the Egyptian darkness of superstition disappears, the night gives way to conquering light.

IN MEMORIAM.

ESSMANN.—In loving memory of our dear father, who died July 24, 1905. Never forgotten by his son and daughter, George and Jessie.

HAWLEY.—In tender and unfading memory of Emma C. Hawley, died July 22, 1898; and of Frederick Hawley ("Haywell"), died March 13 1889, Librarian of Shakespeare Memorial, Stratford-on-Avon.

Till through the storm and tempest
Safely anchored, just on the other side,
I find my darlings waiting,
Not changed, but glorified.

WAKEFIELD.—In loving memory of our dear brother J. H. Wakefield, comedian, who died July 3, 1900 Gone, but not forgotten.

WALFORD (MYSTIC MARIE).—In loving memory of Miss Marie Henry Walford, the dearly beloved sister of Dr. and Mrs. Walford Bodie, who died at the Manor House, Macduff, July 19, 1906, at the early age of 21 years. Sadly and deeply mourned by all her friends and relations.

The heavens so bright, all nature gay,
The day our Marie passed away.
A pleasing smile when death was nigh,
She passed away without a sigh.
Oh, death, oh, death, where is thy sting,
When untild peace you always bring?
If what I saw, no death I fear,
I know our Marie's always near.
We did our best to ease her pain,
She thanked us o'er and o'er again;
The signs she gave made us so sad,
But in our hearts we all were glad.
We knew our darling was at rest,
And God had done it for the best.
All agony and pain was o'er,
Her soul had fled to yonder shore.
A gifted girl in every way,
From virtue's path she ne'er did stray;
A noble life she always lead,
Of trials and troubles was ne'er afraid.
A ministering angel she has been,
Appeared with me in many a scene;
My many patients will sadly miss her,
For was she not to them a sister?
Although appearing on the stage,
And her performance all the rage,
She was so humble 'midst it all,
And now has answered her last call.
Oh, God above, we hope to see,
And trust her peace is made with Thee;
Her place on earth can ne'er be filled,
To take her from us so you willed.
It is so hard to part, we know,
But soon or late we all must go.
We hope to meet her once again,
In Heaven, where she shall surely reign.

WALFORD BODIE.

July 19, 1906.

ZEDORA, ADELE.—In loving memory of my dear wife, who departed this life July 30, 1902.

"I'M the only man in the world who can sing a song standing on my head in a bucket of water," said James Collier, a miner, of Bury, who appeared at Grimsby Police Court on Tuesday. "We won't trouble you for an exhibition," said the mayor.

AT the Smethwick Police-court on the 18th inst., Mr. T. Pritchard made an application for a music licence in respect of a temporary building in Windmill-lane, Smethwick. The applicant stated that if the experiment was a success he was prepared to spend £5,000 or £6,000 on the erection of a permanent music hall. The entertainment, he said, consisted of "high-class singing and a few jokes," and had been going on since Monday. He charged nothing for admission, but people were expected to buy a programme. So far the results had justified him in thinking of going in for a permanent building. The application was opposed on behalf of a resident and the manager of the Theatre Royal in the locality. Ultimately the Bench refused the application.

MR. CHARLES BERTRAM, the well-known prestidigitateur, has been engaged by the Crystal Palace Company to give an entertainment in the Palace Theatre, starting on Bank Holiday, Aug. 6.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
"The Era" Annual is published from the offices of the old-established organ of the theatrical profession, 5, Tavistock-street, W.C. As usual, it is a carefully-compiled record of notable events of the year 1905. A pleasing feature is the selection of short stories, after recounting strange experiences, by "stars" of the dramatic and music-hall professions, these being in every case accompanied by photographs of the writers.—Newcastle Daily Journal, Jan. 27, 1906.

A BISHOP ON SHAKESPEARE.

"One of the most beautiful sermons I ever heard in my life," was Miss ELLEN TERRY'S eulogy on the fine lecture of the Bishop of RIPON at the meeting of the recent British Empire Shakespeare Society. And, indeed, so excellent an oration on a noble subject has not been delivered for a long time. And the speech was much needed. SHAKESPEARE'S eminence has been so long acknowledged in England that it is virtually a truism; and, like all truisms, has become almost disrespected. Yet a truth does not cease to be a truth because it has been often repeated. As the Bishop remarked, the very cheapness of the editions of the bard's works tended to reduce respect for them; and there is another reason. BYRON said that he was made so familiar with HORACE at school that he never could appreciate him in later life; and we are, too often, introduced to SHAKESPEARE before we are old enough to appreciate the vastness of his inspiration. His insight will always remain inexplicable to the most ardent student of his works. We do not altogether like the word "student." It suggests an examination rather than an appreciation of SHAKESPEARE'S glories. His reader should receive him with elation and delight, rather than criticism. The young and inexperienced can only vouch for the beauty of some parts of his plays, and for the energy and spirit of others. It takes a ripe statesman, or consummate man of the world, to realise the absolute truth of his pictures of mature men and women and their actions.

The Bishop limited his lecture to the consideration of SHAKESPEARE as a teacher of the art of living. Here SHAKESPEARE is supreme. What he shows us is life itself, not a picture of life seen through the personality of the author. Indeed, nothing about SHAKESPEARE is more astonishing than the way in which he stands aloof from his work, than his absolute impartiality, and his detachment from his subject. And he never descends to the mere realistic photographer of facts. He is always a moralist. He opens Antony and Cleopatra with a moral, and he makes Hamlet define his own weakness. He, specially, by a definite prologue, guarded against the German heresy, which was invented centuries after, as to the "intention" of Romeo and Juliet. He had his opinion about life. (He had his little weaknesses. He was a Conservative, with a deficiency of sympathy for the masses, whom he always represents as "mobs.") He did not, as modern realists do, take a lump of observed fact and throw it down before the reader to make him miserable. He held the balance fairly between optimism and pessimism. To our thinking, the best bit of the Bishop's speech was the passage—we cannot resist the temptation of quoting it—in which he said:

"Shakespeare was no friend of those who said 'Life is too hard' and blamed circumstances. He would not tell Youth to be prepared for perpetual disillusions; he would say: 'Take all the joy God gives you, and be thankful to rejoice in it, but never part with your self-possession. The art of life consists not in a sort of aloofness from the life in which you are plunged, for to feel is to sympathise and grow in character—for we grow by emotions, not by thought—but the emotion must be within your judgment. Then will it minister to you; you must not let yourself go, for that way lie madness and tragedy.' As a poet has said:

"Unless above himself he can erect himself
How small a thing is man."

The moral is that every man should have a sanctuary in the ideal life, in the Divine affection, in something more enduring than the passing joys and sorrows of this world, in the realisation of that Kingdom of God which is larger than earth's little kingdom and embraces more than this little time, and which is within us."

It must always be remembered, however, that SHAKESPEARE wrote when his country was on the ascending wave. Whatever may have been the faults of the age of ELIZABETH, it was a hopeful period. People were sanguine about everything—sanguine as to the future prosperity of the country, sanguine about solving the question of pauperism, sanguine about discoveries and inventions. Prosperity had not degenerated into luxury, or distress developed into Socialism. The land had only begun to be collected into the hands of the great sheep-farmers; there was a large agricultural population; and the habits of the nation were manly, hardy, and simple. Men and women being the same in all ages, SHAKESPEARE was in a position to take an absolutely fair view of them, their passions, and their ways of thought and behaviour.

For our own part, we have never been able to come to any distinct imagination of the individual SHAKESPEARE. We are very sceptical of the value of traditions personal to the Bard. We cannot come to any conclusion as to the "second-best bedstead" in the will, the "cabbaging" of the common lands, or the supposed parentage of WILLIAM DAVENANT. We sometimes meet with great artists so absolutely inspired that they have no real existence outside their work. Their wives are merely hand-maidens or convenient models. They take their meals under protest, and in a dream. Except their work, nothing matters. Unless someone manages their monetary affairs they would be shortly bankrupt; unless someone "looked after them" their health would give way. They really have neither vices nor virtues, individuality or personal character. They are simply great artists. But in SHAKESPEARE we have the astonishing spectacle of a supremely great artist—a dreamer of the finest dreams—who was also a practical dramatist and constructor of plays, an excellent man of business, the manager of a provincial company, a respectable actor, and a good citizen. It is not as if, like DANTE, he had been an unskilful politician, or, like MILTON, had had serious troubles with his wife. No; this extraordinary man seems to have gone quietly on, producing masterpieces, saving money, buying houses and lands, and enduring an apparently uncongenial spouse and a rather troublesome family with typical bourgeois patience and wisdom. There was no mock modesty about him; he knew very well the value of his inspiration. And yet he took life as prosaically as if he had been an ordinary individual. It is a phenomenon unequalled in the history of genius.

The Bishop's lecture was greatly needed. There is a fashion nowadays, amongst the professors of mushroom literature, to ridicule and depreciate SHAKESPEARE. It is a cheap and easy method of self-advertisement, and, if cleverly done, is very effective. It is like squirting water against the base of a monument: it does not in the least diminish its stability. But there is a danger lest worthy and well-meaning persons should be led to take these detractors seriously, and to be discouraged from the perusal of SHAKESPEARE. To such as these, the splendid speech of the Bishop is a trumpet-note recalling them to their standard, and strengthening their allegiance. Indeed, the measure taken of SHAKESPEARE supplies a measure of the critic. BEN JONSON and SAMUEL JOHNSON disclosed their limitations by their criticisms; and our modern Lilliputians estimate the dimensions of the Bard of Avon in quite the Lilliputian way.

MESSRS. BANNISTER HOWARD, LTD., the lessees of the New Royal Theatre, King's Lynn, are opening the season on Bank Holiday with a strong company in The Eternal City, which will be presented during the first half of the week. During the latter half the King's Lynn and Hunstanton Amateur Operatic Society will give repeat performances of The Yeomen of the Guard.

BANK HOLIDAY will witness at King's Lynn a gigantic Foresters' Fête and Gala, and the committee have secured the services of Mr. W. G. Sylvester, who will superintend the programme of varieties. Messrs. Pain and Son are announced to give a display of fireworks in the evening.

A NEW work of humour, entitled "The Dogs of War," by Mr. Walter Emanuel, author of "Dog Days" (now in its 35th thousand), has been acquired by Messrs. Bradbury, Agnew, and Co., Ltd., the proprietors of Punch, in which journal its serial publication will shortly commence. It will be illustrated by Mr. Cecil Aldin.

VERDI, on his death, bequeathed small pensions to fifty poor peasant families of his native town of Roncole, and a few weeks ago a procession was formed of representatives of these families, led by the parish priest, to the tiny and rather disreputable-looking house in which the celebrated composer was born. Arrived there, all knelt at a signal from the priest, who, after offering a prayer for the repose of the soul of their benefactor, unveiled a tablet affixed to the house, on which their gratitude was recorded.

MR. EDITOR,—Sir,—We note in your notice for Devonport Theatre last week you allude to Her Nameless Child as a sketch by Mrs. Madge Duckworth. We should be very glad if you will correct this. Her Nameless Child is a drama in four acts, by yours faithfully, MADGE DUCKWORTH and RIDGEWOOD BARRIE. July 16, 1906.

SIGNOR CLEOFONTE CAMPANINI, before going to New York to conduct Mr. Hammerstein's opera season, has arranged to visit his native town, Parma (where he was born in 1860), to direct three concerts devoted to the compositions of Beethoven and Richard Strauss. Signor Campanini confesses that he is a great admirer of Herr Strauss's orchestral works, and prefers them to his operas. The Covent Garden management have re-engaged Signor Campanini for the next season.

MR. WALTER BENTLEY, the well-known agent is enjoying a two weeks' motor tour through Leeds, Hull, Newcastle, Manchester, Sheffield, and Leicester.

THE Exhibition Theatre at Limerick is doing good business again this week, and the "Star Domino" troupe, under the management of Mr. Harry Benet, are creating by their impersonations and coon songs no end of laughter. The Mather Orchestra continue to draw crowded and appreciative audiences by their beautiful répertoire of classic and operatic melodies. The Irish Animated Picture Company give universal satisfaction nightly, and the Laughing Salon, under Mr. Freear, is a most amusing item.

THE Princess Royal and the Duke of Fife were present at the performance of Madama Butterfly at the Royal Opera, Covent Garden, on Wednesday.

ON the 20th inst., Mr. Councillor William L. Ashton, the proprietor of the West View Hotel, Morecambe, entertained a number of theatrical gentleman in the town to dinner. The chair was occupied by Lieut. Julian Malvern, the worthy host being in the vice, and the company included Messrs. F. Douglas-Wentworth, R. Douglas-Wentworth, Chas. M. Julian, Percy Ballard, Charles Conway, P. Armour. A. Shaw, C. Bosher, &c. It is unnecessary to say that an enjoyable time was spent.

FRENCH PLAYS AT ROYALTY.

Mr. Gaston Mayer has earned the thanks, not only of the French colony in London, but of the English students of the French stage, by bringing to the Royalty all that is representative of the Parisian theatre of the present-day, and this week he is providing a brilliant wind-up to the season by the engagement of M. Antoine and his company. M. Antoine looms largely in the world of the theatre as a reformer of the most pronounced ideas. As we all know, he established the Théâtre Libre in Paris, astonishing therein both the critics and the public by his daring in the selection of plays, the perfection of detail that he brought to bear on their mounting, and the studious care that he devoted to their acting. He it was who did so much for the cult of Ibsen, and so warmly encouraged the younger school of realists among the writers for the theatres in the ville lumière. He is an apostle of unconventionality in its most intellectual phase, and the work he has already accomplished constitutes an important chapter in the history of the French stage. We may therefore expect to see some startling developments when he takes over the directorship of the Odéon, a playhouse second only in tradition and importance to the House of Molière. It is understood that he has some intention of producing Julius Cæsar, in the representation of which he will endeavour to rival the fine performances given by the Meiningen company and by Mr. Tree at His Majesty's. M. Antoine had the warmest of welcomes on Monday when he appeared in that acutely painful but powerful piece in two acts, written by George Henriot and entitled

"L'ENQUETE."

Le Juge d'Instruction	M. ANTOINE
L'Avocat	M. SIGNORET
L'Inculpé	M. DESFONTAINES
Le Procureur	M. DEGEORGE
Le Médecin Légiste	M. BERNARD
Le Greffier	M. D'INES
La Femme de l'Inculpé	MLLE. GRUMBACH

M. Henriot's piece reminds one strongly of M. Brieux's La Robe Rouge, adapted into English under the title of The Arm of the Law for Mr. Arthur Bourchier. A juge d'instruction inquires into the death of a high legal official who has been assassinated. Keen and remorseless, and actuated solely by the morbid satisfaction of probing consciences to inflict mental torture, the judge in his investigation into the circumstances of the tragedy, which is evidently one of revenge, elicits the fact that the murdered man had carried on a liaison with the wife of the merchant who is strongly suspected of the crime. He is known to be a jealous husband, and among the victim's papers is found the portrait of the wife of l'inculpé. The judge was probably the last to see the victim alive, and according to the medical evidence the corpse shows signs of an infuriated attack, though the diagnosis goes to prove that death was caused by one blow given suddenly and without warning. The crime, suggests the prosecution, may have been the work of an epileptic, who might even be quite ignorant of the existence of his disease. After a painful inquisition into the circumstances and much brow-beating of the accused and the woman whose frailty has been so ruthlessly and needlessly exposed, it appears that the juge d'instruction is himself the actual culprit, having committed the homicide during an epileptic seizure. He had been unaware of his tendency to this terrible disease, but at the end of the inquiry he gives the final proof of the theory of the prosecution by falling down in a fit.

M. Antoine had not quite gauged the capacity of the house, and his natural methods exhibited in his cross-examination and heckling of the accused and his wife were therefore not so effective as they should have been. He, however, exhibited all the tact needed to save the final situation from becoming intolerably painful, and the judge's keenness as an investigator remorselessly seeking to involve in guilt a perfectly innocent man was very powerfully expressed, but in a way that did not o'erstep the modesty of nature. Loud and enthusiastic cheers followed the fall of the curtain. M. Antoine had excellent support from M. Desfontaines, M. Signoret, Mlle. Grumbach, and especially from M. Degeorge, an admirable Procureur.

L'Enquête was followed by the droll piece, in two acts, by Georges Courteline, entitled

"BOUBOUROCHE."

Un Vieux Monsieur	M. ANTOINE
Boubouroche	M. DEGEORGE
André	M. SIGNORET
Adèle	MLLE. JEANNE LION

Boubouroche, when it was originally produced at the Menus-Plaisirs (Théâtre Libre), Paris, rescued that house for the time-being from the somewhat serious—not to say melancholy—productions for which it had obtained so pronounced a reputation. In fact, up to the date of the première of M. Courteline's merry vaudeville on 27th April, 1893, mirthful pieces had been eschewed by M. Antoine, and it was suggested that Boubouroche, a bouncing farce of the old-fashioned commonplace order, written by a young wag whose only pretension was to amuse his fellow mortals, would sound the death knell of the "new drama." The first act passes in an unfashionable café, where Boubouroche spends much of his time, and in an unguarded moment—after several "bocks"—he lets out to his partner in play the secret of a love affair. Adèle is the joy of his life. He first met her when she was a widow, and she had been attached to him for eight years without a cloud ever darkening their mutual happiness. An elderly gentleman reading a newspaper at the other end of the café, who has been paying close attention to Boubouroche's conversation, politely informs him in the most categorical manner that his confidence in Adèle is misplaced. She has another admirer who takes the place of Boubouroche immediately the coast is clear.

The second act brings us to Adèle's apartments. That paragon of perfection is seated at her worktable mending a petticoat, and on a sofa opposite lies André, "the other fellow," who hides in a large and convenient wardrobe when there is the slightest cause for alarm. A ring of the bell cuts short their colloquy, and Boubouroche bounds into the room like one demented. He had seen from the street two shadows on the muslin window curtains, and rushes about in every direction in search of the intruder. Adèle takes things impassively, telling him he must be mad to kick up such a row. She conceal a man indeed! And, shrugging her shoulders contemptuously at such a ridiculous idea, she gives him all the keys, places the lamp in his hand, and insists on his examination of every hole and corner. Nay, she carries her audacity so far as to point to the wardrobe, saying he will find a man inside. An accident gives the clue to Adèle's deceit. The lamp is extinguished, and in the sudden darkness the light in the wardrobe appears through its chinks. Adèle is struck motionless, Boubouroche can scarcely believe his eyes, but after an instant's hesitation he flings open the doors of the wardrobe, from which André steps forth calm and collected with any amount of dignified impudence. "I told you we should be caught," he observes to Adèle, and then turning to Boubouroche he says: "Monsieur, je suis à vos ordres!" Not until he has obtained Boubouroche's promise not to harm the lady does André consent to withdraw and leave them together. Adèle is at no loss for a plausible defence, which the gullible Boubouroche easily swallows. He even seeks her forgiveness, and soundly belabours the old gentleman who has been the cause of all the pother.

The piece has the spice of Parisian naughtiness, and the wonderfully droll situations appealed irresistibly to Monday's audience, hearty laughter resounding through the auditorium. M. Courteline is a genuine humourist, and is the author of a very amusing book, entitled "Le Train de 8 heures 47," which contains some wonderful pictures of barrack life. Boubouroche was capitally played. M. Degeorge, who reminds one strongly of the lamented W. J. Hill in the rôle of old Cattermole, in The Private Secretary, was clownishly droll not to say grotesque, as the fatuous Boubouroche, and his behaviour in the second act sent the audience into fits of laughter. M. Antoine contented himself with his original part, that of "le vieux Monsieur," and the serious dignity with which he played offered a genuine contrast to the generally frivolous tone of the conte drôlatique. M. Signoret was always amusingly impudent and unabashed as André, and Mlle. Jeanne Lion supplied an attractive portrait of that deceitful minx Adèle.

The opening piece was a farce, entitled Une Vieille Renommée, by M. A. Athys. The place of "old renown" is a restaurant which has fallen from its prosperous state, and now not a soul comes near it. A sudden access of business, however, severely taxes the attenuated resources of the establishment, which scarcely suffice to provide a meal for a family party, who have barely sat down to their modest repast when a second batch of visitors arrive, headed by the man to whom the proprietor hopes to sell the business. The ludicrous devices he has to employ and the shifts to which he is put supply plenty of material for laughter, and the pleasant conspiracy of fun was capitally aided by MM. Signoret and Saverne.

Another triple bill was presented on Wednesday, two amusing one-act pieces, by M. Max Maurey, forming the first and last items of the programme. The first is entitled

"DEPUIS SIX MOIS."

Floche	M. ANTOINE
Bringue	M. BERNARD
Madame Floche	MLLE. JEANNE LION
Gertrude	MLLE. MARLEY

This is a whimsical little piece possessing a quaintness of conception that argues considerable dramatic gifts on the part of its author, who evidently possesses the histrionic instinct and has mastered the technique of the theatre. Depuis Six Mois is simple and unambitious, but M. Maurey's treatment of a somewhat trite subject bears the impress of novelty. For six months the domestic horizon of Madame Floche has been disturbed by a continual change of servants, each of them giving notice after a stay in the house of only twenty-four hours. Gertrude, so Madame fears, will follow the example of the rest. With the arrival of M. Floche we learn that he considers it well for a wife to have a whirl of occupation, and that he has therefore been bribing all her servants to leave on the morrow of their arrival. Gertrude, more artful and diplomatic than her predecessors, insists on staying, and threatens Monsieur with exposure if he insists on forcing her from the house. M. Antoine was decidedly droll in the part of the husband; Mdlle. Marley was particularly good as the clumsy servant, and Mlle. Jean Lion gave an excellent representation of the wife.

The second contribution to the programme, from the pen of M. Max Maurey, was the comedy, in one act, entitled

"ASILE DE NUIT."

Le Directeur	M. ANTOINE
Haps	M. SIGNORET
Ma Soupe	M. DESFONTAINES

This little piece has been translated by Mr. Edward Knoblauch, under the title of The Pertikler Pet, which, originally produced at Brighton in December, formed the curtain-raiser for Mr. Cyril Maude's opening bill at the Waldorf when he commenced his season there on January 17, after the destruction of the Avenue Theatre. The clou of the episode is the mistake made by the director of a night refuge regarding Haps, an applicant for a night's lodging, who is looked upon as a newspaper man seeking information for a series of sensational articles, and is treated with much consideration accordingly, being offered a cigarette, a suit of clothes, and loaded with other courtesies and presents. Haps and Ma Soupe (who has lived for months at the refuge) exchange confidences, and the latter confesses that he gets soup in the morning instead of bread only, because he saves the director trouble by instructing the casuals in the rules. The part of the director gives M. Antoine another opportunity of showing the extraordinary versatility of his gifts; and M. Signoret and M. Desfontaines were responsible for excellent impersonations of Haps and Ma Soupe.

The most important production of the evening was the piece, in two acts, by Franz von Conring, translated from the German by Jean Thorl, and entitled

"DISCIPLINE."

Le Commandant de Besser	M. ANTOINE
Le Colonel de Rusch	M. SIGNORET
Le Commandant de Marck	M. DESFONTAINES
Le Commandant de Glocke	M. SAVERNE
Le Lieutenant Wart	M. VARGAS
Le Lieutenant Raster	M. BERNARD
Le Lieutenant Bosen	M. D'INES
Le Lieutenant Krone	M. TOURNEUR
Bauer, Uhlan	M. VILLE FILS
Shroeder, Uhlan	M. LANDOUZY

This is a somewhat dreary military problem play, and its whole atmosphere is foreign to English ideas. Militarism is its theme, and it is written to argue the question of absolute or comparative obedience to the commanding officer. Colonel de Rusch has been put out of action in the manœuvres by the clever strategy of Commandant Besser. The former, animated by petty jealousy, tries to get Besser to write a report on the conduct of a young lieutenant that is contrary to his convictions. An opportunity for revenge soon occurs, for war breaks out, and Besser, who has endured twenty-five years of parades and exercises, is in despair when he is ordered to look after the garrison. The commandant loses his temper, insults the colonel, and after confessing that he has set a bad example of insubordination, finds a way out of the impassé by shooting himself. M. Antoine was somewhat too restrained in his exhibition of the emotion of De Besser; and M. Signoret again did well as the Colonel.

A GREAT COMIC ACTRESS.

Born the year of Garrick's death, Mrs. Glover, wrote the late Mr. Dutton Cook in the Gentleman's Magazine, lived through the palmiest days of the Kembles, and witnessed the rising and setting now of George Frederick Cooke and now of Edmund Kean. When W. C. Macready made his first appearance in London, he found, something to his dismay, that in support of his Orestes "a special engagement had been made with Mrs. Glover, the best comic actress then upon the stage, to appear as the weeping widowed Andromache." She had first essayed the part of the Nurse in Romeo and Juliet in 1822, when her daughter Phillis made "her first attempt on any stage" in the character of Juliet to the Romeo of Edmund Kean.

Hazlitt, reviewing Kean's Richard, found occasion to mention the Queen of Mrs. Glover as too turbulent and vociferous; he noted at another time the "very agreeable frowns" of her Lady Allworth, and especially admired her Lady Amaranth, in Wild Oats, as "an inimitable piece of quiet acting." He adds: "The demureness of the character, which takes away all temptation to be boisterous, leaves the justness of her conception in full force; and the simplicity of her Quaker dress is most agreeably relieved by the embonpoint of her person." Of her Mrs. Oakley, in The Jealous Wife, he writes less favourably: "She represented the passions of the woman, but not the manner of the fine lady"; she was apt to "deluge the theatre with her voice"; her style of acting "amounted to the formidable"; and "her expression of passion was too hysterical, and habitually reminded one of hartshorn and water." In the course of Leigh Hunt's dramatic criticisms, notes of Mrs. Glover's performances frequently occur.

The lady had a quick wit of her own, however, and could say her tart things. Mr. Vandenhoff, in his "Dramatic Reminiscences," describes her as "hearty mannered," but "quick-tempered, and not unfrequently indulging in strokes of sarcastic bitterness," with an air of "large, autocratic, oracular," and "smacking of her profession." The same authority relates a conversation between Mrs. Glover and her contemporaries, Mrs. Orger and Mrs. Humby, touching the marriage of Madame Vestris and Charles Matthews. "They say," remarked Mrs. Humby, with a quaint air of assumed simplicity, "that before accepting him Vestris made a full confession of all the indiscretions of her life. What touching confidence!" "What needless trouble!" said Mrs. Orger. "What a wonderful memory!" exclaimed Mrs. Glover, concluding the discussion triumphantly. She is said to have been an admirable reader and reciter of Shakespeare; she had at one time projected the establishment of a school for youthful players, purposing to preside herself over certain of the classes.

My own recollections of Mrs. Glover date from her performances at the Haymarket Theatre, under Mr. Webster's management, about the year 1845, and during subsequent seasons. I had opportunities of witnessing certain of her more famous impersonations, and though I may not pretend to estimate these critically, for I was but a juvenile playgoer, I may yet claim to remember them very distinctly. One's earlier impressions of theatrical exhibitions are perhaps the more ineffaceable; it is the first play much rather than the fiftieth, or the five hundredth, that retains its place in the mind. Youthful memory has no doubt a tendency to exaggerate and over-value; but I do not think my retrospect suffers appreciably on this account, for my view of Mrs. Glover was much the view of the accepted critics of the time. As I remember the actress then, she was "more than common tall," large of person, but to no unwieldy extent, with some remains of beauty in regard to brightness of eye and mobility of expression, animated of movement, and without the slightest evidence of the infirmities of age. She had abundant energy at command, and her voice was strong, clear, and resonant. Her histrionic method, remarkable for its force and breadth, was yet curiously subtle; while theatrically most effective, it never forfeited its exceeding naturalness. She seemed always admirably unconscious of the presence of her audience, and a special air of spontaneity distinguished her manner upon the stage. She never for a moment relaxed her hold of the characters she assumed; when silent her looks and movements, her persistent attention to the scene, greatly aided the representation; and when speech was required of her, the ringing distinctness of her tones, her prompt and voluble utterance, her vivacity of action, told irresistibly upon the house. It was difficult to believe that she was simply repeating words she had beforehand learnt by heart; her speeches were delivered in so life-like a manner, that they seemed invariably the natural and original locutions of a ready-witted and sharp-tongued woman. She was especially happy in the enunciation of those "asides" of the stage which admit the audience into the confidence of the actors. She imparted an epigrammatic point to her every sentence. Altogether, acting more vividly quaint and humorous, or more convincing in its verisimilitude, I have never seen. The time had passed for her attempting scenes of pathos or of serious emotion; she appeared only in comedy. But there was no lack of variety about her impersonations. Now she presented herself as old Lady Lambert—the Madame Pernelle of Molière — the most simple-minded, sanctified of gentlewomen, white-haired, black-mittened, rich in lace lappets and edgings, silken skirts and scarfs of sober hues, pearl, or dove, or lilac, settling herself comfortably in her chair beneath the shadow of Mawworm's screen to listen like the devoutest of Little Bethelites to the absurdest of canting sermons. Now she was seen as the seemingly genuine Mrs. Candour, patched and powdered, hooped and sacqued and furbelowed, rustling at every step, a breathless gossip alert for tattle, all starts and surprises and affected sympathy, with a malicious subacid tincturing her discourse and lending pungency to her innuendoes. And then as the old weather-beaten "she-dragon" Mrs. Malaprop, with her aspersed parts of speech, black-browed, fiercely-rouged, formidable of presence, peremptory of gesture, glaring of dress, the personification of coarse vanity, vulgar ignorance, and tyrannical disposition, yet highly diverting withal.

In 1849 Mrs. Glover accepted an engagement to appear upon the small stage of the Strand Theatre, of which establishment her old playfellow Farren had become lessee and director, and to sustain for the last time all the more important characters in her repertory. It is clear that her health was now seriously failing her; but, excellent actress, that she was, she contrived successfully to conceal her weakened state from the audience. She seemed as alert and energetic, as bright and humorous as ever, and by turns her Mrs. Heidelberg, Dame Ashfield, and Widow Green, her Mrs. Temperance in The Country Squire, her Mrs. Candour, Mrs. Malaprop, and the rest received from crowded houses the familiar tribute of hearty laughter and loudest applause. Without doubt, however, her exertions cost her dearly. She appeared for the last time at the Strand Theatre on June 8, 1850. A contemporary critic wrote of her closing performances: "The manner in which she has lately, under the infirmities of age, supported her professional position, has frequently been quoted as a marvel, so perfect and complete has been the continued possession of her extraordinary powers." Her farewell benefit took place at Drury Lane Theatre on the following July 12, under the express patronage of the Queen. It was understood that protracted care for her family had drained the resources of the actress; that, in spite of her long and seemingly prosperous career, she retired upon very limited means. Every effort was made, therefore, that her benefit should really prove "a bumper at parting." The play was The Rivals. Poor Mrs. Glover had been for a fortnight confined to her bed, painfully ill; but she stirred herself to appear upon an occasion so memorable, and her strong will triumphing for a while over her physical weakness, she repaired to the theatre and duly trod the stage once more, and for the very last time, in her famous character of Mrs. Malaprop. She was received with the utmost enthusiasm; but her debility increased distressingly as the play proceeded, and though she completed her performance, it became but too evident that she was unequal to the task of addressing to the public the few sad, fond words of farewell she had designed to utter. The speech was dispensed with, therefore; and, the comedy concluded, the curtain rose again, to discover Mrs. Glover seated on a chair, environed by her professional friends and associates. She bowed to the house in grateful acknowledgment of its sympathy and applause; the rest was silence. The end was, indeed, very near. She was carried home to die. One short week after her farewell to the stage the remains of the famous Mrs. Glover were interred in the churchyard of St. George's, Bloomsbury.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

It is now practically certain that the Dangerous Performances Bill, which was to be discussed in the House of Commons on Wednesday, has been dropped by the Government. In response to an application to the Home Office from Variety Associations for a further interview, Mr. Herbert Samuel on Tuesday replied that it was not intended to bring the Bill before the House as early as was anticipated. The Bill had been "put off," and, therefore, there was no reason for any deputation to visit the Home Office. When such an occasion did arise he would notify the artists' representatives concerned. In the meantime nothing would be done.

From the balance sheet of the Tivoli, just issued, we gather that the net profit for the twelve months ended June 30 last (after providing for £5700 interest on the mortgage and debentures) amounts, with the balance brought forward, to the sum of £14,151 4s. 3d.

In January last an interim dividend of £4 per cent. (less income-tax) was paid. The directors now recommend the payment of a further dividend of £6 per cent. (less income-tax) for the half-year ended 30th June, 1906; and having regard to the reduced dividend of last year, due to exceptional circumstances, the directors now recommend in addition to the above dividend a special bonus of 4s. per share (less income-tax) equal to £14 per cent. for the year.

After payment of this dividend and bonus, the directors propose to deal with the surplus by applying £3000 to the general reserve fund, making £10,000 to the credit thereof, and carrying forward the sum of £1351 4s. 3d. to the current year's accounts. Mr. H. H. Wells is the retiring director, and, being eligible, offers himself for re-election. The auditor of the company, Mr. Robert Lindsey, also retires, and, being eligible, offers himself for re-election. The fifteenth annual meeting will be held on Tuesday next, at the Tivoli, at 2.30.

Mr. Carl Hertz is leaving for these shores today, and will voyage across the Atlantic in the American liner the City of New York. He has just fulfilled a most successful season in the Empire City, and returns with very pleasant recollections of his triumphs therein.

Count Max Hollender, of 44, Hamilton-terrace, St. John's-wood, chairman of the Palace Theatre, and of Messrs. Hollender and Cremetti, the Hanover Gallery, New Bond-street, whose death took place on June 11, left an estate valued at £92,710 gross and £90,769 net.

The London Pavilion management will present a new Oriental up-to-date song-scena, tentatively entitled Never In Japan, specially written by Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate. The scene is laid in a Japanese tea-garden (now being specially and realistically painted by Mr. W. T. Hemsley), in which Mr. Hal Forde, supported by numerous male and female auxiliaries, including the Eight Pavilion Girls, will appear. Mr. Hartley Milburn is arranging the special dances, groupings, &c. This production, which is now in active rehearsal, will form one of the popular Pavilion's principal attractions on August Bank Holiday and onwards.

The Metropole, Camberwell, is announced to reopen early in September under the management of Mr. Jesse Sparrow, the late manager of the Palace opposite, who has rechristened the house the Camberwell Empire. Builders and decorators are in possession, and there is every appearance that the stage and auditorium are undergoing an extensive process of renovation.

So popular have the "Sixpenny Successes" series of songs of the Monte Carlo Publishing Company become in South Africa that the Cape Times, Limited, of Cape Town, have accepted the exclusive South African agency for these publications, and the colossal advertisements anent this series, which are appearing weekly in the pages of our Cape Town contemporary, have resulted in a demand for many thousands of copies of the go-ahead Berners-street firm's popular songs from the South African music-loving public.

Mr. Harry Lester, the Terriers' Secretary, was on Saturday the surprised recipient of a massive silver matchbox, with initials, sent in a registered letter by the Hon. Treasurer, Mr. Douglas White.

A new farcical sketch by George Unwin, entitled Touched Up, will be produced on Monday by The Players. In it will appear Miss Violet Ellicott (late Duke of York's Theatre), Miss Rose Temple (late of Terry's Theatre), Mr. Herbert Ford (late of the Strand Theatre), and Mr. George Unwin (late of the Scala). The sketch will be presented each evening during the week at the Cambridge at 8.30 and the Standard at 10.30.

Mr. Harry Tate, who opens at the Oxford on August Bank Holiday, sails for New York in October for a six weeks' season of Fishing. His Motoring company, which returned last month from a long tour of the States, returns to New York in a fortnight for a fifty-six weeks' tour. Mr. Tate also has companies playing Motoring, Fishing, and Golfing in the provinces, so that he has his hands pretty full.

Mdlle. von Etta, the lady illusionist, is meeting with genuine success everywhere with her unique entertainment of art and mystery. The turn has been secured by Mr. Oswald Stoll for the London Hippodrome, and the Moss and Stoll tour.

Miss Evelyn Taylor is due to open on Monday at the Holborn Empire, Euston, and Paragon with a budget of new songs, after a provincial tour of forty-four weeks.

Lillie Seldon (pupil of Mme. Waldahoff) has just gained the silver medal as associate, with honours, of the Guildhall School of Music. We believe this is a record for a child mandolinist.

Mr. Joe Haynes, the old-time comic and music-hall proprietor, who is now proprietor of the Duke of Argyle, Great Windmill-street, W., desires to say that he has not yet purchased the Empire, Battersea (late the Washington), but that negotiations are proceeding.

The directors of Hackney and Shepherd's-bush Empire Palaces have resolved to pay an interim dividend on the ordinary shares for the half-year to June 30 at the rate of ten per cent. per annum.

Hercat and Fairfax take their new sketch, "Her House in Disorder," produced at the Lyceum last month, to the Crystal Palace next week.

Leo Fritz, the well-known variety agent, has just entered into an agreement for the sole bookings of four first-class variety theatres, which will be duly announced in these columns.

The death of Mrs. Jessie Violet Crawford (more generally known as Violet Friend) occurred at The Forest, Kinver, on Tuesday, July 3, after a lingering illness, at the early age of thirty-two years. The deceased lady will be remembered as a favourite on the variety stage, having toured the principal cities and towns of Europe and America, and having achieved success at the Tivoli and the Oxford.

The West Bromwich Hippodrome and Theatre Royal is undergoing elaborate alterations and decorations. It is also being re-seated and re-upholstered by the well-known firm of A. R. Dean & Co., of Birmingham, while Messrs. John Malling & Co., of West Bromwich, are responsible for the plastic work. These preparations are being completed for the opening of this house under the twice nightly system of the De Frece Circuit.

The Manchester Hippodrome and Ardwick Empire directors, after providing £3,489 for depreciation on leasehold and furnishings, paying £4499 in interim dividend, and writing off balance of preliminary expenses £3615, recommend a dividend for the second half of the year at the rate of ten per cent. per annum.

Mr. Maynard Dakin, who has been associated with the Adeler and Sutton Syndicate tours for the last four years as one of their principal and refined humorists, is making a host of friends at the Olympian Gardens, Rock Ferry, at which place of entertainment he has been installed as manager, a position he is eminently qualified to fill by his ability, tact, and courtesy.

Mr. R. H. Davy, of the New Brighton Tower and Recreation Company, Limited, has added the position of manager of the Tower Grounds to his other duties. The patrons of the "Tower" are loud in their praise of his urbanity and courtesy in the fulfilment of his onerous engagements.

During the recess Mr. W. C. Horner, the lessee and manager of the Empire Theatre of Varieties, Burnley, has had the place elaborately decorated throughout, and extensive alterations have been made in the structure of the stage and dressing-rooms. The former has been lowered nine inches, the line of sight thus obtained being a great advantage to patrons of the stalls. The whole of the old dressing-room accommodation has been replaced by comfortable and commodious apartments, thoroughly ventilated and lighted. The body of the hall has been also entirely reseated with new tip-up chairs and benches, and no expense has been spared.

Mr. A. Staughton is leaving the Empire, New Cross, after having been employed there for nearly three years as stage-manager. He opens at the Empire, Hackney, on Monday, in a similar position.

Messrs. Porter and Ferguson, who recently purchased the Palatine Hall, Lancaster, have made extensive alterations, and intend opening on Monday next. The hall will be known as the Hippodrome and Opera House. The interior has undergone complete metamorphosis. The raised floor has been made into a gradual and easy slope. Fluted pillars, elaborately decorated and gilded, support the proscenium, over which is a cleverly drawn group of figures representative of music and art, artistic scroll-work filling the wall spaces on each side. The full size of the stage is 44ft. by 26ft., with an opening to the auditorium 23ft. wide and 26ft. high.

The circle retains its original form, but has a greatly improved rake. The seating throughout is by means of tip-up chairs. The new Hippodrome is to be open for inspection this Saturday afternoon, and for the formal opening next week Messrs. Porter and Ferguson have provided an exceptionally attractive bill of fare.

At a sitting of the Dean of Guild Court on Wednesday morning, Mr. Dugald D. Dickie, writer, appeared and made application to the Court for a special sitting to consider plans to be submitted by Mr. E. H. Bostock, of the Zoo, Glasgow, for the erection of a large and commodious hippodrome within the show grounds at Smithhills, recently occupied by Mr. M'Indoe. The Court, after hearing explanations and reasons for a special sitting, granted Wednesday next as the day for consideration of the plan.

"Ring down the curtain," shouted Mr. Fred Edwards in the Norwich Hippodrome on Monday when, owing to unseemly interruptions from the gallery, he and Miss May Edouin found it impossible to continue their performance in the second house. The order was instantly obeyed, and then Mr. F. W. Fitt, the manager, came to the footlights, and said it was only natural that such well-known artists should resent the interruptions. However, he would appeal to Mr. Edwards to continue his performance, whilst promising that the gallery audience would behave themselves. The curtain was then rung up, and Mr. Fitt introduced Mr. Fred Edwards to the audience. Mr. Edwards then brought forward Miss May Edouin, and the entertainment proceeded, amidst hearty applause.

The annual outing held in connection with the Birmingham Gaiety took place last Sunday, when the good endeavours of Mr. and Mrs. Bushell for the day's enjoyment met with success beyond all expectation. Cheered by the—as it proved—favourable weather, the party, which numbered a hundred and twenty-five employees and friends, trained to Worcester, well fortified by refreshments, and took the boat in good time for Tewkesbury (Lower Lode), where an ample dinner was provided, after which the party repaired to a fishing contest, which had been arranged for members of the staff. This was won by Mr. Fred Camp, the musical director, who thus became the popular possessor of a handsome marble clock with bronzes to match, while Messrs. Overton and French were second and third respectively, winning a set of vases each. An egg and spoon race for the ladies produced a little flutter and much blushing, and was won by Mrs. Arter (1st, a walnut clock), Miss Bushell (2nd, a brass kettle and stand), and Miss Morgan (3rd, a set of vases). A visit to the famous old Abbey was followed by tea, and then the party returned to Worcester by boat, reaching Birmingham at 10.30.

Machnow, the Russian giant, has just been fined £1 by a New York magistrate for giving an exhibition in a park without an official permit from the park-keepers.

Mr. Frank Macnaghten's Leicester Pavilion staff, favoured by delightful weather, had their annual outing on Sunday. The place selected was Skegness, the nearest seaside resort to Leicester. The merry party, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lapworth, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Lawrence, Mr. Fred Gough, Miss Harris, Miss James, and Miss Frost, assembled at the Great Northern Station at 8.15, and reached their destination about 11 o'clock. Dinner and tea were served at the Pier Hotel, and during the day driving, boating, &c., were indulged in. The toast list at the dinner was commendably short. Mr. Walter Lapworth, the acting-manager, proposed the health of Mr. Frank Macnaghten, which was heartily received. A word of commendation should be given to Mr. Lawrence for the excellent way in which he catered for the party.

Mr. Sid Cotterell, who is this week starring at the King's, Gateshead, was presented on Wednesday with a complete set of razors and outfit, by Mr. Thomas Ridley, a well-known Gateshead gentleman. Mr. Cotterell is still going strong with that great success The Substitute.

Mr. Harry Nation will hold a grand illuminated confetti carnival on Thursday next, August 2, at his Alfresco Grounds in Herne Bay. The special attractions which have been engaged include the band of the 7th Princess Royal Dragoon Guards—very popular in the Bay.

The New Cross Empire, which is under the capable managership of Mr. Ernest Bridgen, celebrates its seventh anniversary on Wednesday evening next. Since its opening this house has enjoyed uninterrupted success, and is a typical example of the rise of the modern "music hall." Seven years ago patrons of the New Cross Empire could not understand why they should not be allowed into the house without coats, a fact that seems very peculiar in view of the fashionable audiences now attracted to the place.

Prior to her departure from London, last week, on a motor run to Blackpool, where she is now appearing nightly, Miss Vesta Tilley accepted, for immediate production, no less than four new songs from the prolific pens of Messrs. Harrington and Tate, entitled, respectively, "Come along home, papa," "The Dandy River Boy," "Only One London," and "Leave the piano for me." The two first-named numbers, both of which Miss Tilley purposes producing on Monday next, have been accepted for immediate inclusion in the fast-growing "Sixpenny Successes" series of the Monte Carlo Publishing Company, while the other two songs will doubtless share the same fate at no very distant date.

Mr. Charles Beecham, the manager of the Paragon, has arranged a launch party for to-morrow week, Aug. 5. The train leaves Waterloo at 10.10 a.m., arriving at Hampton Court forty minutes later. The party will then board the launch Balmoral Castle, which will start at eleven o'clock from Molesley for Windsor, reaching the Royal borough about half-past two. Tickets for the outing, obtainable from Mr. Beecham at the Paragon, and from Mr. Worland S. Wheeler, the secretary, are 10s. 6d. each, which includes everything except wine

The wedding of Mr. Rudolph Whiteley, of the Five Whiteleys, and Miss Florrie Cleveland, of the Five Clevehands, took place on Sunday at St. Mark's Church, Kennington Gate, before a large number of professionals, friends, and relatives on both sides. The bridesmaids were Miss Sidonia Whiteley and Miss Lily Cleveland, and the brother, Mr. Henry Whiteley, officiated as best man. Among those present were:—Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland, father and mother of the bride; Mr. Ben Whiteley, brother; Mrs. Henry Whiteley, sister-in-law; Mr. John Delevanti, grandfather of the bridegroom; Mrs. Holloway, the aunt of the bride; Masters Henry and Benjamin Whiteley, nephews; Misses Ellen and Henrietta Delbosq, and a large contingent of Terriers, including the Secretary, Mr. Harry Lester representing the fraternity.

The presents, numerous and costly, included two diamond hoop rings and diamond and emerald ring from the bridegroom to the bride; diamond pendant from Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland to their daughter; diamond and ruby pin from Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland to the bridegroom; a silver-fitted dressing case from Mrs. Ellen Whiteley (bridegroom's mother) to her son; a leather travelling bag from Mrs. Ellen Whiteley to the bride; a case silver dessert knives, and a case of silver salt cellars, from Mr. and Mrs. Henry Whiteley; a massive gold lever watch and a lady's travelling clock from Mr. Ben Whiteley; a lady's travelling hat box from F. Cleveland, jun.; a lady's jewel case from Miss Lily Cleveland; salad bowl from Mr. Joseph; a massive silver hand mirror from the Terriers' Association; six handkerchiefs and a long lace tie from Miss Peggy Fame; a set of gold waistcoat buttons from Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wright; embroidered handkerchief from Miss Sidonia Whiteley; a silver hatpin stand and gold brooch from the Sisters Spray; shaving set and embroidery, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gray; a tea cosy from Mr. Delbosq; and a silver plated butter knife from Mrs. Edgerley.

A large number of telegrams and congratulations were received from the following:—Les Henris Mr. and Mrs. Selbo, Mrs. Delevanti and family, Mrs. Annie Matthews, Harry and Rose Clyo, Mr. and Mrs. Will Johnson, Forest and King, the Sisters Urma, Ian Colquhoun, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rocher, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wright, Miss Peggy Fame, Winnie and Lottie Govell, Mrs. Neal, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Gregory, Mr. Alfred Delbosq, sen., and Mr. Ernest De Vere, with lots of contracts. The wedding breakfast was given at 29, Brixton-road, about forty sitting down. The toasts were numerous and complimentary.

The third annual outing of the staff of the Walthamstow Palace took place on Sunday last, when a party of over fifty journeyed from Hoe Street Station, Walthamstow, to Clacton-on-Sea. Amongst those forming the party were Mr. A. J. Barclay, manager, and Mrs. Barclay, Mr. G. F. Slatter, acting-manager, and Mrs. Slatter, Mr. J. Grant, stage-manager, and Mrs. Grant, Mr. C. Woolard, refreshment department, and Mrs. Woolard, Mr. Albert E. Hill, box-office, and, with hardly an exception, every member of the working staff, male and female, both before and behind the curtain.

The party caught the nine o'clock train from Liverpool Street to Clacton-on-Sea, which was reached a little before eleven. After dinner, which was served at Rigg's, Mr. G. F. Slatter proposed the health of the directors, management, and staff of the Walthamstow Palace. The Chairman, Mr. A. J. Barclay, in response, expressed his thanks to all present for the support they had accorded him, without which it would have been impossible to have made the Palace a success. After dinner the members of the party separated to enjoy themselves as they pleased by boating, driving, etc., and the company entrained for Liverpool Street, which was reached at 10.30 after a most enjoyable day.

Ballet will remain the leading feature of the Bank Holiday programme at the Empire. In addition to Delibes' delightful Coppelia, in which Mlle. Genee appears nightly, by general request the Watteau divertissement in Wilhelm's Cinderella will on that day be added to the attractions of the premier variety house. It will be presented with many new features of interest alike in music, character, and incident, affording a fuller illustration of the Fêtes Galantes of Louis XV.'s reign, as depicted for all time by Watteau and Lancret. La Camargo, the most celebrated dancer of the period, will figure in the scene, which will also be graced by La Pompadour and her train of courtiers. Additional music will be selected from contemporary sources, and the arrangement of the dances will be confided to Mr. Fred Farren, who will himself figure as a Maître de Ballet. Mr. Wilhelm will, as before, be responsible for the production.

The Arizona Troupe and Will Percival sails from Southampton on Aug. 4 by the s.s. St. Paul. They are engaged for Mr. Phil Sheridan's Sports Girl for a tour of forty-two weeks through the United States and Canada.

The Kilburn Empire opens on August 6, under the management of Mr. Brien McCullough. The theatre has been overhauled and renovated throughout, and the bars made very attractive. The Bold Brien—for he is indeed bold—is starting with a tremendous production of Uncle Tom's Cabin. The scenery is by Francis H. Bull, and for the Plantation Scene Brien has engaged the Yankee Doodle Coons, who will make their first appearance in England. There are several excellent variety turns, and the latest pictures by the New Bioscope. The place will be run on the twice a night system at popular prices.

Miss Maria Loftus, after three years' absence, has been delighting the Dublin folk at the Hippodrome with her versatility, her bonhomie, and her humour. She won the proud title of Queen of Burlesque years ago; and she is still as fresh, as unconventional, as up-to-date, and as charming as ever. Her admirers in the Irish capital may be numbered by thousands, and without stint they have poured out the incense of their admiration at Marie's feet during her triumphant engagement. In her entertainment, Singers, Past and Present, the "Glesca lassie" shows her wonderful powers of travestie, under which one may discover the truthful observation of the born mimic and comedienne. Marie Loftus possesses the infinite variety that is not stated by custom, and her entertainment is as exhilarating as ever.

The open-air matinée organised on the 18th inst. by Chirgwin at the Happy Valley, Southend, was a great success, and has yielded £20. The White-eyed Kaffir has sent this sum to Mr. Pedgrift, vice-president of the Music Hall Home, to divide equally between that charity and the Music Hall Benevolent Fund, and cheques value £10 each have been forwarded to each institution. If every well-known artist took the same interest in the charities of the profession there would be no complaint of lack of cash. The attractions of the entertainment were augmented by Miss Fanny Wentworth and Mr. Joe Archer, who travelled specially from London to entertain.

Miss Ada Reeve, who has every reason to be proud of her artistic triumphs on the Rand, is due at Southampton on August 4th, and after a short holiday she will appear on the 20th at the Tivoli, an engagement wholly in accord with the excellent traditions of that house under the enterprising management of Mr. Joseph Wilson. Miss Reeve brings with her several songs, new, at any rate, to London, among them being "If the World were Ruled by Girls" and "Auntie sent Me Marketing." She may also introduce "Trixie, of Upper Tooting."

Mr. Charles O'Connor, who recently filled the position of Presshustler at the Lyceum, has been appointed by Mr. Alfred Butt to a similar position at the Palace.

Mr. Frank Weeks, we are sincerely sorry to learn, is still seriously indisposed, and in consequence of his continued illness the South London outing has been postponed.

Mr. Joe Peterman will shortly put on a revised edition of The King of Sahara, the musical comedy sketch, recently produced at the Oxford. Mr. Forbes Dawson, who is a prolific playwright, will be responsible for the new "book." It is much needed.

The Water Rats will have their annual outing on the upper reaches of the beautiful Thames on Sunday, August 19. The crowd will leave Waterloo at 9.45 a.m. for Windsor, proceeding thence by steam launch to Marlow, coming down the river later to Windsor, and reaching Waterloo at ten o'clock. Lunch, dinner, and tea will be served on board.

Mr. George Adney Payne and Mr Emanuel Warner (of Somers and Warner), have returned home after a most enjoyable and health-giving time at Marienbad.

Mr. Will Bishop, who was so popular at the Empire before he became ballet master at the Coliseum, will on Monday appear with a company at the Ardwick Empire, there to produce his celebrated original scena My Golliwog, of which he made a feature at the Coliseum. Mr. Bishop is engaged for the Moss and Stoll tour.

Miss Syria Lamonte, the charming Australian soubrette and soprano, is leaving to-day (Saturday), by the s.s. Philadelphia for New York. She is fully booked this year by her sole representative, Mr. David Hart.

Miss Maree Kean, the attractive soubrette, whose training on the regular stage stands her in good stead, is winning golden opinions for her sketch of a Suffragette. The song accompanying this clever impersonation is the joint work of Harry Leighton and George Everard, and has been produced most successfully by Miss Kean both at the Paragon and Ealing Hippodrome.

Miss Rachel Lowe, who is scoring her usual success at the Tivoli, Manchester, has added to her répertore of novelty songs a decided original number, entitled "The Progressive Woman," the joint efforts of Messrs. Tom Wicks and Charles Warren. The "Woman Up to Date" has been treated in a very novel manner, and Miss Lowe receives roars of laughter and shouts of applause for her humorous rendition of this song, which will be heard in London in the near future.

Miss Josie Collins, the clever daughter of the celebrated Lottie Collins, appeared at the Palace on Monday last, and made a distinct success with her songs "Americana" and "Rosa Anna."

Miss Marie Weston, who has been appearing with success in the Moss tour, has an excellent vehicle for the display of her ability in a charming song, entitled "Pansy." This is another "Witmarkian" success, and will doubtless be in great demand for pantomime.

On Sunday, 22nd July, the staff of the front of the house at the Alhambra and their friends had their annual outing at Guildford, and after an excellent lunch, provided by Miss Beddington, the hostess of the Lion Hotel, the party went for a drive over the famous Surrey Hills, returning shortly after six to tea, at the conclusion of which their manager, Mr. George Scott, very thoughtfully proposed a little subscription on behalf of Pearson's Fresh Air Fund. This appeal was at once responded to, £5 5s. being immediately given. The return journey was made by the 8.48 train.

A very excellent turn at the Chelsea Palace last week was that of Messrs. Keith and Kent. Judging by the number of calls they received, these artists would find great favour in the West End, for their performance is distinctly smart.

At the comfortable Queen's, Poplar, where the ever courteous manager, Mr. Jack Woolf, is so ably directing big business, there was produced on Monday, by Mr. Harry Bristow and his specially selected company, including Mr. Edgar Coyne, Mr. Austin Lonton, Miss Kate Neville, and Miss Louise Brandon, a new and original dramatic sketch written by Mr. Harry Bristow, entitled In a Man's Grip, in which the author distinguished himself by a capital delineation of the heavy part of Richard Morgan.

Mr. Horace Marriott, the Secretary of the Music Hall Benevolent Fund, acknowledges with many thanks a cheque for £10, half of the proceeds of a matinée given by Mr. G. H. Chirgwin at the Happy Valley, Southend.

Mr. J. T. Frohn, Secretary of the Music Hall Home Fund, acknowledges with many thanks a cheque for £10, half of the proceeds of a matinée given by Mr. G. H. Chirgwin at the Happy Valley, Southend.

The Licensing Committee of the London County Council proposes to sit for the licensing of music halls at Newington on Nov. 5 and 6, and at Clerkenwell on Nov. 12 and 13. After report to the Council, the final Session will be held on Nov. 30.

The conviction of Mme. Eugénie Fougère, the Parisian comedienne, and her husband, Albert Girod, at the Clerkenwell Sessions, several weeks ago, was quashed on Saturday by the Court for the Consideration of Crown Cases Reserved. She was formally discharged at the North London Sessions on Tuesday.

The following is a special list of the names of members of the Variety Artists' Federation who advertise in The Era, and for whom voting papers have been sent to this office. Will the members please apply for these papers? The list was too long to admit to our Letter Box list.—Mr. Alfred L. Artois, Mr. J. Artois, Mr. John Bandoni, Mr. Harry Baroni, Mr. George Brooks, Mr. John E. Coyle, Mr. J. J. Elmo, Mr. James Elvo, Mr. Roy Fortescue, Lady Fauntleroy, Mr. Edward Ind, Mr. J. H. Kavanagh, Mr. T. Kioto, Mr. Hyam Long, Mr. Fred Lloyd, Mr. Fred Leslie (Leslie Brothers), Miss Lall Melrose, Professor McCann, Mr. H. La Martime, Miss Ada Mack, Mr. Ben Obo, Mr. Jim Obo, Miss Lola Patey, Mr. William Percival, Mr. William Perkins, Miss Myra Stansfield, Mr. Arthur Stratton, Mr. Harry Taft, Mr. David Tait, Mlle. Thelma, Miss Ada Terry, Mlle. Tunmiere, Mr. Walter Wadd.

The debenture-holders of Arnold v. the Lyceum (1903) (Limited) came on as a motion for judgment in default of defence on Saturday. Mr. Younger, K.C., for the plaintiffs, stated that his clients held the whole of the first series of £120,000 debentures, and their principal had become due owing to the default of the company in the payment of interest due in January. The property owned by the company was freehold, and was very valuable. Mr. Justice Joyce made an order in the form usual in a debenture-holder's action, and gave liberty to the plaintiffs to bid at the sale of the property. The conditions of the sale, he said, would be settled by the Master in Chambers.

Mr. Harry Tate's No. 1 Company sailed yesterday (27th), per the Orient Liner Ortona, for a lengthy tour in Australia, and will produce there the ever popular variety sketches, Motoring, Fishing, and Golfing, under the management of Mr. Harry Rickards. Mr. Tate is sending out full scenery and effects and a competent company, and is determined that no effort shall be spared to give the Australians a treat.

Mr. Thomas Prichard, late of the Empire, Dudley, recently at Smethwick made an application to the magistrates for a temporary licence for music and singing at a ground in Windmill Lane, near the Cape. The application, which was opposed by Mr. Hewitson, manager of the Theatre Royal, was refused.

Sam L. Bury's Agency has been appointed as English representative for the Casino de Paris. The firm is also doing a lot of booking at Rouen, Marseilles, Nice, Bordeaux, Lyons, and other towns in France.

The eleventh regular meeting of the Chelsea Lodge of Freemasons was held in the beautiful rooms of the Town Hall, King's-road, S.W., on Friday, the 20th inst. Mr. Albert Le Fre, W.M., was in the chair, and among those present were Mr. James W. Matthews, I.P.M., Mr. Wolfe S. Lyon, treasurer, acting as S.W. (in the absence of Serpentello, who is in America), Mr. H. Baroni, J.W. (who had travelled overnight from Accrington to be present), Mr. W. H. Hitch, S.D., Valazzi, acting J.D., and Mr. L. G. Sharp, acting I.G.

A good attendance of the brethren included Dr. J. J. Orr, P.M., Earls Court Lodge; Herbert Chinnery, P.M., Knightsbridge Lodge; A. Ward, Asaph Lodge; T. W. Rumble, Caledonian Lodge; and G. W. Peachy, Fulham Lodge. Mr. Le Fre vacated the chair in favour of Mr. J. W. Matthews, who initiated the Rev. Herbert Heriot Hill into Freemasonry with a view to his being appointed chaplain to the Lodge. Upon Mr. Le Fre resuming his position, he initiated Mr. Leo Tell, and subsequently passed Mr. J. B. Helm to the second degree and raised Messrs. F. H. Pedgrift, Frank Hardy, George Graham, Henry Mason (Mason and Burt), and Albert Christian. The secretary was instructed to send letters of sympathy to Messrs. Edward Swanborough and Fred Clay, the latter having broken his arm. After a very heavy afternoon's work, the brethren adjourned for refreshment, when opportunity was taken to drink the health of Mr. J. W. Matthews and wish him a pleasant voyage to Russia, to which country he was sailing that night to spend a portion of his vacation.

Mr. Charles Deutrich's Vaudeville Bureau has been removed to 31, Islington, Liverpool.

The staff of the Euston will have their annual outing to-morrow, when a merry party will journey to Hampton Court, afterwards proceeding up the river to Windsor.

The 473rd meeting of the Committee of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association was held at the offices on Tuesday, when there were present Messrs. Charles Coborn (in the chair), Jack Collinson, Frank Gerald, George Gray, Fred Herbert, Walter Munroe, George Preston, Albert Voyce, and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary). Minutes of the previous meeting were read and passed, and matters arising therefrom discussed. Cases of refunds and insurances were considered, and correspondence dealt with. A letter was read from a member advocating that efforts should be made to obtain the concessions for single members, as in France, Spain, and Italy, and that sixpence be charged for stamping the single cards, the proceeds of which should be devoted to railway charities. The secretary was instructed to acknowledge the receipt of the letter.

Mr. C. W. Poole, of the Palace, Gloucester, and Mr. Frank Mundill, of the Grand, Stalybridge, were appointed agents for the Association in each town. Mr. G. W. Gerald, the agent in Paris, stated in a letter that negotiations for concessions on journeys to England were proceeding, but that it would be imperative for artists in France to produce their contract before the reduction would be granted. The secretary presented his financial statement for the week ending July 21, by which it appeared that 17 new members had joined, and that the receipts were £28 10s., and the expenditure £22 13s. 9½d., less £5 on account of furniture in hand.

Mr. Voyce alluded to the inconvenience caused by railway clerks being sometimes unfamiliar with the rules under which concessions were granted, and gave an instance at one particular station in London, to which the secretary promised to give attention. Mr. Gray moved that a vote of thanks be given to the Rev. Stewart Headlam and the Women's Trade Council, through whose instrumentality the Dangerous Performances Bill had been withdrawn, and the following resolution was adopted: "That a vote of thanks be given to the Rev. Stewart Headlam, on behalf of the members of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association, many of whom have to earn their livelihood as acrobats, both on the music hall stage and in the circus arena."

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE PALACE.

The current programme at the Palace is more than usually cosmopolitan in its character, the entertainers therein being gathered from all quarters of the globe—from America, Australia, France, and Germany. Mr. James Mooney and Ida Holbein, from America, make their first appearance in this country in what in the parlance of the profession is called a vaudeville intermezzo. Miss Holbein is continually interrupted in her apparent desire to give a monologue entertainment by Mr. Mooney, who is a very neat acorbat, and does wild, whirling, and unexpected things in the way of acrobatics. He revels in practical topsy-turveydom; but the entertainment given by the talented pair is "right side up," and really funny in an unpretentious way—which is the right way.

Audiences at the Palace have a warm welcome for Miss José Collins, the daughter of a famous mother, who won considerable favour at the palatial house in Shaftesbury-avenue some years ago, after she had astonished the two hemispheres with her wonderful energy and abandon in "Ta-ra-ra- Boom-de-ay," which had an extraordinary vogue some fifteen years since. Miss Collins is pretty and graceful, and is gifted with a sweet voice, which she displays to advantage in two well-written and melodious songs. She has hereditary talent as a comedienne, and should certainly do well if refinement and artistic impulse count for anything on the variety stage, which they certainly do at the present day. It is Miss Ray Wallace's special mission to mimic the stars, which she does while accompanying herself at the pinao. To be included in her répertoire has become in consequence an undoubted distinction. Miss Victoria Monks is Miss Wallace's latest subject, and is therefore hall-marked as a variety constellation—a distinction that of course only grows out of public favour.

Mr. Paul Martinetti and his American pantomime company are producing for the first time at the Palace My Wife, in which is portrayed the domestic storm and its remedy in the house of Mr. and Mrs. Parsent. The lady treats her husband with contumely and most unwarrantable unkindness on her birthday, when he, with kindly forethought, brings her presents. She actually smacks his face. Justly enraged, at the conduct of his valet, Parsent takes the law into his own hands, and makes Madame ultimately dance to the crack of a formidable-looking whip. Mr. Paul Martinetti portrays the feelings of the outraged husband in most eloquent fashion, his gesture play being very fine indeed. Mr. Alfred Martinetti presents a complete study of the arrogance and impertinence of Jeames, of the servants' hall; and Miss Clara Martinetti, perfectly dressed, depicts the haughty but eventually submissive wife with excellent results. A word of praise is deserved, too, by Mr. Emile Josset as Mr. Rosenier, by Mr. John Heard as Mr. Giler, and by Miss Clarie Vernon as Camille.

A very welcome return to the Palace is made by Chanti, who is described as the electrical mechanical protean artist, with novel and original effects. In his various impersonations Herr Georg Chanti—to give him his full title—endeavours to secure what may be termed "atmosphere," and he does so by some very ingeniously arranged trick scenery, which is lit up in novel fashion by electricity. He presents the Heidelberg student in the pursuit of pleasure and indulging in a polka. The Heathen Chinee is less hilarious, but just as nimble on his feet. With the introduction of the Spanish bull-fighter we are treated to some scenery representing a vast arena, and the comic note is played by the plunging of a short sword up to the hilt into the carcase of a cardboard bullock, who gazes more in sorrow than in anger at a bottle of bovril at his feet. In his Neapolitan scene Chanti tinkles the mandoline, choosing the well-known "Intermezzo" from Cavalleria Rusticana, and winds up with a capital impersonation of a Scotchman, who is quite equal to a reel or a strathspey, which he accompanies on the bagpipes. A most artistic and cleverly devised turn of which the variety is decidedly charming.

In the earlier portion of the programme is seen that clever and graceful artist Miss Gwennie Hasto, who has lifted sensational dancing to the dignity of a fine art, and astonishes by the difficulty of the various terpsichorean feats that she accomplishes. Miss Daisy Harcourt, the girl from the Colonies, shows decided quaintness in her first song, wherein she describes the manner in which Macdougall sang, and its consequences. Dressed in a short blue dress, which shows off her petite figure to perfection, Miss Daisy reminds us of our own Marie Lloyd by her piquancy in the song, "Try that again." "It's the same old girl" is, frankly speaking, a chorus song, but very good of its kind. It affords, however, no chance to Miss Harcourt to make us acquainted with her powers of character-drawing, in which description of stage work we feel sure she possesses considerable ability. Of the entertainments submitted by Evan Evans, the Welsh comedian; Selbo, the club juggler; Fred Niblo, the American raconteur; and Mlle. Berthe Bordeverry we have already spoken; and it only remains therefore to note the return of Miss May Belfort, in welcome songs; the Bioscope, showing the world's events day by day; the songs of Lucette de Verley; and the fine rendering by Mr. Herman Finck's superb orchestra of Messager's "Suite de Ballet," Les Deux Pigeons, played for the first time in London outside of the Royal Opera House, Covent-garden

THE MIDDLESEX.

A singularly gifted mimic who is not so well known in this part of the world is Takio, who hails from the land of the chrysanthemum. If we are to judge by his performances at the Middlesex this week, Takio will, in a comparatively short time, become a popular artist in this country. Perhaps his most wonderful imitation is that of a swallow, the notes being whistled with really remarkable clearness and birdlike tunefulness. Takio also gives vocal representations of the noises caused by knife-grinding, the planing of wood, the roaring of a lion, a cat and dog fight, and the music of the saxophone and the gramophone. Mr. George Prince is an eccentric comedian of much merit, and those of his verses which end with the line "And that was Parker-street's reply," find great favour with the galleryites, for praise of local people is not to be lightly regarded. A couple of smart and exceedingly entertaining American duettists and dancers are found in Woodward and Walton, whose terpsichorean efforts are particularly commendable. Gascoigne submits a variety of neat juggling tricks, and the Sprees appear in the attractive scene, Twickenham Ferry. Mr. Johnny Holland and company have something extremely laughable in their latest irresponsible trifle, Our Betsy. Mr. Holland in the rôle of the man who masquerades as a woman is absurdly comical, and the little sketch is fruitful in its merry-making qualities. Mr. Andy Fagan is as droll as ever with his characteristic Irish songs. We get some true Hibernianisms both in his story about one Michael McCann and in his second number, in which, attired in feminine garb, he poses as the unhappy spouse of a drunken husband. What he has to relate in the latter rôle is extremely pitiful from one point of view—that is, if you take the statements seriously—while from the other point of view it is irresistibly diverting.

The Carina Sisters furnish evidence of remarkably versatile talents in the musical line. They seem capable of playing on almost any instrument in existence. We get popular airs on the piano, violin, cornet, French horn, and one or two other melody-producing contrivances of a novel make. This musical Melange is artistic and enchanting in the extreme. The Little Charwoman is a comedy sketch in which Miss Nannie Goldman demonstrates her cleverness in a variety of characterisations. A story has been written around an accident which prevents a star actress from playing her part on a certain night when Royalty is expected at the theatre. One of the theatre cleaners asks the manager to give her a trial, and he tests her abilities. The result is most gratifying, for the "little charwoman" assumes in turn the rôles of a flower-seller in a pathetic scene, a ragged newspaper boy, a Dutch woman, and a "swell" lady. Miss Goldman deserves praise for her admirable impersonations, and in the bestowal of compliments we must not forget Mr. William Holles, whose acting in the part of the manager is distinctly good. Moon and Morris tickle one's fancy immensely with their amusing anecdotes and jokes, and they distinguish themselves in the direction of dancing. Mr. James A. Reilley wins golden opinions for his work as a raconteur and comedian, and the Bertos gain a full meed of appreciation for their comedy act. There is something uncanny in the professional pursuit of Mahatma, a lady whose powers of divination strike the average human being as supernatural. A member of the audience comes upon the stage and writes certain figures upon a blackboard. Mahatma having previously been blindfolded. Then, without being told any of the numbers, she "tots" up each column and gives the total. Not content with this, the mysterious lady, still blindfolded, advises two players in a game of nap how to dispose of their cards. Truly, "there are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio, than are dreamt of in your philosophy!"

For a wild and exciting dance we can recommend Mr. Herbert la Martine, who is also an expert in the baton manipulating line. It is with wonderful precision and rapidity that he whirls his silver rod round and round with his nimble fingers. His rendering of "Way down in my heart I have got a feeling for you" is sung with all the spirit and "go" that a coon song should be sung. Messrs. Bishop and Hanlon, who during the latter half of the week, are deputising for Mr. James A. Reilley, owing to the latter suffering from a sudden attack of sunstroke, treat the house to some excellent fooling with their merry burlesque business, and a coloured gentleman who on Wednesday evening appeared as an extra turn, delighted everyone with his expressive vocalism as applied to the "Laughing Song" and "Dreams." He quite secured the favour of the audience with his refined verses and acting. The Bioscope commands one's attention with its interesting and instructive pictures dealing with the life of a cowboy in South America. The views of the race by the white sons of the soil after a band of marauding Red Indians are thrilling and vivid in their picturesque realism. Mr. Frank Hardie, supported by a capable company, present the dramatic episode, Pedlar Sam; or, A Diamond in the Rough, in which the elements of both comedy and tragedy are well represented. The sketch is cleverly written, and the breezy Americanisms to which Mr. Frank Hardie, as Samuel Jefferson, gives expression are characteristic in phrase and twang. In short, it is a highly creditable performance that we get from Mr. Hardie of the character of the rough-cut, plain-spoken, generous-hearted pedlar. The piece is exceedingly well mounted and staged.

THE BEDFORD.

Manager A. F. Lovesy, who has made himself a most popular personage at the Bedford Palace, has a highly attractive programme to offer his patrons this week. One of the longest items is a tragic episode, entitled The Monk, presented by Miss Helene Forest and Co. The story is centred round the youthful indiscretion of a priest in his relation wtih a girl who afterwards becomes a famous music hall performer. Apparently the not uncommon divergence from the path of rectitude referred to disturbs the conscience of the monk a great deal more than it would the majority of men, and even years after the unhappy incident the holy father's mind is obsessed with depressing regret and melancholy penitence. Years after, too, the celebrated stage favourite, Pearl Vallette visits him, and taunts him with having dishonoured her in the long ago. That act, she tells him, was the beginning of her moral ruin, for, once having crossed the Rubicon which marked the line of chastity, she rushed headlong into a career of debauchery and gambling and all their sister sins. She had spared no effort to bring about the downfall of wealthy young men. And for all these things the monk was to blame for forcing her to take the initial step which led into evil paths. Now she wishes him to embrace her once more. He refuses. She demands that he quaff a winecupful of poison which she offers. After a while, he obeys her; in a few seconds he falls dead, and in another second the curtain falls on the woman's triumph. The part of the monk and Pearl Vallette were played with dramatic forcefulness and emotion by Mr. Ernest H. G. Cox and Miss Helene Forest respectively.

Germaine, "the American Wizard," is a person whose mysterious doings fairly startle one, and he is unquestionably a wonderfully artful magician. One marvelled at the way in which, in his hands and at his word of command, colours were changed and handkerchief's appeared and disappeared with supernatural rapidity and invisibility. Then a tiny plant was put into a flower-pot, the conjurer waved his fan, and, lo and behold, a "mango tree" blossomed out in all its glory, getting bigger and bigger and bigger! One felt curious to know by what magical means the tree rose to such a height and to such fulness of flower and foliage! Madame Eugenie Fougere sings characteristic French chansons and American coon ditties. In her "Flower Song" she is the very spirit of gaiety and laughter, so much so, indeed, that her mirthfulness becomes infectious, and everybody laughs in unison with the clever artiste. Mme. Fougere's imitation of an American comedienne singing a coon song is distinctly amusing, and altogether she is as bright and lively and light-hearted as ever Oberon expected his mischievous fairies to be! Miss Florence Inman is a descriptive vocalist of considerable talent. There is a tender sentiment in her songs. "One Touch of Nature Makes the Whole World Kin" and "It's the Poor that Help the Poor," and both receive an adequately sympathetic rendering.

Mr. George Prince is not much out of it when he describes himself as "a crazy comic." His craziness is of the delightfully humorous kind. His lugubrious appearance as he tells the story of how "it's the sun that brings them out" is in itself something to laugh at. Then we have Mr. Charles Fanning, whose peculiar style of business proves highly successful, and adds to our store of pleasure. It is extremely diverting to hear him chatter in an assumed tongue-tied kind of speech about his friendly relations with Mr. Chamberlain, and he is recalled again and again amid uproarious applause. Miss Jane Temple, the American coon shouter, entertains the audience with her song, "Is that You, Mr. Brown?" and her whole turn is commendable. Bishop and Hanlon indulge in a number of absurd antics and absurd sayings. Their burlesque dramatic acting and speeches provoke intense merriment. The Four Hearnes are remarkably agile acrobats, who impart to their doings the relish of humour. From the Imperial Bioscope we get an attractive series of pictures.

A NOVEL cricket match was played on Monday at Southend on the Maplin Sands, between teams selected by Mr. George Conquest and Mr. Oswald Trigg. The game resulted in a tie, each side scoring 91 runs.

MISS LOUIE FREEAR

AS JEMIMA IN "SNOOKS."

Miss Louie Freear, of whom London has, of late, seen all too little, is now appearing on the Moss and Stoll tour in one more—the last so far—but decidedly not the least—of her famous character studies of the quick-witted, audacious, and unconsciously humorous London slavey. The sketch in which the character Jemima disports herself in true Freear irresponsibility is called Snooks, but its title need hardly be considered when discussing the performance. As a matter of fact, it is simply and frankly an ingeniously devised and smartly-written vehicle, designed to exploit the bizarre genius of the little actress who ran the Chinese Honeymoon into a three years' period of delight—surely the longest and happiest honeymoon on record.

The "plot" of Snooks centres round the love affairs of a fatuous swell, intent upon the hand of one Amelia Stiggins, who, in her turn, is attached to a Corporal Pepper, of the Grenadier Guards. When we say that a private Joshua Smith, in love with Jemima, the slavey (Miss Louie Freear), has thought fit to desert from the same regiment, and has taken refuge in the maison Stiggins in order to obtain the assistance of that much-worried little domestic, we have said enough to hint at the developments. Jemima, after a painful period of jealousy, and after much burlesque indignation, finds a way out of the imbroglio by purchasing Joshua's discharge from the service, the amorous Snooks takes the match-making mamma to wife, and all ends happily.

In The Gay Parisienne, Oh, Susannah, and The Chinese Honeymoon Miss Freear habituated playgoers to some expectation of a droll and artistic embodiment—an expectation always followed by realisation—but we doubt whether in either of the three above well-known successes the miniature comedienne so thoroughly revelled in her "part," or so completely ran up and down the gamut of comic resource. The utter absence of self-consciousness—the almost wild extravagance of "business," joined to an apparent seriousness and calm assurance of doing precisely the right thing—make Jemima a gem of pure acting such as is seldom seen. If Miss Freear tried to be comic, who knows what the result would be? But she does not try; all is spontaneous, droll, and, quite conceivably, lifelike—that is to say, lifelike as far as pure comedy might be expected to behave under given conditions. Altogether, Jemima may take an equal stand with her sisters, Ruth, Susannah, and Fi-Fi, if even she does not take precedence. They are near relations, of course—they have the same eerie voice, the same alertness, the same fertility of invention, but Jemima, the younger sister, is packed into a small parcel of half an hour's breadth, and yet yields no single point to either of the other impersonations.

MISS LOUIE FREEAR.

It will be remembered that some little time ago Miss Freear appeared in a most artistic and cleverly mounted excerpt from Dickens, entitled The Little Marchioness. In this piece the actress played with great success and remarkable power the freakish character of the "Marchioness." This glimpse at Dickens was written by Mr. B. Soane Roby, and emboldened by the well-merited commendations his little play evoked, Mr. Roby has again acted autorially in the above-named Snooks. It is obvious to us, and obvious to the closely-packed audiences which watched the performances of both productions, that Mr. Soane Roby possesses the knowledge and the power of projecting a suitable environment for Miss Louie Freear. To satisfactorily fit any well-known artist is, perhaps, mainly a matter of knack, combined with a minute understanding of the powers and possibilities of the actor or actress concerned. No star can be seen to shine if obscured by clouds, and no "star" can shine to the best advantage if his or her individual talent is obscured by a "misfit" piece. There are hardly any performers of individual personality who have not at some time or other suffered from a piece ill calculated to display that personality to the best advantage. There are hardly any performers of genius who have not been grateful for a well-considered chance of exercising their great ability. In the latter connection Mr. Soane Roby may congratulate himself. He has evidently studied the methods of Miss Freear's stage work, and is always capable of "fitting her like a glove" with a "fat part." Of this faculty Snooks is the latest and best proof.

THE new character-comedy sketch Cauliflower Joe, the full particulars of which appeared in our issue of the 14th inst., will be presented by Mr. Walter Purvis and company next week at the Empress, Brixton. It has also been booked for the Moss-Stoll Empires.

THE playgoers of Paris and America have recently been mystified by the appearance of a young and beautiful dancer who seemed particularly careful not to disclose her identity. As to her ability to dance there was no doubt, but what people really wanted to know is summed up in the question, "Who is she?" The Press of America, usually quick in these things, have been completely baffled by the little lady, whose face is masked by a coroneted domino of red. It is said she is the daughter of a prominent English politician, who only gave his consent on the condition she did not disclose her identity. Hence the somewhat novel plan referred to—a plan that was followed by a lady lion-tamer, the Countess X., at the now defunct Aquarium, Westminster—and there is no doubt the idea caught the American and Parisian fancy. In the street or on the stage, the dancer prefers to be known as "The Domino Rouge," and her appearance at the Palace Theatre will possibly cause great interest.

THE CANTERBURY.

Amongst the stories of the sea none is more thrilling than the tale of the wreck of the "Birkenhead." The captain and the crew stuck to their posts and met their deaths like the heroes they were; and it is only fitting that the memory of their gallantry and devotion should be kept green. We are, therefore, indebted to Mr. George Leyton, the popular actor-vocalist, for reviving the recollection of this tragic event, and of the courage in the face of death displayed by the British sailors who formed the crew of the ill-fated vessel. The story of the wreck is supposed to be told by a survivor, and Mr. J. P. Harrington has written some spirited verses, to which appropriate music has been wedded by Mr. James Tate. "'Tis a tale that will never die" is the burden of the song, and Mr. Leyton, wearing the uniform of a naval officer, sings it in vigorous and effective style, the chorus being joined in by three supernumeraries and a lad dressed as a midshipman. The last scene realises the well-known picture of the wreck with sailors clinging to the rigging of the doomed vessel, while others are on the deck below bravely awaiting the inevitable end. Prominent in the foreground is the drummer who has obeyed the orders of the captain for the last time. In a few minutes the "Birkenhead" will have disappeared for ever from mortal sight, and her gallant captain and crew will be struggling in the hungry, treacherous sea. The scene of the wreck has been admirably painted by Mr. G. Hemsley; and the new production has met with quite an enthusiastic reception at the Canterbury every evening this week. Mr. Leyton also delights the audience by his robust rendering of a song entitled "The Best of Friends must Part."

The Five Whiteleys, in their acrobatic wire-walking and musical pot-pourri, give a perfórmance that deservedly meets with much favour. Much ability is shown by these artists, who not only accomplish wonders on the wire, but also distinguish themselves as acrobats. One of the party jumps over three chairs—one at a time—placed on the wire, a few feet separating each, and then takes a flying leap over five chairs placed close together. In balancing and other feats requiring strength, agility, and nerve the Whiteleys are equally expert. Moreover, two members of the company are excellent xylophone players, and one acts the clown in a manner that causes much merriment. It is sometimes asserted that a refined comedienne is not appreciated at her proper value at a music-hall which caters for a middle-class audience. Miss Millie Lindon's unquestionable success at the Canterbury proves the contrary. This popular artist is the essence of refinement, and she is recalled again and again at the hall in the Westminster Bridge Road. "Mary, the Dairy Maid," is given with delightful expression, and her truly artistic rendering of "The Angel of My Dreams" is greeted with loud applause from all parts of the house. Miss Dolly Harmer is another pleasing comedienne, whose success is beyond doubt; she treats the audience to some well-chosen songs. The Sisters Silcott give a good rendering of "Kiss Me, Good-bye, Sweetheart," and then appear as three little Japs, characters which the sisters impersonate with considerable spirit. The Six Lancashire Lasses are youthful vocalists and dancers who open with a smartly executed clog dance. In their second contribution their performance is rendered much more effective by the assistance of the gentleman who sits up aloft and has the control of the lighting arrangements. Mr. Ben Albert, comedian, scores with his funny songs, "A Little Bit Here and There" being a special favourite. Mr. Harry Marte is again delighting the patrons of the Canterbury by his wonderful dancing, which must be seen to be properly appreciated. The musical sketch, Casey's Court, is fully dealt with in our notice of the Islington Empire programme; King and Benson do well in their comedy duologue, Just for Fun; Tray and Rich, black and white comedians, are well received, and so, too, are the Northern Troupe of International dancers. The pictures shown by Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope include "Elephants at work in the Burmese teak forests" and "Invisible Men." During the interval a selection from Gounod's Faust is excellently played by the orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Archie Howells. Mr. Fred Miller, the general manager, had the pleasant task of cordially welcoming the Surrey and Yorkshire cricket teams, who, by invitation, paid a visit to the Canterbury on Thursday evening.

ISLINGTON EMPIRE.

A new overture entitled "Islingtonia," composed by Mr. Alf. Petersen, the leader of the orchestra, forms a capital prelude to the entertainment given twice nightly at this popular hall. The leading attraction this week is the musical sketch called Casey's Court, in which some thirty young people take part. They represent the youthful denizens of a crowded court inhabited mainly by natives of the Emerald Isle. The boys and girls are dressed in weird costumes—many of them only fit for the rag-shop—but the presence of grim poverty has evidently no bad effect upon the spirits of these light-hearted sons and daughters of Erin. They are all as merry as crickets, and show but little respect for the authority of the stout Irish dame who appears to be the ruling power in Casey's Court. A youngster who presents the appearance of a "looney," but is as mischievous as a monkey, occupies a good deal of the dame's attention, but the intrusion of an Eton youth into this rowdy crowd seems somewhat incongruous. However, he adds to the "fun of the fair," being ultimately deposited in a hip-bath, labelled "private box." From this lowly position he is able to watch the performance which follows. A ventriloquist introduces two figures, an old man and a woman, but this show proves to be a fraud, the supposed dolls being very much alive and walking off amid the laughter of the merry crowd of onlookers. A conjurer also makes his appearance, does a few tricks, and then vanishes. A young girl sings a song and gives a dance, in which she is joined by other members of the company. Finally, the lights being lowered, "The Anvil Chorus" from Il Trovatore is given with the usual musical accompaniments. The entertainment is certainly not lacking in variety, and led by the capable comedian who plays the part of the dame, the young performers work hard to please, and quite succeed in their purpose.

The single turns engaged here this week include Celeste, who does a wonderful performance on the wire. This artist is an expert in the science of equipoise. To maintain one's equilibrium on a swaying wire is a feat that can of course only be acquired as the result of much practice and the exercise of no little patience. Celeste's wire act is well worth witnessing. Grant and Allen are burlesque comedians who make their entrance upon dummy steeds of quaint aspect. They represent a couple of mounted soldiers, and career around the stage as they sing an appropriate ditty. They next appear as West-End "toffs" in evening dress, who have evidently been enjoying themselves at their club, and have partaken freely of the cup that not only cheers, but inebriates. In the background is a pillar-box, and this is mistaken by the festive young men for a fellow roysterer. A gigantic cigar is placed by one of them in the opening, and curiously enough smoke is puffed forth, proving that the pillar-box has a human occupant. Grant and Allen meet with a good reception, and the same remark applies to Mr. Chris Richards, an eccentric comedian, who is known as "The Man with the Hat." This title has evidently been bestowed, because Mr. Richards plays various tricks with his headgear, while at the same time he gives a lively song and dance with successful results. Another comedian, Mr. Ted Young, has a ditty which deals in humorous fashion with "the all-night car." He also scores with "Fifteen on a Motor-car." The Carina Sisters deserve every credit for their well-rendered and artistic musical melange. These young ladies are clever instrumentalists, and give a pleasing display of their skill, concluding with a selection on the posthorn. Baker and Balfe play operatic and other selections on the xylophone in a manner that evokes loud applause. The gentleman also contributes a smart dance. Miss Ada Twibell, comedienne, is also in the bill, and the Bioscope depicts "The Smugglers' Dogs." Mr. George L. Wilson is the manager at this hall and Mr. Harry Blight holds the position of acting-manager.

THE SURREY.

On Monday, July 23, was produced here a dramatic Pantomimical Sketch, entitled

"A CELEBRATED CASE."

Mrs. Wilton ..... Miss Blanche Stannard
Mary ..... Miss Cissy Farrell
Edward Wilton ..... Mr. J. C. Aubrey
Eric Palmerston ..... Mr. Ernest Outrim
Usher ..... Mr. George Villiers
Judge Xden ..... Mr. Thomas Bloom
Tom, the Mute ..... Mr. Frank Lister

In this new sketch all the interest and sympathy of the audience are centred in the mute Tom. In the first scene we find the gaily-decked villagers welcoming home Edward Wilton and his pretty young wife Mary. Her brother Tom, although a mute, conveys by his actions alone the love and affection the villagers have for his sweet sister Mary, and presents her with a handsome wedding present on their behalf. In like manner he tells his sister there is an old man by the wayside, and asks his aunt Mrs. Wilton if he may ask the poor old fellow to join their festivities. She readily consents, and Tom introduces the wayfarer to the company. We soon find, however, that the new arrival is really Mary's reprobate cousin Eric Palmerston disguised, whom Mary had married years ago, and who, after deserting her, was reported dead. Eric overhears Mrs. Wilton telling Mary that she has made a will leaving all she has to her, which she intends signing before retiring for the night. The disguised villain leaves with the villagers, and Mary and her aunt are left alone. The supposed old man soon reappears, and, throwing off his disguise, discloses Eric, who intends to prevent his aunt from signing the will, so that he can claim her estate as the next of kin. Mrs. Wilton is in the act of signing the will when the villain, again disguised, creeps in and stabs her. Tom is just in time to witness the deed, and grapples with the murderer, and a terrific and exciting struggle ensues for the possession of the knife. Tom eventually makes the villain drop it by fixing his teeth in his hand, and Eric rushes to a heavy garden chair, and, striking Tom senseless with it, escapes. On recovering, Tom reels to the house-bell, and rings it furiously. This brings in the villagers and police, who find Mrs. Wilton just expiring, and, on being questioned as to who committed the deed, with her last breath denounces Tom, whose bloodstained scarf is discovered around the dead woman's neck. In dumb show he protests his innocence, but is arrested and brought to trial for the crime.

In the final scene Tom is on his trial, and all the chief dramatis personæ are in the Court House. Edward Wilton, as his counsel, makes an earnest and stirring appeal for Tom's life, and the accused is permitted to give a pantomimic description of the tragedy. Tom, in dumb show, goes through the scene of the tragedy, and, scanning the features of all in Court, stops at that of the villain Eric, who is holding his right hand in a sling. Tom offers to shake hands with Eric, but Eric refuses for some time, and eventually proffers Tom his left hand. Tom seizes his right, and tearing off the villain's glove, displays to the astonished Court his teeth-marks on Eric's hand. Eric confesses his crime, and exclaiming "By this hand that murdered my aunt I now take mine own," and before he can be prevented, shoots himself, and falls dead on the floor of the Court. The excitement restores Tom's speech as he falls on his knees and thanks God for his deliverance.

Mr. Frank Lister as the mute Tom is the central figure throughout, and never for a moment does he falter in his powerful delineation, while his dramatic pantomimic description of the tragedy in the Court, interspersed with his inarticulate sobs, holds the rapt attention of his audience at a high tension. Miss Cissy Farrell as Mary is womanly, sweet, and tender; Mr. J. C. Aubrey as Edward Wilton deserves warm praise for his forensic powers. As the villain Eric, Mr. Ernest Outrim brings into prominence a brutal force and callousness that thrills his hearers. Other well-defined characters are those of Mr. George Villiers as the Usher; Miss Blanche Stannard as the ill-fated Mrs. Wilton; and Mr. Thomas Bloom as Judge Xden. This miniature drama was in every way well staged.

In direct contrast to the above is Messrs. Fred Moule and E. D. Nicholl's company of comedians in their laugho-mello-dramette, entitled That Dreadful Detective. As the detective, Mr. E. D. Nicholls is the life and soul of this merry burlesque drama, and keeps the house in a roar of merriment whenever he is on the stage. His efforts are liberally supported by Miss Ada Frank as the Louie Freear type of a wild, reckless, smut-faced slavey. Mr. Courtney Robinson as the hunted Dennis works hard to keep the ball of fun rolling. As Rose, Miss Ada Lucelle makes a charming high-spirited heroine; Mr. Francis Castleton as Captain Paul is distinctly good, and imbues his villainy with a humour that is highly acceptable; Mr. W. G. Gorick as a police-officer has little to do, but does that little well.

Burnetti, the quick-changing character musician, gives an entertainment that is a happy combination of musical genius and comedy, for in quick succession he assumes life-like impersonations of Van Biene, Cleono, Belleni, Chirgwin, and Dutch Daly, each with their respective mannerisms. Flo Wood, in her medley of Irish songs, wins high favour; jovial Harry Anderson has two jolly chorus songs, "Something missing" and "She's a jolly good fellow," the chorus of both hitting the taste of the audience, who voice it with gusto and give the artist an ovation; the Three Gilbert Girls in their song ask members of the audience "How would you like to spoon with me?" which invitation is readily responded to all over the house; the acrobatic dancing of this merry trio is startling in its daring and tireless activity. Marlo can evidently hold his own in the art of jugglery, and gives an exhibition of skill that adds to the evening's enjoyment; Lillie Lassah is a smart little comedienne, her tuneful song "Jenny Mine" is well sung, while her ragtime dancing brings down the house; Mona McDonald is chic and merry in her song "I'll always think of you"; Fred Erick is very droll with his Harry Ford methods in his interrogating ditty "I can't make it out, can you?" Raymond's Bio-Tableaux animated picture illustrating an unemployed find, which makes him "Rich for one day," is highly amusing. The warm weather has not affected the continued prosperity of this popular vaudeville, and Mr. Charles Craig, the acting-manager, has, with pardonable pride, been able to register "splendid business." This notice would not be complete without a word of praise to the admirable work of the Surrey orchestra, under the skilful baton of Mr. W. Hinkinson, which must win the appreciation of the artist and the admiration of the audience.

MR. RICHARD WARNER is away at Kissengen, taking the waters. He has already greatly benefited by the cure.

THE MUSIC HALL HOME.

ANNUAL MEETING.

A gratifying record of charitable endeavour was revealed at the annual general meeting of the Music Hall Home, which took place on the stage of the Camberwell Palace on Wednesday afternoon. The balance in hand, which two years ago stood at £60, has now passed the total up to date of £350, an achievement highly creditable to the administrators of the fund and to those who have worked so hard in its interests. Never was the aid of charity invoked in a more noble cause, and the success of the movement by which the veterans of the variety profession, instead of lagging superfluous on the stage, are given the means of peaceful retirement in frugal comfort in their old age, is one of which everybody concerned may be properly proud. It is impossible adequately to gauge the effect of such philanthropic work on the public at large, but it is certain that the efforts of the Music Hall Home and kindred societies must have taken a large share in placing the variety profession in its present high position in public estimation. Every effort is being made to extend the scope of the association, and scanty as was the attendance on Tuesday, there was complete evidence that the work would be prosecuted with undiminished ardour.

In the absence of the president, Mr. Thomas Barrasford, who was out of town, Mr. Harry Barnard was elected to the chair. Among those present were:—Messrs. Jesse Sparrow, C. Douglas Stuart and Joe Lawrence (vice-presidents), Douglas White (treasurer), Barney Armstrong, W. S. Bassett, C. C. Cornish, W. Johnson, C. Mannering, Harry Mountford, Walter Norman, George Smythson, and J. J. Fruin (secretary).

The minutes of the preceding annual meeting, held last August, having been passed, the Chairman read the following report and balance sheet, the various items of which were received with cheers.

THE MUSIC HALL HOME
(31, Wilson-road, Camberwell),
ANNUAL REPORT
from 1st May, 1905, to 30th April, 1906.

It is with great pleasure that the committee have such a splendid balance sheet to place before the subscribers and those ladies and gentlemen who have kindly taken so much interest in the welfare of the Home during the past year. As will be seen by the balance sheet, we are now in a far better financial position even than last year, although we have maintained a larger number of inmates.

The committee tender their most sincere thanks to those who have helped them so materially to give so satisfactory a report.

I must especially mention the names of Mr. F. H. Pedgrift of The Era for his assistance with the New Year Fund, also Mr. Harry Blake (the Two Bees) for the splendid result by sale of his Hiawatha postcards, the M.H.A.R.A. for their handsome donation, the organisers of the gala at Liverpool, Mr. F. W. Warden, of Belfast, and also the organisers of the Birmingham sports.

HARRY BARNARD (Chairman).

I have examined the above statement of receipts and payments for the year ending 30th April, 1906, and have compared same with books and vouchers produced, and hereby certify same to be correct, and to show a true position of the fund at that date.

SIDNEY H. KENT, A.S.A.A.,
Incorporated Accountant.
65a, Cannon-street, E.C., July 7th, 1906.

In answer to Mr. Norman, the Secretary said the average number of inmates was seven—eight at the present moment.

Mr. Mountford said he had a few words to say for the benefit of those who did not subscribe to the funds. They had heard from the secretary that the average number of inmates was seven. Housekeeping and secretary cost them £272, and miscellaneous expenses £35 9s. 2d., so that by a simple process of arithmetic it would be found that seven members of the profession could be maintained for less than £6 per week. If that fact were to be disseminated among the profession, their receipts ought to be increased tenfold.

On the proposition of Mr. Sparrow, seconded by Mr. Lawrence, the adoption of the report and balance-sheet was carried.

Mr. Lawrence took the opportunity to state that Mr. Horace Ebden, of the Tankard, Kennington-road, had subscribed a guinea.

The Secretary said he regretted to say that since their last meeting they had lost two valuable members in Mr. Tasker and Mr. J. D. Humphrys.

The meeting then proceeded to the election of officers, and Mr. Mountford proposed the re-election of Mr. Thos. Barrasford as president. Mr. Lawrence seconded the motion, which was supported by Mr. Sparrow, who paid a tribute to the president's efforts on behalf of the Fund.

The resolution was carried unanimously.

Mr. Norman proposed that the same vice-presidents be retained, and the election of Messrs. Harry Barnard, Jesse Sparrow, C. Douglas Stuart, Walter Hassan, C. J. Bartleet Perry, Chas. Weldon, Fred Neiman, Joe Lawrence, Jas. E. Dunedin, and F. H. Pedgrift, who would be ex-officio members of the committee, was approved.

Mr. Lawrence proposed that Mr. Harry Mountford be added to the list. He was a very useful man, not only of their society, but of every other with which he had been connected.

The proposition was agreed to, as was also the motion proposed by Mr. Norman and seconded by Mr. Sparrow, that the name of Mr. Leon A. Bassett be added to the vice-presidents.

Mr. Sparrow announced that he had asked Mr. Burgess to become an hon. solicitor, and that that gentleman had consented, with pleasure, to act in that capacity. Mr. Sparrow's proposal, which was seconded by Mr. Lawrence was agreed to, the Chairman adding that it was a very fine thing for the Association.

Mr. Lawrence proposed the re-election of Mr. Douglas White as treasurer.

Mr. White thanked them very much, but he thought it would be more advisable for them to appoint some other gentleman to the position. He was now living in Chelsea, which was a long way off and would preclude his attendance to the duties. If he belonged to anything, he liked to attend as much as possible. He would prefer them to get some other gentleman in the immediate neighbourhood and in close touch with the Secretary.

The Chairman begged Mr. White not to ask the meeting to accept his refusal. It could not possibly be done. He had stuck to them while the ship was sinking, and they could not afford to lose him now that they had got into smooth water.

Mr. Sparrow urged Mr. White to try and continue the position for a few months and consent to fill the place at least for the present.

Mr. White said that after the remarks made, he would consent to continue the duties of treasurer as long as he could. He would do his best, but if he failed they were not to blame him.

Mr. White's election to the office was then confirmed.

The Secretary announced that Mr. Ben Woodger had telephoned that he was unable to attend, but would be pleased to continue in office. Mr. F. W. Millis had also sent his best wishes.

The election of committee was then taken, and it was decided to return the following members of the old executive:—B. Broadbridge, C. C. Cornish, Joe Lavender, W. S. Bassett, Walter Norman, Bob Hutt, C. Mannering, Geo. H. Smythson, Ben Woodger, Fred Shelley, H. Cory Woodrow, Will Johnson, Edward Johnson, R. P. Burnham, Fred Baugh, and Horace Wheatley.

The following gentlemen, duly proposed and seconded, were added to the list:—Messrs. F. W. Millis, H. Griff, "Spot," and Arthur Symons.

The Chairman thought that a chairman of committee should be elected, and suggested the name of Mr. Mountford.

Mr. Sparrow said that that was the province of the committee; otherwise he would have much pleasure in supporting Mr. Mountford.

Mr. Norman proposed the re-election of the Secretary, and the proposition, which was seconded by Mr. Sparrow, was carried nem. con.

Mr. Fruin thanked the meeting very much indeed for the expression of their confidence in re-electing him secretary.

Mr. Sparrow proposed a vote of thanks to the Press, who he was pleased to see took such an interest in them as to give them a notice, because the more publicity they received the more subscriptions they would get, and when they took their present financial position into consideration, he thought they had done wonders.

Mr. Mountford proposed a vote of thanks to the Chairman. He looked upon that small meeting as a very good sign that all was right with the home. Directly they got all the subscribers up to a meeting of any institution—immediately the shareholders of a company gathered round and wanted to know things—they knew there was something rotten in the state of Denmark, but when only a small number of members attended, they might be sure that everything was proceeding satisfactorily. The thanks of the meeting were due to Mr. Barnard, not only for that occasion, but for his invaluable work during the past year.

The Chairman, in acknowledging the vote of thanks, wished he was a better speaker, but he was, unfortunately, no orator. He would, however, always do his best for the home, and would be pleased to give his cheque for three guineas.

Mr. Norman proposed a vote of thanks to the directors for the loan of the hall for the meeting, and also for the room upstairs for the purposes of committee.

The proposition, seconded by Mr. Mannering, was passed unanimously and the meeting ended.

"THE LAST SHOT."

Sketch, in One Scene, produced at the Standard Music Hall, Pimlico, on Monday, July 23.

Captain Gordon ..... Mr. Charles Ommanney
Lieut. Henry Valney .... Mr. Richard Norton
Private Pierpont ..... Mr. Arthur Vere
Mona Carlisle ..... Miss Isla Garnet-Vayne

The stirring times of the American Civil War furnishes the period of an attractive little sketch which has been produced at the Standard Music Hall this week. The piece is dramatic and pithy, and possesses an appealing story of love and self-sacrifice. It takes the spectator to the camp of the forces of the Southern States, under whose protection the youthful Mona Carlisle dwells with her invalid mother. She is beloved by Captain Gordon, of the Southern Army, who, however, hesitates to declare his affection. Mona, in truth, is affianced to Lieut. Valney, a young officer of the Northerners, who has just succeeded in escaping from the clutches of the enemy, who have declared him a spy, and condemned him to be shot outright. The fugitive risks a visit to his sweetheart, and is caught by his rival, who overhears the tender words which pass between the betrothed pair, and realises that his own love his hopeless. He has the escaped prisoner in his power, but decides to spare him and allow himself to be taken in his stead. He bids his rival change his ragged attire for his Captain's uniform, but both the Lieutenant and his sweetheart refuse to permit such a sacrifice. At this moment the sound of heavy firing is heard, and Gordon learns that it is the Federal forces arrived on the scene. He draws his sword preparatory to taking his place in the field, but as he reaches the door he receives a bullet in his breast and falls mortally wounded.

Mr. Charles Ommanney, to whose company the performance is entrusted, makes a gallant figure of the chivalrous Captain, acting with earnestness throughout, and depicting his death scene with unforced pathos. Miss Isla Garnet-Vayne displays agreeable elocutionary skill and acts with sympathetic grace in the part of Mona; and her lover, Lieut. Valney, is impersonated with affecting intensity by Mr. Richard Norton. The episode exacted the constant attention of the audience, who recalled the principals enthusiastically at the close.

PYGMIES AND PERCENTAGE.

Sir,—On July 14 you inserted under the above misleading heading a County-court case in which Mr. Filippo sued and won £35 9s. from Mr. Sallmayer, of the Brighton Aquarium, for wrongful dismissal and non-payment of an agreed on percentage.

I wish to state that I and the Pygmies had nothing whatever to do with the case, and, in fact, have a dispute with Mr. Sallmayer as to our earnings during the same period, and now pending a settlement by arbitration.—Yours truly,

JAMES J. HARRISON.

Brandesburton Hall, Hull, July 25, 1906.

"Gardening" is the latest comic production, and has been played by George Ascot for copyright purposes. We are promised something very original and funny in this novelty.

Miss Dolly Denton has secured a charming song, the work of Harry Adams (of "On Guard" notoriety) and Ernée Woodville, entitled "Little Michus."

"YE LADYE GODIVA."

A Dramatic Episode, in Three Scenes, written by Miss Josephine Colona, and produced at the Palace, Bow, on Monday, July 23.

Leofric ..... Mr. W. H. Sams
Tom o' Coventry ..... Mr. F. H. Neville
Bibeau ..... Mr. C. Bowen
Lady Rowena ..... Miss Madge Morley
Lady Angela ..... Miss Mab Clinton
Editha ..... Miss Florence Spencer
Dame Ulrica ..... Mrs. Edgar Colona
Lady Godiva ..... Miss Josephine Colona

The above sketch was produced under the personal direction of Mr. Frederic Baugh on Monday at the Palace, Bow, with new and original music by Mr. Vernon C. Carlyle, and additional numbers by Mr. Carl Hamlin. The scenery, made by Mr. Davis and painted by Mr. Baker at the Surrey Theatre, is pretty and correct, and the dresses are costly and effective. The story is clearly told in blank verse by Miss Colona, and opens in the Market-square at Coventry. A bright little scene briskly played by Miss Florence Spencer as Editha, and Mr. C. Bowen as Bibeau, serves as an effective introduction to the serious interest. Lady Rowena, originally betrothed to the Earl Leofric, is jealous of Godiva, who has been preferred to her, and determines to separate the heroine from her husband. To this end she conspires with Tom, who has been dismissed in disgrace from Court for making overtures to Godiva, who is induced by pity to beg Leofric to reinstate him. On his return to favour Tom's first act is to secrete a jewelled cross dropped by Godiva, which he hands to Rowena, who persuades Leofric that it was given by his wife to Tom as a token of love. Leofric is threatened with an attack by Cedric, a neighbouring chief, and to meet the expenses of defence he resolves to levy another tax on his already overburdened people. Godiva pleads with him, and he offers to forego his demand is she will ride naked through the streets of Coventry. Godiva consents, and the first scene ends with her oath to save the people. The second scene finds Leofric repenting his harshness, but at this time Rowena produces the cross, and tells her story about it. Leofric then determines that Godiva shall keep her oath or he will enforce the tax. In the third and last scene, the Market-square, the people of Coventry are discovered to be in great distress, through Leofric's demand. Godiva appears, and promises to keep her word. She implores all to keep their doors and shutters closed, and to remain within their homes until her ride has been accomplished. All promise willingly except Tom, who appears and looks after Lady Godiva as she rides through the streets. He is instantly stricken with blindness, and, filled with terror and remorse, he confesses to Leofric the plot between Rowena and himself. Leofric banishes both from his domain and begs forgiveness of Godiva.

Miss Josephine Colona, who looks very handsome on her well-trained horse, plays throughout powerfully and sympathetically; Miss Madge Morley presents a clever and finished portrait of the revengeful Lady Rowena, and adds greatly to the success of the performance. Mr. W. H. Sams exactly realises the character of Earl Leofric, and conveys admirably the conflicting emotions of the jealous loving husband. Mr. Neville is a picturesque and interesting Tom O'Coventry, and holds the interest throughout. The entire production is an unqualified success.

MARIE LOFTUS

REAPPEARS IN DUBLIN, AFTER AN ABSENCE OF THREE YEARS, AN ABSOLUTELY UNPARALLELED SUCCESS.

The Dublin Mail says:

There is one turn at the Hippodrome this week that will bring all the old stagers flocking to the theatre. Those who remember Marie Loftus ten or fifteen years back have keen and delighted recollections of her liveliness and vim. She always was full of "go," and for her very liveliness much was forgiven her. Her songs, it must be admitted, have not always been of a drawing-room nature, but it is difficult to find fault with anything Marie says or does, for she brightens up the dullest audience and diffuses her own liveliness of spirit throughout the house. Last night's audience being largely a theatre one, did not know much of the history of the famous music hall star, but they did not appreciate her the less. Her first song was her only mediocre effort, and her second, in which she portrayed a country girl in London, and delivered a telling shot at the low-necked dresses of society ladies, was a work of art. Her imitations of the old-time singers, in which she introduced the crinoline, were extraordinarily amusing, and we are quite sure Miss Loftus has killed any hankering after the crinoline on the part of Dublin ladies—or gentlemen either, for that part. The pantomime burlesque, in which she took the dual parts of a man and a woman at once, was one of the most ingenious and original things we have seen. We had indeed begun to think that originality was dead in music hall comedy, but while the "Queen of Burlesque" is alive there is no fear of that. The Red Indian scene at the finish of her hard evening's work was very picturesque, and though it did not make so much demand on her skill as the previous one, it showed that Marie Loftus is still bang up to date. Taking Hackenschmidt and Arthur Roberts, and all the crowd of star turns together, Marie Loftus excels them all in giving genuine entertainment, and if she is a little naughty—well, she's nice.

The Daily Express says:

The principal attraction this week is, of course, to be found in the appearance of Marie Loftus, an artist whose great popularity has long made her name a byword amongst playgoers in all quarters. The numerous selections which she gave last evening from her extensive répertoire, in her own inimitable style, were received with the greatest enthusiasm. Amongst the many pleasing items for which she was responsible were a clever skit on the modern Christmas pantomime, and her latest success, a sketch entitled Singers, Past and Present, which affords ample scope for her abilities. Needless to say, she was vociferously encored.

The Irish Times (Wednesday, the 25th), says:

Last night was no exception, and every part of the house was filled. The programme included some well-known variety entertainers, but pride of place was given to Marie Loftus. She has been styled "The Queen of Burlesque," and certainly no one better deserves the title. Her performance last evening was characterised with her usual vivacity and sprightliness, and she invested her songs with that charm and piquancy which are always present in her singing. A cordial reception was given to her selections, some of which were new to the Dublin public. Her latest success, Singers, Past and Present, was loudly applauded, especially her impersonation of the early Victorian lady in crinoline. The skit on the modern sketch, in which she was dressed half-man and half-woman fashion, was very clever. The prairie scene, introducing an Indian song and dance, was effectively done.

The holiday season has set in with some severity amongst the members of Mr. David Day's staff. Mr. Arthur Francis, the chief of the printing department, has been staying at Scarborough, for which well-known resort Mr. Henry E. Pether, the musical editor, departs to-day for a fortnight's sojourn. Mr. Day's representative at London halls has also departed for a like period to the place he wrote about in a song for Miss Marie Lloyd a year or two since, entitled "Folkestone for the Day."

DANGEROUS PERFORMANCES.

The following letter has been addressed by Mr. Herbert Samuel, M.P., to the secretary of the International Artists' Lodge on the subject of the Dangerous Performances Bill:—

Home Office, Whitehall, July 25, 1906.

Sir,—I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of July 23, written on behalf of the joint committees of the Variety Artists' Federation and the International Artists' Lodge, with reference to the Dangerous Performances Bill. The scope of this Bill, I venture to think, has been misconceived by those on whose behalf you write. It has not been the intention of the Government to ask Parliament to legislate against the ordinary acrobatic performances in which so many persons are engaged for the entertainment of the public and to their own profit. Nor would this be the effect of the measure. A discretion, indeed, is proposed to be left to the magistrates to determine, in the event of a prosecution taking place, whether a particular performance is dangerous or not.

To leave such a discretion is unavoidable, for it is impossible to define closely in the terms of an Act of Parliament, or to list in a schedule, those among the constantly changing performances offered to the public which the law should properly prohibit. But it must be remembered that no case can be brought into court unless the chief of police of the district authorises a prosecution, or unless an accident has actually occurred; and it is difficult to believe that chief constables and magistrates would combine to prosecute and to convict performers engaged in giving entertainments which involve little risk or none.

Two statutes have been in force for many years framed in precisely the same words as this Bill, except that their application is limited to girls under 18 years of age and boys under 16; no such results as are now apprehended have ever followed from their operation. It is clear, however, that this Bill has now taken in the House of Commons a controversial aspect. In view of the many measures of far wider importance to which the time of Parliament is pledged, the Government do not propose, therefore, to proceed with the Bill this year. You will no doubt agree that under these circumstances the deputation which you invite me to receive is no longer necessary.—Yours sincerely (signed) Herbert Samuel.

A demonstration against the Dangerous Performances Bill was made in Hyde Park on Sunday, when several hundred persons assembled in protest under the presidency of the Rev. Stewart Headlam.

"It would be dangerous," said Mr. Headlam, in the course of his introductory speech, "for Mr. Gladstone or Mr. Herbert Samuel to attempt a double somersault, but for these ladies it is not. They have been brought up to it. Puritanism is trying to get hold of Parliament and interfere with the pleasure of the public."

The following resolution was moved by Miss Gore Booth, secretary of the Women's Trade Council, and passed by acclamation:—"That this meeting protests against the so-called Dangerous Performances Bill. Facts prove that the performances in question are not dangerous, only two serious accidents having occurred to women in 7,800,000 performances. They, therefore, appeal to the Government not to abolish the gymnastic profession, as this Bill would undoubtedly do, in a moment of panic, and thus deprive thousands of their means of livelihood in a highly skilled profession."

Miss Booth complained that the Bill would place it in the power of any magistrate to say whether or not a performance was dangerous. He might be an estimable gentleman, but he was not a specialist on dangers, and could not possibly tell whether a performance was dangerous. It was to the interest of the performers to make it seem dangerous, because the public liked exciting spectacles, just as they liked to read sensational stories. Many more accidents happened to women in factories than befel acrobatic performers. All experience taught that there was no danger in their performances. It was, in fact, one of the safest callings in which they could engage. The only danger acrobatic performers were in was the danger of being thrown out of work through this Bill. It was "awfully wicked" to propose to take away from performers their "skilled, honest, and paying profession," and turn them loose on the world.

Miss King May seconded the resolution, and pointed out that the Bill was unjust because it legislated against women and children only, and left out men. It was so vague a Bill that she feared it might operate to check even the teaching of gymnastics.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—As the figures of 10,000 in reference to the number of performers who would be directly affected by the passing of the proposed Dangerous Performances Bill have been challenged, I hope you will grant me space to explain how I arrived at these figures.

An inspection of the programmes of variety entertainments published in various music hall papers throughout the world giving the total number of men and women employed in what might be termed "dangerous performances" by police officers or a magistrate will show that this estimate of 10,000 is a very conservative one.

Truly, this 10,000 is not always in England. The programmes of the music halls are constantly changing, and therefore while perhaps only 2,000 of these people are in England at the present time, they are constantly being replaced by others of the 10,000, all of whom perform in England and leave again within the twelve months.

To thoroughly understand this it must be remembered that performers are a nation in themselves, whose field of work knows no earthly boundaries, and, above all, whose very breath of life is free trade. They go unhampered by class legislation to any country where they may be able to secure employment. This they have always looked on as their inalienable right, and up to now no Government has disputed this right. They are a class drawn from all nations and not less from the British than from other nations, but rather more. This is clearly proved by the fact that English is the predominant language among them.

If performers were to be deprived, as the Bill would deprive them, of this most important market, it would, especially at this present time, fall very hard on them. Just now Russia, which is usually a fairly good market, is closed. South Africa not yet having recovered from the recent war offers limited opportunity for employment; and California, which, while not very extensive, though important because of the high prices ruling there, cannot be reckoned on until the varieties destroyed by the recent catastrophe are rebuilt.

Should England pass this law restricting the number of acrobatic and gymnastic performances in England it would naturally cause many other countries, especially Germany, which follows a retaliatory policy, to raise a wall of legislation that would exclude the English contingent of performers from those countries.

This short-sighted legislation would make it a misdemeanour for a lady acrobat to perform in England, the land from which lady acrobats first sprang. This would not alone deprive women performers of their livelihood, but the men who perform with them as well. For such performances require years of practice to perfect, and even to substitute one person for another of the troupe requires many months. And these women who are turned out—what is to become of them? It is well known that performers, unaccustomed to commercial pursuits, are the most helpless class imaginable when thrown on the industrial market. This is apart from the injustice of depriving these women of the benefits they are entitled to derive from the years of patient study and practice in which they have been encouraged by the amusement-seeking public to undertake.

Besides this there would be the indirect effect of lessening the interest in the music halls by depriving them of the very items which add the greatest variety to the entertainment. This again would not have a beneficial effect on the twelve million pounds invested in them by the proprietors of such places of amusement.

The Home Office gives us no medical, statistical, or scientific reason for the Bill, and we have given them many reasons against it.

An inspection of the following figures will show that the Home Office seems to have been busying itself about one accident in a profession the proportion of whose accidents is indeed small, and to be neglecting an important class of accidents which occur on a wholesale scale. I might quote the fact that there were ten motor-'bus accidents in one day recently, and I might refer to the reports of the accidents in factories and workshops, which show 100,609 accidents in 1905, an increase of 8.2 on those of the previous year.

Fatal accidents to female performers within the last five years have amounted to one in 3,120,000 performances. Crippling accidents to the same number of performances within the last five years have amounted to one.—I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

C. C. BARTRAM, Secretary,
The International Artists' Lodge.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Will you allow me a small space in your valuable paper to express my opinion on the so-called Dangerous Performances Bill. As a performer of very long experience, brought up in the circus profession, I have travelled all countries, and during my years as rider, wire-walker, acrobat, &c., I have seen more danger here in Dublin this last few weeks and in England. There have been two tram accidents, and almost every day you will hear of accidents of some kind through bicycles, motor cars, &c., where you may not hear of one accident on the circus or music hall in five years. So, as a member of the profession, I just wish to point out there are more dangers in trams, railways, motor cars, workshops, than in gymnastic or acrobatic exhibitions which are governed by skill, grace, and fearlessness.—Yours respectfully, P. J. DURNEY
(Australian Rolling Globe Walker).

THE CAMBRIDGE.

At the Cambridge last week the leading feature of the programme was an exhibition of pictures by Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope, remarkable all of them, both by reason of the variety of the subjects selected for illustration, and the clearness and steadiness of the films. Starting with a railway trip from Nice to Monte Carlo, the picturesque scenery through which the passengers are conveyed elicited warm admiration. To this succeeded a comical subject, "Those Boys Again." An elderly gentleman is the victim of a practical joke. Some mischievous lads, as the outcome of a conspiracy, slily pin a piece of paper on the back of the old man bearing the words: "My name is Brown. Please kick me and shake hands." The result is that the invitation to commit personal violence is accepted by various persons he encounters, and the poor old gentleman has a very bad time of it until somebody is good enough to remove the paper. "The Gaieties of Divorce" illustrated the domestic life of a quarrelsome couple, and the active interference of an exceedingly robust and mischief-making mother-in-law. The pair are reconciled, and the lady's mamma is muzzled! Curtain. "Spearmint winning the Grand Prix" was of special interest to those who follow racing events. "The Wolf Trap" which followed may be termed a serio-comic drama. A countryman sets a trap, but instead of the wolf, a gentleman on a shooting expedition with his little boy is captured. The lad runs for assistance, while his father in vain endeavours to free himself from the iron grip; but the naughty boy is tempted to indulge in leap-frog and other games, and the prisoner is at length liberated by the man who set the trap. He returns home and the thoughtless boy receives a severe castigation from his justly irate parent. "The Life of an American Policeman" reveals some tragic incidents, including a hot chase after a thief who uses his revolver with deadly effect, and is only taken prisoner after a desperate struggle in a cellar. A woman bent on suicide is also seen to throw herself into the river, and the plucky policeman dives in after her. With his assistance she is brought ashore and artificial means of respiration are tried, but unsuccessfully.

After an interval a second series of pictures was shown. "This Side Up" was of a humorous character, and in "The Hand of the Artist" some novel and interesting experiments in photography were exhibited with comical effect. "Snow Sports in Switzerland" illustrated very vividly the exhilarating amusements which are popular in that country, the sledge being largely used in these health-giving diversions. The tragic note was again struck in "A Life for a Life," a drama in which figure an impecunious working-man and his wife and child. The woman is lying dangerously ill, when men arrive to remove the furniture which is on the hire system, the payments being in arrears. The woman dies, and the widower proceeds to take a deadly revenge upon the man he regards as her murderer. Considerable interest centred in "Elephants at Work in a Burmese Teak Forest," a series of pictures which affords evidence of the remarkable intelligence, docility, and great strength of these useful animals. Graphic illustrations of incidents connected with the recent Coronation of the King and Queen of Norway brought the series to a conclusion.

The variety company engaged included the Sisters Dorrell (Jessie and Rose), duettists and speciality dancers, and the New Macs (MacNally and MacNally), whose patter, singing, and neat dancing won them the favour of the audience. The Five Casino Girls played selections on brass instruments and were applauded, and Mr. Andy Fagan, Irish comedian and dancer, had a good reception. The duties of manager at this hall are efficiently carried out by Mr. Thos. G. Richards.

THE HERBERT CAMPBELL MEMORIAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—In your account of the memorial to the late Herbert Campbell at Abney Park, you refer to that cemetery as the last resting-place of many prominent professionals—Nelly Power, Walter Laburnum, and others. Allow me to add the name of my ever-lamented mother, Mrs. G. H. Chirgwin, to your list.—Yours faithfully,

CLARA CHIRGWIN.

MR. C. RELF'S FAREWELL.

BENEFIT AT ROYAL ALBERT.

The accommodation at the Royal Albert Music Hall, Canning Town, was taxed to straining point on Thursday evening, when Mr. C. Relf, for the past twenty-eight years proprietor and manager of this establishment, took a farewell benefit. As already announced, Mr. Arthur Hunt takes possession of the Royal Albert almost immediately, and after to-night's performance the house will be closed for a couple of months for repairs, redecoration, and improvements generally. It is understood that Mr. Walter Leaver, who has wielded the bâton at Canning Town for twenty-seven years, and who has a record of forty-three years' chairmanship to his credit, also severs his association with the hall. On Thursday Mr. Leaver, Mr. Fred Baugh, and Mr. Bob Vam presided in turn, the stage being under the direction of Mr. J. W. Johnson and Mr. J. James, other well-known gentlemen present being Mr. Harry Lyons, Mr. Michael Abrahams, Mr. James McCarthy, Mr. Edgar Granville, Mr. Arthur Day, Mr. Jack Woolf, Mr. Sam Hart, Mr. Fred Durham, Mr. Jack Johnson, and Mr. Harry Kitson.

During an interval, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Relf, Mr. Walter Leaver, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hunt, and others appeared on the stage. Mr. Leaver, speaking under emotion, said that Saturday night would be the last time he would appear before them, and he took this opportunity of thanking them very much for past kindnesses. He then presented, on behalf of Mr. Snellin, a travelling bag to Mr. Relf and an umbrella from the staff and himself, and a gold-mounted purse for Mrs. Relf.

Mr. Charles Relf, replying, said I have to thank my old friend, Mr. Walter Leaver, for the presentation of this very nice kit-bag and umbrella. There is no man in this world I respect more than Mr. Snellin, from whom the bag comes as a present in commemoration of my farewell; and I am delighted with Mr. Leaver for his gift of an umbrella. It is not the value but the feeling. I have not got to kick off, and I shall kick off with my old lady (bringing Mrs. Relf forward). Me and my old dear have been kicking off and kicking on together for many years past. This being the very last time I shall have the opportunity of addressing you in my present position as proprietor of this establishment, and I have now for twenty-seven years had the pleasure of appearing before you, I thank you very sincerely for your support. I have to thank all those people who have interested themselves in giving me this very kind house, and I have also to thank all the artists who have so kindly come forward to assist. I may say that one particular person from whom I have received great kindness is Mr. Fred Baugh, and I wish to thank that gentleman for all he has done for me. Then I have to express my gratitude to all concerned in bringing about this nice entertainment for my benefit. Well, Saturday night will be the last opportunity I shall have of catering for you—and I have done my best. That is the change that will take place on Saturday night. But I am not going to say that I shall never see you again, because the thought of the old Royal Albert will always be foremost in my mind, and I shall come here as often as I can. I think it is only right as I am giving up the reins of government of this establishment that I should introduce to you your new proprietor and proprietress, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hunt. They are young people, and have got a good many years to work before they get to our age. They have all the energy that young people should require, and it will be their own fault if they do not increase the success of the hall. They will bring the place more up to date than I have done. I want you to give our newcomers all the support you can. I feel sure that Mr. Maddams, my landlord, whom I have known for over fifty years, will do his best for the incoming tenant.

Mr. Smith, of the Seamen's Hospital, stated that as that would be the last occasion on which he would be able to address Mr. Relf in public, he now desired to thank that gentleman for the great assistance he had given to the Seamen's Hospital. For the past fifteen years Mr. Relf had promoted an annual benefit, and the total amount realised by those performances was £2,400. Mr. Relf had also helped the Poplar Hospital for twenty-five years. He (the speaker) experienced a feeling of deep regret at the severance of Mr. Relf's association with the Royal Albert Music Hall.

Mr. Arthur Hunt, the new proprietor, said he felt that he could hardly find words adequate to express his thanks to Mr. Relf for his kindness in introducing him that night. In regard to charities, he would be only too pleased to do his best for the local hospitals or any other deserving cause. He concluded by asking three cheers for Mr. and Mrs. Relf, and these were given vociferously, and followed by the singing of "For he's a jolly good fellow."

The programme was, as may be imagined, one of great dimensions. Miss Lottie Lennox and Mr. Harry Ford were among the principal "extra turns" who had kindly proffered their services. Miss Lennox charmed the audience with her rendering of "The good old chorus song," and "Don't keep them waiting any longer." Mr. Fred Baugh brought his eldest daughter, who is practically blind, before the footlights, and she sang in pretty girlish tones "The dream of love" and "Last night." The artists who had been appearing in the ordinary way during the week, and who also, of course, took part in the benefit performance, were Will Hicks, eccentric comedian and dancer; Louie Hurman, burlesque artist; Jack Foley, eccentric comedian; George M. Marriott and company in sensational dramatic sketch, Plotting Scoundrels; the Gilbert Girls, in song, "How'd you like to spoon with us?"; Cribb and Cribb, comedians and patterers; Duncan and Brasque, in an episode, entitled A Dressing-room Romance; George Dare, the boy actor, in his impersonations; Hessey Soloists, flute and 'cello soloists, and piccolo duettists; Madge Morley and company, in comedietta, After the Races; and Walter Payne's Bio-photoscope. Other artists who had kindly consented to appear were—Vay's Juveniles, Dave O'Toole, Ada Parker, Will Johnson, Vera Mayne, Mabel Leroy, Lillie Lassah, Daisy Silcott, Jack Heath, A. Gaston, Birt Sharp, Reine Ring, Alf Tait, Two Jays, Sisters Melba, Ada Parker, Will Burton, Madiline Yohle, The Vivians, Lily Leaver, and Lottie Bell.

MISS LIL HAWTHORNE has just closed a most successful engagement at the Derby Castle, Douglas. All her songs, especially "My Cosy Caravan," "Lucy Loo," and "Don't Cry, Little Girl," are being sung and whistled all over the island. Miss Hawthorne was to have appeared at the London Coliseum, July 30th, for eight weeks, but owing to its being closed she will remain in Douglas for a few days' holiday.

MISS FLORRIE GALLIMORE'S latest success, "Old Calabar," by Harrington and Tate, which this charming singer is confident will in the course of time even out-rival her famous song, "Remember me to mother dear," in popularity, has this week been issued for pierrot use by the publishers, the Monte Carlo Publishing Company, who are also supplying al fresco artists with a new vocal gem, "Waterfall," by Lawrance, Mellor, and Gifford, an idyllic and tuneful number, which is predestined to become one of the greatest of this season's pantomime "hits," in the opinion of several prominent producers of Christmas "annuals."

FORESTERS'.

Dickens impersonations are invariably watched with keen interest by all classes of audiences. Folk in the East-End have a sort of affection for Fagin, Bill Sikes, Poor Jo, and Nancy, and this week the representations given by Miss Eva Hope and Mr. Jack Wayho are being attended with hearty appreciation. The scenes in which Miss Hope and Mr. Wayho appear are the murder of Nancy by Bill Sikes (Oliver Twist), the meeting of the Marchioness and Dick Swiveller (The Old Curiosity Shop), and the death of Poor Jo (Bleak House). Particularly pathetic is Miss Hope's portrayal of Jo, and during her acting in the death scene many of the audience were visibly affected. Mr. Wayho is vigorous, sturdy, and brutal as Sikes, and all the other characterisations presented by these artists are praiseworthy. Ellis and Watts are capable "swell comedians," who give evidence of versatility. A particularly pleasing effort of theirs is the song, "Boys who stand alone," and the chorus "Mary Green." Their artistic dancing and humorous patter are also to be commended. Miss Rose Stanley renders in agreeable fashion, "Rose of my heart"; and Hans and Lux excel as eccentric comedy entertainers. Miss Adeline Yohle is a vocalist of some ability, and is an agreeable interpreter of sentimental themes. She wins golden opinions with "Sing me to sleep" and "By the deep blue sea."

A lady with an attractive personality and high vocal attainments is Miss Mabel le Roy, to whose performances we have on previous occasions alluded in eulogistic terms. In everything she does she is graceful and refined, and she is to be congratulated upon a very delightful delivery of her latest numbers, "Keep on the sunny side" and "I've got no right to love you, but I do." In the former she is a pretty and engaging girl in a pink dress, while her second appearance is as a smart and debonnair boy in a green knickerbocker suit. Miss le Roy should certainly be heard of a good deal in the future. Messrs. Dottridge and Longden are "presenting" Mr. James Willard and company in the sketch, Did He Deserve It? the story of which is now pretty well known. Mr. Willard acts with remarkable naturalness in the part of the man; while Miss Lillie Hart treats us to an amusing picture of an Amazon in her rôle of the woman. The girl is pathetically portrayed by Miss Violet Carr, the boy amusingly by Mr. Willie Atom; and the champion mastiff "Tiger" fulfils the duties of his office in a thorough and convincing manner. Miss Jenny Belmore excels in the direction of male impersonations, and her vocal items, "The future" and "The Royal Family," find much favour with the house.

Messrs. Armadale and Warren have a thing that thrills in the playlet, The Face at the Window. Sensationalism is not lacking in the terrible doings of the murderer Delgado, a part played in best Charley Peace style by Mr. Lionel D'Arragon. Mr. T. E. Dunscombe as Gouffet, Mr. Alfred Warre as De Brisson, Mr. Allan Hineson as the mad doctor, Mr. Gilbert Hall as Lucien Cortier, and Miss Gwynne Warren as Marie, work hard in their respective rôles and to excellent effect. King Leo distinguishes himself in the ventriloquial line, his dummy's vocalisation of "Rocked in the cradle of the deep" being a notable feature of the turn. The business of the Rushworths comprises the singing of serious songs illustrated by coloured photograph slides. Thus, a lady with a contralto voice sings about "a true-hearted Irish lad," while the pictures show his adventures in a foreign country. "Heroes who have never been to war" is the subject which the Rushworths also deal with, and the various representations of life in this set are particularly attractive. The Rushworths, by the way, write and compose their own songs. The work of Raymond's Bio-Tableaux is seen to advantage in the cinematograph story, "Dolly's Doll." A little girl wishes to raise money for poverty-stricken parents by pawning her doll, and a sympathetic gentleman, hearing of her story, gives her five pounds.

A DISTINGUISHED Frenchman who has been for the last month staying in London, and visiting various places of amusement, regretted a few nights since that he could not see a sight he had heard so much of even in his own country, and that was the interior of Drury Lane Theatre on a boxing night. The journalist who had acted as the foreigner's guide, philosopher, and friend, though regretting his inability to oblige, offered to show his charge the nearest thing in London to what he wanted to see, and straightaway conveyed him to the second house at the Holborn Empire. Though the hottest night of the year, the beautiful house was packed to the very doors, and one of Mr. Gibbons's "stalwarts" perspiringly, but good humouredly, informed the twain that sufficient people to fill the house twice more again had had to go away disappointed. Moses and Son and Miss Daisy Dormer were in the bill.

MISS GWENNIE HASTO, who is paying her fourth visit to the Palace Theatre, took to the halls about twelve years ago, making her début at the Middlesex, and as the audience at once took to her, she has remained on the variety stage ever since. Given a pleasing voice, a talent for the style of dancing that is surprising, to say the least of it—Miss Hasto turns a cartwheel without turning a hair—a very pretty face, and no end of dainty frocks, it is no wonder that her turn is always welcome. Just now she is wearing a novel, highly successful combination of colours, for her chiffon and silk frock is composed of all shades of purple, from pale lilac to deep pansy, with touches of cerise ribbon and a cerise butterfly in her hair.

SHE is a Yorkshire girl, and was carried across the stage of the Theatre Royal, Scarborough, as a baby, and although she has no recollection of this "thinking" part, the incidents of her next engagement, while she was still a tiny child, live in her memory as freshly as her first visit to London, when she played at the old Opera Comique in Mr. John Donald's company. Miss Hasto can almost be said to have created a new part in the old pantomime of Cinderella, having played the Princess for the last four years. Next Christmas she goes to Edinburgh, and will be seen the following year at a West-end theatre. Her many tours include a trip to the Continent—to be repeated shortly—and a visit to South Africa, where she had a benefit in Johannesburg, in 1899, on the eve of the declaration of war. Miss Hasto is entirely self-taught, plays the piano and banjo, and is one of the dancers who believes in dancing in long skirts. She is always accompanied by her mother, who designs and makes all her stage dresses.

SOME provincials were lately outside the Tivoli looking at the glass case containing the diminutive fish caught by Harry Tate, which is always on view when Fishing is being played, when a bystander furnished the party with some interesting particulars of the capture. He assured them that Mr. Tate caught the fish at Dundalk whilst angling with Josef Collins, the song-writer; that it weighed at the time, 16lb. 4oz.; and was sent to London to be "set up"; but the borax preservative in which it should have been packed was missing, and alum was substituted by accident, causing the fish to shrink to its present smallness. The truth of the statement, the informant averred, was vouched for by such well-known fishermen as Gus Elen, Ernest Strand, and Wal Pink. The listeners looked after the teller of this veracious story with respectful admiration as he departed in the direction of Messrs. Francis, Day, & Hunter's establishment.

FUNERAL OF MARIE WALFORD.

(Mystic Marie.)

The funeral of Miss Marie Walford, sister of Dr. Walford Bodie, took place on Monday last from the Manor, Macduff, to the Macduff Churchyard. There was a very large attendance of friends and relatives, and amongst those who came to pay a last token of respect to the deceased lady were the ex-Provost George, Provost West, and the Magistrates and Town Council of Macduff. The funeral service, which was most impressive, was conducted by the Rev. J. G. Duncan. The coffin of polished oak, with heavy brass mountings, bore the following inscription:—"Miss Marie Henry Walford (Mystic Marie), died July 19th, 1906, aged 21 years." The chief mourners were:—Dr. and Mrs. Walford Bodie, Councillor and Mrs. Saunders (Insch), Miss Bella Henry Skene, Misses Annie, Katie, and Louie, Mr. David and Mr. William Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Mills, Albert and Sam Walford Bodie, Miss Jeannie Bodie, and Master Edward Henry, jun., Lordon. Beautiful wreaths were sent by many friends, including Colonel and Mrs. J. J. George, Lieutenant Crossley Pratt, Mr. and Mrs. David Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Mills, Bella Skene, Misses Annie, Louie, and Katie, sisters of the deceased; Master Albert and Sam Walford Bodie, Mr. William Henry, Miss Jeannie Bodie, Master Edward Henry, Mrs. Dixon (Banff), Mrs. Hoffman and Family, Mr. and Mrs. Robson, Mr. Henry J. Sims, Mr. Douglas Bodie, Mr. Charles McPherson, Miss Hana Milne, Miss Maggie Milne, Miss Tina Manors, the Misses Hunter, Councillor and Mrs. Saunders, the Doctor's Boys, the Doctor's Staff, Diamond and Beatrice, Mr. and Mrs. Carson (Bandoni), Master Jack Ross, Miss Beby Mackay, Miss Annie Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Pat Murphy, Mr. John Laird, &c., &c.; also a beautiful wreath from Mrs. Bodie, with a card attached, on which were the touching words:—

"To my Darling Sister Marie,
from her broken-hearted Sister Jean.
Oh, teach us from our hearts to say,
Thy will be done."

A beautiful wreath, representing a lyre with a broken string, came from Dr. Walford Bodie, bearing the following:—"To my dearly-beloved sister Marie, from her grief-stricken brother, Walford Bodie."

"The curtain has rung down,
You have answered your last call;
Your next appearance shall be in Heaven,
Where you hope to meet us all."

"You were too good for this world."

The funeral was one of the largest ever seen in Macduff, and out of respect for the deceased all along the route to the cemetery the shops were closed and the blinds of the houses drawn. Miss Walford, who was better known as "Mystic Marie," the real Trilby, was assistant and medium to Dr. Walford Bodie, her first appearance as Mystic Marie in London being at the Britannia Theatre. The deceased young lady was very popular with music hall audiences in all parts of the country, and her death will be regretted by thousands who have witnessed her clever performances. Miss Marie went on the stage at a very early age, and when only 15 years old she led Dr. Bodie's orchestra at the large Free Trade Hall, Manchester, the great Ulster Hall, Belfast, and appeared in this capacity with great success at several of the large cities in England. Her most popular performances were in "Mental Telepathy," in which she displayed wonderful powers. She was a gifted painter and musician, and had written several clever pieces. At the Olympia, Newcastle, the Sheriff of Newcastle presented her with a beautiful gold pendant, suitably inscribed, and in making the presentation the Sheriff said it was one of the most pleasing duties he had to perform since he came into office, so delighted was he with her demonstration of mental telepathy. Dr. Bodie has devoted a long and interesting chapter in his latest work, "The Bodie Book," on the wonders of Miss Marie's extraordinary gifts. She was under contract for a tour of the United States with the Doctor at the time of her death.

THE Spanish Goldinis, in their carpet spinning, juggling, and balancing act, with electric dance, &c., have had a most successful week at the Empire, Glasgow, the inhabitants of St. Mungo appreciating the decided novelty, which is presented in a gorgeous nickel electrically illuminated stage set.

MR. LEON A. BASSETT, the talented leader of the orchestra at the Camberwell Palace, has just returned from a holiday trip greatly invigorated. He brought back with him, as a present for his brother William, half a dozen silk ties of a hue and design which are best described as original.

MR. JOHN JACKSON, whose tragedy, The Bielostock Massacre, has just been produced at the Pavilion Theatre, is well known as an author of popular sketches on the variety stage, among the most successful of them being The Worst Man in London, The Adventuress, Judgment, Sally's Birthday, and A Great Blunder.

MR. TOM FANCOURT and MISS JENNIE RUBIE will, for the first time in London, appear in a novel entertainment, Nursery Pets, at the Hammersmith Palace, commencing on Monday next. Special scenery and electric effects have been prepared for this production.

MISS ALMA OBREY and Mr. Bob Baxter are enjoying a holiday at Brussels with their friends, the Leslie Brothers, who highly appreciate their engagement at the Palais d'Eté, where they have only one performance nightly and no matinées.

THE ACTOR'S ART.

With all its extravagances, Mr. John Davidson's drama, The Theatrocrat, is one of the most remarkable works of the day; and it is the only attempt which we remember to poetise instead of caricaturing the art of acting. The book may not perhaps come under the notice of many of our readers, and we need not apologise for the following extracts. The scene of the first act is the study of Sir Tristram Sumner, a great London manager. To him enters his wife, Lady Sumner, an actress. They are on the verge of bankruptcy, and only the success of a grand revival of Troilus and Cressida can save them. They converse:—

Sir T.: Martha! You've come to trouble me; your eyes
Are lustreless and evil. Will it end
At all? Will you give over urging death?
Lady S.: A visitor.
Sir T.: Who is it?
Lady S.: Warwick Groom.
Sir T.: Impossible: at any time impossible.
I hate him, Martha.
Lady S.: Hate? Hate Warwick Groom!
I thought you hated no one.
Sir T.: So did I!
But him I hate; because he was my friend.
Lady S.: And would be still.
Sir T.: Therefore I hate him more!
But that's not true: hate fathoms hate, and answers
Index-like, the searching current of its thought,
Down through the earth, or round it in the nerveless
Air. Deep he hates me; by my hate I know.
I tell you, Martha, were Warwick Groom and I
Alone together for an hour, the death
Of either or of both would testify
Our rooted rancour.
Lady S.: I cannot understand!
True, he is wild, this Warwick Groom of ours,
And doors are shut against him; but a braver
Artist starves not anywhere.
Sir T.: Starves? Let him starve.
Lady S.: This is so new, so sudden, Tristram!
Sir T.: No;
Nothing is sudden that the heart brings forth.
The mushroom spawn of passing loves and hates
By thunder-showers and puddles quickly bred,
To rot as quickly, in sequestered nooks,
Or by the trodden highways, are nothing—nothing
But rashes on the skin.
. . . . . .
Had fortune not divided us I know
Both had gone mad. He hates the thought of me,
As I the thought of him—the natural end
Of every intimacy pushed outside
The limit. . . . . .
This is a righteous hate in him and me.
Lady S.: It desolates my heart to think it true!
What shall I say to him?
Sir T.: Give him some food,
Some drink, some money.
Lady S.: But he comes with news!
Oh, I forgot; you moved me so! Your Troilus,
It seems, is ill.
Sir T.: Ah; so. He looked consumptive.
The under-study is letter-perfect.
Lady S.: Yes;
But think: the first of such a play—so harsh,
So questionable.
Sir T.: Interest follows Troilus:
This is a blow; but not a deadly one.
Lady S.: And fortune's blows may prove caresses. Warwick
Can play the part.
Sir T.: Groom? In my theatre? Martha!
Lady S.: I once had leave to counsel you, though now
You shun me, Tristram——
Sir T.: Martha!
Lady S.: Yes, you do;
And take the mind of everyone but me.
Tristram, you know my heart. Is it unclean
Like Warwick Groom's? You loved me once: has love
Fermented, like your friendship, into hate?
. . . . . .
There's terror in your mind: terror for me,
And terror for yourself!—But this is vain.—
I think that help has come: I yet may live.
The play, the play! No question, Warwick Groom
Is Troilus to the accent. Have you lost
Your love of art along with other loves?
Sir T.: Martha!
Lady S.: Forgive me that.—Europa Troop:
It's not for love, the world and I know well,
You tossed her Cressida. The wanton salt
Of her, so loathsome to a passionate mind,
Is admirable here; and art demands
This sacrifice besides, since it may be—
That you should give the hated Warwick Groom
A part predicting him, so like a glove
It fits him.
Sir T.: Let me think; and you—think you:
Will Troilus and Cressida succeed?
Lady S.: I think it will; if you salute what chance
Provides, a perfect Troilus.
. . . . . .
(Finally, Groom is engaged to play the part.)
Sir T.: You have brought
Mercy to us, boy—a Troilus unmatched
From swift Scamander to the lordly Thames.
Groom: Then am I happy. Tristram, Martha, years
How many have I wasted; ten, a dozen,
Despairing up and down the railways, caught
And imprisoned, like some adventurer
Forlorn, in dreary tunnels, stations, inns,
Provincial companies and theatres,
The dismallest labyrinth where every step
Stumbles at skeletons of dead ambitions
And dying reputations; as close to London
As the suburbs are; further away, that is,
Than hell from heaven, and bitterer than hell.
Be hung upon the fringe of paradise,
Stewing in brimstone with the spicy scent
Of asphodel to lave the sulphurous air,
And envy Tantalus his pleasant lines
For ever and a day!
Sir T.: You keep your zest
Of talk, your thunder and lightning.
Groom: Let me talk——
A minute! It's a dozen lifetimes since
We met. The luck of some! the luck! Old gag,
The luck! It seems but yesterday that I
Beheld the Parthenon, one towering wave
Of wild delight from stalls to gallery, break
At my feet, the vanguard of a tide
Of triumph, governed by the moon of hearts,
The world's applause, that should have borne me on
To the trade winds and harbours of success.
One season—only one in London town!
Two failures after, and with finer parts
Than that that seemed to place me, cast me out
Provincial and suburban derelict.
Nightly to play upon the blood and brain
Of London!—Tristram! Martha!—On the best,
Most beautiful and bravest folk on earth!—
Ah, let them sneer that fail! I never fail
Although I seem to, for I love the world,
And all that's in it, and what's best I love
The best!—To play on London's sense and heart
With passion and emotion, tears, and flame,
Laughter and anguish, terror, splendour, might—
As you do, Tristram, and as I could do:
Is there vocation, mission, martyrdom
That equals it? Oh, every night to act
A part of power, and feel a thousand hearts
Beat stroke for stroke with yours, in heaven, in hell,
In London—nowhere else!—in London town,
The core of the world: ten years of that—three—one,
Then any death in rags and hospitals,
Garrets and dens and drunkenness, disgraced,
Forgotten, but my inmost will achieved!

LIKE other parts of the country, Liverpool has felt the effects of a bad year in both theatrical and variety business, for at the present time it has more places of amusement with closed doors than was ever known before. Further evidence of the state of trade is shown by the fact that no less than four music halls are getting through the summer season by means of the bioscope. These are the Westminster, Haymarket, Parthenon, and Park Palace, at each of which only two or three variety turns are given in addition to the moving pictures. What the coming season will bring forth it is difficult to imagine, for several projects and changes that are in the air will, very probably, make the struggle keener than hitherto.

MR. FRED WILLMOT, who, among other enterprises in Liverpool, has successfully conducted the Haymarket, publicly announces that he is unable to obtain a renewal of his lease, which expires in a few weeks. Accordingly, on Bank Holiday, he will transfer his interests to the Roscommon (formerly the King's), in Roscommon-street, which is within a stone's throw of the house he is relinquishing. He has taken it upon a long lease, and should do well, although the place has been untenanted for some time. To what uses the Haymarket will be put is not yet known.

ANOTHER new venture will be the opening, some time in August, of the Paddington Palace (now closed for alterations and decorations), by Mr. M. Montgomery, jun., of the Rotunda Theatre. That gentleman intends to abandon the variety style, and have a two-hours' dramatic sketch on lines now followed at the Royal, in Breck-road, where much success has resulted since the altered style of entertainment several years ago. Mr. Montgomery will, in future, work these stock companies in conjunction with Belfast, Glasgow, &c.

THEN again, the conversion of the Empire (Moss' Empires, Ltd.) into a two-shows per night will take place on Bank Holiday. When application was made for a change in the licence, the reason given for throwing over the one performance each evening was that the proprietors "had to move with the times." Already a number of men are engaged in cleaning the front of the theatre, while spacious waiting-rooms adjoining have been constructed out of some old buildings owned by the company, owing to the magisterial intimation that people would not be allowed to loiter on the footpath waiting for the second performance. These rooms will accommodate about 700 persons. Another condition attached to the change is that the excise licence must be given up.

MEANWHILE the new Tivoli, erected on the site of St. James's Hall, in Lime-street, is rapidly nearing completion, and will be opened about the last week in September. This venture is owned by The Palaces, Liverpool, Ltd., of which Mr. Walter De Frece is managing-director. The Tivoli ought to bring joy to the hearts of the promoters. Situated in perhaps the principal "Bohemian" quarter of Liverpool, it is the nearest place of amusement to the south and south-east ends of the city, where there is a population of perhaps 200,000, uncatered for in their own neighbourhood. The electric tramcars feeding these vast areas pass the Tivoli door, while just around the corner is the Midland railway, which runs through the south-end, and is connected with the opposite side of the river by means of the Mersey tunnel.

OTHER schemes are also spoken of, and altogether the city on the Mersey will shortly be well provided with places of amusement. In the opinion of some managers, the number will be in excess of the demand. This should not happen if good catering is provided, for Liverpool has nearly three-quarters of a million inhabitants, without reckoning Bootle, along with Birkenhead, New Brighton, and other places across the short reach of water that separates her from the Cheshire shore.

MR. T. E. DUNVILLE, who appears at the Hackney Empire next week, is a Midland man. He was born at Coventry, went to the local bluecoat school, and subsequently became a clerk in an office in the city of cycles. The desire for the stage was, however, very strong within him, and he and another kindred spirit eventually joined a travelling pantomime, at the salary, as he says, of "£1 a week and clean the pony." Next he entered a comic opera company, and in 1889 made his first appearance on the halls, giving an "extra turn" at Bolton. He sang seven songs without leaving the stage, and promptly found himself booked ahead for six months. Now his bookings extend until goodness knows when.

OLYMPIA has just been leased by a syndicate of British and American showmen for the production at Christmas of a great international fair and carnival, the principal features of which will be an old English fair, French festivals, and a miniature reproduction of the pleasure-grounds of Coney Island. For twelve solid hours the visitor will be permitted to enjoy every kind of amusement, from a Christmas pantomime to the novel spectacle of San Francisco in its early mining days and before and after the recent earthquake.

THE Dundee holidays at Carnoustie opened on Saturday, when the carnival was crowded with spectators. Good business was done by Geo. White's capital aggregation of attractions, including the electric motor-cars, No. 1 star cinematograph, and variety pavilion. The descriptive lecturer is Dr. Oliver, the illusionist. The varieties this week include the Freemans (Cissy and Charles), Will Weaver, Fanny Newsome, Ted Lewis, and Minnie Leslie. Mlle. Jeanetta and Mme. Herculine do well with their athletic company and other novelties. The Graceo-Roman wrestling by the above ladies is a clever act.

FAULKNER'S cinematograph, steam swings, and other attractions are located for the Dundee holidays at the Green Market, Dundee, where good business is always done.

GEORGE WHITE'S tunnel railway and various side attractions have opened at Fraserborough.

JAMES WHITE'S gondolas and George White's No. 2 cinematograph are still at Wick, doing fair business.

MR. AND MRS. PAYNE'S white coon entertainers are doing fine business on the Links at Carnoustie. The company is a good all-round one. The above clever couple also are doing good business at Broughty Ferry with another company.

MR. JACOB STUDT'S first visit to Evesham was a great success. Thousands took delight in Mr. Studt's real electric motor-cars and bioscope exhibition, Matthew's juvenile motors, Freeman's bowling saloon, and other attractions.

AT Badsey, Evesham, were Mr. T. Scott, with his new steam set of galloping horses, park swings, shooting saloons, cokernut sheets, and others.

HONEYBOURNE FEAST, near Evesham, was maintained by Mr. H. Ayer's steam roundabouts, horses, and cockerels, combined park swings, shooting saloons, bottle battery, &c., and Turner's ringboards and varieties.

AT Bishampton Feast, Pershore, were Herbert's roundabouts, swing boats, bottle battery, cokernut sheets, stalls, &c.

AT the Royal Hotel Yard, Redditch, are Collins and Son, with their grand cinematograph exhibition and variety company. Redditch Fair will be held on the Recreation Ground, Saturday, Aug. 4, to Wednesday, the 8th.

MESSRS. TURNBULL AND TOFT'S hobby-horses meet all the outside requirements at Limerick, gentle and simple partaking of their evening "spin." The shooting saloon and swing boats and other side-shows are greatly patronised, and Calverto's aerial railway and "helter-skelter" are two novel forms of amusement which are well appreciated.

WHAT a splendid site for a fair the "Jews' Meadow" really is, for numerous as the shows and other novelties were, there was ample room to fully set out and display them. Biddall Brothers' grand cinematograph and theatre of varieties occupied the premier position. Ridley's celebrated circus, and Professor B. T. Burnett's battery, military tournament, and sword and lance experts were admirable in their individual lines. The smaller booths and shows included Knighton's fine art academy, Wilson's picture gallery, Elliott's school of boxers, and Professor Gillem's fistiana saloon.

WE hear that the redoubtable Mr. Thunder, of Horsham, did indeed keep his word, and sought an injunction to restrain the showman lessee of the fair from holding the annual pleasure fair. He sought to stop the fair, but the judge refused without further hearing, on a day fixed for this week, a week after the fair. The fair has been held without let or hindrance. The High Court refused to grant the terrors of the law in addition to the thunder at the gates of the fair. Never has there been a better or bigger fair than the present one, and Mr. Thunder's fulminations have only served to rouse the good people to defend their ancient fair rights and privileges. Again has the old truth been justified, "Threatened institutions die hard." Horsham fair is secured in the heart of the people, and when the newcomer has become really acquainted with his neighbours and fellow-townsmen he will moderate his views and try and understand the wants of others. Why should a whole town and district be deprived of its necessary relaxation and amusement because of the hyper-sensitive views of one man?

QUITE a notable machine list included Hastings and Whayman's gorgeous gondolas, "Venice at the Fair," Wilson's motor-car track, Baker's steam yachts, and park swings and highfliers by Andrews and Mayne.

THE excellent shooting concerns were those of Hastings and Whayman, Andrews, Gillem, and Davies. All the fun of the fair—coker shies, throwing, and other games—were provided by Messrs. Knighton, Freeman, Davies, Andrews, and others.

BURNLEY, a thriving cotton manufacturing town, begins its annual holiday at the fair. Despite the fact that tens of thousands of its busy workers go to the seaside, there always remain vast crowds of people to throng the well-ordered fair-ground.

THE capable and courteous market superintendent, Mr. J. K. Gaukrodger, set the concerns in excellent array. These were Captain Tom Payne, with up-to-date Bioscope and varieties; Prof. Alf Haydon, second-sight marvels and temple of magic; Prof. Wm. Gibson, with spiritualistic séance, exposé, and occult mysticism; Ling's fine art gallery, and Shaw's similar show. There were two sets of motor-cars by Messrs. P. Collins and Peter Makins; steam horses and Japanese junks by John Collins, Wm. Mitchell, jun., and Mrs. Holden; steam yachts and swings by Messrs. Wm. Mitchell, sen., Walter Shaw, and Mrs. Holden; and manual swings by John Sharpe. Amongst the minor novelties were Winchester ranges and rifle saloons by Messrs. Sharpe, Burrows, Williams, Starkie, Humphries, Mrs. Jewell, and Mrs. John Cornwell; throwing games, ring and dart boards, and variety stalls by Messrs. Forshaw, Jennings, Shorrocks, Taylor, T. Forshaw, Ingham, Wright, W. Ingham, Cottam, and Street.

STIRCHLEY, near Birmingham, has for its attractions Clarke's motor-cars, park swings, shooting saloons, etc., Chipperfield's cinematograph exhibition, Wilson's shooting saloons, and Chipperfield and Taylor's varieties.

FRED M. BARBER'S auction pavilion is at Ten Acres, near Birmingham.

MR. SAMUEL SHEPHERD'S galloping horses, park swings, shooting saloons, cokernut sheets, etc., were at Selly Oak.

AT Blairgowrie fair, held on the Wellmeadow this week, are Wilmot's grand racing motor-cars, Biddall's ghost illusion, Leo's cinematograph exhibition, Chapman's performing birds and hares, Gould's Egyptian mystery, "The Flying Lady." Moore's assault-at-arms, Biddall's novelty exhibition, shooting saloons, park swings, cokernut sheets, and other attractions.

HOLLINWOOD is one of the rapidly growing villages between Manchester and Oldham. Time was, and that, too, not many years ago, when it was quite a country pilgrimage to reach Hollinwood from Manchester. Now, with the tremendous growth of engineering works and spinning mills on the main road to Oldham, and the necessary settlement of the workers, it is one long town between the Borough of Oldham and the City of Manchester. In the making of this industrial boulevard between the two towns a number of villages have been swallowed up. Miles Platting, Failsworth, and Hollinwood are the most notable examples. Over one hundred thousand people live along this busy Manchester and Oldham thoroughfare. Hollinwood Wake is the first of local fairs along this line of life.

A MUCH larger fair-ground than previous years, and on a better site, attracted a bigger crowd of shows and showmen, and in fact a record wake has been the result, crowds of people coming to the wakes from Oldham and the adjacent towns within rail or road access. President George H. Kemp, with his Anglo-American combine, the Coliseum of Varieties and Animated Photography, was the centre of attraction, and drew enormous audiences. Mr. John Mander's waxworks and cinematograph, George Proctor's London circus, Dyer's theatre of varieties, White's dime museum, and Ling's two ground booths, the fine art gallery and the distorting mirrors, contributed their own special charm and novelty to the fair.

IN the centre of the vast fair-ground were eight first-class roundabout concerns; the lessees (Messrs. John Whiting and Wm. Mitchell) with a set each; Whiting's new Japanese motor-cars, and Mitchell's shops in the air; John Collins with two machines, whirling the whirl (the great draw of the wakes) and the motor-car track; Hibbert and Sons with farmyard roosters; Geoghegan with steam horses and motor-cars; Richards with steam yachts; Lieske with big wheel, and Mrs. John Whiting with juvenile horses and motor-cars. The shooting ranges and rifle saloons were by Humphries, Delaney, Jewell and Henshaw; photo booth by Gunthorpe; refreshment booths by Bowser and Butterworth; ice cream stalls by Passagno and Pannum; stalls by Newall and Mulhearne. Amongst the attendant throng of caterers with variety stalls, doll, dart, and ring frames, cokers, and throwing games were Messrs. Whatmore, Richmond, Harrington, Mills, C. Horton, Black, J. Harrington, Blenkhorn, White, E. Horton, and others.

FROM Hollinwood the crowd of concerns divide, and one part takes Longsight, and the other goes to Hillrirk-street, Beswick, Manchester. Kemp's magnificent show remains at Hollingwood for private business all this week and Monday next, when it removes to Accrington for the fair. Wm. Mitchell takes a short season on Tommyfield with his yachts this week-end, and J. H. Geoghegan goes to Royton.

AMONGST the principal shows at Stalybridge wakes were Colonel Wm. Clark's Coliseum, Captain Tom Payne's Bioscope, Haydon's second-sight show, John Collins's twin ships in the air and four-a-breast horses.

THE Rev. T. Horne is making a series of visits to the Lancashire fair-grounds during the coming week, and hopes to meet a great number of the members of the Guild at Longsight on Sunday next.

A CAPITAL assortment of amusements assembled last week for Hollinwood wakes on the Corporation ground. Pride of place was taken by President Kemp with his unique show "Dreamland." Amongst others were J. Collins's wheely-whirly and motors, Whiting's motor-cars, Hibbert's horses, Dyer's bioscope, Mander's cinematograph, Proctor's circus, cocoanut sheets, football shooting, fancy stalls, and a host of attractions. Good business was done

WHYTE'S Oriental Pavilion, with cinematograph and varieties, is providing popular amusement at Methil. Clarke's shooting galleries and swingboats are also here.

THE death is announced at Salem, Oregon, U.S.A., of George Lippert, one of the many human curiosities exhibited by the late Barnum. Lippert had two hearts and three legs, and it is stated that the heart situated on the right side had ceased to beat a fortnight ago. The certified cause of death was consumption.

THE fair at Overton, in Hampshire, one of the oldest in England, was held last week. Sir William Portal presided at the luncheon which was held in celebration of the event, and amongst those who were present were the Duke of Wellington, the Earl of Northbrook, and Sir Richard Rycroft.

MR. ROBERT W. PAUL, of cinematograph fame, entertained his numerous staff on Saturday last at his country retreat. The party was taken down in large brakes, and after a look round the estate and lovely gardens, sat down to an open-air repast. After the meal, the visitors were photographed, and an adjournment was then made to the cricket field, where a hearty game was indulged in. Others went in for quoits, fishing, and boating, until the failing light brought the whole party once more together, when an al-fresco concert was begun, with piano, violin, &c. The singing was creditable, and all joined in the choruses for the general amusement. The return to dreary London had to be commenced all too early, but everyone will remember the most enjoyable outing, to which Mrs. Paul's kindly attention largely contributed. Amongst the visitors the following well-known members of the various departments were present:—Messrs. J. H. Martin, M. L. Taylor, H. Harris, G. Scott, G. Simpson, and J. W. Smith.

MANY of the terms used in the advertisements in The Era provide all sorts of humorous meanings to those outside the profession. The following, which appeared in last Saturday's Star, is an instance:—

THE "SAW-GRINDER'S EXIT."

The following interesting advertisement appears in The Era:—

Our artist's sketch indicates the fate of the saw-grinder who doesn't save his stamps.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

AN interesting leaflet issued by the "Theatrical Mechanical Association" of America and Canada, to hand, gives some interesting particulars of that association. It states that the association is formed ". . .To unite fraternally all white men of sound health and good moral character, who are socially acceptable, and who have been employed in the theatrical profession at least six months, and who are over twenty-one years of age. For the promotion of principles of true benevolence by associating its members together for the purpose of mutual relief, and alleviating the difficulties attendant upon sickness, distress, and death, so far as they may be mitigated by sympathy and pecuniary assistance." The death benefits range from £10 to £30 on the death of a member, and smaller sums on the death of a member's wife. The sick pay ranges from £1 per week to £2 per week. The society is divided into "lodges," and is conducted with the ritual and formality of a Masonic character. It has a membership of 3,291, and has paid out in benefits the sum of $27,385,94. This society is independent of the International Alliance of Stage Employees.

THE Sports Committee are issuing the following circular letter to all subscribers to the Prize Fund, and to donors of prizes, with a statement of subscriptions to the Prize Fund and the Sports acccunts.

29, Wellington-street, Strand,
London, W.C., July 21.

DEAR SIR OR MADAM,—We beg to send you herewith an audited copy of the statement of accounts, including full particulars of the donations to the Prize Fund and prizes presented for the sports, which took place on June 5.

In sending this statement to each subscriber to the Prize Fund, with our most grateful thanks for the assistance so generously rendered, we beg to give particulars of the purpose for which these sports were given.

As announced in the programme, the balance available will be set aside to form the nucleus of a National Benevolent Fund to assist theatrical employees, male or female, in need, whose case is recommended by a subscriber to the Prize Fund, or donor of a prize; or by any theatrical or music-hall association unable, by reasons of restrictions imposed by their rules, to assist such cases.

The National Association of Theatrical Employees, representing the stage working staff, provide through its various branches sick, funeral, and benevolent funds for the benefit of its members and their dependents; but, in view of the fact that there are a large number of theatrical employees, men and women, who are not eligible to join that society, and many of whom by reason of their small remuneration and irregular employment cannot provide against misfortune or other adverse circumstance—sickness, death, and unemployment—the Sports Committee decided, with the approval of the society, to utilise the Sports Fund as an "open" fund, available as indicated above. The National Committee of the Association, which is a thoroughly representative body, and of which Mr. James Cullen is the president, will administer this fund without any charge whatever (for the rent of office or services) except such as is unavoidable for postage and printing in connection with the fund.

The Committee regret the smallness of the balance available, but they hope that as the purpose of the Sports and this Benevolent Fund become more generally known a better result may be secured.

The Committee have also to thank those who assisted by helping to sell tickets, and the many stewards and officials who gave their services on the day.—Yours sincerely,

THE SPORTS COMMITTEE.

AT the Theatre Royal, Chesterfield, on Saturday, Mr. J. E. Kennedy, formerly resident stage-manager and carpenter, who is leaving Chesterfield, was presented with a silver jug by Mr. and Mrs. Ralli, a gold-mounted umbrella by the stage staff, a silver teapot by the members of the orchestra, silver teaspoons by the staff in front, and silver teaspoons from the members of The Romany's Revenge company.

SIR,—In your columns of "Stage Staff Gossip" in last week's Era, you state that I accepted £35 in my action for injuries at New Theatre. Would you kindly allow me to say that I accepted £15 from Mr. Johnson, the secretary of theUnion, who told me the lawyer's costs were £20.—Yours faithfully,

R. MADGE.

THEATRICAL PATENTS.

The following abridged descriptions are specially drawn for The Era by Messrs. Hughes and Young, Patent Agents, 55/56, Chancery Lane, London, W.C., who will give advice and assistance free to our readers on all matters relating to the patenting of inventions.

4963. Displaying. Patentee S. R. R. Matthews, 13, St. Mary's Road, Peckham, London, S.E. This invention relates to an apparatus for automatically displaying and illuminating advertisement cards, pictures, or the like. The cards or pictures are inserted from the top into grooved frames pivoted between discs secured to a drum or axle adapted to be rotated in a case by clockwork or the like. The frames are connected by springs to the discs. It then springs past the stop over a lug on a spring lever secured to the case and engages a stop on the lever. It is held stationary by this stop so as to display its other face until the next frame depresses the lever. Electric or other lights arranged above mirrors throw light on the cards etc.

MR. FRED GINNETT produced last Monday, at the Hackney Empire, the popular romantic equestrian spectacle Turpin's Ride to York. Mr. Ginnett appeared as the famous highwayman, and there are ten other characters in the cast. All the familiar incidents of the well-known story of the ride to York were faithfully depicted, concluding with the death of Black Bess, the mare being carried shoulder high to her last resting-place by Luke Rookwood's gipsies. A Black Bess that dances, nods her head when asked questions, pretends to have fallen lame, and finally kisses her master as she lies dying on the road, is beyond doubt a most accomplished equine performer. Mr. Fred Ginnett has informed an interviewer that she is the best mare he ever had. She is half-sister to Hackler's Pride.

ANOTHER interesting point in last Monday's production was the fact that the old flint-lock pistol used by Mr. Ginnett was, we are assured, the identical weapon with which the real Dick Turpin shot the real Tom King in 1737. It was recently discovered by a workman employed in pulling down the "Old Plough" at Little Ealing, a noted haunt and hiding-place of Turpin's, which was kept by his grandparents. The pistol is stamped "D. T." and 1737, and has two notches on the butt, which possibly indicate two victims of Dick's skill as a marksman.

ONE of Mr. Tom Green's latest pictures, "A Touch of Human Nature," issued by the Walturdaw Company, is admitted to be one of the most genuine pieces of acting seen for some time; and the fact that competing firms have bought copies speaks well for Tom Green's productions.

THE LATE JOHN DEE HUMPHREYS.

The letter from Mr. Arthur Reeve published in our columns recently draws attention to the necessity for helping Mrs. Humphreys and her family. We strongly commend this most deserving case to the generosity of the showman world.

The many friends of the deceased, who was one of the founders of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association, will, we are confident, now that they know the urgent necessity of the case, respond with readiness to this appeal.

During the whole course of a laborious and honourable career John Dee Humphreys was ever ready to assist his brother showmen. His open-handed generosity and unfailing kindness endeared him to a wide circle of friends and comrades in the circus and show world

The object of the fund is to enable the widow and family to maintain their home until such time as the children are able to earn an income sufficient for that purpose.

CARLTON, the curious comical card, has been going strong at Shepherd's Bush Empire this week. In September he returns to the Palace Theatre for the eleventh time, followed by pantomime at Bristol, and a tour to Australia next March. In the quaint costume and make-up that adds to his unusual height—he is considerably over six feet even without the egg-shaped "dome of thought" he wears on the stage—the young conjurer owes not a little of his success to his good-natured trick of turning the laugh against himself. On Saturday night he gravely informed the audience that he had just been engaged for the Christmas season at the local theatre. "I hope the production will be Aladdin and his Wonderful Lamp, he added, "as I feel sure I should be cast and expected to shine as the wick!"

MR. CARLTON tells an amusing yarn of how he became a comical conjurer. He had always been a conjurer, but the comical part of the business was an accident. Being engaged to give a turn at the Crystal Palace, he determined to avoid the usual custom of turning up his sleeves during his card tricks by wearing a black, skin-tight costume—after the style of Chirgwin—adding a short orange-coloured jacket with long tails to brighten it up. This made him look so tall and thin that his appearance was greeted, to his great surprise, with a burst of laughter. He therefore began his performance handicapped by nervousness, and every time he walked round the stage the laughter was renewed. "Do they think I'm very bad?" he asked, on making his exit. "No!" was the emphatic answer. "They think you're funny."

So he wisely made up his mind to go on being funny. Mr. Carlton has invented a great many clever illusions, his latest, to be produced shortly, being a novel, greatly-improved form of the vanishing lady trick. A big wooden cross will be placed on the stage, to which a girl will be firmly lashed with strong ropes, placed in a light cabinet and hidden from the audience by thin curtains. A pistol will then be fired, the curtains re-opened, and a man discovered bound to the cross. The illusion is made more puzzling by the fact that a couple of people from the audience will be asked to hold the ends of the rope, passed through holes in the curtain, with which the girl is tied to the cross.

MR. PAUL MARTINETTI, who opened at the Palace Theatre on Monday night, is in excellent form after a long holiday. The popular pantomimist has been living at his pretty house on the river, going in for hard work in the form of play, for he sculls, walks, or attends to his garden with untiring energy and as much earnestness as he throws into his professional work. Mr. Martinetti—who, by the way, is now celebrating his thirtieth year in England, having made his London début in 1876—attends to every detail in his clever productions. The ladies in his company are beautifully dressed, perhaps the prettiest frock on the stage being entirely composed of lace over chiffon, with a bright cherry-coloured satin sash. Another noticeably pretty but less effective dress is of pale amber silk, the dainty blonde who wears it having placed a big pink rose in her hair as a finishing touch.

IT is proposed to build a Hippodrome at Willesden at the corner of the Station-road and Acton-lane, area 125 feet by 120. Three shops also will be erected. The place will be advantageously situated, as Willesden Junction Station will be close by, and trams pass the site. The plans have been passed by the Middlesex and Borough Councils, and the place is to seat 2000. The architect is Mr. W. L. Griffiths. There will be no drink licence asked for, and it is proposed to give two performances nightly. The so-called opposition by the church opposite has been overcome and withdrawn.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follows:—

MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALAN W. YOUNG,
Empire Theatre, Liverpool.

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,
Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON,
Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. W. LEA,
Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

LONDON DISTRICT.
MR. WILLIAM COLLINS,
The Empire, Shepherd's Bush, W.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

No. 1101. THE SQUATTER'S DAUGHTER.

The Squatter lives in a wooden shanty in a clearing of the backwoods. He is about to start for a ride to a neighbouring settlement; he bids good-bye to his daughter and gallops off. The next scene shows a horde of Red Indians on the war-path. One of them fires a shot, and they all spring on their feet and rush off to the attack. In the meantime the Squatter's daughter had taken the alarm. Running to the door she peers anxiously out, and then rushes in and warns the other inhabitants of the shanty. She takes a rifle herself, and kneeling on the balcony awaits the arrival of the Indians. Meanwhile, the two men who are with her hastily bolt and secure the windows, and then with their rifles run out to the stockade in front of the cabin. But the three guns cannot stop the rush of the Indians, who quickly hack down the stockade with their hatchets and storm the wooden shanty. Inside, the girl and the two men are making one last stand; coolly and collectively they fire their rifles as fast as they can load them, while flying splinters and falling doors and windows testify to the fury of the onslaught of the Red Indians outside. Soon an entrance is gained, and in a short hand to hand fight against overwhelming odds, the girl's two defenders are killed and the girl is carried away captive.

The scene now changes to the Indians' encampment. The Chief's two Squaws are sitting outside his wig-wam, peacefully smoking. The Indians troop in, and last comes the Chief with the girl. The Chief bids her enter his tent with the other Squaws, but she indignantly refuses. Thrice she is given the alternative of obedience or death, while an ugly looking spear is held at her throat; and thrice she chooses death. Then, in a fury, the Chief orders that she shall be taken to the stake and burned. The warriors execute a weird dance around the stake, which is piled high with faggots, and the girl is rapidly tied to it while the two Squaws set fire to the dry sticks.

The scene now goes back to the lonely squatter, who is riding through the woods. Suddenly he hears shots and reins in his horse to listen. One moment convinces him, and digging spurs into his horse gallops back as fast as it can carry him. When he arrives at his desolated home and finds its defenders dead and the girl missing, he is almost frantic with despair. The bodies of several Red Indians testify to the gallant stand made by the trio before they were overcome. One of the Indians is only wounded, and the squatter extracts from him some information of the direction which the others have taken. He is on his horse again, and flies off to the Indian encampment. Here he comes upon the wild orgy when it is just at its height. Firing his revolver rapidly he kills several of the Indians and put the others to flight.. Then he rushes to the girl, who is almost fainting, cuts the bonds which hold her to the stake, lifts her quickly into the saddle, and gallops off to safety before the Indians have time to rally.

Length 600 feet. Price £15 0 0

"THE PROSPECTORS." A Drama of the Western Goldfields.

No. 1851. Copyright 1906 by the Vitagraph Company of America.

DESCRIPTION.

Two men are seen approaching a miner's shanty; they are in appearance typical Western "bad men." Halting their pack horses they summon the occupant of the shanty, a young prospector who has recently located a rich vein of metal and needs experienced men to work it. He kisses his wife and children and mounting his horse starts out on the quest for wealth.

Under the direction of their young leader the miners are seen toiling in the excavation. Suddenly a shout of triumph and exultation marks the discovery of a rich metal-bearing lode—they have made "a lucky strike." The claim is staked out and they commence mining operations. Already the two confederates are beginning to plot treachery.

After weeks of arduous toil the three miners are just about to break camp and the gold is shared equally among them. They stretch out around the fire and go to sleep, each with a bag of precious gold in his belt. The two conspirators only feign sleep, and robbing their comrade of his gold dust are just making their escape, when their theft is discovered and they mortally wound their victim.

The young prospector regains consciousness and staggering to his horse manages to reach his cottage. An affecting scene follows, and after telling his wife of the treachery of his partners, he breathes his last in her arms. She takes his gun from the holster and swears to be revenged on his murderers.

The two guilty miners are seen gambling in a lonely hut. One of them, a card sharp, as well as robber and murderer, has won all his partner's gold and now offers to play for his "gun." This being agreed the sharper again wins, but is this time detected cheating. A furious "gun fight" follows and the one who lost is killed. His partner goes off with the gold.

Two Years Later - Vengeance.—The prospector's young wife has opened a Western saloon to support herself and children. She rules the roystering cowboys that frequent her place with a rod of iron, and when one refuses to pay he finds a .44-calibre "shooting iron" pointing at his head and is very glad to "cough up."

A tenderfoot visits the saloon and the boys have lots of fun with him. He is glad to escape with his life. The saloon is now empty—a blear-eyed and unkempt looking miner staggers in, and after several drinks falls into a drunken doze. The young woman watches him like a cat watches a mouse; stealthily she draws near, and lifting the broad brim of his hat recognizes the murderer of her husband.

He awakes to find himself held up, and the determined woman tells him his moments are numbered. By a subterfuge he wrests the revolver from her. Just at this moment the little boy enters, and seeing his mother in danger picks up a bottle, and, with one blow fells the miner. As he staggers to his feet again and endeavours to pull his gun the young widow shoots him down, thus revenging her husband's death.

It is a Brot Harte novel in moving pictures, breathing the wild spirit and free atmosphere of the Western mining regions.

Photography wonderful, scenery superb, action thrilling. Length 775 feet.

THEATRES WANTED.

"WHEN IT WAS DARK."
WANTED, Dates, for this Magnetic Attraction, Playing to enormous business everywhere.
Usual Brilliant Success at Bristol.
The Magpie says:—To those who would acquire the beauty of a great thought, "Darkness" will supply it. The stupendous piece made to live and move and have its being upon the stage of the old Royal this week holds intact its record of popularity, and has in no wise impaired the traditions of its supreme conception, and one has only to witness it to be convinced that Mr. Morton Powell, who has been the sponsor of many prodigy plays, realised to the hilt the herculean task before him, and allowed to the fullest extent the great necessity to capture and use all the great discrimination of which he is master. The company got together do ample justice to the scope for their talents at their disposal. The scenery is of the best. The tense situations are neither slurred or falsified, and the whole thing cannot but compel success, and make such an impression upon those who see it that will never be forgotten.
"Darkness" is a play in ten thousand.—Prove it.
The Bristol Times says:—It was received with marked enthusiasm by a large audience. . . . It is extremely emotional, and the sentiment of the whole work is calculated to appeal to the feelings of all.
The Western Daily Press:—Appeals with intensity to all sections of the community. . . . An absorbing theme for stage effect. The boldness of his scheme appeals with irresistible force to the emotions.
Daily Mercury:—A powerful human play. . . . Its conception is clever and strikingly original, and the experience is a tense revelation in the dramatic art. It is essentially a play with a moral.
The Evening Times:—It is to be whole-heartedly commended. It is a play that is bound to make one think. It has a wonderful depth, a wonderful hold upon the audience, and it was set forth at the Theatre Royal last night with such a completeness and vividness of colouring that whilst at times it was weird it at others inspired awe. . . . The acting and mounting reaches a standard which has never been excelled and rarely equalled at the Theatre Royal, for many years at any rate. . . . The exceptionally large audience was genuinely enthusiastic. Go and see "Darkness."
"WHEN IT WAS DARK."
No greater play than this has ever been staged.

AUTUMN TOURS.

WE ARE NOW VERY BUSY CLEANING DRESSES FOR AUTUMN TOURS,
but have plenty of room, and, like Oliver Twist
WE ASK FOR MORE.

We are also very busy Cleaning and Renovating Tableaux Curtains and Draperies from London and Country Theatres and Music Halls.

We still hold the field as Cleaners and Dyers to the Theatrical and Music Hall Professions. This fact is clearly proved by the unsolicited testimonials we are continually receiving.

Professional work takes precedence over all other orders.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,

BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

Chapter I.
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.

Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.

Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.

Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.

Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his text-book on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases, what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

EARLY TRAINS.

The Railway Companies are despatching many morning trains earlier than hitherto. This will enable subscribers and advertisers in the provincial towns to get copies of "The Era" in time for the breakfast table. Advertisers are requested to forward their advertisements as early in the week as possible, and not later than 7 p.m. on Thursday.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERDEEN.—Her Majesty's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. C. Cavanah, C.A.—Mr. Chas. March's play, The Gamester of Mets, is presented this week. Mr. March himself takes the leading part, which he plays with remarkable resource and skill, being well supported by the members of the company.

Palace Theatre.—Managing-Directors, Messrs. Rosen and Bliss; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—The most interesting turn this week is that provided by Staley's Novelty Attraction Company. The performance is one of great originality, and the clever artists, Messrs. Cass and Andrew and Miss Ada, are applauded without stint. The Wakeman Quartette, which consists of Miss Nancy Bruce, contralto; and Messrs. George Windus, tenor; Herbert Watts, baritone; and Charles Wakeman, bass, are extremely popular; and other pleasing turns are those of Miss Maggie Binnie, in a repertory of illustrated songs; Miss Alice Blandford, a young New Zealand vocalist; Miss Amy Elcock, comedienne and dancer; Miss Florrie St. Kay, comedienne; Mr. Fred Bernand, vocal actor; and Claremont and Victor, acrobats.

ACCRINGTON. — Hippodrome. — Proprietors, Messrs. Willmot, Vandy, Potter, and Weisker.—The bill this week is rather out of the ordinary, the greater part of the programme being made up of a very interesting series of pictures. George Georgie is a very smart comedian, and pleases his audience; Edie Endon is deserving of commendation; and the Albertos are particularly clever.

ALDERSHOT.—The Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. E. Williams.—Notwithstanding unfavourable climatic influences against theatre-going, large audiences are finding delight in the performances by Mr. Lingford Carson's company of The Drama of Life, which contains an interesting story, with many sensational and thrilling episodes. The play is excellently "put on," too, a feature which has its telling effect. The talented company has in its ranks Messrs. Edward M. Hamilton, J. Hooker, Harwood Roberts, Maxwell Payne, Sydney Fiennes, Horace Booth, Misses Kate Hallam, Nellie Birchenough, F. French, and Elsie May. Mr. Edward Van Biene is general manager of the company.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—Theatre Royal. — Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Fairbairn.—The entertainments at the theatre for the current week are provided by a dramatic company, organised by Miss Moore, and managed by Mr. Percy Shaw, the well-known whistler and comedian. The piece is entitled The Crimson Club. The drama has some exciting scenes in it, especially the final one, where a death struggle takes place between the chief villain and an adventuress, and there is much smashing of crockery. Mr. Fred G. Kay ably sustains the part of Sir Philip Garside; as the persecuted hero, Mr. J. Clifford Wright gets the sympathy of the audience; and other members of the Crimson Club are capably sustained by Messrs. Sidney Bland, C. Nugent, J. Franklin-Heywood, Will Shaw, and others. The humorous element is admirably introduced by Mr. Percy Shaw, as a broken-down swell. His whistling solos are a clever and acceptable feature. As the adventuress, Miss Florence Delmar does some impressive work; Miss Sidney Barrasford as Muriel Lockwood makes an amiable and sympathetic heroine; and capital support is given by Misses Millie Hastings and Kitty Elliott in minor rôles.

Empire Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Sons; Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy B. Broadhead; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech.—The programme here includes Lillian Hodge, an able sentimental vocalist; Blarney and Kennard, capable comedians and dancers, with a couple of waltzing dogs; the Devonports (Lewis and Marie), clever conjurers; the Eight Dancing Dotts; Jim Alston, comedian; Billy Burns, the "pit boy," who has a powerful tenor voice; Tom Kelso's sketch The Silly Servant; the popular Whimsical Walker, and the talented child actress, Frances Maddock, in the scena, Captain Hamilton, V.C.; Leoni Clarke, the "Cat King," whose trained animals give a very entertaining performance. The Bioscope is the concluding item.

AYR.—New Gaiety Theatre.—This comfortable and well-appointed little theatre opened for the season on Monday evening with Mr. H. F. Maltby's romantic play, The Youngest of Three. The theatre has been much brightened up during the recess. Mr. Harry W. Day is still acting-manager for the syndicate, which has as managing-director Mr. R. C. Buchanan. Mr. Maltby himself gives a fine rendering of George Windover; and Mr. W. Henry Hargreaves plays the part of the love-sick son admirably. As Phil Radford, Mr. A. E. Wyn Weaver acts well; Mr. Ernest Noble, in the dual parts of the rustic Paul, and later as Joshua Pynne, the landlord of the Bowl of Punch, makes the most of these characters. Excellent is the acting of Miss Janet Hodson and Miss Mary Maltby, as the sisters Anne and Florence respectively; while the vivacious, charming Lucy of Miss Beatrice Marsdene deserves every commendation.

Pavilion, Newton Park.—Proprietors, Messrs. Lee and Arden; Manager, Mr. J. W. Forrest.—The following artists are appearing here this week; Gilroy, ventriloquist; Leonard Charles, tenor vocalist; popular Mack Dennison, eccentric humorist; Steve Buckingham, refined comedian; Harry Leyton, humorist; Jack Grant, versatile artist; Jim Forrest ("Sunny Jim"), comedian; and the Boston Bioscope.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — Royalty Theatre and Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Messrs. Beaudyn and Livesey present the Anglo-Indian drama, A Traitor Prince, here this week. It is a strong play, with many sensational situations, and was very well received. Mr. Jas. Sherwin as Lieutenant Frank Derrick plays the rôle of a manly British sailor admirably; the Prince Rao Dalmirez of Mr. G. M. Montanini is a very strong character, displaying the villainous cunning of the native to perfection; Miss Rose Routledge renders the part of Lola Vane in a charming manner; Vashti, the Indian snake charmer, is enacted with much effect by Miss Nesta Sandford; Miss Kitty Thomas as Pansy Blossom, and Mr. Edward O'Grady as Bobby Bright are very funny, and add much to the go of the piece.

Tivoli.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Stage-Manager, Mr. Tom Whiting.—The top of the bill here this week is "Dou Ban," the mechanical brain, which is creating quite a sensation with its wondrous abilities; Florence and Lilian give an exceedingly clever and refined musical entertainment; Tom Moore has a capital voice, and sings his songs in good style; Selby and Myers, patter comedians and dancers, are very smart, and their dancing deserves special mention; Mack Ollive is very well received in his whistling scene, and he is ably assisted by Miss Daisy Baldrey; Helm and Cozens create a lot of laughter with their sketch The Doctor and His Patient.

BELFAST.—Palace Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, Warden, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Freece; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. Harris.—The chief attraction here is provided by Mr. John Leopold's company of comedians in the original burlesque, entitled The Houseboat, which is certainly most attractive and amusing. The Eight Sunrays, an octette of graceful young ladies, delight all with their charming Parisian creation, La Maxixe; and a fine performance has been submitted by Miss Sara de Groot, assisted by that clever actor, Mr. Arthur Holmes Gore, in their dramatic episode, The Queen's Messenger, which gives this talented duo fine scope for their admirable acting. The cycling feats by Mr. Arthur Kenney have created quite a sensation; and Mr. Fred Neiman, a smart ventriloquist; the Bros. Bright; Mr. Walter Wade; Miss Lil O'Gorman; and the Palace Pictures complete the programme.

Empire Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John S. Walker.—The Boissetts top the bill, and, assisted by a capable company, are appearing in their well-known pantomime, The Bricklayers, with every element of success. Miss Millie Payne, a clever eccentric comedienne, was loudly encored on Monday; and Mr. Harry Thurston's mimicry of stars is most realistic. The Two Madges are charming duettists; and the new pictures exhibited by the bioscope are interesting. Also appearing are Mr. Andy Fagan, Irish comedian; Mr. Fred Burton, in a novel musical act; and Mr. Will Fred, comedian and dancer.

New Alhambra Theatre of Varieties. — General-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—The success of the dramatic season continues unabated, and this week the attraction is The Sins of the Fathers, presented with great éclat by the Alhambra Dramatic Company. Miss Nina Blake-Adams furnishes a clever impersonation of Ethel Harmsworth; and the villainies of Sir Reginald Moreland are realistically portrayed by Mr. Herbert Cecil. Mr. Cyril Grier is a manly George Armitage; and Mr. J. F. Pearce must be commended for his convincing impersonation of Deuteronomy Smith. The humour of the piece is in the capable hands of Mr. W. G. Wesley, as Justin Tyne and Miss Effie Macintosh as Polly Popplethwaite. Mr. H. Arnold Allen sustains the rôle of Matthew Harmsworth efficiently; and one of the best pieces of acting is that exhibited by Mr. John Burton as Jim Hewitt. Miss Evelyn Kington acts cleverly as Chippy; and Miss Lina Nazeby is all that can be desired as Camille le Blanc, Little Marjory as Lucy Hewitt and Messrs. Wm. Mailing and S. Mosselle complete the cast. Mr. Herbert Cecil is responsible for the admirable stage-management.

BIRKENHEAD.—Argyle Theatre of Varieties. —Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—Mr. G. W. Hunter and Miss Amice Desiree in their amusing and clever sketch, Rival Wizards, are a leading feature in a strong combination. The Haytors in Cabby Knows His Fare are also scoring heavily; and Mr. Ernie Myers, a versatile comedian, is on a welcome return visit; Miss Lily Lonsdale is a talented soprano vocalist; and Miss Frances Haskoll, in her electric illusory entertainment; Mr. Frank Harwood, actor-vocalist, and the Bodina Trio, musical speciality artists, also appear with distinction. Brown's Royal Bioscope exhibit some capital films.

BIRMINGHAM. — Alexandra Theatre. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Lester Collingwood, Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Bernardo.—The Stowaway is represented here by Miss Winifred Maude and company, who are thus enjoying a second week's well-merited success. Mr. Victor Du Cane, who is again responsible for the production, enacts the rôle of the stowaway, Dicky Dials, and sings several taking songs in a very acceptable style; Miss Winifred Maude, whose charming presence and tasteful manner as Althea Dale win everybody's favour; also sings a number of special songs, which fall on grateful ears. The excellent performance, which has run for upwards of one thousand nights, is enhanced by the well-considered acting of Mr. William Vane as Tom Inglis, Mr. Leonard Harrison as Paul Inglis, Mr. Jas. Stevenson, jun., as Charles Etherington, Mr. W. E. Simpson as Percy Ewart, Miss Ethel Tinsley as Florence Etherington, and Miss Jenny Hackett as Chucky, the London newsboy.

Carlton Theatre, Saltley.—Owner and Manager, Mr. Arthur Carlton; Resident-Manager, Mr. James Alexander. — Kennedy's Komics conclude an eminently successful eight weeks' season to-night, when, doubtless, a capital send-off will be the portion of each. The company this week includes Little Hatch, the midget marvel; Ellis and Liston, in mirth and melody; Sandes and Vincent, the funny couple; Kino and Kirby, the local favourites; and an entirely new set of animated pictures, &c.

Theatre Royal, Aston.—Lessee, Mr. Charles Barnard; General-Manager, Mr. E. Hewitson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Whittles.—The Prodigal Parson, played by Messrs. Alfred Northway and W. V. Garrod's company, is the attraction here. Mr. Garrod presents a striking performance of the title rôle that elicits admiration from all. Mr. Alfred Northway's acting as Enoch Jaggins is guileful and convincing, Mr. Frank Dallos as Ben Jaggins renders valuable aid, Mr. Walter Vincent shines as Ned Kettlepin, while the humour of the play is supplied by Mr. Percy Dawsone, who is specially engaged as Phil Drive. Miss Lydia Hart proves another incentive to mirth as Gretchen, and Miss Bertha Kingston is most acceptable as Fern Godley, the parson's wife; Miss Gladys Conover enacts with much simplicity and pathos the part of the blind child, Myrtle Godley.

Empire Palace. — Resident-Manager, Mr. A. W. Matcham. — Louie Freear is attracting crowded houses here with her sketch Jemima, the Slavey, in which she is most amusing. Neil Kenyon is an entertaining Scotch comedian; the Sisters Terry, Mignotte Kokin, and Maud Ross are pleasing, artistic, and win loud applause; the Barowsky Trio are clever acrobats; and Will Poluski, jun., and Will Mitcham are amusing. Plenty of fun is caused by Galetti's monkeys.

Gaiety Theatre.—General-Manager, Mr. Albert Bushell.—Carter Livesey and Lilian Rosebury are presenting their sketch Amateur Acting here. It is cleverly acted; while Geoffreys and Benson have a sketch, Spoofed; and Urwin and Franklin are seen in A Clerical Combination; Montague Biggs is a clever female impersonator; the Bros. Artois are daring and eccentric in their bar act; Chummie La Mara is a charming comedienne, and is loudly applauded for her songs; as also is Elsie Clare. Barton and Franklin, Will Sergeant, Dan Thomas, and Muir and Bartlett are very popular.

Hippodrome. — Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—Vesta Victoria is paying us a return visit here. Her latest success, "Waiting at the church," has caught on immediately. The Four Athos, whose manipulation of tennis-balls is wonderful, are applauded; Katie Marsh has a sketch in which she shines; and Raie Walters sings sweetly. Other popular turns are supplied by Dusty Rhodes, Harry Rogerson. Herbert Madden, Will Driscoll, and Will Lytton, who are highly appreciated.

Bordesley Palace. — Resident-Manager, Mr. Edward Foster.—The clever character quick-change artist Ludwig Amann is a big draw here this week. Cooke and Rothert do a smart American comedy turn; the Bastiens are responsible for a daring acrobatic display; Nellie Martell is a dainty comedienne; the Three Phydoras, musical comedians, and Tom Wootwell are amusing; and Clown Bartar and Miss Rozsika's dogs are decidedly interesting.

BLACKBURN.—New Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Page.—Mr. C. Watson Mill's company is playing A Wrecker of Men to crowded houses. The drama is powerfully written, and well acted by the company, which includes Miss Mary Ellam, who does excellent work in the principal part.

Palace Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Will Murray.—Chief among a good company of artists is Mr. R. A. Roberte, the well-known Protean entertainer, in his clever quick-change sketch, Dick Turpin, in which he impersonates five different characters. Other good artists are Ada Parker, a dainty dancer; the three Scabornes, sensational acrobats; Douglas and Ford, American entertainers; T. B. Foyme, Yorkshire comedian; A. E. Clifford, versatile vocalist; and the Valvans, Oriental jugglers.

BLACKPOOL.—Her Majesty's Opera House.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—Lady Madcap is paying her first visit here this week since she enlisted under the banner of Mr. George Dance. Oroya Brown is humorously played by Mr. Harold Parkes; Mr. Bay Russell does well as Stony Stratford; and Mr. James Graydon lends material assistance in the fun-making as Posh Jenkins; Mr. Julius Charmettes makes a good Count de St. Hubert and sings his numbers satisfactorily. Mr. George Willes is well placed as Corporal Ham; Mr. Ernest Oresfan looks the part of Major Blatherswaite; and Mr. Emlyn Davis appears as Colonel Layton. Miss Isabel Dillon plays the title-rôle with much spirit and ability; Miss Elsa Werner is a ladylike Gwenny Holden; and Miss Ethel Beech a vivacious Susan. The members of the chorus fulfil all requirements.

Grand Theatre.—Owner and Manager, Mr. F. Sergenson.—Mr. C. P. Levilly's company is here once again with Amorelle and with Miss Stella Gastelle in the title-rôle. As on former visits, she carries all before her, and merits the warmest encomiums nightly. A new but very able Dr. Crow is found in Mr. W. H. Powell, whilst Mr. Arthur Dennis contributes a creditable representation of the Count de Cideaux. Messrs. Manfred Russell and Frederick Hobbs sing and act well as Jules and François respectively, and Mr. Fred Seymour gives every satisfaction as Dodart. Miss Kitty Cavendish as Lesbia and Miss Avis Grahame as Marina are also well qualified for their respective tasks. The excellent chorus is under the direction of Mr. Harry Rushworth, and Mr. Herbert Ralland attends to the front of the house.

Palace.—General-Manager, Mr. G. H. Harrop; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Waller.—Old and new favourites supply a strong and varied programme here this week. The names of Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco appear in very big type, which their wonderful feats of legerdemain amply justify. Blackpool has welcomed many conjurers, but this trio excel all previous comers. Other capital turns are given by Lily Lena, a very acceptable vocalist; the Howards, in comedy and melody; the Trapnell Family of acrobats; Vanola, the talented Mexican antipodeste; Frank and Jen Latona, in a clever musical act; Maggie Walsh, the singing mill girl;

Rosina Caselli, a very old favourite, with her troupe of performing dogs; and Charlie Williams, the "Scotch coon." Vernon's Imperial Bioscope is always the last, but always one of the most popular items.

HIPPODROME.—Lessees, Messrs. Whitehead and Ramsden; General-Manager, Mr. T. P. Dingnan.—Mr. and Mrs. Will Parker's company of children, in the spectacular divertissement entitled The Children's Party, still tops the bill here. Nelly Farrell, a singer of Irish songs, is also a favourite turn. A capital pot-pourri entertainment is rendered by Dave Meier and Bella Mora; Collins and Rice are smart comedians; Viviana is a pleasing dancing girl; Tate and Tate score as comedy acrobats; George Adams is a tuneful baritone from New Zealand; Eva Richards sings and dances well; Haidee Lee and Wallace Kingston provide a very amusing turn; and the Royal Bioscope shows the latest pictures.

WINTER GARDENS PAVILION.—General-Manager, Mr. J. R. Huddlestone.—In Sunny Spain is still given here with undiminished success. Horace Goldin, the conjurer; the Belaguer Family of acrobats; the Castilian Serenaders; Dr. Jules Angelo's tableaux vivants; the Doretty Quartette, in their musical act; and the Scala Girls also remain in the bill, which attracts crowded houses twice daily.

TOWER CIRCUS. — General-Manager, Mr. G. H. Harrop.—"House full" is a familiar notice outside this unique circus. The new-comers this week are the Four Holloways, acrobatic wire artists; Walter Bellonini, juggler; and Keen and Waller, novel eccentrics. Still included in the bill are the Kellinos, in their amazing acrobatic feats; Paul Conchas, in his military pastimes act; Willie Hale, hoop manipulator; Klein Family, acrobatic musical cyclists; August and September, comedians; the Novellos, with their trained horses and elephants; and the Famous Finneys, in a swimming act.

BOLTON.—GRAND THEATRE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. F. Elliston; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry Kenyon.—The Seven Savonas, in their creation, The Palace of Orpheus, and the Six Cycling Elliotts, are filling in a second week here with an entire change of programme. They are supported by Fred Monckton and company (which includes Miss Lillie Monckton), who present a sketch, What Railing Did; Primavesi, a clever juggler; the Fimans, in their comedy sketch, In the Fire Station; J. C. Scatter, a North Country comedian; Queenie West, comedienne; Senorita Elvina, a graceful gymnast; Maud Howard and Madge Townsend, duettists; and the Imperial Bioscope.

BOSCOMBE.—HIPPODROME.—Joint proprietors, Messrs. Frederick Monillot and Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. Ball.—The Reed-Oetzman troupe of pantomimists are at the head of the bill here this week, in their absurdity, On Tour in the Tyrol. Will Godwin and Co. are cordially received for their pathetic song scena, Repentance. Will Johnson, the popular lively comedian, is giving his latest successes with the happiest results; Lily Morris was billed to appear, but was unavoidably absent on the evening of our visit. Her deputy, however, rendered songs in a sweet and dainty manner. Daisy Martell, comedienne and dancer, is another favourite; Fred Collins, Scotch comedian; and W. H. Downs, coloured Australian vocalist, complete the programme.

BRADFORD.—PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. F. Laidler; Acting-Manager, Mr. N. Hepworth.—On Monday evening last, for the first time here, Mr. George Kirk and Miss Mary Neill's company appeared in Mr. Charles Darrell's drama, Her Luck in London. Its reception at the hands of a large audience was very cordial. Miss Neill completely wins the sympathies of her audience for an admirable impersonation of the character of the heroine, Nellie Harborne. She has excellent support from Mr. Alfred Adams as the curate, Lionel Strong, and from Miss Frances Bruce in the part of Lilian (her sister); Farmer Harborne fits Mr. Tyrone Power well; Miss Ada Roscoe as his transgressing wife, Madame Gabrielle, is effective; as the Hon. Fitzgerald O'Connor Mr. C. A. Leicester is distinctly good; and Mr. A. D. Adams as the villain of the story, Richard Lenowen, acts with force and skill. The humorous element is safe in the hands of Miss Nellie Graves and Mr. J. T. Dillson, and the play is admirably staged.

THE EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Percival Craig.—A great reception from a crowded house awaited Georges Hackenschmidt, the champion wrestler, on Monday night, and the "Chocolate-coloured Coon," by H. Elliott, was also a large sharer in the liberal applause the audience bestowed. Steve McCarthy, comedian, gave a clever exhibition in dancing, and much grace and power of muscle marked the athletic display by the Klos Sisters. Claire Beasy's cats were put through a wonderful performance, and Francis and Melli submitted an eccentric musical act. Marie Kendall sings good songs in her best style, and Eily Adair is a pleasing comedienne and dancer. There is good vocalism and quaint comedy in the turn by the New York Nippers, viz., Bed-Time; and the McConnell Trio of Vocalists score well in a musical comedy sketch.

PALACE THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. H. C. Arnold, jun.—The Sisters Brenton, capable comediennes and dancers, head a capital programme here, to which Arthur Slater contributes a capital turn as a whistler. Gus Harris, the Hebrew character delineator, scores a success in his dramatic sketch The Synagogue. Great applause greets Frank Cumminger for his clever sand dancing. In a droll sketch, The Plumber, Will H. Sloan is very quaint, and he has good support from the Misses Florence Gerald and Kitty Hamilton. Illustrated songs by E. O. Fitzgerald find favour, and Lily Gaston does some expert and clever top-boot dancing. There are some very diverting films exhibited by Raymond's Bio-Tableaux, and Gallagher and Hild, comedy artists, complete the list.

ST. GEORGE'S HALL.—Manager, Mr. S. Carter.—The New Century Company is showing some fine animated pictures here again for a short season.

AL FRESCO PAVILION.—Zellini, the clever juggler, is on a return visit here, contributing successfully to an entertaining programme.

BRIDLINGTON.—ROYAL VICTORIA THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer.—Under the direction of Mr. W. Payne Seddon, Mr. E. Hoggan-Armadale and an excellent company of artists commenced a week's engagement on Monday night with the comedy, David Garrick, in which Mr. Hoggan-Armadale gave a fine representation of the famous actor. On Tuesday the attraction was Mr. Chas. Hannan's version of Goldsmith's Vicar of Wakefield. Mr. Hoggan-Armadale gave a finished performance of the part of Dr. Primrose, and had to appear four or five times after the final fall of the curtain. Miss Georgina Wynter as Olivia was quite equal to the demands made upon her in this trying part, and gained loud applause for her pathetic acting in the last scene; Mrs. C. E. Matthews was admirable as Mrs. Primrose; Miss Violet Macaree was a charming Sophia; Mr. T. G. Westland was amusing as Moses Primrose; Mr. Arthur Rose made a fine Squire Thornhill; and as Mr. Burchell, Mr. David Beattie gave full effect to the part. The other plays staged during the week are The Lady of Lyons and The Sleigh Bells, in which Mr. Hoggan-Armadale gives his impressive representation of Matthias.

SPA THEATRE.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. Henry Hague.—The summer theatrical season was opened here by Mr. James Welch and company, who appeared in Punctured, Judged by Appearances, and The Man in the Street, in which Mr. Welch gave his polished performance of a London street musician with wonderfully realistic effect.

ROYAL PRINCE'S PARADE.—Manager, Mr. Charles Palmer.—The Flockton-Foster combination continue their attractive programmes in the Grand Pavilion, and the Dominion Animated Picture Company, under Mr. Emmerson's direction, are showing a new series of pictures this week. Herr Sigmund Winternitz's fine orchestra render some first-class programmes; the vocalist this week being Mr. Anderson Nicol, who possesses a fine tenor voice of excellent compass, and his songs are delightfully rendered.

NEW SPA AND GARDENS.—Manager and Secretary, Mr. Henry Hague.—Mr. Sydney James's Strolling Players have an additional attraction this week, in the clever little child artist Miss Dot Arnold, whose clever dancing is delighting the visitors. The Marvellous Howards, in their clever mind-reading turn, are very mystifying. The vocalists this week at Herr S. Wurm's concerts under the Glass Dome are Mr. Harrison Brockbank, a pleasing baritone, and Mme. Conly, the Australian prima donna, whose fine vocalism has made her a great favourite with the Spa audiences.

THE PALACE.—Manager, Mr. A. Hubner.—Charles Grantley, comedian; the Shamrocks, duettists and dancers; Dene and Dawson, comedy sketch artists; Miss Lillie Coleman, vocalist; and the Lynches, in illustrated songs, make up a good programme; and the animated pictures are always well received.

SUMMER GARDENS. — Lessees, Messrs. Beanland, Bath, and Danton; Manager, Mr. Charles Beanland. —The great attraction this week is a juvenile beauty show, and the pierrots are giving one of the old-fashioned Ethiopian entertainments, which takes remarkably well with the visitors to this popular resort.

BRIGHTON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. Cecil Beryl; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Harcourt M. Beryl.—Mr. George Musgrove's company opened here on Monday with The Prince of Pilsen, which was admirably staged and dressed. Mr. J. B. Fox, as Carl Otto, displayed pleasing vocalisation; Miss Millicent Marsden, as Mrs. Madison Crocker, and Mr. G. Villiers Arnold, as Lieut. Tom Wagner, sang themselves into great favour; while dainty Miss Isa Bowman was distinctly effective as Nellie Wagner; Mr. Martin Adeson gave a very droll and clever impersonation of Hans Wagner; Miss Nell Emerald made a vivacious Sidonie; Mr. Lawrence Wensley, as the Earl of Shrimpton, was entertaining; and praiseworthy support was given by Miss Adele Roze and Mr. Alfred Selby. The choruses were well sung, the dancing proved very enjoyable; and the duties of conductor were in the hands of Mr. Thos. M. Tunbridge.

GRAND THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter.—Mr. G. Carlton Wallace's company is here this week with The Love that Women Desire. Mr. Fred Lloyd submits a capital portrayal of Philip Carnaby; Mr. Charles Herberte is forcible and convincing as the villainous Squire Abingdon, whose son, Richard Abingdon, and daughter, Madge, are admirably enacted by Mr. Alfred Grenville and Miss Alice N. Livesey respectively; Mr. Hugh Wallace's Rev. Arthur Gathorne, and Mr. G. Carlton Wallace's Frank Hardy are well played; while much amusement is afforded by Mr. John Hignett as Denis O'Rourke, Miss Helen Richmond as Pattie Swift, and Mr. J. W. Wilkinson as P.C. Sowerby.

ALHAMBRA.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. L. Graydon; General-Manager, Mr. Ernest Lepard.—There is a capital company here this week. Clarke and Hamilton's American musical comedy team submit a delightful entertainment; Ella Retford is a charming comedienne and dancer; the Sisters Vincent are smart duettists and dancers; Marco, the youthful magician and illusionist, is well received; Claude Ginnett and his capable combination are very entertaining in Rejected Remounts; Daisy Mayer, the "Yankee girl," sings with great success; Lomas is clever in his aerial speciality on the rope and perch; and the Alhambrascope pictures are very interesting.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford and Smith; Managing-Director, Mr. Thomas Barrasford.—An attractive programme is presented here this week. The Creo Brothers, comedy acrobats, are clever performers; Stewart and Morgan are very successful in their vocal speciality; Tod Lowen, "that funny fellow," contributes some humorous songs; Venie Clements gives a series of imitations in good style, her mimicry of a baby singing being decidedly effective; Cyril Carle, actor vocalist, is especially successful in the song-scena, Dreams; Albert Wyndham and company are warmly applauded for their Shakespearian episode, Prince Arthur; or, the Days of King John; Emma Don and company, in a musical mélange, The Prodigal Son; Maud Trenton, a pleasing comedienne, and T. E. Finglas, coon delineator, also merit praise; and the Barrascope pictures are very amusing. Little Tich, who was prevented by indisposition from appearing until Wednesday, is a powerful attraction, and wins enthusiastic applause for his amusing songs, humorous patter, and clever long boot dancing.

WEST PIER.—Secretary and Entertainment-Manager, Mr. A. D. Norman.—Mr. Leigh Lovel and company are here this week with The Duke of Killicrankie. In the title rôle, Mr. F. Guy S. Cary is highly successful; Miss Octavia Kenmore makes a charming and winsome Lady Henrietta Addison; Mr. Lovel gives an admirable enactment of Mr. Henry Pitt Welby, M.P.; Miss Celia Gordon's Mrs. Mulholland, Miss Alice Heathcote's Countess of Pangbourne, and Mr. F. Stuart-Wilson's Alexander McBayne are effectively played.

NEW PALACE PIER THEATRE.—Miss Katie Johnson, Mr. Frank G. Bayly and company opened here on Monday with Billy's Little Love Affair. Miss Katie Johnson gave a very delightful impersonation of Wilhelmina Marr ("Billy"); and Mr. Frank G. Bailey was completely successful as Jack Frere; Miss Clara Nicholls was a capital Mrs. Jim Greaves; Miss Gladys Bartle Frere made a pleasing Lady Duncan; while Mr. Orlando Barnett's Jim Greaves, and Mr. W. Lemmon Warde's Sir Harry Harmon were good protrayals.

AQUARIUM.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. J. J. Sallmayer; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry de Groot.—The Modoc Minstrels are here this week, and sustain their varied and interesting programme in good style. Humorous and sentimental songs are capitally rendered; and the military item, The Modoc Brigade, the absurdity, The Pointsman; or, the Midnight Express, and turns by Harry Fritz, Dorothy McLaughlin, George Duval, and the Caro Comedy Trio are warmly appreciated.

BRISTOL.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Ernest Carpenter; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. F. Crowe.—An attractive drama, The Woman Who Gambles, is well staged here, and it is effectively performed by Mr. Morton Powell's company. In the leading part of Countess Natalie Steinbach, Miss Gertrude Hunt has full scope for her talents in depicting the various and changing moods of the fascinating Countess, and the result is a very fine and powerful performance. Mr. James Duncan is earnest and expressive as Count Otto Steinbach; Miss Florrie Halton displays much ability as Cora Gouldhart; and the Misses Rhoda Clighton, Florrie Hall, and Brenda May do well as Stella Melaoff, Zila Zeyelda, and Zanette respectively. Mr. Horatio Sinclair works conscientiously in the unpopular part of Baron Cratzlaw; and Mr. Reginald Fox presents a fine and convincing exposition of Lieut. Karl Czarteryski. The cast is a fairly long one, all the parts of lesser importance being carefully taken.

PALACE.—Resident-Manager, Mr. Horace Livermore; Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. F. V. Welchman.—Hal Godfrey, American comedian, heads the bill, with his comical sketch, A Very Bad Boy; the Three Prestons amuse with their absurdity, The Liftman's Rise; Carl Lynn is a clever mimic of animals, &c.; the Albano Troupe give a pleasing musical performance; Carl Rosine excels in feats of legerdemain; the Donatos, one-legged acrobats, are exceptionally smart; Pete and Juno, coloured comedians, please with their novelty. "Dancing to Win"; and the Two Neros score with a comedy acrobatic act. The performance concludes with animated pictures.

EMPIRE. — Proprietor, Mr. B. Pearce Lucas; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sid Macaire.—Peter Gotz, wrestler, occupies the leading position on the programme, and bouts are arranged for each performance, with local amateurs and others of the wrestling fraternity. Mlle. Von Etta presents a pretty and interesting turn, consisting of illusions, conjuring, dances, and impersonations, all being well done and much appreciated by all parts of the house; Linda Wasey, comedienne, has some good songs, her style being pleasing and refined; the Elvio Comedy Trio amuse with their absurdity, Those Troublesome Slaveys; Jenny Reeve, comedienne, does a successful turn; Grey and Parry, acrobats, obtain applause; and the same may be said of Mark Leslie, coon comedian and dancer. The performance concludes with animated pictures.

BROUGHTON.—VICTORIA, LTD.—Manager and Licensee, Mr. J. Fred Watson.—The Light That Failed, founded on Rudyard Kipling's novel, was much enjoyed on Monday by a large house. Mr. Harold V. Neilson appearing as Dick Helmar and Miss Dorothy Milne as Maisie. This was followed by the farcical comedy His Last Legs, with Felix O'Callaghan most amusingly presented by Mr. Arthur Stirling. Miss Dorothy Milne is a charming Julia. Charles Rivers is well played by Mr. Bellender Clarke, and Mr. Rivers presents a good study by Mr. John Detliv. Miss M. Ramney as Mrs. Montague and Miss Winifred Clarke as Mrs. Berks also do well.

BURNLEY.—EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. W. C. Horner.—The New York Comedy Four are at the top of the bill here this week, and, as usual, their able singing interspersed with quaint humour, is received with much appreciation. Maidie Scott, comedienne, sings her songs in a charming manner; the Schiavonis Troupe are expert acrobats, and are well applauded for their smart tricks; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Shelley are cordially received for their extravaganza Married; and The Falcons give a clever turn of hand balancing. Lade Henderson is an able vocalist, as also are Lambert and Hands, whose efforts are fully recognised. The Wedburns cause a great deal of laughter with their smart patter, and Wee Jessie, with song and dancer proves an acceptable turn.

BURY (LANCS.).—THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Sons; General-Manager, Mr. Broadhead, jun.—A number of good turns here include the Vere Brothers, gymnasts; George Young, a blind collier boy, who is a good musician; a sketch of "fair" life, entitled Mystery Fair; the Three Panamas, acrobats; Ranji Sinji and Valeria, magicians; George Edney, actor vocalist; May Zant and her juveniles; J. C. Bailey, comedian; and the usual bioscope pictures.

CARDIFF.—KING'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Samuel James; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. C. Duncan.—The attractive drama, The Curate, is the pièce de résistance this week, capitally presented by Miss Hettie Jeffries' company. Miss Jeffries appears in the rôle of Dick, the trumpeter, and plays throughout with much vigour; Miss Winifred Stuart, as the Russian adventuress, gives an excellent portrayal, this charming lady's handsome and striking presence making her delineation a conspicuous success. Mr. Robert Gilbert, as the Rev. John Audley, is impressive; and Mr. Whitmore Ledger, in his interpretation of Gilbert Westwood, acquits himself creditably. Mr. Sydney Claydon, as Simon Muggs; Mr. Frank Stuart, as Sergeant Snipe; and Miss Agnes D'Aragon, as Mrs. Muggs, are valuable acquisitions to the cast; while Miss Mabel Durham, in her embodiment of Mabel Verner, proves herself to be a capable artist.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll. —The clever exponent of ju-jitsu, Raku, heads the bill here, and, with the assistance of Miss Moto, gives a most entertaining exhibition of the art. O'Gust, the master mimic, is as amusing as ever; Carlton, the quaint jester, gives his clever card manipulation with success, and creates much merriment; Joseph Adelmann is applauded in appreciation of his marvellous xylophone playing; and Prof. Therese's comedy hypnotism is a novel turn. Other contributors to the evening's amusement are Barnard's Mannikins; the Olive Trio, girl singers and dancers; Fred Lincoln, a smart comedian; the Bros. Durant, "the airship kings"; and the interesting Bioscope.

CARLISLE.—THE PALACE.—Proprietors, The Palace Theatre, Carlisle, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Signor Pino Pepi; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. E. Nicholls.—The programme this week is quite up to the excellent average maintained by the enterprising managing-director, and crowded houses are the rule. Gustave Fasola, the Indian fakir and wonder-worker, who tops the bill, gives an entertainment which is as puzzling as it is marvellous; the Sisters Redfern are pleasing vocalists, dancers, and banjoists; Tony Iveson, who is making his first appearance here, is already a big draw as a humorist, vocalist, and pianist; Mezzetti and Mora give a surprising and clever exhibition of comedy bar work; and Mlle. De Rose, the possessor of a wonderful baritone voice, scores an immediate success. The Athlones, in classical poses are interesting, and distinctly original in their business; the Pepiscope, with new pctures, is as popular as ever.

CHATHAM.—THE GAIETY THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor, Capt. H. E. Davis; Manager, Mr. Frank E. Donne.—Mlle. De Dio continues to score here, this week's leading item being entitled The Birth of a Pearl; the musical act given by the Carina Sisters is much above the average; Chas. Austin creates roars of laughter by his comicalities; Kitts and Windrum are again to the fore with The Entr'acte; while Belle Harcourt, comedienne; Pueblo and Cropp, in coon songs and sand dancing; and Rosie Reval, serio, also appear; and the Edisonograph exhibits fresh pictures.

BARNARD'S PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. L. B. Barnard.—Coram, the ventriloquist; and Sam Mayo, the immobile comedian, share the honours this week. Lacey's Erascope has some capital pictures; while the other variety turns include May Prichard, comedienne; Simosa San, in her juggling and balancing act; the Clarion Trio of comedy artists and dancers; Harry Luck, comedian; and the Sisters Selwyn, duettists and dancers.

CLACTON-ON-SEA. — PALACE-BY-THE-SEA. — Proprietor, Mr. Hy. Ford; Manager, Mr. Edgar Curtis.—The bill is a purely variety one this week. Marguerite Lonsdale is a dainty comedienne; and Eugene and Willie, head and hand balancers, are extremely smart; Ferris and Farnley, cross-talk comedians, provide an amusing turn; Miss Dolly Golden, the clever young dancer, is greatly appreciated; the Bros. Egbert provide the principal turn of the evening with their mirth-provoking Hurry Up, Walter act; Harry Walters, comedian, sings a good song; and the Octoroons, Grant and Grant, give a capital show. Ruffell's Bioscope has some excellent films. The Palace Pierrotts, now consisting of Messrs. Edgar Curtis and Edgar Berte and Misses Daisy Kersey and Maud Willey, give a most enjoyable entertainment in the grounds every afternoon and evening.

WESTCLIFFE GARDENS. — Messrs. Graham, Russell, and Bentley are this week assisted by Miss Alice Branstein, a great favourite here; Mr. Owen Clark, conjurer and entertainer; Mr. Walter Clyde, vocalist; and Mr. Wilfrid Alderton, silver handbell soloist.

OPERETTA HOUSE. — Lessee, Mr. C. Macdona; Manager, Mr. T. H. Rhodes.—The first three days of the week Mr. Ch. Verney's company appeared in Ernest Martin and Fewlass Llewellyn's drama, The Coal King. Miss Olive Lloyd and Mr. Alec Alexander, in the juvenile leads, played their parts with power and sympathy; Mr. Robin Shields made a fine aristocratic old gentleman; and Mr. Angus Alexander, in the heavy part, showed to great advantage. Mr. Philip Beaufoy was good in the character of a religiously-inclined miner; and Mr. Tod Squires, in the comedy part, was clever. Miss Alice Myles, as chambermaid, acted well; and Messrs. A. J. Williams, H. Wellford, Percy Warren, Tom Beverley, F. Barnet, with Miss Florence Mitchell, all played their respective rôles with ability. On Thursday and Friday Mr. E. Lockwood's company was seen to advantage in Sergeant Brue.

PIER PAVILION.—Messrs. Ashton have a good company of variety artists here. Miss Ethelle Vibert, contralto; and Miss Stella Schumann, soprano, have both good voices, and sing their songs well. Mlle. Haydee, with her electric Mannikin Theatre, is highly entertaining; and Mr. John Elliott is a smart humorist; Mr. W. P. Dempsey is a clever comedian; and Miss Ruby Bijou an excellent dancer. Animated pictures bring to a conclusion a good show.

At the Council Bandstand concerts, Mr. Frank Crawford, the well-known humorist, has been drawing big crowds; Mr Vic Verney is an extremely clever whistler; and Miss Bessie Allayne sings charmingly.

Mr. Claude North's ventriloquial and conjuring show on the foreshore, and the Yorkshire Pierrots behind Riggs' Retreat, have been doing excellent business.

COLCHESTER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Charles Macdona; Resident-Manager, Mr. F. C. Upton.—This house opened on Thursday with the powerful drama, The Coal King.

HIPPODROME. — Joint-Proprietors, Mr. Fredk. Mouillot and Mr. Walter de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece.—The Mannon Troupe, in A Motor-Bus Outing, head this week's bill; the Four Hearnes present a very clever and interesting acrobatic comedy act, for which they are much applauded; the Sisters Cora, well-known with touring pantomimes in Colchester, give their latest successes, and are well received; Walter Wallis, comedian; Fred Villers, vocalist; and Agnes Hanson, comedienne and dancer, complete the programme

COVENTRY.—OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietor, Mr. Wm. Bennett.—Mr. Harry Foxwell's company, who a fortnight ago produced An Abandoned Woman at the above house, is appearing again in the sensational piece entitled Shadows of a Great City. Tom Cooper was capitally portrayed by Mr. M. Minster, ably supported by Mrs. Harry Foxwell in the dual rôle of Annie Standish and her daughter Nellie Standish; Miss Georgette Thierry was seen to advantage as Biddy Roonan, an Irish girl. Other characters were suitably represented by Mrs. Will Bernard (George Benson), Mr. J. Abbott (Arkwright, a detective), Mr. D'Arcy Kelway (Jim Farren), Mr. Harry Foxwell (Abe Nathans), Mr. J. Haildin (Crouch), Mr. Pat Quinn (Warder), and Miss Nellie Gray (Mrs. Higgins).

CREWE.—LYCEUM THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry Taylor.—This theatre was reopened on Monday by the Crewe Dramatic and Comedy Company, in A Lion's Heart, by Arthur Shirley. The local amateurs portrayed in excellent style the various rôles assigned to them.

CROMER. — TOWN HALL THEATRE. — Lessees, Messrs. Baring Bros.; Manager, Mr. C. H. L. Locke.—The early part of the week saw the stage here occupied by Mr. Charles Windermere's company in Facing the Music. Mr. Windermere himself as John Smith is very clever, and he is supported by a strong cast, which includes Mr. Norris Matthews as the Rev. John Smith; Mr. Wentworth Fane as Dick Desmond; Mr. Graham Morrison as Col. Duncan; Mr. Henry Nelson as Sergt. Duffel; Miss Clare Manifield, Mabel, the curate's wife; Miss Joe Davis, Nora, the other Mr. Smith's wife; Miss Phyllis Leslie, Miss Fotheringay; and Miss Evelyn Shelly as Mrs. Ponting. The piece is well staged and well played.

THE PIER.—On Saturday evening a special entertainment was given in the Pier Pavilion by Mr. Barclay Gammon, and the reception accorded him proved the appreciation with which his clever humorous sketches and selections are received. The vocalist this week is Miss Margaret Cooper, who is earning golden opinions from the large audiences. Signor Calamani and the Royal Italian Band still continue to keep up the high standard they have always shown. On Wednesday evening the ever-popular Serenaders gave one of their unique entertainments.

RUST'S LAWN. — The Middies and Maids are steadily growing in popularity, and both their afternoon and evening concerts are crowded. Mr. Arthur Randal, who last week was suffering from a cold, has quite recovered, and is able once more to take the lead. Miss Nellie Taner and Miss Doris Lind, too, are greatly appreciated. The former takes the laurel, but the latter's charming manner never fails to captivate. Mr. Arthur Mervyn, the tenor, is never tiring; and Mr. Walter Forder's ability is clearly shown in his sketches and monologues. Mr. Bert Williams is the favourite undoubtedly, and is rarely allowed to retire without a treble encore; nor must Mr. Hadyn Parker, the accompanist, be forgotten, for he deserves a great deal of commendation.

CROYDON.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Samuel James; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Herrick.—Mr. Robert Perris's company in A Fight for Millions, is here this week. Mr. John C. Carlyle is excellent as Tom Manley; Mr. P. Geo. Beresford makes a favourable impression as Hudson Rivers; Mr. Robert Perris gives a fine impersonation of Richard Dudley; Mr. Harry Howe ably represents Millie Neverwork; Mr. Karl H. Edwards cleverly performs the part of Solomon Moses; Mr. Gus Harding is well placed as John Leveridge; Mr. Nicholas Conway is good as Harold Hobbs; and Mr. Geo. Hodges is particularly able in the rôle of Robert Mackenzie. Miss Eva Purcell as Pearl Rivers is commendable; Miss Audrey Manning is successful as Mrs. Hudson; Miss Elma C. Turner appears to advantage in her clever portrayal of Helen Dudley; Miss Audrey Herland is charming as Little Madge; and Miss Lottie Pearce as Betty displays talent.

EMPIRE PALACE OF VARIETIES. — Proprietor, Mr. Walter Gibbons; Manager, Mr. Eustace H. Jay.—Will Evans is the centre of attraction here this week in the amusing spectacular act, The Revival of the Ballet. Mrs. Oscar Luck and company deserve praise; Rose Hamilton is well received; Harry Champion is a big success; the Stella Troupe are excellent dancers and vocalists; Ruby Emerson is a neat comedienne; C. Gordon's acrobatic dogs give a marvellous show; the Sisters Hall are clever vocalists; and the Manhattan Comedy Four are exceptionally humorous vocalists, and complete a good programme.

DARLINGTON.—THEATRE ROYAL AND HIPPODROME.—Licensee and Manager, Mr. James Bell.—James de Voye, with his educated horse Billy, is creating great interest here; the Lovelaces, American song illustrators, give a very refined performance; Florence Deighton, double-voiced vocalist, is excellent; Zavan, lamp-postman, is very funny; the Sivronis, burlesque comedy artists, are clever with their songs and dancing; and Marie de Paso does marvels of quick clay-modelling. The Bellograph concludes the entertainment with two good pictures, "Life of a New York Policeman" and "The Lost Eye-Glasses."

DARWEN.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Lessee, Mr. A. M. Loader; Acting-Manager, Mr. F. J. Robinson.—After having been closed for several weeks, the above house was reopened on Monday by Mr. George Stephenson's company in The Night of the Party. Mr. Sebastian Smith as Mr. Crosbie keeps the house in roars of laughter; Mr. E. Patrick is also funny as Lord Dalston's footman; Mr. Douglas Munro excels himself as Flambert; Mr. Ernest Rivarz's depiction of Mr. Bogie is very effective; Mr. Frank H. Denton is excellent in the part of Frank Frayne; the rôle of Lady Hampshire is in the capable hands of Miss Evelyn Howard; Pauline is portrayed by Miss Maud Linden, who suits the part admirably; Miss Gertrude Manners as Baby Hastings, Miss Stanley Ronalds as Gipsy Vandeller, and Miss Lena Graham as Mrs. Young, all help materially towards the undoubted success of the production.

DEWSBURY. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessees, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. J. H. Asquith.—A variety company has supplied a satisfying programme here this week. Will T. Burgess and company present with excellent histrionic effect the dramatic episode, Found Faithful. Mr. W. T. Burgess plays with much powerful realism the part of Walter Lee, the exconvict; and other rôles are ably filled by Messrs. H. Shaw, W. F. Rogers, &c. Miss Cissy Gradon elicits warm commendation by her vocal work; amusement is plentifully forthcoming from Grin and Bearitt, described as "the quarrelsome couple," a title they do their utmost to sustain; the tasteful designs torn out of ordinary wallpaper by Mint and Mart whilst indulging in a running commentary of crosstalk, yield a meritorious performance which is novel; Arthur Saxon, the heavyweight lifter, displays his remarkable strength in various strenuous exploits; Alec Alexander, actor-vocalist, gives great satisfaction, his delineation of pathetic characters being most effective; Wambo proves as expert a trick cyclist as he is amusing in make-up as a tramp; and Romulus Bros. appear in an artistic statuary act.

DOUGLAS.—GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Alfred Hemming; Acting-Manager, Mr. T. R. Wood.—Mr. Frank Curzon's company opened in The White Chrysanthemum at the Grand Theatre on Monday evening to a good house. The scenery and appointments were admirable, and the interpreters artistically excellent. Miss Gladys Elvey is charming as Sybyl Cunningham; she has a fine voice, and makes the most of it. Miss Kate Vesy, a cultivated dancer, makes Cornelia Vanderdecken particularly up to date; Mr. W. H. Rawlins displays a keen sense of humour as Admiral Sir Horatio Armitage, K.C.B.; Mr. F. Pope Stamper is a breezy naval boy as Lieutenant Reginald Armitage; Mr. Horace Mills' impersonation of Chippendale Bennett is surpassingly clever; Mr. Harry Paulton, jun., excites uproarious laughter by his impersonation of Private Perks; the Chinaman of Mr. O. E. Lennon is an amusing study from nature.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Assistant-Manager, Mr. George Gray.—The production of Leah Kleschna by Mr. Harry Armitage's company has taken Douglas by storm, the Gaiety Theatre being filled with the most enthusiastic audiences. The curtain, at the end of the third act, was raised seven times on the first night. Miss Bessie Rignold's Leah is a revelation of fine dramatic power and artistic skill; Mr. Paul Belmore's Kleschna is a marvellous performance; Mr. Hamilton Deane as Raoul has a most ungrateful character to depict, but his success is unmistakable; Mr. Campbell Goldsmid as Schram also gave a remarkable impersonation. Other characters are well played by Mr. W. F. Grant, Miss Violet Thorold, Miss Ethel Russell, and Miss Helen Belgrave. The scenery and appointments were all that could be desired, and the Gaiety management have secured the hit of the Douglas season up to now.

THE PALACE AND OPERA HOUSE.—Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Manager and Secretary, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Arthur Brittain.—The Palace has been completely filled with enthusiastic audiences, delighted with the programme put before them. Mr. Tom Edwards is a ventriloquist who astonishes; Mr. Fred Sinclair is an agreeable light comedian; Miss Gracie Whiteford possesses comedy gifts of a high order, and their sketch, Getting Even, agrees with the taste of the public; Mr. Alf Gibson is a quaint comedian; and Misses Florence and Rose Showell, charming vocalists. The Four Juggling Giraldos present a graceful act; Lotto, Lillo, and Otto still give a performance which has an irresistible fascination; Vernon's Bioscope is up to date.

DERBY CASTLE.—Proprietors, The Palace and Derby Castle, Ltd.; Secretary and Manager, Mr. Charles Fox, jun.; Assistant-Manager, Mr. A. C. Kelly.—Miss Vesta Tilley is at Derby Castle, and crowds are turned away nightly. The other turns, which include Mme. la Blanch, Carlos Minard, the Sisters Gerette, C. R. Whittle, the Les Cleos, and the Anartos, are all clever. Dancing is indulged in to the witching strains of Harry Wood's orchestra. In addition, the side shows are excellent.

THE HIPPODROME. — Sole Manager and Director, Mr. F. J. Connor.—The Hippodrome is crowded nightly, as the result of a most interesting programme. The Marconis do wonderful things by means of electricity; Mozzetto is a dexterous juggler who submits a clever interlude; Du Callion manipulates an ordinary ladder in a novel manner; Mons. Eugene Toote and Mlle. Lizzie Rowland give a charming equestrian interlude; the Cecilas submit a pleasing musical scene; Captain Maximilian Gruber continues his previous successful record with his performing goat and Shetlands; a new turn, the Sisters Gironde, makes a stir; and a pair of performing ponies, trained by Mr. W. Tudor, give a pleasing show; the Bouncing Dillons are first-rate comedy gymnasts, and in connection with this turn competitions are introduced which have become very popular.

MR. FREDERICK BUXTON'S PIERROTS AND TEA VILLAGE, on the Central Promenade, attract large audiences. Every member of his troupe is an artist of capacity. Their songs are well chosen, their sketches smart, and their concerted music well rendered.

MR. CHARLES DARE'S MINSTRELS, on the Head, cause many thousands to frequent that delightful spot and listen to their pleasing burnt-cork comicalities. Mr. Dare's company work hard, and give the public a clean, wholesome show.

MR. BENSON'S PIERROTS, on the Promenade Bandstand, have an enormous following. The artists know the requirements of their patrons, and satisfy them, and the great success they obtain is well deserved.

MR. CHARLES ELDERTON is doing remarkably well at the New Empire, with two houses nightly, and the Toreador Minstrels on Onchan Head have become one of the features of Douglas.

DOVER.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietors, The Dover

brisk and animated throughout. Halma, an accomplished juggler, goes through his remarkable feats with ease and grace; Dolly Robson, the remarkable child vocalist, completely brings down the house; the musical turn of Sig. Bandoni is very enjoyable; while the Babes in the Wood pantomime enacted by Prof. Glennie's marionettes is the cause of much laughter. Belford and Mars contribute a very enjoyable and novel vocal comedy act, and the Bros. Robson score in song and dance. The Sisters Poole, duettists and dancers; Bella Skene, a dashing burlesque actress; and Nellie Langtry, a very fine ballad vocalist, have many admirers.

GAIETY THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. R. A. P. Williams.—The programme this week simply sparkles with humour, and on Monday evening two packed houses thoroughly enjoyed the entertainment. Topping the bill is an amusing burlesque, in which a number of well-known local comedians take part; another very funny sketch, entitled The Fortune Teller, created much merriment; Marcus Boyle, character comedian, has some capital songs on tap, and has to oblige with an encore; G. W. Walker, a prime favourite here, is also well received; Cora Magda, in her daring gymnastic act, and Percy Mage, female impersonator, are retained from last week, and go well; Ada Whitton and Connie Pulsford contribute pleasing items, while the comicalities of Frank Whiteley are much enjoyed. The Bioscope, with all the latest films, completes a capital entertainment.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Percival.—The Century Photo Company are located here this week with an attractive and completely new series of animated pictures. In addition to the pictures, Maggie Stewart, Edward Neville, and Jack Wallace contribute pleasing "turns."

EASTBOURNE.—DEVONSHIRE PARK THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. A. Standen-Triggs.—Mr. Patrick Kirwan's company is appearing here for three performances in The Merry Wives of Windsor. The play is well dressed, and the bright and clever ladies are conspicuously successful. Miss Barbara Guthrie is a delightfully mischievous and charming Mrs. Ford; Miss Elizabeth Holt is a bright and interesting Mrs. Page; Miss Davies Webster is a very pleasing Dame Quickly; and good service is done by Miss Irene Arden as Anne Page. Mr. Patrick Kirwan, excellently made up, is a most amusing Falstaff; Mr. George P. Hawtrey gives a quietly effective and polished performance as Justice Shallow; Mr. Gerald Venning provokes many laughs as Slender; and Mr. Gerald Saffery is a distinct and capable Mr. Ford. Mr. Douglas Allington is a particularly appropriate Mr. Page; Dr. Caius is forcefully played by Mr. J. M. Napper; Pistol, Nym, and Bardolph are capitally enacted by Mr. Chris. Walker, Mr. V. T. Ranney, and Mr. John Cummings; and Miss Jessie Stanton is a picturesque Robin. Members of Messrs. Bellow and Stock's choir sing very prettily and effectively. For the last three evenings of the week the new comedy, Three Blind Mice, was announced.

THE PIER PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. George Hayes.—Miss Ada Blanche and Mr. Lionel Rignold's company is appearing here in What the Butler Saw. Mr. Lionel Rignold as Pink, the butler, has a part which suits him admirably, and he is quite the central figure as a laughter-maker. Mr. Reddick Anderson is a handsome and attractive Sir Charles Foden, Mr. Charles Fawcett a humorous Jack Barrington, Mr. George Ascott a vigorous General Dunlop, Mr. H. H. Rignold an excellent Abraham Weinstein, Mr. Roy Eyford a distinctive and capital Professor Shale, and Messrs. Frank Kingsley, Alec. Alves, and P. Williams give meritorious help. Miss Ada Blanche's bright and cheerful work is at once interesting and successful in the rôle of Mrs. Barrington; Miss Marie Daltra is an imposing and clever Miss Foden; and Miss Jenny Wigney is a restrained and effective Nora. During the latter part of the week Mr. Charles MacDona's company is billed to appear in Mr. Hopkinson. Twice daily the St. Louis animated pictures are being shown here.

THE HIPPODROME.—Managing-Director, Mr. Sidney W. Winter; General-Manager, Mr. Harry Day; Resident-Manager, Mr. Walter Smith.—At the top of the bill is Mr. Arthur Rigby, who again keeps the house in roars of laughter with "Woman's Rights" and "The March of the Married Men." Miss Queenie Lawrence is soon in favour with the audience with her well-rendered selections. Mr. Johnny Danvers sings clever songs in his well-known funny way, and dances in a light and smart manner; Mr. Tom Parker is a successful comedian and nimble dancer; Mr. Milner Verren as a tenor vocalist contributes one of the very successful items; Mr. Paul Courtney and company appear in a cleverly-written sketch, The Doctor; Messrs. Stevens and Rennior are a couple of singers, patterers, and dancers who amuse the audience; and Miss Maudie Ford dances and sings with effect.

EDINBURGH.—ROYAL LYCEUM THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Howard and Wyndham, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Geo. T. Minshull.—The annual visits of Mr. Edmund Tearle and his company have for many years been among the interesting events of the summer theatrical season. His repertory for the current week at the Lyceum Theatre includes the two evergreen dramas Jeanie Deans and East Lynne, and the popular Three Musketeers. The first-named was presented with marked success on Monday evening, Miss Kate Clinton appearing in her old rôle of Jeanie, which she plays with much pathos and emotional power, Mr. Tearle contenting himself with the part of counsel for the defence, whose speech he delivers in fine, impressive style. As Madge Wildfire Miss Esther Tearle displays undoubted ability; Miss Mary Campbell is a sympathetic Effie; and Miss Clare Armitage gives a good character sketch of old Margery Murdockson. The outstanding rôle of the Laird of Dumbiedykes is in the safe hands of Mr. J. T. Macmillan, who keeps the audience in good humour; and good acting distinguishes the rendering of the parts of the Duke of Argyle and David Deans by Mr. Ernest Lodge and Mr. J. Cook Hinton. The rest of the long cast is adequately filled, and the plays are mounted with care and completeness.

THE GRAND THEATRE. — Manager, Mr. Harry Fischer.—Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company is appearing here this week in an adaptation of East Lynne. Mr. Alfred Beaumont is a manly representative of Archibald Carlyle, and the Francis Levison of Mr. Eric Mayne is a striking picture of a polished villain. Mr. C. C. Grattan acts in admirable comedy style as Justice Hare, and is loudly applauded; Mr. Alfred Tate keeps the audience in roars of laughter by his clever farcical business as Bullock, the constable; and an excellent and amusing study of Lawyer Dill is given by Mr. Cyril Hayward. Mr. Spencer Goodwin's aristocratic Lord Mountsevern and Mr. E. Massingham's quiet, effective portrayal of Richard are both good. Miss Julia Kennerd moves the sympathies of the audience by her powerful and touching rendering of the dual rôle of Lady Isabel and Madame Vine; Miss Ethel Saville is an attractive Barbara Hare; Miss Ethel Hardacre is distinctly entertaining as Miss Cornelia Carlyle; and Miss Jessie Bayes is an interesting, pretty Willie. Joyce and Suzanne are capably filled by Miss Ida Heron and Miss Emily Frith.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting - Manager, Mr. C. Finch-Hatton.—A capital programme is provided here this week. The chief attraction is Moses and Sons, played by Mr. Fred Karno's company, which is received with deserved enthusiasm. The acting of Mr. Fred Kitchen is an outstanding feature of the piece. Miss Marie Reeve contributes several dainty songs and dances, which are greatly appreciated. The Norman Leonard Trio give an interesting musical act, The Itinerant. Starr and Leslie approve themselves to be excellent Indian club manipulators; Die Obersteiners supply a clever vocal, instrumental, and dancing turn; and the Russian Imperial troupe in their exhilarating native songs and dances; Brown and Robinson, admirable vocalists and the Bioscope complete the programme.

FALKIRK. — THE GRAND THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE reopens on Monday with Miss Alice Chapin's company in the musical farce A Knight Errant, followed by A Pantomime Rehearsal. During the holidays the theatre has been entirely repainted and decorated, and the electric light installation has been extended in the front of the house.

FOLKESTONE.—PLEASURE GARDENS THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. H. W. Rowland.—Messrs. E. Lockwood's and R. Crossman's company in Sergeant Brue is the attraction here this week. Mr. E. Russell, in the title rôle, plays in an easy and capable manner, and causes much laughter; Mr. E. Percy Rogers, as Michael Brue, is an old favourite; Miss Kitty Dale acts with vivacity and charm as Aurora Brue, and scores a success with her numerous songs; Miss Constance Berkeley is a clever Daisy; Miss Aileen Macdonald, as Mabel Widgett, makes the most of a rather small part; Mr. Arthur Stroud, as General Treherne, is all that could be desired; Mr. Crank is in the safe hands of Mr. Henry Chichester; too much praise cannot be bestowed on Mr. T. A. Shale for his admirable embodiment of Crookie Scrubbs; and Miss Lily Lingard, as Lady Bickenhall, is both smart and clever, her singing being especially admired.

VICTORIA PIER.—Lessees, Messrs. Keith Prowse and Co., Ltd.—The Sahots are engaged here for another week; Miss Stroud Wilson makes a welcome reappearance; Mr. Harry Ivimey meets with unstinted approbation; Miss Gwenllian Lewis renders her songs in brilliant style; the Misses Doris and Aileen Woods (the New Zealand Twins) are particularly smart; Mr. Harry Randall paid a flying visit on Wednesday; the Walturdaw Bioscope shows some good pictures; and Herr Franz Meisel's programmes at the concerts are greatly enjoyed by large audiences.

LEAS PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. A. Sitter.—Miss Marie Stiven's singing evokes loud applause; Mr. Nelson Hardy, ventriloquist, is a great favourite; the Blue Salon Band contribute some enjoyable music, and up-to-date pictures are shown.

GATESHEAD.—KING'S THEATRE.—Lessee, Mr. M. S. Hammond; General-Manager, Mr. Joe May.—Heading a powerful programme here this week are the Lowenwirth Bros., Hebrew comedians, who are certainly great laughter-makers. The Pender Troupe present a ludicrous farce bearing the title Hands Up; the troupe also present a stilt-walking exhibition which is appreciated. A sculptor of exceptional ability and marvellous dexterity is Gallando, who receives much well-merited applause; Clarke's Nippers, in their speciality act, which includes club-swinging, ball-punching, dancing, and boxing, are huge favourites; Fred Cullane's comedy trio are seen to much advantage in a comedietta named The Lady's School; Les Rallis have a clever acrobatic act, into which many funny items are introduced; the Willfords, herculean equilibrists, are extremely smart; Joe Mac, described as a comedian and eccentric dancer, and Elsie Earle, comedienne, complete the "bill."

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Bolam and Bacon; General-Manager, Mr. Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stephen Smith.—"Starring" here is J. H. Milburn, a vocal comedian, who is one of Gateshead's greatest favourites; John Higgins, another claimant to the title of "champion jumper of the world," receives much applause for his clever exhibition; Conway and Welsh are a pair of clever comedy artists; Wat Tyler, a descriptive vocalist of merit, makes a big hit; the Sisters Wingrove treat their hearers to some excellent singing and dancing; Miss Mary Ambrose, vocalist and violinist, wins applause; and a very amusing film shown by Downey's bioscope concludes the entertainment.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Lessees, Messrs. Bolam and Bacon; General-Manager, Mr. Sidney Bacon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Thomas France.—Mr. Fred Granville's company is here this week in Defending His Honour. The dominant figure in an exceptionally strong company is Miss Chrissie Dunbar, whose portrayal of the rôle of Ethel Bryce is excellent; Mr. Fred W. Goddard's depiction of Douglas Bryce is worthy of the highest praise; and the villainous Stephen Graid is capitally represented by Mr Carthage Caldcleugh. Mr. Evan Roland, in the comedy part of Jack Damish, is seen to distinct advantage; Mr. Naughton Macaulay as Dick Verison and Mr. Willie Black as Richard Verison do well in their respective parts. Miss Ida Mackay is a dainty Trixie Lucien; and other capable ladies in the cast are Misses Amy Manfree, Dorothy Vaughan, Amy Wood, and Norah Egerton.

GLASGOW.—KING'S, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Business-Manager, Mr. H. Macfarlane.—Mr. Gerrard Grant-Allen's company is here in The New Boy and The Borrowed Uncle. Very successful is Mr. Leon M. Lion, whose impersonation of the alleged "boy" is very good indeed; he is cleverly supported by Mr. A. Corney Grain, who gives a highly characteristic portrayal of Dr. Candy, LL.D., and by Mr. Barrington Logan in his able study of Felix Roack; the Frenchman is well played by Mr. Harold Weston; as also is Bullock Major, by Mr. C. Robertson Gibbon; Miss Catherine Harrington makes the most of her part as Martha; Miss Margaret Fairleigh is a charming Nancy; and Miss Sybil Brook a smart Susan. In the one-act play, Mr. Leon M. Lion gives a realistic study of the convict Filby; and Mr. A. Corney Grain is a gentlemanly Wakefield; the other two parts being well sustained by Miss Margaret Fairleigh and Mr. Harold Weston.

ROYALTY, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. W. Wyndham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. M. Downie.—On Monday this theatre re-opened after the summer vacation, and a very large audience extended a hearty welcome to Fred Locke's clever musical comedy, A Trip to the Highlands. Mr. Wal Croft as the Macmutchkin is again the leading fun-maker, and his humorous songs and dialogue are received with continuous laughter; Mr. Gus Wheatman makes a first-rate Septimus Brown-Windsor, and ably keeps the fun going; Lord Lackington is played with excellent effect by Mr. Wellesley Smith; Miss Millie Engler makes a charming Winnie, singing and dancing with infectious gaiety; Miss Nellie Burdette makes a hit as Fanny Flounce, both in her own special items, and in the funny business with that quaint comedian, Mr. J. B. Montague, who is now the Timmins; Mr. Montague has a new topical song, called "Little bits of cheese to catch the mouse" and Miss Maisie Ellinger as Araminta is the possessor of a fine voice and a handsome appearance. As a dancer she is equally gifted, and made one of the most decided hits of the evening. Mr. Arthur Poole is again the detective, and his many disguises afford him many opportunities for clever characterisation; Miss Lillian Kevill Davies as Mrs. Macmutchkin ably hits off the peculiarities of that lady; and an attractive couple are the Charley and Lottie of Misses Kitty Clinton and Kathleen Naughton. A large and handsome chorus helps the general success, and the views of Scottish scenery shown between the acts are an enjoyable innovation.

METROPOLE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Arthur Jefferson; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Gillespy.—The attraction here this week is Mr. Herbert Barrs and company, in Life. The play, which contains many stirring incidents, meets with numerous signs of approval. Mr. Herbert Barrs is a manly Jack Lockhart, his portrayal showing considerable dramatic ability; Miss Dorothy Oswald as Ruth Thorpe has a part which she fills with credit; Mr. A. Pringle as Sir Horace Lester earns the execrations of the gallery; and Zac Krabbe has a capital representative in Mr. Herbert Fuller; Mr. Willis Collins as Joe Pippet gives a splendid character-sketch, and sings some good songs; Miss Maudie Vincent is excellent as Jess, her playing of the part being most praiseworthy; the part of Beatrice Ferrars is well acted by Miss Agnes Collier; and other rôles are in good hands.

EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Limited; District Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. Chas. Mussett.—The star turn here is Mr. Willie Edouin, so long and favourably known in musical comedy, who is giving graphic sketches of a number of odd individuals who present themselves for examination before an imaginary insurance doctor; Cinquevalli continues to astonish with his wonderful displays of ball juggling; the comedy of George Formby is irresistible, and the audience will hardly allow him to leave the stage. The voices of the Classicum Quartette are finely blended, and the operatic scena they supply is excellent. Gracie Moore's songs are pleasant; and the eye is pleased by the lantern pictures illustrating the songs. Bouverie Pleydell, comedienne, dances with charming grace; the Bros. Lang are an amusing pair; and Johnny Gilmore keeps one and all in fits of laughter. Vernando, ventriloquist, does an amusing turn. The Bioscope completes a first-rate performance.

ZOO HIPPODROME.—Proprietors Moss' Empires, Limited, and E. H. Bostock; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. H. Bostock. — A first-class variety programme is submitted here, an item of special interest being the engagement of Miss Dolly Elsworthy's company under the management of Adderley Howard, in The Orange Girl. The piece is beautifully staged, and special mention may be made of Miss Dolly Elsworthy as Nell Gwynne, and Messrs. G. H. Pitt and A. Howard as Charles II. and Dick Harraden. Barton and Ashley, in their famous act, Canal Boat Sal, fairly eclipse themselves; and the performance given by the Bros. O'Brien on the triple bars is decidedly clever. A smart entertainment is provided by Jacques Inaudi, the man of many figures, his calculations bordering on the marvellous. Other members of the company are Conan and Doyle, comedians; Brett and Orford, speciality artists; Beatrice Edwards, vocalist; Wm. Lee and Helen Bentley and company in comical sketch, Mabel B; Harry Freeman, comedian. Animated pictures are displayed by the Hippodrome Bioscope.

PAVILION, LTD.—General-Manager, Mr. Samuel Lloyd.—Harry Ford is here, provided with new songs, given in his own quiet style; and Florrie Forde is also well supplied, her best ditty being one about a nice young curate, which has a catchy melody, and is likely to be popular. Then we have that smart young Scotch comedian, Sammy Shields, whose description of a spectator at a football match is admirable; the Three Rainals give a trapeze performance which is both graceful and daring; Lilian Rigby gives a good musical turn and a lively big-boot dance; the Herald Comedy Four sing harmoniously in a sketch, The Indians and the Sailor; AnnieCasey is a clever comedienne; and Charles Chard scores well with his "Count of No Account" ditty.

COLISEUM.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.; District-Manager, Mr. Sam Gething; Resident-Manager, Mr. B. G. Maclachlan.—The Three Olympiers, in an entertainment entitled Beauty in Bronze, occupy the premier position here, their exhibition of classical figures being greatly appreciated. Another turn of interest is that provided by Percy Honri, in a vaudeville fantasy, Concordia. Other members of the company are Conn and Conrad, trapeze artists; James Toner, vocal impersonator; Bessie Butt, comedienne and dancer; J. A. Wilson, the popular negro comedian; Horne Bros., in their clever boxing act; May Evans, the smart character comedienne; and Ike Scott and Son, burlesque artists. The Bioscope shows a splendid series of pictures.

PALACE.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. Richard Waldon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry McKelvie.—George Gilbey creates a good impression here in patter and song, notably in his football character sketch, and his reception is very cordial; Rose Harvey, in captivating costume, sings her latest success "Is London Like it Used to Be?" a very tuneful ditty; and Harry Claff's song scena, "Her Beauty Defies my Skill," supplies him with an opportunity to display his robust tenor voice. In a few pleasing national airs, Gena Manon quite hits the taste of the audience, her light but very sweet and well-trained voice giving great pleasure. Martine and Son are great favourites at the Palace, and a change of picture songs is highly relished. The Breton troupe are very funny in the sketch, A Tramp's Picnic; and Zarino is an amusing and expert juggler; Frank Cass is a favourite comedian, and his songs are quite to the liking of his audience. Earle and Melville sing, patter, and dance well; and spirited business is done by The Bensons, vocal and comedy artists; their clever and eccentric dancing brings a sure recall.

GRAVESEND.—GRAND THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD. — General Manager, Mr. David Hart. — The engagements here for the week include Anthony, the mysterious gentleman in white, who has scored heavily; James Prior, an old favourite with Gravesend audiences has proved himself as popular as ever; and Mlle. Lucretia, a sparkling burlesque artist and speciality dancer, has been voted capital; Syd Godfrey is a clever comedian and mimic; Marion Hall is a dainty comedienne; Adey Spencer, in her refined act, The Girl from the Hat Shop, is to be highly commended; and Kisby, in The Call Boy, has been highly successful with this speciality.

GREAT YARMOUTH.—ROYAL AQUARIUM.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—Mr. William Greet's company in that merry, musical comedy The Earl and the Girl is paying a welcome return visit. Mr. William Cromwell, as Jim Cheese, depicts the droll little dog-trainer with marked success, his make-up and manner being exceptionally good; Dick Wargrave is well played by Mr. Robert Hyett, who sings the numbers allotted to him with much expressiveness; Mr. Stanley Harrison is excellent as the Hon. Crew Boodle; Mr. A. E. Coleby is sufficiently intense as the revengeful Bunker Bliss; Mr. Talk, Mr. Downham, and Mr. Hazell find able exponents in Mr. Arthur Cassidy, Mr. Frank Lane, and Mr. F. Patrick; Miss Gertrude Simpson is delightfully fresh and bright as Elphin Hage; Miss Florence Wix is amusing as Liza Shoddam; Miss Nellie Grant is energetic and emphatic as the strong lady; Miss Eva Berrington sings and acts well as Daisy Fallowfield; and Miss Virginia Bliss finds a stately exponent in Miss Helen Langton.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. W. Nightingale.—Three Little Maids, as played and staged under the direction of Mr. Charles Macdona, goes briskly from start to finish. The Maids, who are represented by Miss Mabel Kerridge, Miss Bessie Walters, and Miss Edith Colley, are irresistible; their rivals, the protégées of Lady St. Mallory, are attractively played by Miss Mollie Tremaine, Miss Blanche Lloyd, and Miss Daisy Goldsack; Miss May Wright makes a most engaging Gretchen; and Lady St. Mallory is admirably represented by Miss Kate Graham Beck; Lord Cheyne, Brian Molyneux, and M. de l'Orme are amusingly portrayed by Mr. J. Herbert Willis, Mr. Laurence Tessier, and Mr. Herbert Ransome; and Cupid is a humorous conception by Mr. Joseph Edwards. The songs and choruses are excellently rendered.

BRITANNIA PIER.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. W. Nightingale; Acting-Manager, Mr. Edward Gray.—The versatile comedian, George Mozart, who is a native of Yarmouth, is proving a most successful draw; the Musical Keiths give an enjoyable entertainment; Grey and Welford contribute a comical boxing act; Mamie Iris wins favour as a comedienne and buck dancer; Anthy gives a clever exhibition on the telegraph wire; the Three Sisters Kilner dance and sing well; and Arthur Stacey pleases as a comedian and dancer; Madame H. E. Angless's Ladies' Pompadour Band contributes excellently played selections of music.

WELLINGTON PIER PAVILION. — Proprietors, Great Yarmouth Corporation; Manager, Mr. Harry Tunbridge.—A capital variety programme is provided here. Ernest Montefiore and company submit a well-played musical and dramatic scena entitled The Little Colonel; Oswald Williams is a clever magician and shadowgraphist; Kavados is an expert juggler; Amiet's pedestal performance is exceedingly good; Leo Stirling and Addie Love are amusing in their domestic musical squabble; song and dance find able exponents in Harry Maynard, May Marton, and Adele de Frece.

THE HIPPODROME.—Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gilbert.—The great attraction for the week is the appearance of Harley's Prize Juveniles, who, in their spirited carnival scena, display evidence of much careful training in song and dance; the comic aquatic pantomime, The Walrus Hunt, still pleases vastly. Amongst other artists appearing are the Bros. Carr, musical comedians; Algie, Juggler; Mags and Hunter, musical entertainer; Bros. Huxter, acrobatic athletes; the Humels, equestrians; Miss Lilian, trick cyclist; and Little Rabbit and Handy Andy, clowns.

CHAPPELL'S CONCERT COMPANY.—The same artists are appearing again this week, and much satisfaction is expressed at the excellence of the programme provided.

GRIMSBY.—PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. J. H. Curry; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Sydney Tolfree.—I Defy the World, a drama which includes many exciting situations, has been seen here this week. Mr. Percy Ballard has done excellent work as Leon Darville, a character which necessitates the assumption of quite a number of disguises. The two women, Blanche Darville and Pauline Delaporte, with whom Darville's fortunes are intimately associated, were suitably represented by Miss Violet Crauford and Miss Alice Mazzoni. The libertine, Count de Beaulieu, found an admirable exponent in Mr. Chas. E. Wilton; whilst as his accomplice, Laroche, Mr. Chas. Conway displayed good character acting. Others who may be mentioned are Mr. Arthur Chisholm as André, Mr. Reginald A. Hunt as Najack, Mr. Dalton J. Bosher as Bochon, Mr. Alfred Denning as General Delaporte, Mr. Chas. M. Julian as Samuel Wozzle, and Miss Maud Lillian as Marie Wozzle.

THE EMPIRE, CLEETHORPES.—Proprietor, Mr. J. Carter-White; Manager, Mr. Wm. Baker.—Dolly Harmer has not failed to maintain her reputation, and the audiences have been delighted with her quaint comedy songs. A capital musical turn is given by Ford and Hanson, whose skill extends over a wide range of instruments. As a juggler Francisco has met with approval; and a sketch, Other People's Babies, is another popular item. Cinizelli, although a silent performer, manages to cause much laughter, and scores a success; whilst the comedy of Harry Barclay is also appreciated. May Moodie has proved an expert piccolo soloist; and pretty dancing is accomplished by Gracie Logan.

HALIFAX.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Robinson; Manager, Mr. S. Winks.—Another excellent vaudeville programme is being presented here this week to capital houses. Hall and Francis are reiteratedly applauded for their magnificent globe-walking feats, which are backed up by very clever juggling. The Regal Operatic Quartet, under the direction of Mr. E. Gittens, all of the "Carl Rosa Opera" company, are making a great impression in a condensed representation of Maritana. A talented cast includes Mr. Edwin Wynn, Mr. Albert German; and Mme. Mary Burnett. The title-rôle receives artistic treatment at the hands of Mlle. Adele Prescott, who sings the various numbers allotted to her in a delightful, refreshing manner. A captivating musical entr'acte gives Charles and Lily Charlene adequate scope for their respective talents; a dancer of more than average abilities is Miss Constance Mori; Forest and King are adepts at the contortionist business; and Mr. Frank Crisp gives his wheezes in capital style; a good bill terminates with the Villions, cycle equilibrists.

PALACE THEATRE, LTD.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Edward Harrison.—Casey's Circus is the main feature of the bill here this week, and the boisterous turn wins approbation; the Arleys, Belrose and De Velin, duettists, Ray Royal, and Osborn and Brookes are also appearing; and the pictures exhibited on the Bioscope are very interesting.

HANLEY. — GRAND. — Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. Elphinstone; Manager, Mr. Alfred Edwardes.—Fred Earle heads the bill this week, and scores a huge success in several capital songs, including "Seaweed"; Major Charles contributes an exhibition of shooting, which proves interesting; the Scotch Meisters sing admirably; Burg, Hand, and Wise are seen in a laughable burlesque, entitled Ye Brown Cow Inn; Lola Patey is a comedienne with capital songs; the Vekeys are banjoists of much ability; Dora Martine is a skilful gymnast, whose turn is much appreciated; the pictures presented by Urbanora are always interesting.

HARROGATE.—GRAND OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Peacock; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. Fielding-Smith.—For the first three nights of this week Mr. R. C. Carton's latest comedy, Public Opinion, was presented by the Hutchison company. Miss Lilias Earle (at short notice) gave an excellence performance as Lady Diana Caldershaw; Mr. Chas. Harley was amusing as Spencer Traughton, and Mr. Percy Marshall scored as Horace Wibsey, the solicitor. Miss Nancy Beresford was well placed as the music-hall artist Pansy Bligh. Mr. Douglas Greet gave a realistic portrayal of a silly young peer; Mr. Ashton Pearse was good as Lord Percy Kilgour, Mr. Fred Lewis as Mr. Justice Mulley, and Mr. Douglas Hamilton as Sir Babington Mulley submitted amusing renderings of their respective parts. Public Opinion was preceded by The Stratagem. On Thursday and Friday Mr. Silvanus Dauncey and Mr. M. V. Leveaux presented The Walls of Jericho.

HARTLEPOOL. — EMPRESS. — Proprietors, Messrs. Councillor Everton and J. W. Cragg; Manager, Mr. Harry Burns; Assistant-Manager, Mr. Charlie Ferrier.—This house was crowded on Monday night by audiences delighted with the change which the decorations of the house has undergone during the summer vacation, for which every credit is due to Mr. J. Leach, the Empress scenic artist. At the head of the bill is Taro Miyaki, champion jiu-jitsu wrestler of the world, whose exhibition on this, his first visit, arouses great interest; the Three Merrills give a capital exhibition of trick cycling, into which some side-splitting comedy is introduced; old favourites are represented in the Two Eltons, in a comedy bar act, who more than retain their reputation for humorous bar work; the Gondolier Glee Singers, including Miss Helen Bourne, have also gained a reputation locally; Miss Bourne, the lady tenor, is well received; Elsie Ackland also wins recognition for her excellent mimicry; Little Violette, "the juvenile marvel," charms everybody with her taking style and neat dancing; Pearce and Ward contribute greatly to the entertainment; and the bioscope shows some interesting films.

HASTINGS.—GAIETY THEATRE.—Manager, Mr H. W. Rowland; Resident-Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles E. Scott.—A season of musical comedy here was opened on Monday by Mr. Robert Courtneidge's company in The Blue Moon, which attracted a well-filled house. A very capable chorus and orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Carlton Mason, rendered the musical numbers and ensembles effectively. The scenery was especially commendable. Miss Clarice Lockstone filled the rôle of Chandra Nil very pleasingly. Oma was attractively played by Miss Louie Lochner. Mr. Alfred Beers provided some excellent fooling as Moolrag, a professed magician. The principal comedy element was supplied by Mr. Reginald Switz as Private Charles Taylor and Miss Florence Imeson as Milicent Leroy. Both are very capable dancers, and their efforts had a warm reception. Some excellent singing was supplied by Mr. Alec Fraser as Captain Jack Ormsby. Another good rôle was that of Mr. Alfred Clark as Major Vivian Callabone; and very commendable was Mr. Thomas Holding in his presentment of the Prince of Kharikar. Miss Ethel Callanan was very pleasing as Evelyn Ormsby, and Mr. A. Wykes Ashdowne was a gentlemanly Bobbie Scott.

HIPPODROME THEATRE OF VARIETIES. — General-Manager, Mr. Albert Mathams. — A well-varied programme is presented here this week. The descriptive vocalist Miss Florence Inman is much applauded; a comedy sketch, and also a powerful dramatic scene taken from the turbulent times of Charles I., are enacted in an admirable and finished manner by Fred S. Peake and company; a good comedian and singer is found in George Prince; another excellent turn is given by Gus Barra in a musical comedy act; Park's Eton Boys introduce a pleasing selection of vocal pieces and songs, singing with much sweetness and expression; the Hippodrome bioscope exhibits some interesting pictures; Miss Florrie Bray, comedienne, obtains a flattering reception; Mme. Raymond, who displays ability in her playing on various brass instruments, accompanies Kurkamp, who possesses a fine and well-cultivated tenor voice.

BEACH CONCERT PAVILION.—Manager, Mr. Geo. Blackmore.—Mr. Wallis Arthur's capable concert party remain an undiminished attraction. The excellent songs by the comedians, with their rattling choruses, put the audience into good humour and encores are again and again demanded. Mr. George Swaine, besides proving an able accompanist, obtains much applause for his solo performances on the pianoforte.

HASTINGS PIER PAVILION.—Pier-Master, Mr. R. Turner; Entertainment-Manager, Mr. J. D. Hunter.—Mr. Thomas Sidney and a smart company are appearing in the comedy farce entitled The Mountain Climber. In the title-rôle Mr. Thomas Sidney brings out all the numerous characteristics of Mr. Montague Sibsey; Miss Josephine Rae is a charming representative of Montague's wife, who is so proud of her husband's Alpine daring; Mr. Pat Alexander is very good as Samuel Midgham; Mr. Harry Hiller gives a skilful sketch of Dr. Charles Midgham; Mr. Edgar Kent gives an agreeable portrait of Arthur Lydbrook; and Mr. Arthur Beverly enacts the part of Sydney Ketton very cleverly. Alice and Betty could not be in better hands than those of Miss Calypso Jaletta and Miss Dorothy Sidney; a natural representation of Watson Frimley is given by Mr. Allistoun Samson; Miss Amy Clarke realises exactly the character of Lena; and Miss Millicent Temple is equally successful in the part of Mary.

ST. LEONARDS PIER PAVILION.—Pier-Master and Entertainment-Manager, Mr. Elvey Thomas.—Under Mr. Wm. Poel's direction an innovation is being made here by the production of the old-fashioned comedy The Good-Natured Man. The costumes are characteristic of the times, and the all-round excellence of the acting is quite in keeping with the days of Oliver Goldsmith. Mr. James Terry deals with the part of Sir William Honeywood in a hearty fashion; while Mr. Lewis Casson is very good as the good-natured man. His agent, Jarvis, is well taken by Mr. W. M. Mayne; Croaker is admirably represented by Mr. Shakespeare Stewart; an intelligent study of his son Leontine is presented by Mr. Edwin Coates, who shows true dramatic talent; Mr. W. M. Mayne and Mr Edwin H. Wynne are capital dignitaries of the law; Miss H. B. Potter makes a graceful and sprightly Olivia; an adequate interpretation of the part of Miss Richland is rendered by Miss Muriel Currey; Miss Clare Greet gives distinction to the character of Croaker's wife, her cheerfulness asserting itself conspicuously in contrast to her lachrymose and croaking husband. Good audiences are patronising the pavilion.

In the parks the performances by the corporation's string orchestra, directed by Mr. Thomas Hilton, prove increasingly attractive; and in the Band Kiosk on the Baths the Military Band, directed by Mr. W. Vince, draws very large audiences.

HUDDERSFIELD. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, The Northern Theatres Co., Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. N. M. Robinson.—Another good variety combination is appearing here including D'Arc's clever marionette impersonations of variety stars; Charles Banks and his well-trained dog Woof in a novel act; Harrison Bros., comedians and dancers; Miss Belle Braham in her well-known illustrated song production; Atlas and Vulcana in their weight-lifting speciality; the Mezettis, a pair of accomplished horizontal-bar artists; Treck and Trixie in a humorous medley, and Drawel, Frisco and Hambo, speciality jugglers.

HULL. — THEATRE ROYAL.—Sole Lessee, Mr. W. Morton; Resident-Manager, Mr. W. F. Morton.—Mr. Lumsden Hare and Miss Madge Macintosh's company, in Mollentrave on Women, has been the attraction here. Exceedingly happy was Mr. Michael Sherbrooke as Mollentrave. Mr. Lumsden Hare hit off the worried K.C. with admirable skill, and yet not without displaying a very acute sense of humour; fascinating to a degree was Miss Madge Macintosh as the widow, and she helped much towards success; as the ward, whose misunderstanding of Mollentrave's action is the main pivot of the play, none could have been more winsome than Miss Gwladys Wynne; the housekeeper, who adds so much to Sir Joseph's troubles, was capitally portrayed by Miss Ada King. The Great Silence, a play in two scenes, precedes. With such an admirable all-round performance, needless to say good business has been recorded this week.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Proprietors, Mortons, Ltd.; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. Morton.—The Conscript, which holds the boards this week, is a striking drama, from the pen of Mr. Wybert Olive. Miss Violet Carlyle as Nadia, the hero's wife, has a rôle in which she displays powers of no mean order; the Conscript of Mr. Harry Cullinford is distinguished by its virility; Miss Connie Meadows proves herself to be a graceful danseuse.

THE HIPPODROME.—Lessee, Mr. Alfred Graham; Manager, Mr. Tom Lunn.—Belle Davis and her "Pick Chicks" constitute a clever top turn; Daisy Dormer has some very clever songs, and is a most accomplished dancer; Bromely and Fontein, in a musical act, gain much applause; Tom Lloyd had to respond to an encore; Dave and O'Malley, Bessie Willow, Bert Brantford, and Will Letters are all acceptable turns.

IPSWICH. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietor, Mr. E. H. Bostock.—The chief item in the bill this week is the droll sketch called The Bachelor's Dream, in which May Edouin and Fred Edwards appear with much success. Another attractive turn that may fairly be termed "strong" is that of Ben Hur, who performs some prodigious feats of strength which are greeted with unstinted applause. Other items include Vasey and Ramsey, clever dancers; Mark Henderson, a blind musical artist; Maud Vera, a pleasing singer and dancer; Guy Ryder, an accomplished siffleuse; Harold Hughman, a mimic of animals, &c.; and Ernest French, a droll vocalist.

ISLE OF WIGHT.—VENTNOR TOWN HALL.—The Lloyd-Stanford Quartette and Concert Party, comprising the Misses Eva Colton and Ivy Moore, Messrs. Ivor Warren, Lloyd-Stanford, and Harry Prenton, have been giving high-class conc

PAVILION THEATRE.—Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter Lapworth.—The leading attraction here is Miss Carlotta de Yonson and her excellent company, who are presenting two well-written sketches by Mr. C. Douglas Carlile, entitled Blue River Valley, and the stirring dramatic episode A Russian Spy, in which the principal parts are sustained with the greatest success by Miss Carlotta de Yonson, Mr. C. Douglas Carlile, and Mr. Charles A. Carlile. The variety portion of the programme is contributed to by Rene and Smith, American comedy and speciality artists; Hal Chapter, quaint comedian; Nellie Dunbar, refined comedienne; Jessie Watson, burlesque artist; Harry Royde, comedian; and Walter H. Pallister's American bioscope, with the usual excellently selected pictures.

PIERROT PAVILION.—Proprietors, Messrs. Abell, Johnson, and Unsworth.—The following are contributing to an enjoyable and varied entertainment here this week: Fanny Adamson, vocalist; Dan Lyndon, comedian; Frances O'Reilly, vocalist; Bert Wallace, comedian; the Bohemian Glee Singers; and Will Chapman, pianist and musical director. Miss Frances O'Reilly, who has made herself most popular here, took a benefit on Thursday, when numerous additional attractions were provided.

LEITH.—NEW GAIETY THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Resident-Manager, Mr. John Darlison.—For the re-opening of this popular house after the summer recess Mr. R. A. P. Williams presents his specially selected company in a very happy revival of Les Cloches de Corneville. The production has all the benefits of beautiful new scenery and attractive costumes. Mr. Michael Kemble gives a powerful rendering of Gaspard, the miser; Mr. Piercy Watson is a manly and vigorous Marquis; Mr. G. Edward Hall and Mr. Richard Martin are excellent in the comic rôles of the Baillie and Gobo; and Mr. Percy Martin does good work as Grenicheux. Honours among the ladies are pretty equally divided between Miss Adele Harvey, who makes a bright and vivacious Serpolette, and Miss Kathleen Emmett, whose singing in the part of Germaine gains for her a full share of popular favour.

LIMERICK.—EXHIBITION THEATRE. — Crowded houses witness the clever turns of Miss Kate Gourlay, the Scottish lassie and buck dancer, who also sings well; the impersonations of Mr. Fred Howard are very good; and as ventriloquist Mr. Dudley Causton is excellent. The Sisters Mather, violinists, are a great attraction.

The chief outdoor pastimes are excellently catered for by Messrs. Turnbull and Toft, and Mr. J. F. Calverto is the experienced responsible manager for the Bijou Theatre and several other recreative departments.

LIVERPOOL.—ROTUNDA THEATRE. — Manager, Mr. M. Montgomery.—Well-staged and mounted, the Two Little Drummer Boys has been a strong attraction here this week. The company responsible is brought by Mr. F. G. Kimberley, and includes several able artists. Mr. Beresford Lovett makes an excellent Captain Frank Carsdale; Mr. Edward Bikker handles the rôle of General Kingsley with distinction; Miss Mildred Eversleigh is a charming Alma Kingsley, playing with a pathetic touch; the drummer boys find in Miss Maggie English and Miss Margaret Hazel able exponents, receiving the cordial recognition of their audience; Miss Kathleen Magee is seen to advantage as Margaret Rivers; Miss Edie Macklin is full of life as the merry Molly Meadows; and a deal of amusement is evoked by Mr. Joseph McGrath as Quincey O'Quirke.

LYRIC THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold; Directors of Entertainments, Messrs. T. Barrasford and F. Willmot; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Coles.—The bill this week is headed by George D'Albert and company in a dramatic item, 'Tis Never Too Late to Mend, which is well played, and richly deserves the applause accorded. Very laughable is the sketch, Smash and Dash, as presented by Arnold Bell and company; Frank Coyle is also well to the fore in laughter-making; Rappo and Ella are daring acrobats and equilibrists; Mollie Doon is a favourite here; Chas. F. Best's turn is answerable for considerable amusement; Bella Leaburn is a pleasing comedienne; and Akbar gives a clever gymnastic display on the hand-rings.

STAR THEATRE. — Proprietor and Manager, Mr Harris Fineberg.—Full of scenes of circus and sporting life, The Way of the World has proved a draw here this week. Messrs. Beaudyn and Crowe's company has presented it in good style. Mr. Herbert Skardon as Cecil Montague plays with marked effect; a sufficiently villainous Captain Fred Slade comes from Mr. Victor Gordon; Miss Sidney Crowe acquits herself most creditably as Adela de la Roche; Miss Cissie Bellamy is a winsome Kate Montague; a deal of good comedy is provided by Mr. Augustus Hammond as Horatio Bluff, and Miss Marie Fontaine in the character of Polly Bell; and Mr. Clarence Temple gives every satisfaction as Matthew Malyon, the disgraced clergyman. The racehorses and ponies introduced into several scenes lend additional realism to the story.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Lingford Carson; Manager, Mr. Fred L. Arthur.—The stage here this week has been occupied by Mr. E. Oswald Brooks's company in The Trail of the Serpent, a drama full of sensationalism. Mr. Pan E. Draco is the Sir Gerald Kingston; Mr. Bradford Crosby acts well as Gerald Kingston; Mr. A. Campbell Kelly as Hammond is a powerful villain; much fun is the outcome of the efforts of Mr. Vincent Kelway as William Higging, and Miss Gladys Newcombe as Rose Wilson; Miss Marie Barrett is a sweet Ethel Maynard; and Miss Nan Cameron efficiently undertakes the character of Rachael.

THE EMPIRE.—Proprietors, Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Herbert Darnley's company of comedians are at the top of the bill here this week with their merry sketch, The Skirmishers; the McNaughtons continue to cause hearty merriment; some admirable banjo playing is given by Howard Bros.; Roberts, Hayes, and Roberts have a neat speciality, The Cowboy, the Swell, and the Lady; the Charles Fisher Pocket Opera Company have an entertaining trifle, The Music Master; T. P. Ling's mimetic monologue is an acceptable turn; Miss Alice Lloyd renders several catchy songs; and others in the list are Madge Osmund, Ruth Lytton, and Harwood's Juveniles.

ROYAL HIPODROME. — Managing-Director, Mr Thomas Barrasford.—Another excellent all-round bill of fare has resulted in good business here this week. At the top is Welcome Home, a most amusing sketch, presented by Bob Hutt and company, which has delighted everyone; Tom Grave's cycle act inside a revolving wheel has been witnessed with breathless interest; Martin Conway, a favourite comedian in Liverpool, has some new business; Rex Fox's ventriloquial and musical act on the wire is a clever performance; done very neatly, the humorous juggling of Rebla is a choice tit-bit; Nash and Noel are a couple of smart comedians and dancers; Hill and Lane present a taking trifle of music and mirth, entitled Home Lessons; and the bill also contains the names of Charles Denton, comedian; and Ada and August, with comedy act.

NEW PARTHENON. — Proprietor, Mr. Edwin W Smith.—The bioscope pictures here finish this week, after a successful stay of two months. Some excellent talent is booked for next week, when the usual variety season opens.

ROYAL PALACE OF VARIETIES.—Manager, Mr. M Montgomery; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank O'Toole.—Here this week the "Royal" Stock company have been presenting The Way Women Love, from the pen of G. B. Nichols. Mr. Percy Boucher was the Dick Palmer, a humorous character; Mr. Harry Tresham handled well the part of Captain Howard Tremain; Mr. Sidney Grant gave force to the villainous character of Leslie Larmont; Mr. Cecil Ravenswood did credit to Robert Harcombe; and other well-presented rôles were Jose Alaros (Mr. E. D. Allen), Constable Dobbins (Mr. Leo Mortgomery), Lady Tremain (Miss Florence Palmer), and Verene Alabra (Miss Beryl Ravenswood).

PARK PALACE, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. Walter de Frece; Director of Entertainments, Mr. Fred Willmot.—A new set of bioscope pictures are shown here this week, with some excellent variety turns by Harry Taft, a clever whistling comedian; Mora and Flora, comedy duettists, in a new scena, Rich and Poor; and Lilly Le Breton, a graceful trapeze artist, with a beautiful stage set.

HAYMARKET.—Lessee, Mr. Fred Willmot.—An attractive programme has been given here this week, the last which will find Mr. Willmot as lessee, he having transferred his interests to the Roscommon, which he opens on Bank Holiday. In consequence of the change, a complimentary benefit was given to his manager, Mr. David Miller, on Tuesday. Heading the bill is the dramatic sketch, The Gambler of Liverpool, by Mr. J. Marks's company; Harry Sims, a smart whistling comedian, has proved a good turn; the Bros. Mellot, blind vocalists, render several popular songs; Boden and Bell, juvenile vocalists and expert dancers, acquit themselves creditably; and Clarence Winstone sings several tenor songs.

OLYMPIA, LTD.—Manager, Mr. A. W. Young.—Foremost here this week are the Four Lecussons, with their remarkable acrobatic work on horseback; De Gracia's Assam elephants, with their peculiar tricks, have been a source of great interest; Leslie's dogs reveal a deal of careful training; and a fourth "arena turn" is given by Mr. Chris. Lecusson with some skilful horsemanship. As a male impersonator, Lilian Bishop is eminently satisfactory; Dan Crawley's songs and patter at all times evoke hearty laughter; the remarkable life-like antics of the ape Lady Julia are watched with wonder; Toledo and Price as contortionists are particularly expert; and the Casino Comedy Four prove themselves to be excellent vocal humorists.

LLANDUDNO. — GRAND THEATRE. — Manager, Mr. A. G. Pugh.—Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company presented the musical comedy Floradora to large audiences here on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday. In the part of Anthony Tweedlepunch, Mr. Alf. E. Passmore was excellent, evoking much laughter at his witticisms and facial expressions; Mr. Stanley White as Cyprus W. Gilfain, Mr. Allen Morris as Frank Abercoed, Mr. Herbert St. John as Captain Arthur Donegal, and Mr. C. H. James as Leandro all acquited themselves in praiseworthy style; Miss Josephine Sullivan as Dolores and Miss Kate Leicester as Lady Holyrood are to be congratulated upon a thorough representation of difficult parts. On Thursday, The Sign of the Cross was staged.

PRINCE'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. C. R. Chaplin; Musical-Director, Mr. Jesse Holroyd.—For three nights Mr. George Robertson presented Brandon Thomas's company in Charley's Aunt. In the title rôle Mr. Edmund Baker was decidedly good, and the same remark applies to Mr. Wm. Allison (Stephen Spettigne), Mr. Frederick Tyrell (Col. Sir Francis Chesney), Mr. Sidney Lynn (Jack Chesney), and Mr. Basil Lynn (Charles Wykeham). Miss Katherine Vereker, as Donna Lucia D'Alvadorez, was all that could be desired. On Thursday The Dandy Doctor was played.

HIPPODROME.—Lessees and Managers, Carl Hermann and Alfred Selwyn.—The principal attraction here is Yukio Tani, the Japanese wrestler, his skill being much admired. The Two Leslies, Rosie Lenard, The Leanders, Devoy, Hurst, and Fredericks, Minnie Dawn, George White, and The Wallys complete a good bill.

LOWESTOFT. — MARINA. — Managing-Director, Mr. E. A. Smith.—A capital house gave a good reception on Monday evening to The White Chrysanthemum, played by Mr. Chas. Macdona's capable company. Miss Muriel George makes the most of her opportunities as Sybil Cunningham, and acts and sings throughout in a pleasing manner; Miss Emily Taylor also presents a delightful reading as Betty Kenyon, the young widow; and Miss Nellie Groves is particularly smart in the rôle of the American heiress, Cornelia Vanderdecken. Warm praise must be accorded Mr. Langdon Bruce (Lieut. Reginald Armitage) for his manly interpretation as the hero; Mr. Chas. Schmidt also performs creditably as Admiral Sir Horatio Armitage; and considerable amusement is afforded by Messrs. H. E. Garden (Lieut. Belmont), Richard Telford (Sin Chong), and James Dallas (Private Perks).

THE HIPPODROME.—Mr. Geo. Gilbert.—The bill this week includes Cardow's Cadets; Sydney Lee, sleight-of-hand expert; Ernest Lethley, humorist and sketch artist; Arthur Hill, ventriloquist; Colin Clough, humorist; Bryan O'Sullivan, baritone; Kenneth Scot, comedian; J. T. Wilcox, Robt. Sedgwick, &c.

OLYMPIAN GARDENS AND SPARROW'S NEST PARK.—Mr. Paul Mill's clever company is still delighting large holiday crowds at these popular resorts. On Thursday evening Mr. Paul Mill gave his first illuminated fête of the season at the Sparrow's Nest Park, which attracted thousands of visitors and residents.

CLAREMONT PIER. — The concerts here are very popular. The artists at the daily concerts this week include Miss Margaret Lewys and Mr. Findlay Dunn.

MAIDENHEAD.—PAVILION PLEASURE GARDENS —Proprietor, Mr. Geo. Gude.—The al fresco entertainments by the Maidenhead Cadets still form a strong attraction. On Monday evening a ticket benefit in aid of the funds of the local Working Boys' Club was given. The Cadets supplied a capital programme, to which were added single turns and the sketch Turn Him Out, by members of the Club. Bouquets were presented by the boys to the two ladies of the troupe, Miss Adelaide Twort and Miss Gertie Lovedale, and Captain Myers (president) publicly thanked Mr. Gude and the Cadets for their valuable assistance.

NORTHWICK HOUSE GROUNDS.—The White Coons continue their concerts. Mr. G. Leone has, however, left them, having been appointed musical director at the Theatre Royal, Windsor.

MANCHESTER.—ROYAL OSBORNE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. B. Broadhead.—Mr. Frank Lindo and company are here this week in Home, Sweet Home. Miss Marion Wakeford plays Joan with grace, and succeeds in winning the complete sympathy of the audience; Mr. Frank Lindo as Stephen Armitage acts in a manly and breezy style; and in the opposite character of Lucas Lyle, Mr. F. Myles Hodgson does exceedingly well. Among the remainder of the cast Mr. George Overts gives a creditable rendering of Dick Redmayne; Capt. Gerald Gambier as the Duke of Ancaster is stately and effective; little Daisy Rochefort plays the child part of Dora very cleverly; and others worthy of note are Mr. D. Laurence Doyle as David Armitage, Miss May Rochefort as Sybil Fay, and Mr. Sidney Bryant as the Hon. Percy. The play as a whole is distinctly interesting and dramatic, and is staged with capital effect.

METROPOLE THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. B. Broadhead. — An attractive play, entitled The Dear Homeland, was staged here on Monday by Mr. Geoffrey Fulton, whose company did full justice to its merits. The heroic parts are cleverly presented by Mr. Chas. O'Connor and Miss Violet Hammersley; Mr. Harold C. Macartney and Miss Stella Carmichael figure boldly in the opposite rôles; and considerable fun is provided, chiefly by Mr. Shaun Glenville as an adventurous Irishman.

GRAND JUNCTION THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. B. Broadhead. —Mr. Harold Reyner presents here this week Mr. Ian Maclaren's company, in The Prince of Rogues, a vigorous and exciting detective drama. Mr. Claude Haviland's depiction of the title part is a well-known and powerful piece of work; and he is admirably supported by Miss Gertrude Littlewood as Rita Congreave; Mr. Henry B. Lewis as Detective Kenry; Miss Gertrude Gilbert as Winnie Harwood; and Mr. Edward Vandor as Josh Buggins. All the remaining parts are well played, and the staging is good.

QUEEN'S THEATRE.—Manager, Mr. Richard Flanagan; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Berry.—Mr. John Power's company is here this week in the successful moral drama, Man's Enemy, a play of considerable merit. The story is admirably depicted by the various members of the cast, among whom Mr. John Power is conspicuous for a fine rendering of the central rôle of Tom Drake, and Miss Clara Reid acts with remarkable grace and judgment as Polly Harris; while Mr. Francis Everard and Miss Edith Leslie do full justice to the heroic side of events, and good fun is provided by Mr. Thos. A. Ellis, Mr. G. Porteous, and Mr. Fred Ross.

PALACE.—General-Manager, Mr. Walter De Frece; Secretary, Mr. Peter Watson; Acting-Manager, Mr. Nelson Barry.—At the top of the bill here this week is seen Florence St. John, the well-known comedy actress, in a very pleasing sketch, called My Milliner's Bill. Prominent also are Jack and Evelyn, a smart couple of entertainers, in a brisk and amusing act; the Cribb Trio are seen to advantage in their comedy act, Idle Fellows; Fred Horsfall, mimic, gives an acceptable turn; T. C. Callaghan, comedian, is amusing; Virginia's Piccaninnies sing and dance in characteristic style; Marriott Edgar, the man in red, sings well; a smart comedy acrobatic act is offered by the Three Missouris; and Mooney and Holbein shine as comedy acrobats. The pictures are good as usual.

EMPIRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. Hall.—An extremely good turn here this week is that of Alexandre and Hughes, who head the bill, and whose general business of gag and melody is well deserving of the honour. Lockhart's Elephants go through their marvellous show with the well-known accuracy; Will Musgrave, comedian, is good; a big success is scored by My Fancy, the queen of sand dancers; the Chockaboards, a combination of black and white artists, sing and dance in excellent style; Pit and Cute present some novel ideas in comedy acrobatics; and other good turns are given by Flo Esdaile, a spirited and excellent vocalist; the Clarkes, expert banjoists; and George Reeves, a clever comedian. The pictures are highly amusing this week.

HIPPODROME. — Managing-Director Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. E. P. Morgan.—A very enjoyable leading turn is given here this week by Ernest Shand, who is well described as the pink of comic smartness, and whose songs and patter are distinctly a huge success. Another remarkable turn is that of Will Bishop and company in My Gollywog. These good things are supplemented by Sanford and Lyons, a pair of comedians, who are also very good simultaneous dancers; Kathleen Cogan, accomplished comedienne; the Six Remingtons, evening-dress acrobats; Jack Lane, a characteristic Yorkshire rustic comedian; the American Comedy Four, eccentric vocalists; Irene Rose, a smart comedienne and dancer; and two choice items by the choir.

TIVOLI. — Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. A. Wilkes; Acting-Manager, Mr. Arthur B. Wilkes.—Lily Burnand, the charming burlesque artist, is to the front here this week in several capital songs, and meets with a good reception; Alice Hollander, Australian contralto, is also well received; and Harry Ray and Lillie Calden make a big hit in their original comedy act. Kate A. Traill scores in songs at the piano; Maggie Rimmer is a dainty comedienne and dancer; the Passmore Brothers are amusing comedians, with eccentric business; whilst good turns are those of the Sisters Morgan, who dance and sing well; Alberton, Australia's "deceptionist", and Charles Craston, comedian. Raymond's Pictures are, as usual, very entertaining.

KING'S, LONGSIGHT.—Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. B. Broadhead. — The Sorrows of Satan is the attraction here this week, after a successful week at the Royal Osborne Theatre, with Mr. Hugh Carmichael and Miss Nelson Ramsay at the head.

QUEEN'S PARK HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. B. Broadhead. —May and Eugenie are very successful here this week in a delightful quick-change singing novelty. The Pichel Troupe are wonderfully clever Risleyists, and gain great applause; the Cosmans are pleasing in their comedy act; the Four Rozaires give a good acrobatic display; and Wallace Muirhead is a capital tenor vocalist. Other successful turns include George Gulliver, ventriloquist; the Boleros, very funny on the bars; G. W. Gallaher, a smart eccentric comedian; and Lily Vane, a dainty comedienne. The Bioscope Pictures are greatly enjoyed.

HIPPODROME, HULME. — Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. P. B. Broadhead. —Le Diablo, in a daring cycle act, "Looping the Devil's Wheel" is the top star attraction here this week, and his exhibition is a "thriller." An excellent turn is provided by Stanley's Urchins, who sing pleasingly and dance smartly, meeting with much approval; and the Five M.P.'s (Musical Palmers) contribute their usual delightful musical turn. Mlle. Du Roche, operatic soprano, is well received; some clever tumbling, with humorous business, is done by the Errolls; and a somewhat similar show is given by Lack and Ford, the "indiarubber man and the twister." Other turns are those of Johnson and Pelham, in pot-pourri act; George Hilton, comedian; and Daisy Almer, vocalist and dancer. Some enjoyable pictures complete.

RUSHOLME PAVILION. — Proprietor, Mr. Harry Leslie; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles North. — Crowded houses nightly testify to the popularity of this week's programme, all the artists being great favourites. Fred Field, a capital humorist, heads the bill, and is vastly entertaining; Jim Pullen, the always popular comedian, is well received; Ethelle Stapley is an excellent violinist; Mabelle Ashton, a charming comedienne, sings pleasing songs; Charles North, baritone, has a good voice; Guy Drury is a first-rate light comedian; and Arthur Rogerson is good at the piano.

MARGATE.—HIPPODROME. — Sole Proprietors, Mr. F. Mouillot and Mr. W. de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; Resident-Manager, Mr. C. F. Bawtree.—The programme is headed this week by Joe Elvin, who is supported by his company in the successful sketch Obedient Billy, which is responsible for a great deal of hearty laughter. The Lulaine-Darrell Trio, novelty gymnasts in their bar and rings act, are excellent, and Miss Clarice Mayne proves herself a pleasing comedienne and clever mimic. Elton and Elna, triple-bar performers; Rosie Bartlett, comedienne and dancer; and Walter King, the doleful comedian, go to make up a varied and an enjoyable entertainment.

HALL-BY-THE-SEA.—Sole Proprietor, "Lord" George Sanger; General-Manager, Mr. Charles Evans.—The artists appearing here in the spécialité programme, which is a feature of the weekly entertainments, are giving some capital turns. The Two Wiltons, refined dancers and duettists, are good; and the sensational cycle feats performed by Blanche and Diacoff must be seen to be fully appreciated. The Three Gilbert Girls are an especially vivacious trio, and George M. Schilling, by the aid of pictures, describes his tramp round the world. Onda and Leon are expert gymnasts, and George Bendon, white coon vocalist, and the Four Jumels, instrumentalists, prove a considerable attraction.

MERTHYR TYDFIL.—TEMPERANCE HALL.—Manager, Mr. Israel Price.—The following are appearing here this week: The Fordyces, duettists and dancers; the Two Clarkes, on the revolving globe; J. F. Sterling, clog dancer; Little Beano, who introduces his mechanical donkey; Sterling and Cashen, eccentric comedians and dancers; and the Biograph, with a capital series of new pictures.

MIDDLESBROUGH. — OPERA HOUSE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Manager, Mr. W. K. Chatto.—Mr. Charles Stewart's company in the comedy Our Flat is here this week. The play puts the audiences in the best of spirits and provides an enjoyable evening which is not readily forgotten. Mr. Charles Stuart as Reginald is as amusing as ever, and a word of commendation is due to Mr. J. B. Gordon as Mr. McCullam; Mr. Wilfred Shine creates roars of laughter as Glover, the part fitting him to perfection. Mr. Kaye Brudell as Foreman acts in a way which leaves nothing to be desired. Miss Daisy Atherton as Margery imbues the part with all possible humour and charm; Miss Pollie Emery is successful as Bella; Miss Murtie Slade does well as Clara Pryout, and Miss Bertha Northan as Lucy McCullam is exceedingly pleasing and vivacious.

EMPIRE PALACE.—Managing-Director, Mr. John Brill; Manager, Mr. Charles B. Rembges.—There is a very entertaining programme here this week, all the items being of the best. Cruickshank, the clown, delights the audiences with his up-to-date songs and patter; the Gorgetti troupe of gymnasts provide a really wonderful display; the Sisters Albert, duettists, are well received and Mr. Young is an excellent vocalist. Terry and Bentley cause laughter in their sketch, The Hunt, as does Josh Dixon with his songs and sayings; Grais's baboons provide an excellent entertainment, in which Diavolino, the baby baboon, loops the loop. Other turns are provided by Leonie Dixon and the Bio.

OXFORD PALACE.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Alf Graham.—The farcical absurdity The Bloomsbury Burglars proves an attractive item here this week, and is heartily enjoyed by the usual big houses. Frank Seeley, the well-known comedian, scores a big success, and the Zaros give a clever acrobatic and tumbling act. Luigo Salino provides some excellent music, and Tom Hughes proves himself a capital comedian. The other artists are George Barron and Arthur Boyne.

MORECAMBE. — ROYALTY THEATRE AND OPERA HOUSE. — Sole Lessee, Lieut. Julian Malvern; General-Manager, Mr. Chas. M. Julian.—Mr. William Mollison has been paying a visit here with his company in Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush, and has achieved a notable success in the fine character of Lachlan Campbell, and Mr. Alec F. Thompson has been deservedly successful as Wee Posty, an amusing part. The Flora Campbell of Miss Evelyn McNay has been thoroughly sympathetic. Misses Alice Francis, Martha Stewart, and Jeannie Fitzgerald have been good, and the same remark applies to Messrs. Kendal Chalmers, D. Lyall, Durward Lely, and Archie W. Campbell.

WINTER GARDENS.—General Manager, Mr. Tom Atkinson.—The programme has included Mlle. Ella with her quartet of lions F. V. St. Clair, in the latest topical songs, not forgetting Chicago; the Selbinis, with their clever pot-pourri of cycling business; the Waldrons, in their original comedy act, The Silly Burglar; Harry Norris, a clever mimic, with some first-class stuff; Mlle. Lola, juggler; Bros. Ethairien, in an eccentric act which makes everyone laugh, and Keith and Merson, in their acrobatic hunting absurdity The Meet.

ALHAMBRA PALACE.—Manager, Ald. John Gardner. —The Six Brothers Luck are the principal attraction here with their clever and eccentric Demon of the Cellar sketch. Mlle. Kloet poses perfectly; the Seven Wulfrunas in Fun in a Café do some smart acrobatic work, and introduce pleasing comedy; Satsuma, the Japanese, juggles and mystifies; May Fallowfield is a pleasing soubrette; and H. O. Wills an acceptable comedian; the Bohemians are an effective musical turn, and the one-legged business of the Bros. Zampah is unique. Bert Woodward's cycle steeplechasing is neat indeed.

CENTRAL PIER.—Manager, Mr. E. Hill.—Joe Boganny's clever Risley performers in their sketch The Lunatic Bakers excite hearty laughter at each performance; and the Du Cane trio in their comedy gymnast act are really funny. Other turns are the Coalvilles, vocalists and dancers; Florence Hector, soprano; Denby and Dent, comedy act, and Zanfretta and Napio, the musical knife-grinders.

WEST END PIER.—Secretary, Mr. John Bastow.—Herr Morgann's Blue Hungarian Band is still proving a great attraction. Last night those clever entertainers, the Follies, made a first appearance in Morecambe

NEW BRIGHTON.—GRAND TOWER THEATRE.—An excellent variety company this week includes Miss Florence Hill, vocalist and dancer; Miss Lockhart, in her marvellous tight and slack wire act; Walter Levalle, coster comedian; Mlle. Heleu, who gives some clever and beautiful serpentine dances on the rolling globe; the Three Cheers, in a Dick Whittington scena; Miss Nellie Belmore, comedienne; Charles Vandyke and company of comedians and pantomimists, in a new absurdity, Sensations; and the Towerscope.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.—PALACE THEATRE. —Managing-Director, Mr. T. W. Rowe; Business-Manager, Mr. E. B. Clark.—A welcome change from the usual run of drama is being provided here this week, by the engagement of Mr. Dickie Clare and Co., in the musical absurdity, Lucky 'Liza. As Silas Slim Mr. Clare is quite a host in himself, and keeps the fun going furiously; quite a jovial personage is Mr. Dan Ryan, as William Biffins, whose broad Irish humour is greatly appreciated; Mr. Leonard Maitland is irresistibly funny as Paul Pettitor, a dude; and Mr. James Chippendale as Peter Pettitor and Mr. A. W. Thompson as Barney Blatherwick do exceedingly well with somewhat scanty material; in the title-rôle Miss Madge Brownie is highly successful, her singing and dancing throughout being frequently encored; Miss Vesta Brownie is a charming Virginia; and the Astor Trio, lady vocalists and dancers, provide a speciality act.

GRAND THEATRE.—General-Manager, Mr. Sidney Bacon.— Miss Grace Warner and Co. are appearing here this week, and have presented The Scarlet Clue and East Lynne. In the latter play Miss Warner undertakes with complete success, the rôle of Lady Isabel; Mr. George Gordon is thoroughly at home in the rôle of Sir Francis Levison; and Mr. J. Leighton Leigh's impersonation of Archibald Carlyle is throughout interesting. The remaining characters are in capable hands.

EMPIRE THEATRE.—Resident-Director, Mr. Richard Thornton; Resident-Manager, Mr. E. Leslie Conroy.—The Poluski Brothers provide plenty of amusement here this week, their business being up-to-date, as usual. Mark Melford and Co. appear in a new sketch, entitled Only a Wedding, in which their efforts are entirely successful; Harriet Vernon, gorgeously begowned, submits her latest scena, "The Lilac Girl"; Unthan, the armless wonder, is indeed a marvel; Annie Abbott possesses wonderful power of resistance, and her act is indeed a mysterious one; Orpheus displays rare talent as a musician, his oboe solo, with gramophone accompaniment, of "The Broken Melody," being particularly fine. Frank Darwin, actor-vocalist, has a good voice; and Lottie Govell, a dainty comedienne and dancer. O. K. Sato, comic juggler, and Gertrude Bradshaw, a refined vocalist, complete the bill.

PAVILION THEATRE.—Managing-Director, Mr. Thos. Barrasford; Manager, Mr. Will H. Boardman.—The popular magician, De Biere is back here once again, and his hands have lost none of their cunning. Gertie Gitana, a possessor of a fine voice, is accorded a good reception; an equestrian act of much cleverness is presented by F. de Marce; Hayman and Franklin create a good impression as comedy artists; Wallau proves as clever as ever in the art of juggling; and other notable turns are Nelson and Thomas, in a comedy act; Charles Faning, comedian; the Musical Schaffers; Adams and Ward, acrobats; W. B. Raby, quaint comedian; and the Barrascope.

NEWPORT.—LYCEUM.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Sydney Cooper.—Mrs. Walter Bentley's company, in A Queen's Vengeance, is appearing here this week. The piece is capitally mounted, and is creditably enacted by Messrs. A. Bertram Croucher, George Harvey, Clifforde Reynolds, Arthur Bell, J. B. Stewart, G. Mepstead, F. Moore, Geo. Roberts, Frank Fortescue, and M. White, Miss Lillian Deane, Miss Adela Harvey, and Mrs. Walter Bentley.

EMPIRE.—Moss' Empires, Ltd.—Managing-Director Mr. O. Stoll.—A strong bill here includes the Griffiths Bros., who provide a fund of humour in their motor-car and the duel. J. W. Hall secured an encore with his popular songs; Tatten Hall is both interesting and amusing in his great success "Tired Man"; and some remarkable feats are given by Max Wessely's troupe of comic jugglers; the Tally-Ho Trio who introduce into their turn a good amount of humour are excellent singers; the Sisters Iris execute some clever dances; and a very amusing display is given by the Tupps, whose acrobatic performance is above the average. The Bioscope shows a series of pictures depicting "A Naval Nursery"; and Miss Jacobi, comedienne, deputised for Harry Leybourne, who was indisposed.

NORTHAMPTON. — OPERA HOUSE. — Sole Proprietors and Managers, Milton Bode and Edward Compton; General Manager, Reginald Taylor.—This theatre re-opened for the season on Monday, when Mr. John F. Preston presented his specially selected company in the historical play, Lady Godiva. Miss Ethel Griffies is a picturesque and pleasing heroine; Miss Katherine Brook is an excellent Lady Aldyth; and Miss Edith Lorraine, as Elfrida, is a lively serving maid; Mr. F. B. Woulfe gives a striking impersonation of Tom Coventry; Mr. Howard Barlow is good in the part of Leofric; Mr. James Duncan as Algar and Mr. Ernest Hamilton as Unwolf give forcible specimens of villainy; Mr. Leslie Lingham plays Edgar; and Mr. Bob Anderson is amusing in the part of Robin. Nell Gwynne is billed for Wednesday and Thursday, and Jane Shore, for Friday nights.

NORTH SHIELDS.—CENTRAL PALACE—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Wm. Mould.—The Four Louberts, sketch artists, top the bill here this week, and are warmly received; Silent Tait, eccentric wizard, comes in for a hearty reception; and the Musical Saxonias present an enjoyable act; Carlo Bianchi, equilibrist and balancer, performs some smart feats; Miss Beatie Kent, comedienne and dancer, is clever; Mr. Tom Collins, comedian, has made a hit; and the Bio-Photoscope is as popular as ever.

NORTHWICH. — PIERROT PAVILION.—Proprietors, The Royal Pierrots Co.—A welcome return visit has been paid us this week by that charmingly clever and versatile artist Miss Flo Holroyd, who sings her songs in her own inimitable style; Miss Barwick also renders some pretty numbers; Mr. James Wilson proves himself a clever bone soloist; Mr. Fred Esdale causes a good deal of merriment in his comic songs, and his duets with his brother enhance the quality of the programme; Mr. Glanmore Jones still continues to give much pleasure with his songs.

NORWICH.—HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs E. H. Bostock and F. W. Fitt; Manager, Mr. F. W. Fitt.—The chief attraction this week is Captain Bevan's Gordon Highlanders, whose quick and precise evolutions call forth much enthusiasm. Mr. Fred Elton, who is well-known in Norwich, is very entertaining in his vocal and musical speciality, "On an Ocean Liner"; Russell Carr is amusing as a ventriloquist; the Franko Midgets, the smallest conjurers in the world, have a cordial reception; Emma Milstead and Joe Bell, in a musical comedy scena, are a good turn; whilst Andie Burn pleases in singing and dancing. The Kashma Bros. are successful in their dancing acrobatic mélange; and Kendrick and Laura are applauded in their duet singing. The Hippo. Bioscope, with interesting pictures, completes an excellent programme.

NOTTINGHAM.—KING'S THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Edgar O. Waller. — The Royal Animated Picture Company continues its excellent series of films, and the singing of Mr. Wensley Russell is thoroughly enjoyed.

EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Managing-Director, Mr. Oswald Stoll; Acting-Manager, Mr. Chas. H. Bowmaker.— The head of the bill is occupied by Arthur Roberts and company, with the screamingly funny absurdity, entitled The Importance of Being Another Man's Wife, in which the popular comedian keeps the audience in a continuous roar of laughter. Conway and Leland, the merry monopes, are exceedingly clever as well as amusing; and Pat Rafferty gains a welcome share of approbation; an energetic instrumentalist is seen in Violi; and a smart turn is supplied by Spry and Austin; the manipulation of a number of hoops by Atroy secures him an excellent reception; and Tina Clementa is to be congratulated on the cleverness of her troupe of horses and dogs. Farmyard imitations, by Harry Carsdale, prove highly entertaining; and the programme is further helped by Ambrose Thorne, comedian, and the American Bioscope.

PAISLEY.—PAISLEY THEATRE.—Sole Proprietor and Manager, Mr. J. H. Savile.—This place of entertainment was opened for the season on Monday by Mr. J. W. Whitbread's company. The following has been the bill for the week: Lord Edward; or '98; Willy Reilly, Sarsfield, The Insurgent Chief, The Colleen Bawn, and The Irishman. As Lord Edward Mr. Robert Faulkner acted in splendid style; Mr. Henry Forrest depicted Major Sirr in realistic fashion; Francis Higgins was skilfully handled by Mr. Ion Ireland; Mr. Dane Clark played powerfully the part of Francis Magan; capital impersonations were submitted by Mr. James Daly as Neilson and Mr. Henry Richardson as Tony; and Mr. James O'Brien was extremely clever and entertaining in his embodiment of Thady McGrath. Miss Cecilia Dare made a most convincing Pamela, acting with histrionic ability; Miss P. Marnard as Lady Louisa Connolly was altogether successful and sympathetic; the Miss Moore of Miss Madeline Hurst was an excellent impersonation; and Miss Monica Kelly was delightfully sweet and winsome in her rendering of Katey Malone. Many other characters, more or less of minor importance, were all ably and intelligently handled.

PENZANCE.—ST. JOHN'S HALL.—Leon Vint's Globe choir, sceneorama, and variety combination opened here for a week on Monday, and is proving a strong attraction. The programme of nearly three hours' duration is kept going without an interval, and is full of variety and interest. Madame Vint, in her clairvoyant séance, is undoubtedly the star turn, and her performance is the subject of much wonderment and comment. The vocal and instrumental numbers by various members of the company are exceptionally well rendered, and the combination is considerably strengthened by the versatility of a remarkably good comedian.

ALEXANDRA GROUNDS.—The Lyndon Vaudevilles continue to supply the entert

Richeux.—Few finer performances have been witnessed in Ramsgate than that of Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace, which has been staged at the Pavilion during the week. Mr. McKenzie's company, who present the play, do it most effectively. The cast includes Miss Mary Illington, who, in her original part of Mrs. Jardine, gives a brilliant performance; while Mr. Yorke Stephens sustains with artistic skill the rôle of Captain Mowbray. Miss Frances Vine gives a clever impersonation of Mrs. Gorringe; Mr. Maitland Dicker is capital as Colonel Jardine; Mr. Briscoe Owen plays a difficult part most creditably; and the minor characters are represented in first-rate style.

ROCHDALE.—EMPIRE THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. Thomas Hargreaves; Acting-Manager, Mr. Frank Hargreaves. — Mme. Collard's boarhounds, in a burlesque act, entitled Robinson Crusoe, top the bill here this week. The animals go through their performance with great intelligence. Charles J. Johnson, "the black diamond," is a popular artist; his dancing is specially attractive. Other capital turns included in the programme are J. H. Greener, the Salford singing pit lad; Three Royal Temples, operatic vocalists; Raglus, lawn tennis ball manipulator; Silly Billy Elliott, comedian; Sisters Edwardes, vocalists, dancers, and drummers; and the Empire Bioscope.

ROTHERHAM.—THEATRE ROYAL, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. Holbery Hardy.—Mr. H. F. Housden and company are here for the first time with A Woman's Past, a strong domestic drama. Mr. J. Myron-Howard is very effective as David Heath; and Mr. David Phillips is seen to advantage as Frank Delauney. Mr. H. F. Housden, the author, gives a thoughtful portrayal of the part of Clement Harper; and Mr. Clifton Earle does well as Uriah Craven. Miss Dorothy Wallace gives a pleasing rendition of the rôle of Bessie; and Miss Doris Cameron is an excellent Dorothy Heath. Miss Mabel Northam is a sprightly Kate; and Miss Irene Carrington as Clara Darrell is responsible for a clever representation.

SALFORD.—PRINCE OF WALES.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. E. B. Goulden; Acting Manager, Mr. Harold Goulden.—Mr. John Cecil, who represents Sir James Franklyn, the self-accused criminal judge, in How Money's Made, had a good reception from a full house on Monday, and he was supported by a capital all-round company. Mr. Frank Strickland is forceful, and acts with discretion as the coiner Eustace Dare; Leonard Murray is well presented by Mr. Henri Gerald; and the trying part of Ruth Franklyn is played by Miss M. Leslie with telling effect. The negro Glory is a clever piece of work, in which Mr. Elton Morgan keeps the house in excellent humour, being ably assisted by Miss Flo Norman as Phyllis. Bobbie Vane (Dare's accomplice) is in the capable hands of Mr. Owen Edwin.

REGENT THEATRE OF VARIETIES, LTD.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Herbert Raymond; Secretary, Mr. J. C. Patterson.—The farcical episode Barmaids, presented by Hodgson (Miss Hulo), Lowther (Mr. Harry) and Comfy, is a most laughable turn. Duncan and Godfrey are also much applauded for their interesting coster romance, Me and 'Er. Bosanquet, with his Bosanquephone resembling the human voice, again delights with his violin solos. Clever turns are also given by the Sisters Valli, long-boot dancers and instrumentalists; Tom E. Cliffe, comedian; the Warsaw Bros., in their Australian comedy musical act; Annie Laurie, a dainty comedienne and dancer; and James Kurry, eccentric comedian; the bioscope pictures are especially amusing.

ROYAL HIPPODROME.—Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy B. Broadhead; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. C. H. Wentworth.—Westwoods (lady and gentleman) are much applauded for their daring cycle act; Herr Addison's troupe of fox terriers go through some clever and amusing performances; Happy School Times affords the Franz Family an opportunity of displaying some clever tumbling and dancing; and Howard Ward and Louie Davis, in Wanted, a Typist, do some amusing business. The Three Mushams, in their comical sketch A Day on Hampstead Heath; Bernard Katz, basso vocalist; Richards, comedy acrobats; Dolly Denver, comedienne and clog dancer; and Calile and Walker also appear.

SALISBURY. — VICTORIA PARK. — Director of Entertainments, Mr. F. D'Alton Tebby; Manageress, Miss Jessie D'Alton.—Glorious weather prevailing, these concerts are being patronised by large audiences nightly. As usual, Miss Beattie Witham is highly successful as a vocalist; and Miss Ramsdale also scores with her song, "The Apple Tree." Mr. Skidmore's comic songs win rounds of applause; Mr. William Dyar and Mr. Tom Walton contribute amusing numbers; Mr. George Conway's sketches at the piano are new this week. The bioscope, with a fresh set of pictures, concludes the evening's entertainment.

SCARBOROUGH.—LONDESBOROUGH THEATRE.—Proprietors, Messrs. Waddington and Son; Manager, Mr. J. T. Carpenter.—Messrs. Lockwood and Crossman Co. is paying a return visit with Sergeant Brue, Mr. Arthur Reynolds taking the part of the sergeant in an admirable manner. Mr. E. Percy Rogers as Michael Brue acquits himself well. As Aurora Brue Miss Mary Hay makes herself a warm favourite. Mr. Cecil Burt as Mr. Cranks shows every evidence of being conversant with police court life, especially when dealing with Crookie Scrubbs, a difficult part well undertaken by Mr. Charles McLazan, who causes much amusement. Miss Hebe Bliss very becomingly takes the part of Lady Bickenhall, and Mr. Cecil Hood admirably portrays the part of the police inspector.

THE HIPPODROME (Proprietor, Mr. George Zalva) has now opened with his season's programme, which includes Adella and Claude, equestrians; Starlight, the cake-walk horse; Little Albini, acrobatic clown; Luis Hardt, who shows enormous strength; the Three Ohmys, a show in themselves in the triple equestrian act; the Three Rubys, who please the audience immensely; Basusio Bros., acrobatic experts; Miss Lilly and her high school horse Lazeppi, which displays considerable intelligence; Claud Ohmy, a master in his equestrian act. The star turn is the Five Cumberlands, who seem to be able to do anything as acrobatic cyclists. The performance concludes with Wallace Selkirk's juvenile spectacle entitled Bonnie Scotland, in which over 100 local children take part; it is most effective and realistic.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietress, Mrs. Henry Mayhew; Manager, Mr. Fred. P. Morgan.—Messrs. Dottridge, Longden, and Livesey's company in The Village Blacksmith is here this week. Mr. Sam Livesey taking the part of Longfellow's ideal with considerable ability and prominence. Capt. Leo has an able exponent in Mr. Joseph Carter, who receives his share of disapproval from the audience. The acting of Miss Bertha Hanbury is remarkable as Harry Strong, the child; Miss Maggie Edwards as Kate Strong, the despised wife, acts a difficult part most admirably; and Mr. George V. Campbell as Billy Twigg causes much amusement. An interesting item in the play is the sensational and startling wrestling match between Captain Leo and the village blacksmith, which adds considerable interest to the play. Both of the contestants are evidently well versed in the intricate movements of wrestling.

SPA THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Cliff Bridge Company; Manager, Mr. Fras. Goodricke.—The attraction here is Mr. Louis Calvert's company in Sunday, with Miss Emélie Polini in the title-rôle. As Towzer Mr. Wm. Lockhart ably fits the rôle of a rough Westerner; Mr. Sidney Rennef as Davy delights everybody; as Lively, Mr. T. Norman Walter has a part that fits him exactly; Mr. Arthur Vezin as Jacky displays strong emotional powers; Miss Muriel Pope as a nun acts well; Mr. Ernest A. Douglas as Tom Oxley is all that could be desired; Mr. G. Wallace Johnston as Arthur Brinthorpe puts good work into his portrayal; and Miss Arnice Murray as Mrs. Naresby presents the character in a powerful manner.

PEOPLE'S PALACE AND AQUARIUM.—Managing-Director, Mr. William Morgan; Secretary and Manager, Mr. Walter Kitchingman.—Madame Marie Levante's Orchestra of Ladies is still a prime favourite with the holiday crowds visiting here. The vocalist for the week is Mr. Arthur Weber, who is principal bass at Liverpool Cathedral; Miss Ada Webb and troupe of lady swimmers give exhibitions daily in the bath; The Lizzettes are a very clever troupe of lady acrobats; Miss Molly Augarde sings delightfully; The Uniques do full justice in their ladder act; Elsie Rubina has mastered the art of balancing to a nicety; Jack Pleasants is an originally funny comedian; Lily Andrews can sing coon songs with pleasing effect; Kloof and Ramsay give animation to their musical turn; Mlle. Amedia, contortionist, is acceptable; Judge's cockatoos show careful training; whilst Vernon's Imperial Bioscope is as popular as ever; and Curtis Leo, magician, completes the long programme.

NORTH PIER PAVILION.—Proprietor, Mr. W. Morgan; Manager, Mr. Walter Kitchingman.—Charles Morritt with his mysteries is installed here for the season with a capable company of artists, and gives two performances daily, concluding with a farce entitled The Spirit Circle, which is very amusing and instructive.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE (Lessee, Mr. C. E. Pareato) has opened here with living pictures and a most capable company of vaudeville artists, including Parker's performing dogs, goats, and donkeys.

SOUTH FORESHORE.—Catlin's Pierrots are now in full swing, Mr. Catlin having two excellent companies, who are attracting large crowds of visitors daily.

GRAND HOTEL SKATING RINK.—Mr. Tom Carrick's troupe of pierrots have become very popular, and his artists are pleasing.

SEAHAM HARBOUR.—NEW THEATRE ROYAL.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. A. C. Harrison.—Miss Emma Litchfield's company, under the direction of Mr. Stuart Cleveland, is on a return visit to Seaham this week. The part of Sergt.-Major Clive Crawford is in the capable hands of Mr. Cleveland; Lieut. Kingston, R.N., finds a sterling exponent in Mr. Edward Derwent; Mr. John Worth is distinctly good as Captain Mannering, R.N.; Pat Maloney is humorously sketched by Mr. Chas. A. Preece; Mr. George H. Doyle greatly pleases as Moses. As Hilda Mannering, Miss Litchfield plays with rare skill; Phyllis is charmingly acted by Miss Maude Steeple.

SHEFFIELD.—ALEXANDRA THEATRE.—Managing Director, Mr. W. D. Forsdike; Acting-Manager, Mr. C. W. Ramsay.—The favourite actress, Miss V. St. Lawrence opened to a good house on Monday, supported by Messrs. Beaudyn and Livesey's specially arranged company, in the thrilling drama dealing with life in St. Petersburg, entitled A Beautiful Fiend. The piece was carefully staged, and the acting all round was good. Miss V. St. Lawrence in the title-rôle played with her usual power and distinction, and she fully realised the character of the fascinating adventuress; Mr. Montague Beaudyn acted earnestly; and Miss Blanche Hill and Mr. Tom Robertson were also successful in important parts. The Alexandra, after an interval of twenty years, has reverted to its old custom, and the votaries of St. Nicotine who attend the theatre can offer up incense to their hearts' content.

EMPIRE PALACE, LTD.—Acting-Manager, Mr. Alan D. Dunbar.—The marvellous conjuror Mr. Hermann Melot is once more delighting and astonishing large audiences with his extraordinary feats of sleight of hand; Terry and Lambert, two clever Transatlantic artists, appear in a sketch which is replete with humour; the popular comedian Mr. J. W. Rickaby is successful with his new comic songs and laughable impersonations. Other popular numbers on this week's programme are the Ten Genis; Miss Marie Weston, a graceful dancer; Pierce and Maizee, in a novel act; Miss Myra Stanfield, vocalist; the bioscope, with new films; Erik, and the talented Canary Troupe.

GRAND PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. G. H. Beagle.—Engaged here this week are Mr. Dick Cruikshank and company in two sketches; Billy French, coon vocalist; Miss Gladys Wilton, comedienne; Mr. Harry Morgan, comic vocalist; Miss Florence Leonard, ballad vocalist; Zasma, a daring aerial performer; and Pallister's biograph, with up-to-date pictures.

CENTRAL HALL.—A smart bill of fare is submitted here this week, comprising variety turns and animated pictures of events of the day.

SOUTHAMPTON. — PALACE. — Proprietor and Director-General, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Trussell.—Many favourites are appearing here, including Achmed Ibrahim Troupe of Arab acrobats, who are wonderfully clever. Frank Hardie and company successfully present a dramatic sketch, For the Honour of the Regiment; Percy Curry, the candy man; Hyram Travers, coster comedian; Fyne and Hurley, the coster and dude; Millie Denham, comedienne; and Gracie Grahame, comedienne of "Charley" fame, also contribute to the evening's entertainment.

PIER PAVILION.—Acting-Manager, Mr. H. C. Sait.—Madame Stockham's company of harpists and entertainers have been delighting large audiences with their artistic entertainments. A special feature has been the admirable singing of the Cantor Glee Singers, whose unaccompanied quartettes have won golden opinions.

GRAND THEATRE.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. Fred Mouillot; Resident-Manager, Mr. Sydney Paxton. — This popular playhouse re-opened its portals on Monday, looking very spick and span after the re-decoration and upholstering it has been subjected to during the close season. The attraction was the farcical romance, His Excellency the Governor, ably presented by a coterie of golfing actors, who score a great success. Mr. Malcolm Cherry acts with great energy in the name part; Mr. D. J. Williams is very funny as the politician, Henry Carlton, M.P.; Mr. H. Marsh Allen is well cast as Capt. Charles Carew, A.D.C.; Mr. Lionel Mackinder is very diverting as John Baverstock, private secretary to His Excellency; Miss Valerie Salberg, as the much-sought-after Ethel Carlton; Miss Isabel Grey, as Mrs. Wentworth Bolingbroke; and Miss Jean Aylwin, as Stella, are all equally successful, and other parts are capably played by Messrs. Charles Brown, Arthur Willoughby, Littledale Power, and R. H. Sherard. An irresponsible trifle, A Waste of Time, precedes the farce, and proves very attractive.

HIPPODROME.—Proprietors, Messrs. Fredk. Mouillot and W. de Frece; General-Manager, Mr. J. de Frece; District-Manager, Mr. Sydney Paxton; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. P. Howell.—Topping the list here is George Bastow, the favourite comedian, who scores with "The Galloping Major" and the ever-popular "Farmer Giles." Fred Hallam is another clever comedian, and the Sisters Bartholomew excel as dancers and duettists. Highly popular are Johnson and Bert, comedy acrobats, and Lily Black, comedienne. A very successful matinée was given here on Wednesday in aid of the Lifeboat Fund.

SOUTHEND-ON-SEA. — EMPIRE THEATRE. — Empire Theatre Co., Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Geo. Conquest; Acting-Manager, Mr. A. Lingham Power.—A capital week's attraction is provided here by Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison, who are presenting in first-class style the comedy entitled The Freedom of Suzanne. The play is mounted in a tasteful and pleasing manner, which is greatly admired, some of the dresses being very costly and pretty. Mr. Percy Hutchison in the principal rôle of Charles Trevor, is decidedly good; Mr. F. G. Thurstans represents Fitzroy Harding well; and Mr. William Mallaleu is suited as Sir Horace Hatton. Mr. Patrick Quill portrays Lord Datchet most humorously; and Messrs. Frank Hill and Townshend Whitling, as Captain Harry Cecil and Tommy Keston respectively, give lively impersonations. Miss Annie Stalman is well adapted to the character of Lady Charlotte Trevor; Miss Charlotte Mead is noteworthy in her interpretation of Miss Fanny Minching; Miss Violet Ley is very successful as Lady Isabel Bury; and Miss Dorothy Lart gives a clever portrayal of Mrs. Tustail. Miss Mabel Love, who has a hearty reception, gives evidence of her remarkable ability in her impersonation of Suzanne Trevor. The remaining characters are well sustained by Mrs. F. Turner, Mr. J. E. Watson, and Mr. Bruce Franks. The episode, entitled Two in a Trap, precedes, when Mr. Whitling and Miss Violet Ley do credit to themselves.

THE KURSAAL.—Secretary and Manager, Mr. P. T. J. Bacon.—Plenty of good fare is provided this week, and the theatre programme is received with satisfaction. Those contributing are Will Harmony, comedian and mimic; Florrie Farren, comedienne and a pretty dancer; the Bennetts, two remarkably clever gun and bâton swingers and dancers; Bernard Bransby, vocal and character comedian; Mitzka, in his mystery, who proves most entertaining; the Kimberley Boys, two eccentrics, who become great favourites; and Geo. Power's comedy company, who present Matrimonial Bliss in capital style. Lorenzo's Miniature Circus shows in the Hippodrome, and give excellent performances; and some good entertainments are also supplied in the Café Chantant. Many other attractions gain considerable support.

PIER PAVILION.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. E. Angless; Acting-Manager, Mr. Stanley E. Angless.—The management are to be congratulated in presenting such excellent plays for this week's attraction. On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday Messrs. Ernest R. Abbott and F. C. Berridge produced Sapho in commendable manner. Mr. Ernest R. Abbott was responsible for a clever impersonation of Jean Gaussin; whilst Mr. F. C. Berridge was equally successful in the rôle of Henri Dechelette. Flamant was well taken by Mr. Ernest Hartington; and as Uncle Cessaire, Mr. George C. Doughty was good. Mr. W. H. Davis-Brown interpreted Hettema with ability; and as Old Legrand, Mr. Weedon Ross proved a capable exponent. Mme. Hettema was well portrayed by Miss Marjorie Tennant; and Miss Mary Douglas well defined the character of La Pipotte. Miss Hetty Jones as the child Josaph deserves mention. Fanny Legrand, known as Sapho, had in Miss Ada Abbott a talented impersonator, who gave a thorough exposition that was greatly admired. For Thursday, Friday, and to-day (Saturday) Trilby was announced.

ALFRESCO THEATRE OF VARIETIES, ROYAL TERRACE.—Lessee, Mr. H. E. Angless.—Professor Vincent has been given the management of this new and popular place of amusement, which continues to draw huge crowds daily. Excellent performances are given at intervals, and Mr. Charles Ellis and Miss Marie Lawrence, newcomers, add greatly to the already long programme. A novel feature is the Urban Bioscope, showing the latest pictures in the open. The Bijou Orchestra, with Mr. H. Lyme as director, is proving most popular.

PIER HILL BANDSTAND.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. H. E. Angless. — Mr. Ballard Brown, with his talented and capable company, has every reason to be proud of the support he gains by his high-class entertainments. The programme is more lengthy than ever, Mr. Tom Hawkins, comedian, and Mr. Percival Reed, humorist and raconteur, being both very successful.

SOUTHPORT. — OPERA HOUSE, WINTER GARDENS.—Proprietors, the Southport Opera House and Winter Gardens Company, Ltd.; General-Manager, Mr. Alfred Hemming.—An unusual attraction is provided at the above house this week by the engagement of Mr. James Welch and company—four distinct pieces each evening, i.e., The Lady Burglar, Punctured, The Man in the Street, and Judged by Appearances. The famous comedian who appeared in the three latter pieces, in the characters of Jim Crimp, Jabez Groves, and Arthur Dennison respectively, finds ample scope for his versatile comedy powers, with which the audience was delighted; Mr. Welch is very ably supported by Miss Audrey Ford, who depicted the parts of Eliza Biff and Helen Dennison with admirable effect; and the principals are well assisted by an excellent company.

ALBERT HALL, WINTER GARDENS. — Lessee, Mrs. Charles Parker; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. H. Mertz.—The attractive combination of artists engaged at this popular variety hall is headed by Mr. C. Emlyn Jones and his quartette of ladies in an international vocal scena, who submit a capital all-round performance. Other principal turns are contributed by Howard and Collinson, in their original absurdity, The Porter and the Parcel; Wal Pink, comedian in the monologue Cheap Jack; Fred Cary, popular comedian; Alma Gray, comedienne and dancer; Hallam and Stanton, in their musical sketch entitled A Broken Journey; the Alskarno trio of acrobats; Marie Blythe, comedienne; and the Bioscope, with latest films.

PIER PAVILION. — Proprietors, The Southport Pier Co.; Manager, Mr. Charles F. Johnson.—A good all-round programme was submitted to a large audience at this hall of varieties on Monday, the premier item being contributed by Cullen and Carthy, pantomime comedians, who present a highly diverting performance. The turns embrace C. F. Malburn, Anglo-American novelty instrumentalists; Linton, clever rope equilibrist; the Zampas, duettists and dancers; Charles Gardner, comedian; Maud Jerome, dainty comedienne; the Maros, comedy bar performers; Oliver Conroy, eccentric character comedian; and the Bio-Tableaux.

HIPPODROME, LORD STREET.—The Royal Italian Circus of performing animals opened the second week of their engagement here on Monday, when a large and appreciative audience patronised the performance. Several new features proved highly popular and diverting.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Licensees and Managers, Messrs. J. and F. Coulson.—The boards are occupied this week by Garside and Knowles's company, in the drama entitled The London Fireman. Mr. J. Forbes Knowles is an able exponent of the title-rôle, Hal Curtis; Mr. Oliver Birrell as Viscount Fleming is suitably placed; a good delineation of Ida Curtis is submitted by Miss Nellie Shirley; Miss Florence M. Daly is convincing as Grace Curtis; and the comedy element is amply supplied by Miss Nellie Garside as Pollie Bramble, and Mr. Harry C. Momber as Bill Stinger.

EMPIRE PALACE THEATRE.—Proprietor, Mr. Richard Thornton; General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Thompson. — An attractive programme, headed by Carrie Laurie's popular juveniles in kindergarten is responsible for large audiences; Edith Courtney, ballad vocalist, has gained many admirers; Ancillotti and his thought-reading dog Pilu give an unique turn; Georgina Leonard is much appreciated. Other good items include Harrigan and Holt, comedians and dancers; Dot Hardy, comedienne; Will English, popular coon; and the American Bioscope.

TIVOLI. — Lessees and Managers, Councillor J. K. Hall and Mr. Joseph Sweeney.—The Three Henriques, comedy acrobats, submit a fine acrobatic turn; Clara Victor, character vocalist, a local favourite, receives a warm welcome; Smith, the winner of last week's competition, appears successfully. Another competition, entitled "Coonology," is being held this week. The Universal living pictures still maintain their reputation.

STAFFORD.—LYCEUM THEATRE. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. James Elphinstone.—The British Empire Talking Pictures and Variety Co. is here for the week. The pictures are exceptionally fine, and, together with the company, which includes Miss La Clair and Little Doris, constitutes a very fine entertainment.

STALYBRIDGE.—GRAND THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Mundill; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. D. Oswald.—The two-house a night variety business continues to meet with favour, and this week an excellent programme has been arranged. Angeline is a dancing juggler, and performs some tricks very cleverly; Sill and Silcock, silent comedians, create much merriment in a funny skit, Left Luggage; Lillian Neville, operatic and ballad vocalist, sings very sweetly; and Percy Johnson renders some songs of his own composition. Minnie and Mabel Brooke are a couple of duettists and dancers; Rose Tilley is a dashing comedienne; W. Salmon gains much applause as a trick and musical cyclist; and Fred Mulvey and Minnie Miriam are successful in a capital sketch, In the Studio.

ST. HELENS. — HIPPODROME. — Proprietors, Messrs. Barrasford, Sley, and Willmot; Resident-Manager, Mr. A. Vic. Carnell.—Cline and Clarke head the bill here, and win enthusiastic applause with their smart dancing; Billy Williams, comedian, is a favourite; the Bros. Redmond, acrobatic comedians, are heartily applauded; and other good turns include Miss Marion Scott, comedienne; Los Rupertos, equilibrists; Sisters De Lacy, operatic duettists; Bugler J. Carr; and Weisker's bioscope.

STOCKPORT.—THEATRE ROYAL AND OPERA HOUSE.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Charles Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Revill.—Ample testimony to the popularity of A Royal Divorce has been given here this week by the large audiences which have assembled to witness this successful drama. The impressive acting of Miss Edith Cole as the Empress Josephine and the powerful and effective impersonation of Napoleon by Mr. Frederick Victor have commanded the most enthusiastic appreciation. As Talleyrand, Mr. F. Joynsen-Powell acted with marked ability; and Mr. Graham Wood as the Marquis de Beaumont; Mr. St. George Frere as General Augereau; and Mr. Arthur Preston as Marshal Murat filled their respective parts successfully. Mr. Wm. Robbins gave a pleasing representation of the Emperor's physician, Doctor Corvisart; and Mr. Dennis Bryan acted cleverly and amusingly as the innkeeper Grimaud. Marie Louise had a capable representative in Miss Agnes Imlay; and Stephanie was capitally played by Miss Clara Russell. Friday evening was a grand souvenir night and complimentary benefit to Miss Edith Cole.

EMPIRE, LTD.—Acting-Manager, Mr. Wm. Black.—The Daunton-Shaw troupe of Australian cyclists, who form the chief attraction here this week, have been remarkably successful. Messrs. Bowman and Garrett's military sketch, entitled Medals and Gold, was accorded a gratifying reception; Chas. Serra gave a neat and clever statuary equilibristic act; Harley and Hardin were entertaining as eccentric dancers and mandolinists; Ailsa Douglas, soprano vocalist, sang pleasingly; the Two Jagos are clever bâton manipulators, vocalists, and dancers; Jack Rae, tramp gymnast, was amusing; and the Brooklands are dainty comediennes.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTION.—The entertainment here is headed by Bob Gardner, humorist and a capable Milanese piper and Tyrolean singer; and among others appearing successfully are Walter Sutton, the laughing comedian; Little May, a pleasing chi'd vocalist; Emma Halliday, descriptive vocalist; and Nellie Sylvester, coon vocalist and dancer.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.— GRAND. — Proprietor, Mr. John Batty; Manager, Mr. Walter Batty.—The company here includes Mike S. Wallen, American comedian, whose humorous songs and capital patter are thoroughly enjoyed; clever comedy juggling is shown by Albertus and Bartrum; whilst smart performances are given by the Brothers Pasquali, acrobats and head-to-head balancers; and Diana and Natalia, aërial gymnasts. Other contributors include Arthur Elvy, "the up-to-date tipster"; Jack Crawley, mimic; and Dora Lyric, comedienne.

SUNDERLAND.—AVENUE THEATRE.—Managing-Director and General-Manager, Mr. Chas. E. Machin.—On Wednesday a grand orchestral concert was given in aid of the "Little Sisters of the Poor," the theatre being kindly lent by Mr. Machin. It has been closed during the remainder of the week.

THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. Chas. E. Machin; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Hemingway.—On Monday Mr. Fred Benton and a capable company commenced their provincial tour here with The French Spy, excellently staged and elaborately dressed. Mr. Richard Fulton submits a fine rendering to the part of Capt. Sommers; Mr. Max Coutts does full justice to the heavy rôle of Count Romanoff; Mr. Lincoln Calthorpe makes a truly military Chief of the Russian Police; Mr. Chas. Digby is commendable as Alexis; Mr. Fred Benton scores well as Fritz. Good comedy is introduced by Mr. Seymour Perry in his rôle of Knipps; Mr. Claude Aymond is sufficient as Lord Aynsley; and Mr. Charles Mitchell enacts Carl Schwartz ably. As the Countess Andre Miss Gertrude Evans comes off with flying colours; Miss A. Harrison-Tate enacts Olga with genuine abandon; and Miss Margaret Seymour is admirable as Julie.

TORQUAY.—THEATRE ROYAL.—Managing-Director, Mr. W. H. Mortimer; Secretary, Mr. Arthur Pearse.—The management was fortunate in securing for the re-opening of the theatre, after it has been handsomely renovated, such an attractive play as Lucky Durham, which was presented to a well-filled house by Mr. H. Armitage and Mr. Arthur Leigh's capable company on Monday night. In the name-part Mr. Edmund Kennedy played with great force, his restraint considerably heightening the effect of a very fine performance; Mr. Arthur Leigh as the Hon. Reginald Steighton soon worked himself into popular favour, and gave a capital rendering of the part; John Durham's mother was sympathetically represented by Miss Lilian Mason; and the Helen Ballerton of Miss Alice Esther Belmore was a naturally charming and captivating interpretation; Lord and Lady Mountfallon were respectively ably rendered by Mr. Robert Forsyth and Miss Frances Dolviston; Mr. A. E. Walker was well placed as Mr. Vallerton; and the minor characters were ably sustained, notably that of a moneylender, by Mr. W. F. Clitherow, and the butler, by Mr. Eric Wynne.

PRINCESS PIER CONCERT HALL.—Proprietors, Torquay Town Council; Manager, Mr. A. T. Tremlett.—A capital entertainment is being provided here this week by the Æolian Opera Singers, Mr. Charles Parker acting as director; Mr. Richardson Taylor is extremely popular as a ventriloquist, and his whistling solos receive well-merited applause; Miss Rose Alderman is possessed of a good soprano voice; and Mr. Vivian Munro is distinctly successful in some well-known items. Miss Jennie Johns is a fascinating soubrette; and Miss Florence Kay has a good soprano voice. The concerted numbers are also excellently rendered.

TON-Y-PANDY. — THEATRE ROYAL. — Lessees, Messrs. Carlton and Duckworth; General-Manager, Mr. Sam Duckworth; Acting-Manager, Mr. Ridgwood Barrie.—Mr. Eade Montefiore's production of The Streets of London is here this week. As Badger, Mr. William Rokeby is excellent; Mr. Riddell Robinson scores heavily as Gideon Bloodgood; and Mr. T. Richter makes a good Mark Livingstone. The part of Lucy Fairweather is well filled by Miss Edith Goodall; Mr. Ian Lloyd-Mackenzie is successful as Paul Fairweather; and Mr. Clifford Brown as Jonas Puffy causes roars of laughter.

TUNBRIDGE WELLS. — OPERA HOUSE. — Lessee, Mr. Charles Carey; Business-Manager, Mr. L. Gunnell.—Mr. Charles Macdona's company is appearing here this week in Mr. Carton's amusing farce, Mr. Hopkinson, and a new production, The Adventurer, of which a special notice appears in another column. Mr. Hopkinson has occupied the boards the first three nights of this week. Mr. Frank Stanmore gives a very amusing interpretation of the nouveau riche who wants to make an aristocratic marriage; Mr. Arnold Lucy undertakes the Duke, and Miss M. Alison Alexander the Duchess of Braceborough. As Lord Gawthorpe, Mr. Reginald Dane does well; Miss Gladys Jesson takes the part of Lady Tyra with great vivacity; while Miss Katherine Romsey gives a clever study of the maid to Lady Tyra. Mr. Shule Lea, as Lady Tyra's father, who is disgusted with his prospective son-in-law, added to the amusement of the audience; while Mr. Geo. McCloskie, as the family solicitor, made the most of his big scene in the third act; and other minor parts were well sustained by Mr. C. M. Heslop, Mr. Vincent Galley, and Mr. G. Lowther. The piece has been preceded each evening by The Snowstorm.

WAKEFIELD. — HIPPODROME. — Lessee, Mr. Alfred Selwyn; Manager, Mr. Henry Lucas.—Dr. Carl Hermann, hypnotist, is paying a return visit here, and his wonderful performance is proving a great attraction. Horton and Lindon contribute a clever triple-bar act; the Three Bostonians, juvenile vocalists, are capital dancers; an interesting song-scena, entitled The Shoeblack's Dream, is ably presented by Mr. Fred Fuller's company; Miss Molly Woolstenhulme, ballad vocalist, sings well; the Carls contribute a smart acrobatic turn on a spring table.

WALSALL.—HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, The Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General-Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—A varied and entertaining programme is submitted here this week. Hetty King in her male impersonations proves a great attraction; Trik and Trixie appear in a vocal, instrumental, and acrobatic act; Flo D'Orville is an excellent comedienne; the Three Clements score as flying gymnasts; and the Spanish Goldinis in their carpet-swinging act prove themselves most popular; Hector Grant, Scotch comedian, and Nelson's Newsboys are very smart; and the Bioscope shows some good pictures.

GRAND THEATRE.—Proprietors, the Walsall Theatres Co., Ltd.; General Manager and Secretary, Mr. W. H. Westwood.—Mr. J. Kingsley Royden presents Mrs. R. A. Cuthbert's company in The Black Bishop. It is an all-round good company, including Miss Jeannie Marquise.

WALTHAMSTOW. — PALACE. — Managing-Director, Mr. G. Adney Payne; Manager, Mr. Arthur J. Barclay; Acting-Manager, Mr. Geo. F. Slatter.—Donaldson Bros. and Ardel are the leading item on the bill of the Walthamstow Palace, and in A Zoological Comedy keep the audience in high good humour. Lilian Doreen sings charmingly "Beside the Bonny Brier Bush," and essays a new departure, accompanying herself in a humorous ditty, "The Boy Next Door." The experiment was eminently successful. Bijou Russell was recalled again and again for her clever sand dance; Henry Herne and company produced a condensed version of The Colleen Bawn, in which Mr. Herne played Myles and Miss Ida Millais Eily O'Connor. The final scene, in which is introduced a lake of real water, "brought the house down." The Sisters Lunelle sing and dance with wonderful vigour and go; and Whit Cunliffe and Fred Mason are both excellent comedians, though on very different lines. Ruffell's Bioscope completes a capital show.

WARRINGTON. — ROYAL COURT. — Proprietors, Messrs. W. Johnson and J. Potter; General-Manager, Mr. J. Potter; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred J. Reece.—Mrs. Alice Chapin and company are here this week in a series of plays. On Monday night Still Waters Run Deep was staged, and Tom Taylor's famous comedy received able treatment. Mrs. Alice Chapin scored as Mrs. Sternhold, a remark which applies to Miss Paula Ferman as Mrs. Mildmay; Mr. Frederick Park acted with restraint as Mr. Potter; and Mr. Harold Chapin infused the requisite dramatic force into the character of Captain Hawksley. Mr. Harry Kelchman as John Mildmay was well placed; Mr. Malcolm J. Cumming as Dewbilk, Miss Florence Gay as Mrs. Langford, Miss Elaine Joine as Mrs. Markham, Mr. Wheeler as Gimlet, and Miss Elsie Chapin as Jessop completed a capital cast. On Tuesday, Shame, The Lady Mesmerist, and the musical comedy, A Pantomime Rehearsal, were staged.

ROYAL THEATRE OF VARIETIES.—Proprietors, Messrs W. Johnson and J. Potter; General-Manager, Mr. J. Potter; Director of Amusements, Mr. Fred Willmot.—Zeta Gray and company are delighting all here this week in their sketch, A Lancashire Lass, in which the charming comedienne has ample scope for displaying her versatility and vocal ability. Barrett and Knowles are a couple of champion patter purveyors and Joe Conway a comedian with quite a style of his own; Sisters Julian are capable duettists and J. P. Carroll quite an expert on the tambourine. The Carney Brothers as duettists score well, and the Royal Bioscope pictures are a choice assortment.

WEST HARTLEPOOL.—PALACE.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Julius Simpson.—The Troupe La Zaille, who are appearing for the first time at this house, give a marvellous display, their equilibristic act being novel and very smart; Edie Gray and White Coons sing themselves into great favour; Fields and Lewis, burlesque artists, are clever; and Leah Arden is an accomplished vocalist. Macdonald and Huntingdon, America's refined singing and dancing entertainers, are good in their musical efforts; Harry Bancroft, vocalist, sings taking songs; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux make up an excellent bill of fare.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE. — GRAND PIER PAVILION.—The Dagonets are well received by a large audience; Mr. Arthur Snelling gains loud applause for his singing of the "The Last Watch"; Mr. R. Mountfield's song "The Irish Walk," is humorously rendered; Mr. Joseph Blascheek delights his hearers with "My Juliet"; Mr. H. Stockwell sings "The Death of Nelson" in an artistic manner; Miss Lily Beaton gives a delightful rendering of "Kentucky Babe," and Miss Mildred Wrighton's "White Coon" is loudly encored.

KNIGHTSTONE PAVILION AND OPERA HOUSE.—Manager, Mr. N. Payne.—Miss Dinah Morris's Variety company is here for the first three nights of the week; Mr. Henry Gole is an excellent eccentric comedian; Miss Bessie Coburn scores as a burlesque artist; a really good turn is that of the Franklin troupe of Russian dancers; the Australian Troubadours are a great attraction; the terpsichorean feats of Miss Lily Vanderbilt are well received; Miss Effie White is also a clever dancer; a sketch entitled The Lost Coon affords Miss Dinah Morris plenty of scope for her remarkable talents, and as the Pride of Lucanna she is an artistic treat; Mr. J. Bannister Howard's company in Oliver Twist is here for the remainder of the week.

(COPYRIGHT.)

In these columns it is proposed to give a strictly alphabetical arrangement of the titles of plays produced during the last fifty years. It will be the most complete list ever published, and should prove invaluable to authors desiring to discover whether a certain title has ever been used, and when. To members of the dramatic profession it will be useful in determining the dates of plays in which they have achieved successes. Our readers are politely requested to advise us of any omission or inaccuracy which they may notice.

This list as soon as complete will be published in cheap book form.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

The usual weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on Tuesday at the County Hall, Spring-gardens.

CHAIRMAN AND VICE-CHAIRMAN.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee reported with regret that Mr. Walter B. Yates has been obliged to resign the chairmanship of the committee, in order to enable him to accept the chairmanship of the Parliamentary Committee. They had appointed their vice-chairman, Mr. H. J. Greenwood, to be their chairman, and Lord Monkswell to be their vice-chairman.

THE ALHAMBRA.

The Committee reported that they had considered drawings, submitted by Mr. A. Moul, showing the alterations proposed to be carried out at the Alhambra Palace, Charing Cross-road, with a view to complying with certain of the suggestions made by the Council in November, 1905, for the structural improvements of these premises. They recommended that Mr. A. Moul be informed that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the seven drawings and five slip tracings submitted by him with regard to alterations proposed, provided the undermentioned conditions be complied with—that the proposed iron and glass addition to the existing refreshment bar in the grand circle shown on the drawings be not constructed without the previous sanction of the Council; that the door at the head of the pass staircase between the balcony and grand circle be hung to defend the opening and made to match in colour and decoration the wall in which it occurs; that the angles upon all staircases and in all landings, passages, &c., be defended by rails to the satisfaction of the Council; and that the open newel staircase be provided with a hand-rail upon its inner side, of sufficient height and strength to prevent persons being forced over it. Agreed to.

INSPECTION.

The expenditure incurred with regard to the inspection of places of public entertainment respecting the character of the performances, &c., during the quarter ended June 30, 1906, was reported to be £2 10s. 3d.

LONDON EXHIBITIONS.

The Committee had considered a drawing, submitted by Mr. A. O. Collard, showing the reconstruction of the existing wooden stairs and bridge over the railway between the Queen's Palace and the Central Hall at the London Exhibitions, Earl's Court, and recommended that Mr. Collard be informed that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the drawing submitted by him provided that certain stated conditions be complied with.
Agreed to.

PROPOSED BRITISH EMPIRE EXHIBITION.

The Committee had considered drawings, submitted by Mr. E. White, on behalf of Mr. Imre Kiralfy, of certain buildings to be erected in connection with the British Empire Exhibition, which it is proposed to lay out on a site about 82 acres in extent, situated on the west side of Wood-lane, Hammersmith. The general scheme of the proposed arrangements has been conditionally approved by the Building Act Committee, and the Theatres Committee recommended that Mr. E. White be informed that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the fifteen drawings submitted by him, provided the undermentioned conditions be complied with—that the stairs down from the first floor of the central hall be set back in order to improve the approaches thereto; that all parts of the premises to be used by the public, the exhibition staff or employees, be provided with means of escape in case of fire, to the satisfaction of the Council; that all doors available for exit be made to open outwards; that a sufficient number of fire hydrants connected up to an ample and constant water supply be installed, and that plans and particulars of the proposed scheme be submitted for the approval of the Council before the commencement of the work; that a flap be placed on the outlet of the drain from the buildings at the point of its connection with the Council's main sewer, and that a further flap be placed in the man-hole nearest to the place of connection; that the whole of the buildings be constructed and arranged in detail to the satisfaction of the Council as regards, lighting, heating, seating, fastenings, notices, handrails, small fire extinguishing appliances, &c.
Approved.

PROPOSED NEW CONCERT HALL.

The Committee had considered sketch plans submitted by Messrs. E. Runtz and Ford, on behalf of Mr. John Waring, of a new concert hall proposed to be erected to front on Oxford-street, Dering-street, and Tenterden-street. The site is considerably below the standard required under the Council's regulations, and the Committee recommended that Messrs. E. Runtz and Ford be informed that the arrangement shown on the six sketch plans submitted by them are, in the opinion of the Council, unsatisfactory.
Approved.

THE SURREY.

The Committee had considered drawings submitted by Messrs. Field and Sons showing certain alterations which have been carried out at the Surrey Vaudeville Theatre, Blackfriars-road. They recommended that Messrs. Field and Sons be informed that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the two drawings submitted by them provided the undermentioned conditions be complied with—that the ceiling over the entrance to the heating chamber be rendered satisfactorily fire-resisting; that the coke chute in the heating chamber be provided with a smoke-proof door; that the partitions enclosing the "quick change" dressing room on the stage be rendered satisfactorily fire-resisting; that the ceiling over the electrician's room be rendered satisfactorily fire-resisting, and that the existing door be replaced by a self-closing fire-resisting door and frame; and that the door of the cloakroom and lavatory, at the rear of the dress-circle, be hung flush with the external face of the wall, to close with the out-going stream of traffic, and be made self-closing.
Agreed to.

THE TIVOLI.

The Committee had considered drawings submitted by Mr. I. Ibbetson and Mr. H. Tozer showing the alterations proposed to be effected at the Tivoli Music Hall, Strand, with a view to complying with certain of the suggestions made by the Council for the structural improvement of the premises. They recommended that Mr. I. Ibbetson and Mr. H. Tozer be informed that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the two drawings submitted by them.
Carried.

"PARIS IN LONDON."

It was decided that the seal of the Council be affixed to the agreement, when ready, for a lease to the syndicate which has been formed for dealing with the central portion of the crescent site created in connection with the Holborn to Strand improvement.

At the conclusion of the business the Council adjourned for the usual long vacation.

"THE GREAT WILDERNESS," a melodrama of life in the far west of America, by W. Alexander Dallas, will form the holiday attraction at the Fulham Theatre, where it will be produced for the first time in London on Monday. It is claimed that the drama is founded on incidents of which the author was an eye-witness, and the scenery is painted from sketches of the places where the principal events occurred.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

THE Tyne Theatre, Newcastle-on-Tyne, staff sports and outing took place on Saturday at Shotley Spa, when a very fine day favoured the company. The genial manager of the theatre, Mr. F. C. Sutcliffe, was present with Mrs. Sutcliffe, who kindly distributed the prizes to the successful competitors. Great credit is due to the secretary, Mr. E. Knight, master electrician, and Mr. Sutcliffe thanked Mr. Knight and the committee for the manner in which everything had been carried out. The other members of the committee were Messrs. S. Hawkes (treasurer), E. Thompson, Jas. Preston, Robt. Nicholson, J. W. Younger, and W. Dixon. The sports referees were Mr. F. C. Sutcliffe, Mr. W. Boardman (Manager, Pavilion, Newcastle-on-Tyne), and Mr. Wardhalf.

A TUG OF WAR was arranged between Mr. W. Boardman's team and Mr. F. C. Sutcliffe's team, which was won by the former. The following events were also decided:—150 Yards Race (Men): Codlin, 1; Gosling, 2; Spence, 3. 80 Yards Ladies' Race: Miss Sutcliffe, 1; Mrs. Crow, 2; Miss Terry, 3. Half-Mile Walking Handicap: Norton, 1; Collins, 2; Chance, 3. 80 Yards Egg and Spoon Race (Ladies): Miss Storey, 1; Miss Stephens, 2; Miss Fender, 3. 80 Yards Egg and Spoon Race (Men): Collins, 1; Nicholson, 2; Spence, 3. Quarter Mile Ladies' Walking Race: Miss Stephens, 1; Miss Snow, 2; Miss Storey, 3. 100 Yards Men's Race: Codling, 1; Gosling, 2; Kelso, 3. Ladies' Skipping: Miss Storey, 104 turns, 1; Miss Thompson, 90 turns, 2. Ladies' Veterans' Race: Mrs. Crow, 1; Miss Liversedge, 2. 50 Yards Men's Sack Race: Spence, 1; McGuinness, 2; Collins, 3. 100 Yards Men's Boots and Sack Race: Gosling, 1; Collins, 2; McGuinness, 3. Men's Veterans' Race: Murray, 1; Hood, 2; Denton, 3.

THE annual outing of the staff of the Grand Theatre, Islington, took place on Sunday at Arundel, which was reached at 9.45. A pleasant trip was made to the Black Rabbit, and afterwards dinner was served at the General Abercrombie. Mr. Bunn occupied the chair, and gave the toast of Mr. Samuel James, the managing director, and Mr. Newman Maurice, the manager of the theatre. He also praised the efforts of the stewards, Messrs. E. S. Eastmond and Geo. Wilson, who both suitably responded. After dinner a brake ride to Littlehampton was greatly enjoyed, and on the return to the hotel tea was partaken of. The journey home was shortly after begun, everyone agreeing that they had never had a more pleasant day's outing.

MR. R. H. PRESLAND, the electrician at the Leicester Palace Theatre, terminates his engagement this week, to go to the Grand Theatre, Woolwich. Mr. Presland has had a long and pleasant engagement with Mr. Stoll, and leaves with the best wishes of the staff, with whom he has made himself popular.

THE Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company will add to the sterling attractions of their répertoire next season by the revival of Nicolai's Merry Wives of Windsor and Verdi's Otello.

AT the conclusion of the Midsummer term of the Royal College of Music on Saturday the following awards were made by the director and board of professors:—Council exhibitions—Singing, Gladys M. E. Honey, £12; Elsie Williams, £8; H. Dilys Jones, £7 10s.; Maggie Kirkbride, £7 10s. Violin, Arthur Armstrong-Dash, £7 10s. 'Cello, Anna M. Izard, £7 10s. The London Musical Society's prize for singing, value £3 3s., was awarded to Bessie Bowness (scholar). A competition for the Whitcombe-Portsmouth Scholarship took place, and, subject to confirmation by the council, was awarded to Eleanor A. McCarthy (violin), the proxime being Phyllis Weston (piano) and Mary P. Taylor (violin).

MR. HY. WILKINSON, proprietor of the Athenæum, Lancaster, has this week leased the theatre to Mr. Stanley Rogers. Mr. Rogers is also lessee of the Opera House, Workington, and Her Majesty's Theatre, Carlisle.

The Adventurer had a cordial "send off" from an appreciative audience at the Tunbridge Wells Opera House on Thursday. The scenes are laid in the closing periods of George IV.'s reign. "The Adventurer" is a fashionable gambler, Michel le Grand; and the plot traces his salvation by ennobling love for the heroine, Lilian Nugent, a typical English girl. The hero passes lightly through various escapades, but, thanks to his love for Lilian, rises superior to the temptation of the gaming tables. There is some excellent comedy in the piece, particularly in the scene with the Jewish moneylender, and also in the last act, when le Grand, with his fortunes apparently at their lowest ebb, gives a grand reception. The dresses faithfully reproduced from the Georgian period, add to the effectiveness of this scene, which is full of life and movement.

Mr. Gerald Robertshaw as the hero of the play, Michel le Grand, gave a very clever character sketch. He was well supported by Miss Marie Löhr, who was charming as Lilian Nugent. Miss Löhr infused much grace and feeling into her sympathetic rendering of the rôle. Mr. E. M. Robson's interpretation of le Grand's secretary was truly comical, and the moneylender was realistically impersonated by Mr. Harvey Long, by whom the audience was kept in continual amusement. Mr. Harry Ashford made a typical country squire as the father of Lilian, and as member of the beau monde. Mr. L. R. Dunrobin, Mr. R. Henderson Bland, and Mr. Percival Stevens all gave careful and effective studies, and contributed materially to the general success. Miss Naomi Neilson supplied an agreeable rendering of the part of Lilian's sister. The valets, the Bow-street runners, and the minor characters were full of comedy. Messrs. W. A. Haines and A. J. May, as the valet and the footman, made the most of their opportunities. At the fall of the curtain all the performers were recalled enthusiastically.

This one-act play by the same author was produced on the same evening, and was also cordially received. The author acknowledges his indebtedness for the suggestion of his plot to La Femme de Tabarin, of Catulle Mendès, and develops the plot in bright, picturesque dialogue. The burden of the acting falls on Miss Phyllis Relph in the title-rôle and Mr. Jerrold Robertshaw as the strolling player; but everyone works hard in what proved a very effective "curtain-raiser."

THE GOLFING ACTORS
THE ROYAL EASTBOURNE GOLF CLUB.

MR. LIONEL MACKINDER. MR. H. MARSH ALLEN. MR. JAMES BLAKELEY. MR. ARTHUR BERTRAM.

EVERY seat at the Theatre Royal, Exeter, was occupied on Wednesday last, on the occasion of a complimentary benefit to Mr. Percy Dunsford, the popular acting-manager of the theatre, who has made a host of friends during the time he has held that position. An excellent programme had been arranged, the chief attraction being Mr. Russell Wallett, who is an old pantomime favourite at Exeter. Mr. Wallett gave a couple of turns, in the first of which he sang some of his old successes, while later in the evening he appeared in his well-known monologue The Lady in Black. Mrs. Russell Wallett, who has also won popularity in pantomime here, contributed very charmingly a couple of vocal items, and was presented with a beautiful bouquet. Mr. John A. Thomson's company presented in a most enjoyable manner the comedy Our Boys. Mr. Thomson played Perkyn Middlewick, and other principal rôles were sustained by Mr. Edward Sorley, Mr. Frank Medhurst, Mr. J. Darford Geddes, Miss Yvonne Orchardson, and Miss Edith Carew.

So great has been the success of The Youngest of Three during the past week at the Gaiety Theatre, Ayr, that Mr. H. F. Maltby was invited by Mrs. Coats, of Belleisle House, to organise a party to entertain her guests on Wednesday afternoon. The piece selected was the little one-act musical comedy Fannikin (Maltby and Barry), and the company who took part included, besides the author, Mr. Wyn Weaver, Mr. Ernest Noble, Miss Mara Maltby, and Miss Beatrice Marsdene, at the piano. The audience fully appreciated the smart lines and pretty music of the little piece. Further entertainment was afforded by Mr. Wyn Weaver (two songs) and Mr. Ernest Noble, who told some amusing stories illustrated by his own sketches.

"TOM JONES," about which many conflicting statements have appeared, is not to be seen until Easter. No theatre, we are assured, has yet been definitely decided upon for its début.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The scene of the first act is Frank Lindon's forge. Alice Harvey is offered marriage by Tom Redman, which she declines, and as a result threats are thrown out that a writ will be served on her father for a debt owing to Lord Devant. Geoffrey Harvey obtains money from Frank Lindon to settle Lord Devant's claim, and during his absence an attempt is made by Lord Devant and Tom Redman to take Alice away by force, but in Mickey Doolan she finds a staunch friend who defeats the scheme. Frank Lindon's wife, Florence, meets Lord Devant, who makes a proposal that she shall leave her husband and go away with him. A conversation takes place between Lindon and Neil Locksley (a detective) concerning a robbery for which Lindon has been sentenced on the evidence of Tom Redman, and is now out on a ticket-of-leave. Frank protests his innocence, and the detective promises to inquire into the matter. By the timely appearance of Mabel, Florence's child, the wiles of Lord Devant are upset. On leaving Frank Lindon's forge with the money to pay Lord Devant, Geoffrey Harvey is murdered by Redman, an act which Lord Devant witnesses, but between them they make it appear that Frank Lindon committed the crime. The usual coroner's inquest follows, and Lord Devant on promising to abstain from giving evidence against Lindon at length prevails upon Florence Lindon to come under his protection. The murder is not brought home to Lindon, and when he hears of his wife's unfaithfulness he becomes insane, and has to be taken to an asylum, from which in time he escapes. On his return home he, accompanied by his children, wanders near the mansion of Lord Devant. His little girl asks for food, and Florence recognises her. Lord Devant seeks the aid of the police to have them removed, which Neil Locksley prevents, the upshot being Florence leaves Lord Devant and returns with her children and husband to Locksley's house. Tom Redman figures as a housebreaker at Locksley's, and has a struggle with Lindon which restores Frank's reason and memory. To avoid her husband's reproaches, Florence leaves the shelter of Neil Locksley's house and leads a wandering life. Ten years pass by, and then Locksley by a stratagem gets Lord Devant to his office, and with the help of Mickey Doolan forces from him a written confession that Tom Redman was the murderer of Geoffrey Harvey. Redman demands remuneration for his assistance with the forged cheques drawn by Lord Devant as manager of the Franklin Gold Mine Co.; on the other hand Lord Devant urges Redman to flee as the truth is known respecting the murder of Geoffrey Harvey. Florence Lindon returns when her daughter Mabel is married to Arthur Cooper. Redman makes a full confession of his crimes and the part that Lord Devant took in them, and both are arrested, the sequel being a complete reconciliation between Frank Lindon and his wife.

The company is provided by the author and Mr. Chas. H. Phelps. Mr. Phelps was highly praiseworthy in the rôle of Frank Lindon, the hero. The same remark is applicable to Miss Belle Tilbury as Florence Lindon. Miss Mabel Hall as Mabel Lindon is a juvenile actress of much promise. As the detective Neil Locksley, Mr. Frank Harvey left nothing to be desired; and Miss Amy Dalby as Alice Harvey was greatly admired. The comic element was in the experienced hands of Mr. Harry Tilbury as Mickey Doolan and Miss Millie Doris as Araminta. The parts of the villains of the piece were safely entrusted to Mr. Alf. Geo. Fry as Lord Devant and Mr. Bernard Webb as Tom Redman. The play went without a hitch, and bids fair to be a success.

A notice appeared on the programme offering a money prize to anyone who during the week suggests the most appropriate title for the new piece.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, July 30,
the Drama, in Four Acts, by Sydney Spenser, entitled
"THE HERO OF THE FLAG."

This breezy and exciting nautical drama is played with every possible effect by Mr. Sydney Spenser's clever company, and meets with a deservedly warm reception. Miss Lizzie Hall undertakes the arduous rôle of the heroine, Mabel Forrester, with great success, and is loudly applauded in the stirring scene in the third act on board the deck of H.M.S. Defender, when she fixes the Union Jack to the masthead. Both as the loving wife and as the brave sailor-lad Miss Hall is admirable. Mr. William Heilbroon thoroughly realises the part of the light-hearted young lieutenant, Jack Lawrence, and Mr. Sydney Spenser gives a most consistent reading of the rôle of the villain, Paul Mansfield. Mr. Sydney Benson proves himself a capital low comedian as Johnny Truckle, and sings a couple of amusing songs, also dancing well. Miss Roma Tremayne gives a powerful presentment of the discarded wife, Ruth Clifford; and Miss Amy Maitland is bright and amusing as Jenny Stubbs. Stephen Clifford in the skilful hands of Mr. G. F. Royd becomes an excellent character-sketch, and Mr. Henry Sinclair is a manly Captain Hilliard. Mr. L. Thompson is good as Mark Forrester, and Mr. Unwin Crafton makes the most of his opportunities as the "unwilling accomplice," Blue Jake. The scenery and effects are quite adequate.

PRESENTATION.—On behalf of the management and staff of the King's, Gateshead, a smoker's cabinet was presented on the 26th ult. to Mr. W. Harrold, who has relinquished the position of stage-manager.

THE Theatre Royal, Bath, after being thoroughly cleansed and renovated will reopen for the Bank Holiday week with The Sin of Her Childhood. After this engagement the theatre will again be closed until August 27th, when the autumn season will begin with the ever-popular Two Little Vagabonds. At Christmas Mr. Peter Davey, who in 1904 produced Goody Two Shoes, will again be responsible for the pantomime.

THE Theatre Royal, Belfast, reopens on Monday with the Wilson Barrett version of East Lynne. During the recess the ground floor has been rearranged, and now consists of stalls, pit stalls, and pit, instead of parterre as formerly.

MR. MATTHEW MONTGOMERY, of Grey-road, Walton, Liverpool, lessee of the Rotunda Theatre and other places of amusement, who died on July 1st, has left estate valued at £1,962 9s. 7d. gross and £1,871 5s. 2d. net.

MR. FRED L. ARTHUR, a popular Liverpool manager, will take his first annual benefit at the Queen's Theatre on August 16th. Elaborate preparations are being made for the event, and already all the stalls and boxes are booked.

"THE LAST HOUR."

A Dramatic Episode in One Act, by Herbert Darnley, produced at the Theatre Royal, Dover, on Monday, July 30.

William Sept ..... Mr. R. HARLEY WEST
Tim Roper ..... MR. JAMES DANVERS
Mrs. Roper ..... MISS NELLIE PARKER DENT
Lucy ..... MISS BETTY SEYMOUR

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

This pathetic but somewhat morbid little episode, interesting and exceptionally well written, forms an excellent contrast to the brightness and fun of The 'Varsity Belle, which it precedes. The story is striking in its simplicity and the merit of the play depends almost entirely on its natural and unforced dialogue, the cleverly drawn character-sketches, and the skilful way in which they were played.

The plot relates to the fortunes—or, rather, misfortunes—of one William Sept, an unsuccessful playwright. On the rising of the curtain the audience learn that owing to the non-acceptance of his work, the young author has gradually sunk lower and lower in the social scale until he is deeply in debt and on the verge of starvation. With a mistaken sense of duty, the landlady, Mrs. Roper, informs Sept's sweetheart Lucy (who brings him flowers and fruit) that he has lately had visits from a beautiful and wealthy woman. She has overheard part of the conversation between them relating to a plan which will be beneficial to Sept, and jumps to the conclusion that it is a matrimonial engagement and that he intends to break the already existing one with Lucy. The girl, however, is hard to convince that her lover is false, and on his return questions him. Believing she knows the real reason of the lady's visits, he admits that they have come to an arrangement, and Lucy leaves him under the impression that he is untrue and unworthy of her love. The lady who is the innocent cause of the misunderstanding is a wealthy society woman, who, hearing of the striking ability shown in the young author's work and being anxious for fame, proposes to buy his plays with the stipulation that they are to be produced as her own. Reckless and penniless he agrees, and it is to this arrangement he thinks Lucy refers. The post brings a bundle of returned MSS., a short letter from Lucy breaking the engagement, and also a foreign letter with a small sealed enclosure. The latter is from an old friend of Sept's—one he has not seen for many years. He writes that after a life of bitter disappointments and unsatisfied ambition, he has come to the conclusion that the world has no further charm for him, and that by the time the note reaches Sept he will be dead. The letter also states that if Sept at any time feels inclined to end his life, half the enclosed powder will bring death quickly and painlessly. In a depressed and morbid state of mind, and maddened by the loss of his sweetheart and with nothing but starvation to look forward to, Sept determines to follow his friend's example. Quickly dividing the poison he swallows half as Mrs. Roper enters with a registered letter, which has been mis-addressed and consequently delayed. He opens it to find notes to the value of £100, and a communication to the effect that a play of his has been accepted and produced. The bitter cry of "Too late" comes from his lips as he realises the fatal consequence of his act of a moment ago, and he falls dead as the curtain descends.

The rôle of William Sept is a difficult and arduous one, and Mr. Reginald Harley West is to be congratulated on his convincing portrayal. The weak, irresolute character is suggested in a masterly manner, and the death scene in particular is powerfully acted. To Miss Nellie Parker Dent must be given much praise for her amusing impersonation of Mrs. Roper. It is funny without being overdone, and in the more serious lines sincerity is not wanting. A humorous study of the non-working, hen-pecked husband, Tim Roper, is contributed by Mr. James Danvers, who thoroughly deserved the hearty applause his efforts evoked; and Miss Betty Seymour as Lucy portrays with much skill the sadness and despair of the heart-broken girl.

The play was produced by the author, Mr. Herbert Darnley, and had a most gratifying reception at the hands of an appreciative audience.

NEW PRINCE'S THEATRE, POPLAR.

On Monday, July 30th,
the Play, in Five Acts, by Geo. R. Sims and Wilson Barrett, entitled
THE GOLDEN LADDER.

Good sound drama like the Golden Ladder is always a great attraction at this theatre, and an excellent company has greatly added to the success of this fine play. Rev. Frank Thornhill, as acted by Mr. William Clayton, is an interesting athletic clergyman. He has a fine stage presence, and his acting throughout is exceedingly good. Mr. Joseph Rowlands as Samuel Peckaby causes a great deal of amusement, and wins golden opinions. Mr. J. Milne Taylor as Michael Severn is well fitted with a part, and fully earns the applause his efforts win him. Mr. E. Vivian Edmond as Peranza is very good, and the same remark applies to Mr. Fred Acton's portrayal of Jim Dixon. Mr. W. F. Parkes gives a careful rendering of the rôle of John Grant the banker, and Mr. Thomas Vale as Noah Learoyd submits an excellent bit of character acting. Miss Mary Austin as Lilian Grant quickly wins the sympathies of her audience by her dainty rendering of her part, and Miss Nellie Graham as Mrs. Peckaby gives an admirable representation of the good-hearted friend of Lilian. As Mrs. Dixon Miss Teresa Haynes could not be bettered, and Miss Winifred Acton as Victoria Alexandra Peckaby is responsible for much of the humour. Miss Mabel Lamont is good as Lily, and Miss Violet Haughton ably acts the rôle of Matron of the Prison.

THE LYRIC, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, July 30,
the Drama, by Arthur Shirley and Benjamin Landeck, entitled
"SAVED FROM THE SEA."

The emotional drama, Saved from the Sea, is drawing large audiences to the Lyric this week in spite of the oppressive weather. Mr. Stanley Bedwell, who takes the difficult part of Dan Ellington, the young fisherman, is, in a style all his own, quietly successful, and shares the principal honours with Miss Minnie Grey, who as Nancy is admirable. Mr. Bert Morley as Jim Weaver, Dan's mad partner, is excellent in a well-studied part, his acting in the boat scene being particularly clever. As Richard Fenton and Peter Scalcher Messrs. Fred Morgan and Raymond Wood are suitably placed, ably portraying their respective characters. The necessary comic element is supplied by Mr. Geo. K. Ashley and Mr. A. Day, who as Jenkins and Billy Snooks keep the audience in roars of laughter; while Miss Beatrice Wilson as Polly is also most amusing. In the rôle of Mrs. Blake Miss Nell Gilmore is to be congratulated on a clever character-study. Others who deserve a word of praise are Miss Bertha Baker as Jack Ellington, and Messrs. J. E. Manning, Ashton Winslow, J. Whiteway, J. F. Brandon, and J. A. McArthy. The play has been produced by Mr. Beresford Whitcomb.

THE Grand Theatre, Doncaster, which reopens for the season on Monday, will in future be known as the Grand Theatre and Empire. The managing-director will still be Mr. J. W. Chapman.

MISS DOT STEPHENS' SAD CASE.

Miss Ellen Terry sends a subscription, with these womanly and sympathetic words:—"For the poor child Dot Stephens, with loving sympathy from Ellen Terry."

Miss Edna May writes:—"I am more grieved than I can say over this dreadfully sad case. I have sent to all my friends; have also asked for assistance from The Belle of Mayfair company, and hope to be able to send you a good sum by Friday or Saturday. I don't remember ever having heard of anything so sad as this little girl's accident. Please let me know if I can do anything else."

Miss May Lewis encloses a cheque, and writes:—"I cannot tell you how glad I am to see that the poor unfortunate lady's case has been taken up. It has my most sincere sympathy."

Mr. Chas. E. Machin accompanies his cheque with the following note:—"I beg to enclose my little cheque for the Dot Stephens Fund. It is a terrible calamity."

Mr. Martin Harvey.—"I have much pleasure in sending you a cheque for £1 1s. for your admirable fund for the poor little lady."

Miss Louie Freear.—"Enclosed please find cheque for £1 for dear little Miss Stephens, with whom I most heartily sympathise. What a terrible accident, poor little girl!"

Mr. Weedon Grossmith.—"I enclose a cheque for £1 1s. for the little fund you are raising for the poor girl, Miss Dot Stephens. I only regret my cheque is obliged to be so small. It would have been larger, but there have been so many things one has had to contribute to recently, only not so deserving, that one has little left for the really sad cases."

Mr. H. B. Irving.—"I have much pleasure in enclosing a cheque for one guinea as a small contribution to the fund you are getting up for poor Miss Stephens."

Miss Nora Lancaster.—"I am so sorry to hear of the terrible accident that has fallen upon Miss Stephens. I enclose cheque for a guinea, and wish I could have made it more."

Miss Edith Wynne Matthison (Kennedy).—"Enclosed please find cheque for one guinea towards the subscription for Miss Stephens. It is an exceedingly sad case; and she has my deepest sympathies."

Mr. Herbert Beerbohm Tree.—"The case of Miss Dot Stephens is certainly a very distressing one, as you say. I enclose you herewith £2 2s. on her account. I hope you will get a substantial sum."

Mrs. J. Warden (widow of the late J. F. Warden).—"I send cheque as a trifle towards the fund you have opened for Dot Stephens. Poor girl, such a sad fate for her to be suddenly put aside in the days of her youth and strength. It is a sad ending to her bright dreams and hopes she had for the future. My heart's deep sympathy is with her and her mother in this their dark hours of sorrow."

Mr. T. Allan Edwardes (of Derby), writing from Interlaken, says: "I enclose you cheque for £2 2s. towards the fund for poor little Dot Stephens. Among the thousands of her brother and sister artists, it should be an easy matter to purchase her an annuity of at least £50 per annum. If all the sympathisers with her in her dreadful accident would send their mite this would be easily accomplished."

C. Crabtree writes:—"I have pleasure in sending you a remittance for the 'Dot Stephens Fund,' which I have collected from the orchestra here, including myself as conductor. She appeared at the Pier Pavilion here about March, this year, and we all remember her quite well, and we all felt that we should like to send her something. We all very much regret that she should be so afflicted, and we all express great sympathy for her and her mother during their trouble. She was an exceptionally nice and pleasant girl. I think a lot of money could be collected for her if boxes were used in various theatres and music halls. My orchestra is only seven players, and we are not in a position to give much, but our little will help to swell the fund, and I hope she will be able to have an annuity from it."

Queenie Leighton:—"You will receive from me this week another list of contributions I have gathered together from friends for poor little Dot Stephens. I am only sorry that, owing to the pressure of rehearsals, I have not been able to do more, as I have the greatest sympathy with Miss Stephens in her terrible affliction, and I sincerely hope that the efforts which are being made in her behalf will result in the collection of a sufficient sum to prevent her worrying about the future."

J. D. Beveridge writes:—"Herewith I enclose cheque for two guineas (£2 2s.). I quite agree with the statement in The Era 'that so sad a case has rarely, if ever, been brought before the dramatic and musical profession,' and I trust your efforts on behalf of Miss Stephens will be of so substantial a nature that the poor dear young lady, who under such sad conditions writes in such a cheery, grateful way, may not have any fear for her future in a pecuniary sense. With deepest sympathy for Miss Stephens, and with hearty good wishes for a big subscription list."

Miss Doris Stephens, best known in the professional world as Dot Stephens, a very clever vocalist and dancer, met with a terrible accident late on the Saturday night of June 30. She had fulfilled an engagement at H.M. Theatre of Varieties at Walsall, and left on Saturday night to go to Glasgow, where she was to have appeared this week. On reaching Wolverhampton she had to wait some time to join the midnight mail on the London and North-Western line, and there met some professional friends. She went to the Hippodrome, Wolverhampton, and was afterwards accompanied to the High Level Station by a gentleman, who secured her a seat in a second-class compartment, and saw that the door on the platform side was properly fastened before the train started. On arrival at Stafford the door on the offside was found to be open and the compartment empty. There was a quantity of luggage on the racks and seats, and as there appeared to have been an accident a light engine was at once despatched up the line to search the track. On reaching Fordhouses, about three miles from Wolverhampton, the unfortunate young lady was found lying in the six foot way in an unconscious state, and terribly injured. She was conveyed to the Wolverhampton station, and thence to the General Hospital, where it was found necessary to amputate one foot and part of the other. She was also found to be seriously lacerated about the head and body. On Sunday afternoon she had recovered consciousness, but had no recollection of how the accident occurred. It is supposed that she was under the impression that she was travelling in a corridor car, and on opening the door fell to the ground. Asked how she could account for the accident, Miss Stephens remarked, "The railway carriage was stuffy, and I went to open the window. After that I recollect nothing more till I regained consciousness in the hospital."

Miss Stevens was a clever vocalist, dancer, and actress, and first appeared with Mr. Bannister Howard as the Salvation Army lass in The Belle of New York, remaining with the company three years. She then joined Mr. George Dance for the part of Mrs. Pineapple in A Chinese Honeymoon and afterwards Mr. C. P. Levilly, understudying Miss Stella Gastelle as Alesia in La Poupée, a part she subsequently played, and was to resume in the autumn in Mr Herbert Ralland's company, lately on tour.

It is intended that the proceeds shall be devoted to the purchase of an annuity for Miss Stephens, whose terrible misfortune has already excited the greatest commiseration.

So sad a case has rarely, if ever, been brought before the dramatic and musical profession, whose record abounds in deeds of charity. The name of Miss Stephens is now to be added to the already full scroll of benevolent actions.

All subscriptions will be duly acknowledged in these columns. Subscriptions may be sent to Mr. J. Bannister Howard, Hon. Treasurer, 3, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.; to the "Dot Stephens Fund," at the Capital and Counties Bank, King-street, Covent Garden; or to the Assistant Hon. Treasurer, Mr. F. H. MR. MAX BEERBOHM VERSUS THE ENGLISH STAGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—By an odd coincidence Messrs. Bickers and Son are publishing my friend Mr. H. B. Irving's essay on "The Art and Status of the Actor," at a time when Mr. Max Beerbohm has thought fit to write an impertinent attack upon English actors and actresses in the columns of the Saturday Review.

At the risk of giving Mr. Max Beerbohm an undeserved advertisement, I cannot refrain from taking up the cudgels on behalf of the members of my own profession, many of whom are away on their holidays—a circumstance which I have often noticed is a safe cue for the belittling of our craft by its opponents.

The only sentence calling for serious comment is:—"The average level of acting is admittedly lower in England than in France, or Germany, or Italy."

It is always a puzzle to me—and I dare say to many other persons—why the man who praises foreign people and foreign things should think that he must at the same time belittle English people and English things. Yet there are some men in this country—I will not call them Englishmen, for they do not deserve the name—who seem to regard it as unmanly, commonplace, and smacking too much of an absurd respectability to be fond of England, and who neglect their nation that they may flirt with others. Everything good comes from abroad; the English are a race of boors, have no art, and so on, and so on. Happily for the credit of the literature of our own country, these Little Englanders and mimes of criticism are few and far between.

The famous artist Mr. Whistler, when he was under cross-examination during a celebrated case, in reply to the judge, who asked him whether he objected to criticism, said that he courted the criticism of those who knew their subject thoroughly, and always valued the opinion of an admitted master of his own craft. I am not aware that Mr. Max Beerbohm is master of any branch of the difficult art of acting.—I am, dear sir, yours faithfully,

ARTHUR BOURCHIER.

ROYAL OPERA SEASON, COVENT GARDEN.

The season which has lately ended at Covent Garden has proved remarkable, not only for the large attendance of opera-goers and the completeness and artistic rendering of the older operas, but for the success which has attended the production of new and important works. First place must be given to Gluck's Armide, a work of much beauty, and, mounted with unsurpassed magnificence, it proved a great attraction; the fine ballet from Brussels no doubt added additional interest to the revival. Other successes were Massenet's charming and pathetic Jongleur de Notre Dame, Poldini's The Princess and the Vagabond, and Cornelius's quaint and humorous The Barber of Bagdad, although these operas would be seen to greater advantage on a smaller stage than Covent Garden. The absence of a dramatic plot prevented Tschaikowsky's Eugene Onegin being the success anticipated; but the revival of The Flying Dutchman was very welcome, also M. Andre Messager's pretty ballet Les Deux Pigeons. The two composers, however, who have attracted the largest audiences were Wagner and Puccini. In the first weeks of the season excellent performances were given of Tristan, The Ring, Tannhäuser, Meistersinger, and Der Fliegende Holländer, under the fine conductorship of Dr. Richter, in which such distinguised artists as Frau Wittich, Frau Reinl, Frau Gadsky, and Fräulein Ternina appeared. Mlle. Destinn also had a great success as Senta in Der Fliegende Holländer, and Herr Van Rooy proved of utmost service as Wotan and Hans Sachs, although the want of a great German tenor was severely felt this season. In the French and Italian section it may be mentioned that Verdi's Aïda, alike in performance and mounting, made a record. Among the artists, Mme. Melba's beautiful singing has been as much admired as in former years; and Signor Caruso rendered, by the aid of his fine voice, yeoman service in the cause of art. Mlle. Donalda has also greatly advanced her position, as well as that fine artist Mme. Kirkby Lunn. In the parts of Aïda, Madama Butterfly, and Nedda memorable performances have been given by Mlle. Destinn; and Mme. Giachetti has increased her reputation by her acting in La Tosca. The baritones, Signor Scotti, Signor Sammarco, Signor Battistini, and M. Seveilhac, have all won renown, and in the bass parts M. Journet has rendered great service. Mention must also be made of the clever artist M. Gilibert, Frau Von Mildenburg, and Mlle. Boni and Legrand, from Brussels, who appeared in the ballet both of Armide and Les Deux Pigeons. The conductors of the French and Italian operas were Signor Campanini and M. Messager, who both acquitted themselves with distinction; and more than a word of praise ought to be given to the admirable stage-management and the fine orchestra. Coming to figures, it may be mentioned that Madama Butterfly and La Bohème were given nine times each; Faust six times; Armide, Rigoletto, and Tristan four times; Eugene Onegin, The Flying Dutchman, Pagliacci, Tannhäuser, La Tosca, Walküre, Le Jongleur, and Les Deux Pigeons, three times; Aïda, Carmen, Don Giovanni, Die Meistersinger, La Traviata, Das Rheingold, Siegfried, and Götterdämmerung, twice; The Barber of Bagdad, Der Vagabond und die Princesse, and Romeo et Juliette, once.

REOPENING OF THE OLDHAM EMPIRE.

The Empire, Oldham, reopened its doors on Monday evening after undergoing a process of thorough renovation and redecoration. Mr. Ernest Dottridge has quite fulfilled the promise he made that the improvements should be of such a complete character that the Empire would be put on a par with the best and most modern variety houses in the kingdom. Monday night's audience was delighted with the appearance of the house; in fact, its interior was scarcely to be recognised, so extensive were the improvements which had been effected by the contractors.

The decorations have been carried out in shades of Rose du Barri and electric blue, the woodwork and walls being a rich red so as to gain a proper degree of harmony. The whole of the decorations are in the French style, the ceiling being ideal for a house of entertainment. The electric chandelier in the centre has been lowered about 3ft., so as to get better lighting results, while the circle, formed by raised masonry, is very richly and artistically treated. The figures of numerous Cupids are painted with a high degree of artistic tastes, attendant on a central figure, surrounded by scrolls of flowers on a background of electric blue. Around the panels is a rich border, in which are placed a number of small scrolls inscribed with celebrated musicians. All the figures are models of art, and viewed from the circle or pit cannot fail to excite admiration. The most important part of the work has been the treatment of the facings on either side of the stage and of the cove directly over the footlights. The four pictures just over the stage, and facing the centre circle, have been entirely re-designed, and the taste with which they have been executed displays the best qualities of the painter's art. The facings on either side have likewise been dealt with, the panels being re-modelled and redecorated on a lavish scale. On either side there are allegorical figures of Music and the Fine Arts, portrayed with charming effect. Other panels are enriched with a scroll-work of flowers, while the sides and the bottom, juts over the dado, have been set off to advantage with what is technically termed "strap work." The walls round the circle, and the front of the circle, as well as a large band round the ceiling, have been beautified with gold painting and flower designs, and the boxes are now decorated to a degree of gorgeousness. They are panelled with groups of roses and other flowers, richly tinted in gold, and the domes are finished off with electric blue. The walls of the pit are freshly painted with a sanitary composition, the woodwork being treated to harmonise. The bars and ante-rooms have all come in for an equal share of attention, while the stage lights have been so arranged as to get much better results than were ever previously obtainable. The footlights have been especially improved by being lowered, and the aid of mirrors makes them much more effective, while the possibility of their interrupting the view of those in the pit-stalls has been obviated. The scenery is also being repainted by a well-known stage artist, so that everything in connection with the building has come in for embellishment. The cushions and all the other seating arrangements have been thoroughly cleaned, and where necessary renewed, the cleaning being done by the vacuum system. There can be little doubt that the people of Oldham will, by their generous patronage, show their appreciation of the enterprise of Mr. Ernest Dottridge in incurring so heavy an outlay in providing for their enjoyment and comfort.

Monday night's programme was a specially attractive one, being headed by Mr. Fred Karno's troupe of comedians in a series of their popular pantomime sketches. Needless to say, each production kept the audience in roars of laughter. In addition, Laura Lorne and Nell Rene presented a capital Lancashire scena, entitled, Capital and Labour, which was highly appreciated; Gilbert Gerard, mimic, won well-merited applause; and the Jackson Family presented a refined musical treat. Robb Gilmore caused much amusement by his quaint songs and dances; Arthur Reece, actor-vocalist, was a good turn, Fred Dunstone had some funny songs and patter, and Max Merlin, the Human Crocodile, was very clever.

A PLEA FOR ENGLISH OPERA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—Mr. Charles Manners' letter in your issue of 23rd June ought to make every self-respecting Briton exert himself to the utmost to remove the horrible and unfair stigma now on English opera. The dog was given a bad name in 1762, and so the unthinking public still deems it a bad dog, and think it has been hanged. Even granted that it was hanged, ought we not to get a new creeping puppy and teach it to walk?

It is utter nonsense to say that good opera cannot be produced by Englishmen. The reason our best men do not put their efforts into this direction is that they know there will be no support.

English is our language, the language of Shakespeare, Shelley, Dryden, Henley, Tennyson, Browning. We have the finest literature in the world as a legacy, and yet it is not to be allowed to be properly emphasised by music. What can an Englishman learn from the "Flower Song" of Carmen, the "Grail Song" of Lohengrin, "Elizabeth's Prayer" of Tannhäuser, and the Cavatina of Faust when sung in words which to him have no meaning? If there be any value in this, then the sooner the Messiah, Dream of Gerontius, and our Church hymns are sung in the best possible language—German, French, or Italian—the better it will be for all. The old people of this country would not like it, but, then, "one could educate the children up to it, you know."

London must bestir itself, and take the lead in giving to England (1) opera in English and (2) English opera. We in the provinces—I speak for hundreds myself—are bestirring ourselves to this end, so the metropolis will be left behind unless it moves quickly. As an example of what can be done by English people with support not half worthy of their deserts, take the Moody-Manners Opera Company. If you get this company in town and they bill Messrs. Manners, Pembroke, and James in Faust, you may take it that the Church scene—especially the trio—will be rendered in a way that cannot be surpassed. I will mention no more names; but you can hear a Lohengrin, Tannhäuser, Don José, Escamillo, Wolfram, Manrico, Elizabeth, Leonora, and Carmen who know and study their work, and render it to the public conscientiously.

I did not intend this letter to end in praise of Mr. Manners and his associates, but it followed naturally on a plea for English opera. We need some school under the leadership of such a man, and if given fair support opera in English, and then English opera, would soon take their proper places amongst the foreign works.—Yours faithfully,

LANCASTRIAN.

Bolton, July 24, 1906.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA

Sir,—One is glad to note that the season which the Moody-Manners company have begun at the Lyric Theatre has been so far crowned with success—a success which all will agree is well deserved. Mr. Manners's letter, which appeared in your issue of June 23, makes very interesting reading. It is true that we have been long enough in a state of vassalage to the Continent, but it is to be hoped that the day is now dawning when there will be no dearth of good artists trained and employed in this country in opera.

Mr. Manners is a firm believer in opera in English, and this it is which most deserves encouragement, for only by it can we hope to reach the great masses of the people, to whom foreign tongues are unintelligible. The purist and the æsthetician will put forward the objection that there is a great loss in divorcing the original words from the music; but, on the other hand, there is a corresponding gain in the greater acquaintance which opera in English is bound to give the general public with many works, for it makes sure that the meaning of each phrase of the music goes home and that every bar is well understood.

As for our own composers, it is impossible for them to produce works equal in everything to those of the French, Germans, and Italians, whose styles have been moulded by long contact with the theatre, and who could invariably count upon an opera being heard fully and fairly by their fellow-countrymen.

I must endorse what Mr. Manners says about translations of the words of operas, and if sufficient encouragement was forthcoming it is impossible to believe that really good translations would not be made by men competent to perform a task demanding such delicate and artistic treatment.—Yours faithfully,

D. C. PARKER.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, July 30th,
the Drama, in Four Acts, by Mark Melford, entitled
"FLYING FROM JUSTICE."

A crowded house assembled at the Shakespeare Theatre on Monday evening to witness the presentation of Mr. Mark Melford's thrilling drama, Flying from Justice. The piece, excellently acted throughout, was followed with close interest by the audience, who testified, by enthusiastic applause at each fall of the curtain, their entire satisfaction with play and players. Mr. Roy Redgrave as John Lecarsey gave a manly rendering of the part, and scored heavily throughout. In the rôle of Haldane Gulley Mr. James C. Aubrey has a part which suits him admirably, and which he played with great skill and force. A delightfully refreshing representation of the young student Charles Bearing was given by Mr. A. N. Melford, who acted throughout with marked ability. The part of Major Parkes was capitally played by Mr. E. Major Jones, who contributed an earnest performance, and Mr. W. Bland was thoroughly satisfactory as Pearly Tanner. Mr. J. Monkhouse made the most of his opportunities as Woodruff, a coiner, and Mr. Tom Allen did well as the poacher Jim Kimber. Miss Jessie Winter as Mildred Parkes had a thorough grip of the character, and was seen to great advantage. An excellent exponent of the adventuress Winnie Bradley was found in Miss Mary Raby, who gained much applause for her spirited acting. Another good performance was that of Miss Shelton, who acted the rôle of Mrs. Bearing with great success. The minor parts were all in safe hands, and the scenery and general effects very good. Mr. J. C. Aubrey is stage-manager for Mr. Green.

The directors of the Theatre Royal and the Grand Theatre, Halifax, both of which are under the same management, have decided on reversing the character of the programme at these establishments, and from Monday next the Grand will be run as a first-class playhouse and the Royal as a variety theatre. The drama's new home in Halifax is one of the prettiest and best-modelled theatres in Yorkshire. Since closing its doors some eight weeks ago the building has been renovated, and the dress and side circles have been made into one. Crimson and gold are the prevailing colours, and the effect of the decorations is enhanced by some very pretty oval-shaped electric lights projecting round the circles. The theatre will be occupied during the coming week by Van Biene and company in The Broken Melody. Mr. S. Winks will again take up the reins of management.

H.R.H. Princess Victoria, accompanied by the Duke and Duchess of Sparta, visited the Aldwych Theatre on Saturday last, and witnessed the performance of The Beauty of Bath.

TALES ABOUT TOOLE.

Toole and Irving were two of the most ingenious and ingenuous of jesters as well as most persistent practical jokers. It was at Carlisle. They were staying at one of the oldest hotels, which had a nice garden off their private sitting-room where all their meals were served. The waiter was a solemn old fellow who did nothing but boast to the two players that he hadn't taken a drop of anything stronger than milk for years. Toole was determined to have some fun at old Robert's expense. It was their last night. Their baggage had gone off to the railway station. Dinner was over and the two friends sat chatting over their coffee.

Presently the old waiter was to bring in their bills. Suddenly Toole suggested to clear everything off the table—silver, china, cloth, flowers, glasses, and all, turn out the gas, and drop out of the low window into the garden. Irving said "All right," although he didn't see the point just then, but anythow the feat didn't take a minute. Toole made Irving grab two corners of the tablecloth, while he secured the others, and so netted everything in it, leaving the bare polished mahogany. Then they turned out every light in the chandelier, dropped the cloth and contents out of the window, and clambered out after it, closed the window softly, and awaited developments.

In a few moments they heard the waiter knock at the room door, but receiving no reply he went in. The two "boys" outside could hear him mutter things, and then strike a light. The man's face when he saw the bare table and no one about was a study in expression which the tragedian must have envied.

In utter bewilderment the old fellow left the room. Like a flash Toole raised the window and climbed back into the room, Irving handing in the precious bundle. With deft fingers and excellent taste they re-arranged the table, and lit the chandelier. Then crossing their legs cosily, and lighting cigars, they rang the bell as though nothing had happened. The poor old fellow came flying in, and at the sight of the brilliantly lighted room and elaborately set table, not to mention the two jovial-looking diners, he gaped until it was an effort positively superhuman for them to refrain from loud laughter. They merely ordered some more coffee, and resumed conversation. But the moment he was out of the room, they cleared the table and turned out the lights as before, and crept out of the window.

When Robert returned and found the place quite dark and deserted he gave one howl, dropped the tray, and fled shrieking for the landlord.

Like two monkeys Irving and his friend got back again and went through the same swift performance. Presently they heard a terrible commotion. There was a great crash at the door, and the excited waiter, now almost hysterical, burst in with his worried master, several men and maids, and three policemen.

Toole and Irving rose in fury.

"What is the meaning of this intrusion, sir?" they both demanded in tones of thunder.

There was a pause.

"Milk you was raised on?" roared the landlord, witheringly, to the dumbfounded old waiter. "Goramighty, man, it must ha' taken wood-alcohol and rum to ha' things like them!"

A funny incident is told about the long-fingered gloves that so often played an important part in Toole's "stage business." One night in Dublin he was set down in the bill to play Spicer Rumford in Burnand's amusing adaptation, Artful Cards. In the second act Spicer Rumford sets out for an evening party, and dons white gloves—regular full dress gloves, warranted not to split. But, of course, they do split and burst, and it was over this mishap that Toole made such fun. He usually kept a dozen pairs ready for the piece, as he had to split them before going on. When this particular day arrived, his dresser told him at the morning rehearsal that he had no more gloves in his bag. Toole said it would be all right at night, that he would bring some with him. But on his way to the theatre in the evening he suddenly recollected he had forgotten them.

It was a dreadfully wet night, and on his way through Great Brunswick-street he told the cabman to stop at the first haberdasher's shop he saw open. He came to a halt at a dingy-looking shop with braces and neckties hanging in the window. The proprietress was just about to close for the night, and seemed half asleep. Toole saw at once that the elderly lady was in anything but good humour. He did not improve her temper by making his request very earnestly, and in a low tone, accompanied by gibberish which she could not understand. She looked hard at him and muttered to herself, "What does he mean? The man's a fool." When, suddenly, as she showed signs of calling someone out from an inner dark passage, Toole said, as distinctly as possible. "Have you got any white kid gloves?" She did not know whether she had, but she would see. So she began to grope about in a silly, aimless fashion, opening boxes of handkerchiefs, neckties, socks, garters, and everything but gloves, until at last, when she was red with the exertion, she found a forgotten box of white gloves. They were uncommonly dusty, and had evidently been the original stock of her grandmother's shop. Toole picked out a pair, and she went through the stupid old formula of doubling them across his knuckles.

"I think these will do," she said. "Oh, they will," said Toole, "then give me a pair of scissors."

"They are untied; you don't want any scissors."

"Yes, I do," said Toole, and he deliberately cut the gloves in five or six places. The old woman positively shuddered, and said, "Oh, don't!" It seemed to affect her, and the more she shuddered, the more he cut away.

"But I could have got you a larger pair without that," she whined, as if she were in pain.

"They are quite large enough, my dear madam," he replied, hacking away; "but I like plenty of ventilation." "Give me another pair," said Toole fiercely, as if he were thirsting for destruction; "and give me larger scissors." He then cut away at two or three pair as eagerly as a child cutting up paper.

"There, that will do," said he, throwing down the money and pocketing the gloves. "Will I put them in paper for your? Oh, dear me!" she sighed, as if the scissors had been ripping her open, and she was recovering from the shock.

"No, indeed, not I. Belinda shall be revenged!" Toole groaned through his teeth. "Thus will I destroy my hated rival."

The poor frightened woman backed away from him as he waved the scissors in the air; she evidently came to the conclusion that her peculiar customer was stark, staring mad. As Toole turned to leave the shop he looked out and said, "It's a lovely morning, isn't it?" It was seven o'clock in the evening, and raining in torrents. We tell these stories as related in the Weekly Irish Times.

The "discovery" of J. L. Toole is thus related by the late E. L. Blanchard:—"I was travelling through Shorne (near Gravesend) towards the close of an autumnal day in the year 1838. I had been exploring the green lanes about the neighbourhood, and fortuitously witnessed the following scene: A little boy, scarcely six years of age, was the centre of an admiring group of urchins, who seemed in a most exuberant state of delight at each fresh comicality of the entertainment, which seemed to consist of an imitation of the sounds of a farmyard, with a few dexterous voices thrown in. It was over before I could discover the reason for the merry peals of childish laughter which reached me, but in a few moments the extremely juvenile monologist recommenced his performance without being aware of another person being added to his audience.

"A dexterous arrangement of his pinafore, a twist of his child's cap, and a small stick snatched from the hedge, and there was the miniature figure of an old man tottering rather than toddling about the little garden, the few words uttered in simulated tones helping to identify a resemblance which evidently kept the diminutive spectators in no doubt as to the fidelity of the likeness. Then came a change of face, another readjustment of the pinafore, and an altered tone, with a word and a whistle by turns. This was quickly accepted as the faithful portraiture of a comic countryman well-known to the highly appreciative little assembly, and tiny hands were clapped gleefully as the voice of the rustic, simulated in childish treble, was heard to proclaim the necessity of giving to an old grey man. On my nearer approach, the festive company, entertainer and all, subsided into bashfulness. On making inquiry as to the name of the precocious young gentleman, I was told by a giggling little damsel that it was only John Toole, a little London boy down for his health."

A droll account of Toole and Irving as sitters-up is given by Mr. H. Chance Newton in the Tribune. "It was a year or so ago," says Mr. Newton, "that, calling on Toole in Brighton, I found him in a much poorer state of health than he had been for some time. 'How's Harry?' said Toole; 'when you go up, give him my love and tell him how queer I've been.' On reaching town I at once went to Irving's dressing-room. 'How's Johnny?' said Irving. 'Have you seen him?' I told him I had, and I gave him Johnny's message. 'I am very sorry,' said Irving, 'that he is so unwell. A dear, good fellow, best friend in the world. But, really, between ourselves, I am not surprised that his state of health is worse. For see what dreadful hours the man has always kept.'

"I pointed out that I thought from what I had long known of Irving's late-at-night habits, he was the last one who ought to complain of Toole in this regard. 'Yes,' said Irving, 'I do sit up a bit myself, I know, but Johnny—Ah, shocking! shocking!'

"Two days later Toole chanced to be a little better, and he came to London, and I happened to notice him in a box at the Tivoli. On going round to see him, I found he had only just arrived, and had not yet had an opportunity of seeing Irving. Of course, he started by asking after 'Harry,' and inquired if I had given him his message. I said I had. 'What did he say?' said Toole. 'He told me he was very sorry,' I replied, 'but was not surprised seeing what dreadful hours you keep.'

"'Did he say that, the scoundrel!' exclaimed Toole. 'He's a pretty beauty to talk. Why, Harry Irving has never been to bed in his life!'

"The next day or so I had occasion to see Irving again. Of course the same questions passed, and I told him what Toole had said about him and his hours.

"'Never been to bed in my life?' said Irving. 'Did the old libertine say that? Ah, well, well,' he added musingly; 'how true, how true!'

"As a matter of fact both Irving and Toole were awful people for sitting up at nights. Often I have known them to start for their respective homes between six and seven in the morning after telling a few stories to each other at the Garrick Club or elsewhere."

Toole's encounter with an Edinburgh prude resulted in a victory for common-sense. The comedian had received a letter, written in a canting style, advising him to retire from the stage and lead a proper life. A man of Toole's intelligence, the writer held, ought to do something better. Toole did not reply, but, instead, called on the writer on a Sunday afternoon. He found his preceptor lived in a fine house in the suburbs, and was rather taken aback to find the blinds all down. The writer of the letter proved to be a solemn-looking man, dressed in black. "I am anxious," said Toole, after the first greetings, "to know what you propose to do with my wife and family?" He pointed out that the stage was his living, and thought his friend might have some idea of an annuity.

After beating about the bush for a bit, the man admitted that he liked Toole very much, and "laughed awfu'" at him when he saw him play "The Dodger."

"Then, what do you mean?" asked Toole.

"Eh, mon, it's the wife that's serious."

"Oh. And that's the reason why all the blinds are down, is it?"

"The blinds are down because it's the Sawbath, ye ken."

"And do you think, then," replied Toole, "you are serving God by shutting out the beautiful fields and flowers that He has given you?"

Thoroughly ashamed of himself, the "unco guid" gentleman admitted that he had never "thocht" of it in that light. "Finally," added Toole, "he would insist upon introducing me to his wife, who invited me to tea. She was very severe and starchy at first, but we got on pleasantly at tea-time, and they have since invited me on several occasions to visit them."

AN ENGLISH OPERA UNION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—The general public are more or less aware that Grand Opera is very seldom presented, and that opportunities of seeing opera of any kind are regarded as a luxury of the idle and wealthy. The drama in general, and the plays of Shakespeare in particular, are a living and vital force in our national life, and every thoughtful man and woman must regret exceedingly that opera does not hold a similar position.

Here and there a few enthusiasts have for the past few years been loudly lamenting this undesirable state of affairs; their number and importance increase every day, and to them particularly, as well, perhaps, as to a wider public, the following facts may be of interest:—

Over 350 companies perform in Italy almost continuously. In Germany and France there are hundreds of opera houses; indeed, in the former country no town of any importance is without at least one. In this country, with the exception of the short annual season at Covent Garden, there are only four opera companies in existence, that is the Carl Rosa Opera Company, Mr. J. W. Turner's Company, and the two companies which I have at present on tour. Until these are reinforced, it is obvious that everything to do with English opera is at a standstill; indeed, one is afraid that it is a case of general deadlock. The fashionable and moneyed classes will have none of it, and the middle and lower classes never having seen opera in its proper form, and at reasonable prices, know practically nothing at all about it. The few impresarios who have tried to bridge over the gulf have abandoned the effort as futile. I have repeatedly, and now again offer to prove to any interested that it is possible to give opera in London far better than has ever been yet accomplished, at prices from 6d. to 6s., and in the provinces better and at lower prices than any town or city of like size on the Continent, and all this without one farthing on the rates or taxes.

It has occurred to me that many of our most valuable and beneficial national institutions have come into existence as the result of combined effort. I refer to the volunteer movement, the Y.M.C.A., and to the recent inception by Lord Roberts of a scheme to promote national rifle shooting. Now, why should not lovers of music in this country combine, and in some such manner make a vigorous and definite effort to try and establish National English opera, and opera in English? I here outline very briefly and roughly a few suggestions which might possibly eventually become the groundwork of a proper and workable scheme towards this end.

I suggest first of all a union, to be called The "NATIONAL ENGLISH OPERA UNION." Objects:—

1. To promote in every possible way the love of English Opera by the utmost endeavour of the society as a whole, and by the exertions of its individual members.

2. Subject to the approval of the majority of the members, the Council of the society shall consist of a president, vice-presidents, secretary, and executive committee, who will be elected by ballot from time to time.

3. When the membership has reached, say 10,000, a general meeting of the society will be held to consider the election of the above.

4. In the meantime there will be no expense or subscription of any kind, as, until otherwise ordained by a duly elected committee, all expense will be borne by the Moody-Manners Opera Company.

5. Until the Council shall decide as to the wishes of the members in the matter, Mr. Manners will gladly place an office at the disposal of the society at the Moody-Manners' Stores, The Hyde, Hendon, London, N.W., where all communications may be addressed pro tem.

6. On no account must the powers of this union be at any time used to advance the cause of any private enterprise in opera.

7. Madame Fanny Moody and Mr. Charles Manners will be at all times most willing to give their services to in any way advance the cause of the union, if so desired by the Council.

8. It is, of course, understood that these suggestions are merely tentative, and are subject to alteration and modification.

I am aware that this, or indeed any scheme of this kind, is open to objections. However, as, in the meantime, I am only appealing to those who are intensely interested in this branch of art, I will beg them to suspend judgment and criticism.

To all who live in the hope that improved conditions will one day obtain, I appeal for practical sympathy and a kindly tolerance until we can meet together and carefully, helpfully, and sympathetically discuss the whole matter from every standpoint. Should it be found necessary to hold a meeting of those interested during my London season, I will gladly place the Lyric Theatre at their disposal for this purpose.—Yours faithfully,

CHARLES MANNERS.

All the World is a Stage

And all the players on it have constantly a need for a reliable process which will clean soiled items of the wardrobe which are losing their shape. This is particularly true of members of the profession generally. The best method is the

DARTRY CLEANING PROCESS.

Nothing gives back the colour and shape to stage costumes, clothes, and items in the wardrobe in use out of doors like the Dartry Process. Everything sent for treatment is returned with the colour revived and the shape restored, as useful and as effective as when new.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MISS GRACE LESTER.

MISS GRACE LESTER began her professional career under the management of the late R. D'Oyly Carte with a year's tour of the principal continental cities in The Mikado, Patience, and Pinafore operas. She then joined Mr. Richard Mansell to play Rosina Moore, in The Mystery of a Hansom Cab on tour. After a long tour with the late A. E. Percival's Shadows of a Great City, in which she played her first leading parts, Annie and Nellie Standish, she joined J. Pitt Hardacre's Right's Right company and played Mary Mayne for six months. Then followed an engagement with J. Bannister Howard to play for the first time Lady Isabel, in East Lynne; Marita, in Barnes of New York; Pauline, in Called Back; Georgina, in The Golden Band, and Sal Rawlins, in The Mystery of a Hansom Cab. Miss Lester also played under Mr. Howard's management Hortense, in Poor Joe, Mary, in Our Boys, Bessie, in The Unknown, and other parts. She was next engaged to play Hester Thornbury, in Robert Pateman's Master and Man company; a tour of Little Lord Fauntleroy, and a year's tour with Wynn Miller's Birds of Prey, Miss Lester playing the part of Mrs. Fane, followed. In 1893 she joined Mr. Henry Dundas to play Nellie Temple, in his Human Nature company, and remained with this combination three years. Next came a reproduction and tour of A Run of Luck, and two years with The Derby Winner, Miss Lester playing Vivien Darville; and the leading part for a special engagement with Thou Shalt Not Kill; and, last, another tour with Human Nature. In the spring of 1901 Miss Lester toured with Walter Sealby's company in The Blind Witness, playing the part of Rachel Howlett. During the summer she was engaged for a stock season at the Princess's Theatre, Glasgow, playing all the leading parts. In the following October she joined M. Auguste Van Biene's Broken Melody company to play the Duchesse De Vervier, fulfilling four successful engagements under his management, including a delightful tour in South Africa. Upon returning to England in January, 1904, Miss Lester was engaged by Mr. Morton Powell to create the leading part in his production of Bigamy. She played this part on three tours. A special re-engagement with Mr. Rich. Waldon, at Glasgow, to star as Lady Isabel and Jeanie Deans was followed by a long tour with F. B. Woulfe, Miss Lester playing Nell Gwynne, Jane Shore, and Miss Sternhold in Still Waters Run Deep. In the spring of 1905 she played Lady Holland in the suburban tour of His Majesty's Servant, from the Imperial Theatre, winning golden opinions for her performance. In the autumn of last year Miss Lester had a starring engagement as Grace Daremont in Mr. James Willard's clever play, A Woman's Pluck. Miss Lester has just concluded a successful tour with The Midnight Maid, and is re-engaged for the autumn to star in A Woman's Pluck, commencing at Worcester on Monday.

MISS SYBIL RUSKIN.

Miss Sybil Ruskin, who scored a success at Terry's Theatre as Marton in A Marriage of Convenience, produced at a matinée on Nov. 4, 1905, portrayed Ophelia the same evening in Mr. Henry J. Twyford's Dramatic Reading of Hamlet. She played Phyllis in a new duologue, entitled The Dedication, from the pen of Mr. John N. Raphael ("Percival") at the Animal Lovers' Bazaar at Caxton Hall, Westminster, on the afternoons of Nov. 28 and 29, 1905. Miss Ruskin is a wonderful linguist, and having acted both in French and German (the latter with the German players here) makes quite a speciality of foreign parts, though Shakespeare is what she loves best of all. Writing is her chief hobby, and a series of articles entitled "Leaves from a Bohémienne's Notebook," which she has written for "Woman," was made a feature in that paper. An article of hers on some different conceptions of "Lady Macbeth," and on the excellent results achieved by the British Empire Shakespeare Society, has also appeared in the "Boudoir."

THE DRAMA VERSUS VAUDEVILLE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—At the present moment there appears to be a considerable amount of rather vague discussion going on by people directly and indirectly connected with the dramatic stage, accusing the directorate of the vaudeville houses of taking the dramatic following away from the theatre. May I venture to lift the curtain upon this fallacy, and give you my reasons for refuting the whole assertion. Having served ten of my best years in first-class theatres, and four in the vaudeville houses, perhaps I may be forgiven in mounting the forum on the subject. In the first place, I have signally failed to discover any semblance of the theatre clientèle amongst a vaudeville audience. The two are as distinctive as oil and water, and as difficult of mixture, the one preferring the unabridged edition of nature and thought, the other the lighter side of life. Before holding the finger up to either or levelling accusations as to poaching, let us consider which is the most difficult to manage—the vaudeville house or the theatre? I make so bold as to say the theatre is twice as difficult to manage than the average vaudeville house, and yet the former, in many cases, is conducted in a far less commercial spirit than the latter; in fact, to use a wood's and forest's anomaly, they are cutting down and selling the old trees without planting fresh ones. Let us go to the rock bottom of the dramatic depreciation in consequence of this, and we will soon arrive at the real reason of full houses in the one and thin houses in the other. The vaudeville directorate chase no shadows; their capital is easily forthcoming; they are unable to offer engagements to well-known artists far in advance, and on the whole give an entertainment all the year round of fairly good attractiveness, at any rate sufficiently interesting to warrant the continued patronage of their particular public. With the exception of two they have returned an interest to the shareholders of from 4 to 12 per cent. this year. Let me be fair in my argument, and show why it is easier for a vaudeville house to maintain his drawing power over the theatre. Each turn is cut and dried; should one fail, the next will score. Now we will jump to the theatre. Opening night piece does not catch on; result, bad business for the rest of the week. How can a theatre manager arm himself against this state of things? My humble suggestion is: Don't put all your eggs in one basket, but do as your more prosperous brother manager does—have something to fall back upon, namely, a second established success. Each company that goes into the provinces should, on finding their piece has not caught on on the Monday, be prepared to substitute another on the Tuesday. I don't think you will find the touring managers who produce a répertoire complaining quite so much as the man who pins his faith to one piece. I don't wish this letter to refer to the largest theatres, because they can book a sufficient number of London stars to warrant a fairly good season, but to the majority I venture to suggest a second piece would often be the means of saving a week's business. I am old-fashioned enough to believe that if our managers went back forty years, gave a longer entertainment, more diversified, and did away with the insufferable waits between the acts, the public would be better pleased, and come in greater numbers.—Yours faithfully,

Leeds, July 25, 1906. HERBERT SHELLEY.

"THE GIRL BEHIND THE COUNTER."

A robust survival of the season's novelties is to be found in The Girl behind the Counter, which reached its 100th performance at Wyndham's on Monday. A formidable array of authors are associated in Mr. Frank Curzon's popular production, and the story and lyrics of Leedham Bantock and Arthur Anderson, the music of Howard Talbot, the additional lyrics of Percy Greenbank, and the supplementary numbers by J. St. A. Johnson and Augustus Barratt, form a combination of wholesome fun, tunefulness, and variety which, together with the scenic splendour of the piece, makes it of surpassing excellence. The presence in the cast of favourites of the highest popularity renders its attractive powers complete, and a brighter entertainment of its class could not be found in the metropolis. A crowded house on Monday marked its first century with enthusiastic cheers, and hearty laughter followed the progress of the comedy, which has been embellished with new features of interest.

An outstanding figure of the cast is Mr. Hayden Coffin, who is creating at Wyndham's a similarly loyal "following" to that which he has obtained elsewhere in the West-End. Mr. Coffin is the ideal of the chivalrous lover as Charlie Chetwynd, the successful gold-digger. No hero of romance was ever more gallant, no light comedian more buoyant or graceful, while the inestimable advantage of a melodious voice and a style that forces conviction makes the performance irresistible. The sentiment of "The land where the best man wins," is true and hearty, and there is absolute emotion in the fine voice as it rings out the noble phrases of the song. Later in the piece, when Mr. Coffin puts on a becoming costume at the carnival, he has a song about the "Four Mile Radius" devoted to the praise of the "London girl," in whom the most affecting interest is manifested.

Miss Isabel Jay, whose freshness and comeliness enrapture all, is a bright star of the evening. Her glorious voice is heard with delight in the refrain "I mean to marry a man," her perfect intonation giving all possible value to the effective melody. The delicacy and grace of Miss Jay's singing in the part of Winnie Willoughby are fully apparent in the new "language of flowers" duet with Mr. Coffin, which on Monday had to be encored. Similar recognition of Miss Jay's artistic excellence was given in a ballad involving a vocal obbligato, in which the finest qualities of her vocal attainments were revealed.

The artless witchery and piquancy of Miss Marie Dainton prevail upon all parts of the house, who are warm in admiration of Ninette, the head of the millinery department. She sings and dances daintily, and is capable of some high-kicking, which is exercised on the high hats of the visitors to the carnival. Miss Dainton's brunette beauty and her charm of manner are especially effective as the vivacious Parisienne, a rôle, it may be recalled, with which the earlier successes of her career were associated.

A stately manageress of the Maison Duval is supplied in Miss Violet Englefield, whose powerful and flexible voice is heard with the greatest pleasure. There is, nevertheless, plenty of comedy in the impersonation of Millie Mostyn, and numerous recalls follow her song of "The Vicar's Eldest Daughter," which is rendered with tantalising modesty and charm. Miss Kathleen Courtney has succeeded to the part of Susie the cashier at the Maison Duval, and, besides acting with agreeable archness, gives evidence of vocal cultivation of a rare order.

Drollery of the richest and ripest and comedians adequately to exploit it are to be found in the piece. Mr. J. F. McArdle's comic vitality as the elderly but resourceful General Sir Wilkie Willoughby is wonderful. The shouts of laughter become almost monotonous in their regularity, and no word or action misses its object. His oddities are throughout of the most mirth-compelling character, the highest point of which is reached in his song of Sir Walter Raleigh, of which numberless encores are exacted. Effective aid is also rendered by the sour-visaged waiter, whose identity is not revealed.

Mr. George Barrett brings the benefit of a lifetime's experience as a comedian to the representation of the part of the head-waiter at the carnival, and no finer exhibition of comicality could be desired. He has a warm reception on his first appearance, and his acting throughout is accompanied by peals of mirth.

A fop of the first water is made of Viscount Gushington by Mr. G. Davy Burnaby, who follows Mr. Laurence Grossmith in the rôle. He bears his part admirably in the burlesque love-making duet with Miss Englefield, in which much assistance is derived from Mr. Barrett. The eccentricities of Adolphus Dudd are presented in comic fashion by Mr. Lionel Victor, whose make-up as Boy Blue is a picture. The duet about the Greenaways, sung in conjunction with Miss Courtney, is admirably done, and wins loud applause.

The splendid Rudolph is sustained in a properly magnificent manner by Mr. Akerman May, who looks, acts, and talks grandly as the Commissionaire. Mr. Fred Allandale is a sprightly and effective Monsieur Duval, typically French, but with many added comicalities which manifestly owe their origin to this side of the Channel. He creates considerable laughter, and his smartness is generally admired. Miss Violet Crossley puts on the aristocratic airs of Lady Willoughby effectively, and makes a creditable contribution to the success of the performance. Superb dresses set off the beauties of the entertainment, which are added to by the excellent work of the ladies and gentlemen of the chorus.

A RECORD attendance may well be expected on Monday at the Crystal Palace, where the August Bank Holiday always brings enormous crowds. The beautiful grounds at this time of the year are seen at their best, and the management, in addition to the outside attractions, are careful to supply a splendid indoor entertainment. The engagement of Mr. Charles Bertram, the well-known prestidigitateur, in the theatre should prove an irresistible draw, and large numbers should visit the Tibetan Court, where Prince Colibri, the smallest man on earth, and Henri Cot, the French giant, are on exhibition. There are also Rochez's monkeys, Mr. Bannister Howard's café chantant, organ recitals by Mr. Walter W. Hedgcock, bands of the Coldstream Guards (conductor, Lieut. J. Mackenzie Rogan), Seaforth Highlanders, 4th V.B. East Surrey Regiment, Upper Norwood Prize Band, and the Crystal Palace Military Band. The events will also include a balloon ascent by Mr. Spencer and a great cycling and athletic meeting; while the water chute, rapids, helter-skelter, flying machine, topsy-turvy railway, switchbacks, swings, and roundabouts will help to make up a host of amusements. The grand illumination of the park and gardens and the magnificent display of fireworks by Messrs. C. T. Brock and Co. at night complete a programme of marvellous dimensions.

SIR ALFRED JONES has arranged for the native choir from Jamaica, owing to their great success, to extend their stay in England for another three months, and they will therefore not sail for home by the Port Royal until Dec. 15, instead of leaving on Sept. 22, as previously arranged. Their engagements have so far taken them to over thirty different towns, where their reception has been of the heartiest kind; and Messrs. Jones and Douglass, managers of the choir, are now arranging dates for their extended stay. A farewell concert will be given in Liverpool early in December.

"TOMKINS' VENUS."

A new Farcical Comedy, in Three Acts,
by Roland Bottomley. produced for the first time at a matinée
performance in the Pavilion Theatre,
St. Leonards-on-Sea, on Friday, July 27.

Richard Tomkins ..... MR. ROBERT MAULE
Inspector Sharpeye ..... MR. TOM SHELFORD
Titus Jenkins ..... MR. REGINALD EYRE
Reginald Panse ..... MR. ROLAND BOTTOMLEY
Mrs. Jenkins ..... MISS MARY STUART
Matilda ..... MISS BLANCHE WILMOT
Cissie ..... MISS MARJORIE CHRISTMAS
Mary Ann Twiddles .... MISS EDITH BOTTOMLEY
Aphrodite ..... MISS CECILY STUCKEY

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. Bottomley has introduced some very diverting incidents in his new comedy, and while reminiscent of Niobe, is worked out on the theosophical view of re-incarnation, with original results. Dick and Reggie are betrothed respectively to Matilda and Cissie Jenkins. Reggie calls at Dick's house late one night, and finding him out dismisses Mary Ann, the servant, to bed, stating that he will wait for Dick's return. Hearing a noise he seizes a supposed burglar entering by the window, and finds it is Dick, who relates that he had been to the Crystal Palace and placed a ring of Matilda's on the finger of the statue of Aphrodite, and was terrified by the suspicion the statue had thereupon moved and was following him home. Reggie, supposing Dick to have had too much to drink, leaves him, to return in the morning. A heavy tread is heard on the stairs, and a voice demanding admission on pain of wrecking the house precedes the entry of the statue, who upbraids Dick for his perfidy of 5,000 years ago, and demands restitution of conjugal rights. On his expostulating Aphrodite has resort to an electric shock, and he admits that she is his wife. The inspector then makes his appearance, questions Dick, and is ultimately "squared" to keep silence after having been introduced to Dick's "wife." Aphrodite's presence leads to many amusing difficulties with Mary Ann, Matilda, and Mrs. Jenkins. When Titus Jenkins appears on the scene he is also claimed as a husband of the past, and the fun gets fast and furious as each of the three endeavour to shake off Aphrodite's attentions, and ultimately they agree to appeal to Jupiter to solve the difficulty, and each taking Aphrodite's hands she raises her voice in solemn invocation when, to the accompaniment of a thunder crash, she utters a wailing cry and Reginald discovers the ring has come off her finger in his handclasp. Explanations follow, and peace is at once restored, and the inspector reappears to report that the statue had been recovered.

Miss Cecily Stuckey was in turn pathetic, tragic, and comic in her endeavours to win the affection she sought from Dick, and she cut an odd figure when arrayed in Mary Ann's finery of hat and blouse over her own classic costume in the hope of pleasing his eye. Mr. Robert Maule very ably sustained the rôle enforced upon him by his act of imprudence; Mr. Tom Shelford provided much amusement by his embodiment of the venal inspector, and Mr. Roland Bottomley and Mr. Reginald Eyre gave good support. Miss Edith Bottomley put in some excellent work as Tomkins's servant, and her indignation aroused by Aphrodite's actions was hugely entertaining. Miss Blanche Wilmot and Miss Marjorie Christmas were both graceful as the sisters Jenkins. Miss Mary Stuart made a terror-inspiring prospective mother-in-law as Mrs. Jenkins. The piece was received by the favoured few assembled to witness the production at a dress rehearsal with enthusiastic approval.

MISS LEGARDE'S AUTOGRAPH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I notice in your issue of July 28, a reproduction of two letters of mine, under my initials H—— H. H——, having reference to an application to Miss Millie Legarde to autograph six photographs which I submitted.

The application in question was made considerably over a year ago, and at the time, I really did not consider that Miss Millie Legarde's autograph was worth to me the 2s. 6d. asked for it, and, whilst admitting the justice of your comments on my letters, for fear that they should convey a wrong impression to your readers, perhaps you will very kindly allow me a little space in your valuable journal in which to reply?

One would gather that it is my custom to refuse to subscribe to any theatrical charity in return for autographs, but that such is not the case I can very readily prove by the production of receipts from the Actors' Benevolent Fund for various sums donated towards that excellent and deserving institution in return for certain popular players' autographs. When I mention that my collection comprises very nearly three thousand signed pictures of the majority of the greatest operatic, concert, musical, theatrical, and music hall artists who have appeared before the public in England during the past ten years, you will, I am sure, admit that in the course of acquiring this almost unique collection I must have necessarily paid away to various theatrical charities not great sums individually, perhaps, but amounts which in the aggregate total up to a large sum, in return for some of the signatures in the collection. I would like it to be understood that I am, perhaps, "not quite so black as I'm painted" in the paragraph in your issue of the 28th ult., nor am I, I submit, to be classed in the category of an ordinary "autograph hunter."

May I trespass further upon your valuable space to state, in justice to the theatrical profession at large, that I have (with one or two exceptions) always received the utmost courtesy at their hands in reply to my applications for their autographs—the most amiable amongst this notoriously generous profession being, perhaps, the late Sir Henry Irving, who, the day before his lamented death, was kind enough to append his autograph to six pictures I sent him at the time, which pictures, I need hardly say, I treasure far above any others in the collection. Indeed, I have always been, and always shall be, most grateful to those who are kind enough to accede to my requests for their autographs. It is, most certainly, with regret that I notice Miss Legarde should have so far taken exception to my letters as to allow them to be published.

Allow me to add, in conclusion, that both myself and other members of my family are enthusiastic playgoers, and must, in the course of a year contribute no little towards the revenue of the theatres, one way and another, outside of the money involved in my applications for autographs.—Yours faithfully,

HERBERT HUGH HARVEY.

MR. LEOLYN HART, the eminent scenic artist, has just completed an admirable act-drop for Lord George Sanger, which will be on view at the Amphitheatre, Ramsgate, next week. The design is of terra-cotta and white satin, looped and lined with amber, the centre being enriched with a pretty "Watteau" subject. In expressing his approval of the work, Lord George Sanger states that this latest drop is still another proof of the great abilities of the artist. Mr. Hart probably holds the record for painting act-drops, as at the present time over thirty are in use at various theatres throughout the country. The three handsome sets which Mr. Walter Maxwell is using for his tour of The Lion and the Mouse have been provided by Messrs. Leolyn Hart, Ltd.

"THREE BLIND MICE."

A Light Comedy, in Three Acts,
by Arthur Law.
Produced for the first time at the Theatre Royal, Margate,
on Monday, July 30.

Julian Shuckburgh ..... MR. FREDERICK KERR
Andrew Lavender ..... MR. COMPTON COUTTS
Rawson Guest ..... MR. FREDERICK LLOYD
Peter Ricketts ..... MR. MAX LEEDS
Footman ..... MR. DUNCAN BRUCE
Lady Richard Marrable ..... MISS GRANVILLE
Lady Clarisforde ..... MISS MARY BARTON
Miss Tippings ..... MISS ANNIE HILL
Jessop ..... MISS DOROTHY EDWARDS
Mrs. Joliffe ..... MISS FLORENCE HARWOOD
Polly ..... MISS SHEBA BROZEL
Marjorie Lovel ..... MISS MAY PALFREY

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The title of this latest light comedy, by the author of The New Boy, A Country Mouse, and other witty and bright productions, is a particularly appropriate one, the piece being written round three men who are in love with one girl, and who are so blind, so conceited, and so self-satisfied with their own individual attractions that they fail to see there is a fourth in the field, and one who, in the end, carries off the prize from under their very noses. The delightful Marjorie Lovel, "Little Miss Muffet" as she is called, when she first comes into the plot is accompanied by Peter Ricketts, who is working up for an Army examination, and who sees halcyon days before them when married. Poor Marjorie is in a quandary with such a surfeit of lovers. She cannot give Peter an answer, because Mr. Guest is also in the field; the two cannot toss up for her, because there is Mr. Lavender to reckon with. The idea of Marjorie being really in love causes a good deal of merriment to Julian Shuckburgh, her godfather, and Lady Marrable, when they are discussing the amusing, but at the same time somewhat embarrassing, situation, and Lady Marrable endeavours to wheedle back into the good graces of Julian, who, it appears, she slighted some time before, but her appeal for forgiveness does not have much effect, for the reason that he has a very tender spot in his heart for Marjorie. When Marjorie temporarily disposes of Ricketts, she is assailed by Guest, who pleads for an answer, and then Lavender, the widower with three children, puts his fortune to the test, and the humorous situation is intensified by the endeavours made by each to get rid of the other.

In the second act, presumably because Marjorie is tired of being pestered by so many suitors, or more possibly in a spirit of pure mischief, she tells Lavender that she will marry him if he wishes it, and he goes into ecstasies over his engagement, which Marjorie announces with solemn impressiveness to Lady Clarisforde, her invalid aunt, who showers congratulations upon her, and in this little scene the opening is given for some very broad comedy, which is fully taken advantage of. The third act relates to the following afternoon, and amusing situations follow in rapid succession. Julian thinks it time he showed his feelings and makes love in a manly way to Marjorie. Letters of refusal are sent to Ricketts and Guest, but complications arise when Lady Marrable, who is endeavouring to get Julian into her net, kisses him and is seen by Marjorie. All comes right in the end, matters being simplified when the terrible Miss Tippings, governess to Mr. Lavender's children, comes upon the scene, and puts Lavender out of the running, and Marjorie and Julian come to an understanding.

The piece was produced by Mr. Frederick Kerr, who will be taking it to London after some of the principal provincial towns have been visited. Mr. Kerr plays the part of Julian Shuckburgh with good taste and judgment. He is the quiet, unassuming, yet determined, lover, past the age of early youth, but free from the vanity and self-conceit of the irrepressible Lavender. Marjorie was charmingly played by Miss May Palfrey. Her acting was natural and easy, and there was a fund of humour rippling throughout her performance. Both the leading artists received very cordial appreciation for their efforts. As Lady Richard Marrable, the scheming society woman, Miss Granville was everything that could be desired, whilst Miss Mary Barton was seen to advantage as the listless Lady Clarisforde. A good character study was presented by Mr. Compton Coutts as Andrew Lavender; Mr. Frederick Lloyd did well as Rawson Guest; and Mr. Max Leeds as Peter Ricketts was very well placed. The terrible Miss Tippings found a capable impersonation at the hands of Miss Annie Hill, and the other characters were all excellently cast.

ACTORS' DAY.

In addition to those whose names have already been published, the following have promised their support on Actors' Day:—

Allandale, Fred; Arden, Alice; Armor, Ellen; Arundale, Sybil; Austin, George; Barraclough, Sydney; Barrett, George; Beaufort, Leslie; Beaumont, Evelyn; Benson, Sydney; Booth, Horace; Bourchier, Sybil; Bradshaw, Archie; Bristow, Alfred; Carlisle, Sybil; Carson, J. Harold; Carter, G. Harrison; Chandler, W. Aubrey; Chandler, Charlotte A.; Chester, Sybil; Collier, Isabel M. Field; Collingham, Alf; Collingham, Dorothy; Cornwall, Harry; Dainton, Marie; Dennis, Will; Dillson, Telly; Edwards, Ernest C.; Ellis, Carrie; Englefield, Violet; Forsyth, Bertram; Fawcett, Marion; Gastelle, Stella; Glynn, Olivia; Grace, Armine; Grove, Emily; Hall, Augustus A.; Harper, Ethel; Hastings, Henry; Herne, Henry; Hilliard, Stafford; Hoffman, Maud; Imbert, Douglas; Keand, Arthur; Knight, Geo. D.; Lando, Barnett; Langford, Walter; Leighton, Frances; Lewis, Henry B.; Lincoln, Percy; McArdle, John F.; Macowan, Norman; Malcolm, Jeanie; Mathey, L. Alsace; May, Akerman; Mills, Horace; Mills, Lily; Moberley, Tom; Munro, A. S.; Stewart, Blanka; Stewart, Gwenn; Tremayne, Roma; Vaughan, Edward; Wenmoth, Bessie; Western, Maud; Western, Beatrice; Whittaker, Vivienne; Wynter, Maud.

As it is, unfortunately, impossible to communicate directly with all who are interested in Actors' Day, the committee ask for the co-operation of all who are willing to assist in the work of organisation. Copies of the appeal and forms for signature will be sent to those who will be kind enough to write for them.

If one member in each company playing, and residents in different parts of the country, would do this, and endeavour to obtain promises of help from their friends, they would be rendering excellent service.

All communications should be addressed to the Actors' Day Organising Committee, 10, King-street, Covent Garden, W.C.

THE Chancery Lane Safe Deposit Company have made special arrangements to meet the convenience of their clientèle for the safe custody of plate, jewellery, and other valuable property during the summer holidays and long vacation.

MR. EDITOR,—Sir,—Thanks for your correspondent's kind remarks re my performance last week at the Shakespeare Theatre in The Shadows of a Great City. At the same time I should like to draw your attention to the mis-spelling of my name, which should have read, yours faithfully,
DAISY MURCH, 3, Coram-street, W.C.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, Thursday, August 2.—I am sorry to have to chronicle the death of M. Alexandre Luigini, for many years musical conductor at the Opéra Comique. Luigini, an excellent musician, belonged to a family of artists. He was born in Lyons, where his father, Joseph, became, after Hainl, the musical conductor at the Grand Théâtre. His uncle, too, after whom he was named, was a well-known musician. Luigini, a pupil of the Paris Consevatoire, secured the first prize at the violin competition, after which his father gave him the place of soloist in opera orchestra in Lyons. After his father's death he replaced him at the conductor's desk, and wrote several ballets and symphonic pieces that were produced with much success all over France. In 1894 M. Carvalho brought him to the Opéra Comique, and M. Albert Carré, when he took over the managership, renewed his engagement, M. André Messager then being first conductor. When the latter gentleman left the Opéra Comique, M. Luigini was nominated in his stead. The last work brought out there under M. Luigini's direction was Aphrodite, which he also directed a few weeks before his death. M. Luigini's death is a great loss to the profession, where he had innumerable friends.

In all countries strikes are considered legal, and any agreement obtained through a strike has always been supposed binding. The manager of the Cirque Métropole here, however, takes a different view. A little while ago his orchestra, composed of twenty-eight musicians, insisted on their engagement holding good for the winter season as well. The manager refused to accept this condition, but when the twenty-eight gentlemen threatened to strike in a body he acceded to their request. A week later the manager abruptly dismissed them, and the musicians are now claiming £1,200 damages for breach of contract. The case came on in our third civil court, and the manager's defence is that he made this contract with the knife to his throat, under a threat of an immediate strike, and that, therefore, it is not binding. The case was adjourned for a week. One of the musicians I saw on the matter said that if the tribunal decided against them the words "honesty" and "good faith" might as well be erased from the dictionary as being non-existent. The manager, on the other hand, contends that he is not legally bound by a contract secured by illegal means. The case is exciting intense interest.

M. Louis Hervé, the son of M. Gardel Hervé, has in a moment of insanity committed suicide under rather dramatic conditions. To English playgoers of the past generation the name of Hervé will be very familiar. The unfortunate young man who put an end to his life was the grandson of the famous composer of L'Œil Crevé, Chilpéric, and Le Petit Faust, which had a long run in England when given by the French company with the beautiful Blanche D'Antigny, and afterwards by an excellent English company. Young Hervé, like his father and grandfather, was an excellent musician and a talented actor. Much sympathy is felt here for M. Gardel Hervé at his son's tragic death.

Strangers often marvel that of all cities in the world Paris should be the only one that does not possess a concert hall. We certainly have the Trocadero, but it is an abyss for sound, and absolutely useless for musical performances. And, were it not for the Salle Erard, the Salle Pleyel, and tutti quanti, all of them private undertakings, artists would have a poor show to produce themselves in public. This anomalous state of things will now come to an end, for the Paris Municipality have granted M. Astruc, the well-known impresario, a fifty years' lease to build, on the spot where the old Cirque des Champs-Élysées used to stand, a concert hall that will bear the name Le Palais Philharmonique. The "Palais" will contain a huge hall to hold 2,200 persons, and also two smaller ones, one with 1,200 and the other with 700 seats. In the first theatrical performances can be given, whilst the other two will exclusively be reserved for music. M. Astruc and his committee, however, do not intend to exploit the new hall by giving concerts there. They will only let it; and M. Camille Chevillard, the conductor of the Lamoureux concerts, will be the first to take possession of the place. The new building will be ready in January, 1907.

The Nouveautés and the Athénée have tried to defy the heat, and kept their houses open; but 77deg. in the shade proved too much for them, and they also have closed their doors. The Ambigu, however, seems to be heat-proof. Despite the tropical temperature, country people flock there every night to cry their eyes out over Roule-Ta-Bosse. Their tears apparently keep the place cool.

With the exception of Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, who never wanted to re-enter the Comédie Française, nearly all the ladies who left the House of Molière—generally in a fit of temper—are anxious to be admitted again. This time it is Mlle. Marthe Brandès who knocks at the door and wants to come in. M. Claretie, of a forgiving nature, is not averse to showing mercy to the young truant. But there are the other members of the company, who also have a say in the matter, and several of them are very hard on those who treat the "House" with disrespect. At the request of the Minister of Public Instruction the tribunal met in solemn conclave. There were MM. Mounet-Sully, Coquelin cadet, Silvain, Le Bargy, De Féraudy, Berr, Raphael Dufles, Leitner, Delaunay, Jacques Fenoux, and Mmes. Dudlay, Lara, Du Minil, Segond-Weber, and Kolb—fifteen in all. Ten of them voted against Mlle. Brandès's readmission, whilst five were willing to open the door to her under certain conditions. The result was rather disappointing. But our Minister of Public Instruction—who also attends to the Fine Arts department—is an obstinate man. He made up his mind that Mme. Sarah Bernhardt is to receive the Legion of Honour; and receive it she will, despite all opposition. As to Mlle. Brandès, it is only a question of time, and before a twelvemonth we will again see her name on the bills of the Comédie Française.

July, as a rule, is the month when many theatrical engagements are made, because after the Conservatoire competition everybody is anxious to secure those who showed most talent. Thus M. Rollan, the eighteen-year-old prize-winner, was at once snapped up by M. Antoine. M. Albert Carré, of the Opéra Comique, engaged M. Francell, Mlle. Lamare, and Mlle. Martyl, who, as I informed you last week, won first prizes. M. Gémier, the new manager of the Théâtre Antoine, also added two new members to his company—Mlle. Pouzzols-Saint-Phar, and Mlle. Flore Bergeys, both of whom, however, have already appeared in public.

A few years ago a London periodical brought an interesting notice on "Superstition on the Stage." The writer in his article never alluded to the Comédie Française, probably in the belief that this house is above such failing. They are as superstitious there as everywhere else, except that they do not make a boast of it. A few days ago M. Paul Adam's play Les Victimes was read to the artists who will appear in it. It was M. Raphael Dufles who read out the manuscript, and the traditional glass of water was placed in front of him. But the tumbler was the identical one out of which Alexandre Dumas fils used to drink, and which is kept in the "House" like a relic. This tumbler is supposed to bring luck, although others will have it that it works in the opposite direction. This is rather a pity, for no matter whether the piece proves a success or a failure somebody will be sure to say: "I told you so!"

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

The Musical Copyright Bill passed its third reading in the House of Commons late on Tuesday night, when Mr. Gladstone intimated that the amendments which had been proposed had been considered, and the result was that the Government had decided to make concessions, among which would be that no action would be taken without the authorisation of the holder of the right, and that, in the case of a hawker, if it was doubtful whether he knew that he was selling pirated music, he would be convicted, but without penalty. The Bill was then taken to the House of Lords and read a first time, and on Wednesday it received its second reading, which was formally moved by Earl Beauchamp. The Bill was considered in committee early yesterday morning, when Earl Beauchamp moved a series of amendments en bloc, which, he said, if agreed to, would remove all opposition to the Bill in the other House. The amendments were agreed to, and the Bill was read a third time.

The refusal of the local magistrates to renew the licence of the Oxford Empire has created universal indignation, both in Oxford and in the profession generally. Mr. Albany Ward, who has held a licence for the Oxford Empire for six years, is making an ex parte application to the High Court for a rule for a mandamus. This, or a rule to show cause under 11 and 12 Vict., C. 44, s. 2., appears to be the only course in the nature of an appeal against the decision of local justices to refuse to renew a licence. Mr. Ward has our best wishes in his spirited struggle to obtain justice.

"His House in Order" attained its 200th performance at the St. James's on Wednesday, when an access of enthusiasm on the part of a crowded audience marked the event. All the original artists have now returned to the cast. Mr. George Alexander, who received an especially hearty welcome, won admiration again by the superb finish of his acting as Hilary Jesson, and Miss Irene Vanbrugh fascinated all with the charm and earnestness of her rendering of the heroine. Mr. Herbert Waring once more delighted with the dramatic excellences of his performance, and the other principal parts were again perfectly presented at the hands of Miss Iris Hawkins, Miss Beryl Faber, Mr. E. Lyall Swete, Mr. C. M. Lowne, Mr. Dawson Milward, Mr. Nigel Playfair, Miss Bella Pateman, and Mdlle. Marcelle Chevalier.

The Princess Christian, president of the Rehearsal Club, very kindly invited a number of the members to Cumberland Lodge, Windsor, on the 23rd ult. Her Royal Highness personally received her guests, who were shown round the house and grounds, tea being afterwards served in the garden. Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander were present, and the former thanked her Royal Highness on behalf of the members of the Rehearsal Club for her gracious hospitality. The party returned to London in time to fulfil their various engagements, after spending a delightful afternoon in Windsor Park.

"Toddles" is the title of the English version of MM. Tristan Bernard and Godfernaux' comedy Tripplepatte, in which Mr. Cyril Maude will begin his season under Mr. Charles Frohman at the Duke of York's on Saturday, Sept. 1. The cast will also include Miss Nancy Price, Miss Lottie Venne, Mr. Alfred Bishop, Miss Alice Crawford, and Mr. Kenneth Douglas. Progress has already been made with rehearsals of the new piece, which will be preceded by a wordless play, entitled The Scapegrace, arranged by Mr. Albert Chevalier, with music by Mr. Edward Jones, with Miss Pauline Chase in the title-rôle.

The Lord Mayor of Liverpool has received an intimation from Mr. Charles Manners, of the Moody-Manners Opera Company, that the proposed performance of Wagner's "Ring" in ten provincial towns has been postponed for a year. In April last, when visiting Liverpool, Mr. Manners succeeded in getting the Lord Mayor to preside over a meeting of citizens, when the project was warmly approved and preparations made to raise the necessary £2,000, a similar sum to be contributed by nine other places. Difficulties, however, arose in some parts of the provinces, and Mr. Henry E. Rensburg, chairman of the Liverpool Committee, expressed regret "that a project for which they found the elements of success at hand in Liverpool" must be abandoned.

Mr. Edward Terry commences his annual provincial tour on Monday at the Prince's Theatre, Llandudno. His répertoire includes Liberty Hall, The Magistrate, Sweet Lavender, and many of his well-tried successes, which will be supplemented by a new play by Julian Rochefort, entitled The Good Old Firm. The company supporting Mr. Terry comprises Miss F. Glossop-Harris, Miss Fyfe Alexander, Miss Gertrude Tate, Miss Agnes Knights, Miss Eugenie Vernie, Miss Clara Earle, Miss Ella Dixon, and Messrs. Allan Pollock, Frank Cellier, jun., George Howard, E. W. Thomas, William Dexter, and C. E. Wallis. Mr. Montague Wigan is stage-manager, and the business management is in the hands of Mr. Arthur Græme.

Mr. Arthur Bourchier concluded his season at the Garrick Theatre last evening, the closure being applied in order that Mr. Bourchier and his company might take a brief holiday before starting on their provincial tour. In the eminent actor's own case the holiday will be brief indeed, as he is putting into immediate rehearsal a play to occupy the Garrick Theatre while he and Miss Violet Vanbrugh are on tour. The new piece is entitled The Morals of Marcus, and is a dramatic version by Mr. W. J. Lockie of his novel "The Morals of Marcus Ordeyne. Down our Alley will be played by Mr. Bourchier on tour in a compressed form, so as to allow of its being given in the same programme with one of the larger plays of his répertoire.

Mr. Martin Harvey has now completed all arrangements for his autumn tour, which, as we have already announced, commences at the Opera House, Buxton, on the 20th inst. The company includes Messrs. Charles Glenney, Frederick Wright, sen., Albert Rayner, Charles Cameron, L. Craske, Cooke, Vincent Sternroyd, and Leslie Palmer, and Misses Amy Coleridge, Bessie Elder, and Mary Rorke. Miss N. de Silva, who will render Mr. Harvey chief support, will not appear in The Corsican Brothers, but on the evenings when that play is presented will sustain a novel rôle in an exceedingly interesting one-act play. An elaborate setting is being prepared for the revival.

A quaint poster advertises the new comic opera, Amasis, or an Egyptian Princess, by Frederick Fenn and P. M. Faraday, which is to be produced by Mr. Louis Calvert at the New Theatre on Thursday. It consists of a colourable imitation of Cleopatra's Needle, at the base of which the "sacred cat" sits gleefully trilling, while from an aperture above a swarthy native complacently drops a brick on the feline head.

The principals of the cast will comprise Miss Ruth Vincent, and Messrs. Rutland Barrington, Roland Cunningham, Whitworth Mitton, Norman Salmond, Herbert Ross, Lauri de Frece, Frank Perfitt, G. Mackarness, Leonard Calvert, and F. Aubrey Millward, and Misses Madge Vincent, Emmie Santer, and M. Stather. On the first night every member of the audience will be presented with a tastefully bound copy of the book of words.

The end has at length come to the suffering of J. L. Toole, and the estimable comedian has passed away after a protracted illness nobly borne. Unlike his life-long friend, who breathed his last within an hour of leaving the stage, Mr. Toole lingered on a bed of sickness, his strength slowly ebbing away, until his existence terminated peacefully. The deceased comedian never took a definite farwell of the stage, and regret will be acutely felt by all who remember his contributions to the gaiety of the nation and by those who were familiar with his genial and hearty personality.

The alarming nature of Mr. Toole's last illness manifested itself some two months ago, when the serious symptom of cerebral congestion appeared. His strength gradually weakened, and though slight improvements in his health were occasionally noted, the course of the malady could not be arrested, and after a period of the utmost anxiety the final sad moment came at ten minutes before midnight on Monday.

Numerous inquiries by telegraph and post showed the interest with which Mr. Toole's closing days were followed, and the bulletins exhibited every morning and evening at the door of the patient's residence were eagerly scanned by a constant stream of sympathisers. Among those who showed most anxiety to hear the latest news of the patient were the cabmen, hand-chairmen, and flower girls—a significant indication of the estimation in which the deceased comedian was held by all classes of the community.

The later years of the eminent comedian's life were clouded by poignant bereavements. In 1879 he lost his only son Frank, an amiable and promising young fellow, only twenty-three years of age, who died from the effects of a surgical operation. In 1888 his only daughter, Florence, died of a fever caught while staying at Edinburgh, and a few months afterwards her mother followed. Toole was thus left childless and a widower to face long years of illness. He was noted for his benevolence, and many a kindly action will be long cherished by the numberless recipients of his bounty.

Mr. Toole's last presence on a public platform was made at the Brighton Pavilion a few years ago, when Sir Henry Irving unveiled the memorial bust of Miss Amy Sedgwick, now in the Corporation Art Gallery. The news of Irving's death must have drawn nearer the last hours of his old friend. Touching proof of the affection he bore towards his comrade was given by the fact that he just managed to summon up strength to attend the funeral service in Westminster Abbey. That was Toole's last public appearance in London.

Toole's admiration for the art of Irving is best expressed in his own words. "What I admire about Irving," he said to his biographer, "is the calm, steady way in which he has marched to the front, and the gentle, gracious, unostentatious way in which he has kept there. He was always a very studious and careful actor, always made remarkable and complete studies of his characters. There was nothing conventional about what he did. He seemed, so to speak, always to have got inside the part he played, and to have learned something new about it; not new in the sense of being simply new, but something belonging to the part that other actors had not found out."

Mr. Beerbohm Tree, immediately on learning of the decease of Mr. Toole, sent from Marienbad the following appreciation:—"He whose death is recorded to-day died ten years ago. He was a rare man, a brilliant brain, and a golden heart. As a friend, he is more missed by the large circle of which he formed a link than any man of our time, for around him his gentle and glowing nature shed an atmosphere of good-fellowship which reduced the differences and jealousies of his associates to their proper proportions. There were many to whom his appeal as actor was not great; there were countless thousands who loved him on the stage, as his intimates loved him off. He was in a true sense nature's gentleman. His manner was unconsciously the same to a cabman as to a duke; his courtesy was not regulated; his interests, his manners, were governed by a rare tact—the tact of a good heart. His sense of humour was prodigious; his common sense and tolerance were no less. For ten years he has left a gap in Bohemia; but those who were privileged to meet him will ever cherish the memory of that gentle spirit and that infectious humour, which endeared him to all, leaving him not an enemy in the world."

Mr. Lionel Brough, one of Mr. Toole's oldest and dearest friends, was with him on the day he died. The two veteran comedians had often played together in bygone days, notably in Dearer than Life, at the Queen's Theatre, the cast of which included Henry Irving and Charles Wyndham.

During the run of the piece Toole and Lionel Brough had been photographed as the broken-down brothers in the garret scene, and Toole suggested a walk through the West-End in their disreputable make-up. They knocked at the door of a wealthy parvenu who was notoriously ashamed of his less prosperous relatives. The door was opened by a magnificent flunkey. "Master in?" said Toole. "No, he isn't," said the footman, contemptuously looking at the seedy callers. "Not in," said Toole, with an air of disappointment. "Well, young man, when he comes in, tell him that his two brothers from the workhouse called."

"Lal" Brough was also his associate in a comic episode of a later period. The two players were going down Fleet-street early in the evening, just after the opening of the new premises of the Daily Telegraph, and Toole, seeing the flood of light from the great arc lamps, nudged Brough to follow, and went in. He went over to the advertisement counter, and, lolling on one elbow, said in an offhand way to the clerk who attended, "Bring me two brandy-and-sodas!" Then he went on talking to his friend. The clerk tried to explain, but he would not attend to his words; he and Brough were conversing with too much animation to attend to anyone. The situation was only relieved when the young clerk brought one of the managers of the department, who at once recognised the two actors, and understood the joke.

Lord Rosebery was among the deceased comedian's warmest admirers. The famous politician, when his brilliant Parliamentary career was yet before him, presided at a banquet given to Mr. Toole prior to his departure for America in 1874. Lord Rosebery paid a glowing tribute to the guest's excellent qualities and his talents as an actor, describing his humour with perfect truth as "humour that is always genial, always pure, and a household delight."

Mr. Thomas Thorne, who will commence his autumn tour under the direction of M. Russell Rosse, at the Court Theatre, Liverpool, on August 20, was one of the last of the old friends who had converse with "Johnny" Toole. Whilst at Brighton a week or two ago playing in Our Boys, Mr Thorne, by express permission of the doctor, was allowed to have an interview, or rather a farewell greeting with his old friend and associate, who was quite conscious of his visitor. His words, and perhaps the last recorded were: "Well Tom, old boy, we have had some good times together, haven't we?"

Miss Edna May, who is looking forward to her part in the new musical play, in which she is to "star" under Mr. Frohman's management at the Vaudeville next season, is taking a month's holiday, and during her absence her part in The Belle of Mayfair is being played by Miss Ethel Newman. While Miss May was motoring through Harlow to Cromer with a party of friends on Sunday, the car broke down. The popular actress, however, ordered a special train, and at a cost of £32 reached her destination.

The School of Music and Dramatic Art, 77, New Oxford-street, of which Mr. Cairns James and Mr. Ernest D'Auban are the principals, has just completed its summer term, and is now closed for the long vacation. Between seventy and eighty students have been under instruction during the last three months. Classes have been held in which plays from Shakespeare, modern comedy and farce, and excerpts from light operas have been rehearsed. The curriculum also comprises instruction in elocution, stage dancing, gesture, and deportment, fencing, singing, and choral class. In the course of two years' work over sixty students have succeeded in obtaining engagements on the regular stage, both in London and on tour. The next George Edwardes' Open Scholarship will be competed for on September 20, the school reopening on September 24. Full particulars are obtainable of the secretary.

The "Intestate Amusement Company" is the name of a new and important theatrical combine, in the composition of which many names notable in American as well as English management are included. The object of the company is to acquire an unlimited number of plays and operas in England and the principal Continental cities, with a view of reproducing them in America. The amount of capital subscribed reaches three-quarters of a million pounds, and among the promoters of the enterprise are Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger, Mr. Charles Frohman, Mr. Harris (of Rich and Harris), Mr. Daniel Frohman, Mr. Al. Hayman, Mr. Henry W. Savage, Mr. Samuel F. Nixon (of Nixon and Zimmerman), under whose direction Mr. H. B. Irving is about to tour, Mr. W. A. Brady, Mr. Charles E. Ford, Mr. W. H. Rapley, and Mr. Harry J. Powers. The company's representative in this country is to be Mr. G. B. McLellan, who has been actively associated with the Messrs. Shubert in the management of the Waldorf Theatre.

Miss Maudie Mandrell, a popular member of Mr. George Edwardes's companies, was married at St. Bride's Church, Fleet-street, on Tuesday, to Mr. Wellwood Anderson, jun., of Dumfries, N.B., a nephew of the late Sir James Anderson. The bride was given away by her father, and Mr. C. Stewart Phyn, of Dumfries, acted as best man. The vicar, the Rev. W. C. Heaton, officiated. Bridal and wedding music from Lohengrin and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" were played on the organ by Dr. E. H. Turpin. At the subsequent reception and breakfast, held at Anderton's Hotel, amongst the many members of the theatrical profession present were Mr. Norman McKinnel and Miss Lottie Llewellyn. The happy couple left later for Cornwall to spend their honeymoon. The presents were handsome and numerous.

The Waldorf Theatre, it is agreeable to learn, will soon be again on the active list, and will be reopened by the Messrs. Shubert in about a month's time. The attraction then to be presented will be a three-act farcical comedy by Frank Wyatt and William Morris, entitled Mrs. Temple's Telegram.

"The Good-Natured Man" will be given in the New Theatre, Cambridge, before the students of the Summer Meeting on Friday evening and the afternoon of the following day, and not, as was previously announced, on the afternoon of the 10th and the evening of the 11th. The cast will include Messrs. Lewis Casson, Edwin Coates, Ben Field, R. O'Malley, W. M. Mayne, Henry Doughty, Shakespeare Stewart, and E. H. Wynne, and Misses Muriel Currey, Clare Greet, A. B. Potter, and Helen Vicary. The performance is under the direction of Mr. Wm. Poel.

Miss Olga Nethersole will tour the English provinces during the autumn with her stage version of Carmen. The popular actress saw tremendous emotional possibilities in the title-rôle, and her performances of the part in the United States created something of a sensation.

Mr. Henry Ludlow, who has lately concluded a long engagement with Mr. W. W. Kelly, playing the Marquis de Beaumont in A Royal Divorce, has been re-engaged by M. Aug. Van Biene for his old part General Ivanoff in The Broken Melody. Mr. Ludlow has just completed a society comedy, entitled Lady Bathurst at Home, which will be produced shortly.

Miss Emma Hutchison and Mr. Percy Hutchison's Freedom of Suzanne autumn tour opens at Southend-on-Sea on Monday. Miss Mabel Love will appear in the title-rôle, and the part of Trevor will be played by Mr. Percy Hutchison himself for the first few weeks of the tour. The company is in all respects an exceptionally strong one. Mr. Sandon Perkins is the business-manager.

Mr. Walter Maxwell has secured from Mr. Charles Frohman the entire provincial rights of The Lion and the Mouse, and begins his autumn tour at the Theatre Royal, Cardiff, on Monday. Mr. Maxwell has slightly altered the play, having transferred the scenes hitherto laid in America to England, and turned John Burkett Ryder into an unscrupulous financier of the type which has occasionally figured in our criminal records. Miss Christine Silver is the Shirley Rossmore—the Mouse—Mr. Leslie Carter, John Ryder—the Lion—and Mr. Stephen Wentworth, the millionaire's son, Jefferson Ryder. Miss Elspeth Dudgeon, Miss Maude Townsend, Miss Dorrie Roberts, Miss Ethel Gordon, Miss Marjorie Murray, and Messrs. J. W. Mackie, Richard Norton, Arthur B. Murray, John Wheatman, George Lyttleton and Herbert Chown are also engaged, and Mr. William Postance will produce the play for Mr. Maxwell. Several suburban houses have been booked, the first to be visited being the King's, Hammersmith, for the week commencing August 27.

"The Bielostock Massacre," the tragedy by John Jackson, was again repeated at the Pavilion on Monday evening by the Jewish Operatic and Dramatic Company to a crowded audience. During the week The Destruction of Jerusalem, The House of David, and Ahasuerus have also been played. During next week the American Yiddish actor, Mr. Jacob Adler, will appear in a new play.

After two and a half years of almost continuous touring with the celebrated Princess's drama The Still Alarm, Messrs. Glenville and Osmond concluded their third tour at Folkestone on July 21. This remarkable third tour has been, if possible, even more successful than any of the preceding ones, the play never having once failed during the whole fifty weeks' tour in drawing record houses in the towns visited, a fact attributable to the excellent quality of the production. At the present moment Messrs. Glenville and Osmond are taking a brief, well-earned rest—Mr. Glenville in his native Ireland, and Mr. Osmond and his charming wife (Miss Hettie Zillwood) in the quiet little town of Deal. On August Bank Holiday they will reassemble their company at the New Prince's Theatre, Poplar, and there commence their fourth tour. This is arranged to extend well over Whitsuntide, 1907, the autumn season of that year being already nearly fully booked.

A season of German opera is to be given at Covent Garden in January, and will extend over a period of four weeks, at prices ranging from a 10s. 6d. stall downwards. The works mounted will include Beethoven's Fidelio, Weber's Freyschutz, and Smetana's Bartered Bride, and will be rendered by artists of the highest class, under the direction of Mr. Ernest Van Dyck.

Mr. Philip Leslie, after nearly eighteen months with the Brough-Flemming Comedy Company, in Australia, has been engaged by Mr. J. C. Williamson for the leading light comedy part in The Squawman, which is to be produced at His Majesty's Theatre, Melbourne. Since the first performance of Dr. Wake's Patient, Mr. Leslie has been scoring fast in the part of Duff Wynterden, the Australian Press and the "Matinee Girls" all being eulogistic over his performance.

Mr. and Mrs. Alec Romer (Miss Margaret Radcliffe) were among those who received invitations to Mr. Henry Neville's river party on Sunday. Recently they were the guests of Sir Edward and Lady Letchworth at a reception held at the latter's beautiful town house in Cornwall Gardens, when over 200 were present, Mrs. Alec Romer looking a picture in a pearl-grey confection.

A second company of The Prince of Pilsen starts touring next Monday at the Grand Theatre, Wolverhampton. The cast is an exceptionally strong one, and is headed by Miss Sophie Harriss, supported by Mr. Jack Crimp (from the Savoy Theatre) as the Prince, Mr. Harry Kilburn, and a chorus of thirty-six voices. The whole production, including scenery and properties, is new, the dresses having been made under the personal supervision of Miss Harriss by the leading English and Continental houses. Mr. Charles Thorburn has booked the tour, which extends into 1908, and Mr. Charles Wenman has rehearsed the play. Under the management of Mr. Richard Elliott, the venture starts thoroughly equipped for a long and successful run.

At the Prince of Wales's Theatre one day last week Miss Denise Orme was unfortunately unable to appear as See-See, and at very short notice Miss Jessie Rill took up the part, and did exceedingly well, rendering all the songs most successfully. This is only the second production in which Miss Rill has taken part, but she has a fine voice which should soon bring her to the front.

A new romantic play, entitled A Beggar on Horseback, by Edward Ferris and B. P. Mathews, will be produced on Monday at the County Theatre, Kingston-on-Thames. Messrs. Frank Cooper, Cooper Cliffe, Ernest Leicester, and Edward Ferris, and Miss Maud Hoffman and Miss May Chevalier will be included in the powerful cast.

After being closed for about three months, the Brixton Theatre will reopen on Monday with Mr. Alfred B. Cross's company in The Manxman. The principal musical comedies and dramatic companies now touring will be presented by Mr. Ernest Stevens in the course of the season.

"The King's Mistress," a new romantic play in four acts, by Maud Williamson, the author of many successful plays, will introduce two new artists to English audiences. Miss Marie de Campi, said to be one of the most beautiful women on the dramatic stage, comes from America with an established reputation in such rôles as Sweet Nell, Cleopatra, Portia, and Camille. She recently concluded in Philadelphia her sixth consecutive starring tour of the United States and Canada. In The King's Mistress Miss de Campi will appear in one of her most successful creations.

Mr. Alfred Woods, the other newcomer, who was starring as Pete Quilliam in Hall Caine's Manxman at the Grand Opera House, San Francisco (the first theatre destroyed by the earthquake) just before the calamity occurred, hails from Australia, where he has long held the reputation of being among the finest romantic actors that country has produced. Some of his chief successes have been Wilfred Denver, John Storm, Julian Gray, and Denis Mallory in The Garden of Lies, a version of which was produced at the St. James's by Mr. Alexander. More recently he created the Dean in Mrs. Humphry Ward's Marriage of William Ashe at the Garrick Theatre, New York. On the tour of The King's Mistress, which commences in September, probably at Southampton, Miss De Campi will be supported by a company which includes many well-known London artists.

Messrs. G. M. Polini and Lauderdale Maitland commence their third tour of The Coal King on Monday at the Theatre Royal, Stratford. The drama has met with considerable success in all the principal provincial towns. A notable incident in connection with this extraordinary drama is the way the authors have seemed to foresee events which have made history, for since its first production every sensational scene in the piece has had its replica in real life, even to within a few weeks of the present day.

Messrs Polini and Melford will start their autumn tour of Henry Arthur Jones's celebrated play The Silver King at the Broadway Theatre, Deptford, and the Lyceum Theatre, Sheffield, respectively on Monday. Mr. Austin Melford, who is engaged for the autumn production at Drury Lane, has obtained Mr. Arthur Collins's permission to play the title-rôle both at Deptford and at the Borough Theatre, Stratford. The utmost care has been devoted by Mr. Melford to the selection of the two companies, which consist of well-known artists of the best talent. It is now nearly twenty-four years since the first production of The Silver King, and it has since been continually before the public—truly a record in the way of drama.

The King's Theatre, Sunderland, was registered on July 17, with a capital of £28,000. The object is to acquire a theatre and other premises at Sunderland, and to adopt an agreement with the Gordon Trust and Investment Company, Limited. There is no initial public issue. The first directors are E. Stevens, R. C. Buchanan, J. Walther, F. Karno, S. F. Davidson, and R. C. Nelson.

Mr. Leonard Williams will on Monday next enact the leading part of Royal Keene in Messrs. Dallas and Carson's new American drama, The Great Wilderness, at the Grand Theatre, Fulham.

Mr. John F. Sheridan, the well-known comedian, has been absent seven years from England. He is now in Australia, and will produce The Earl and the Girl on Sept. 22nd at the Theatre Royal, Melbourne, to be followed by George Rollit's sporting farcical comedy, The Money Makers. Weathersby's Agency received a cable dated July 20th, from Brisbane, Queensland, announcing the instantaneous success of The Money Makers in the Antipodes. Both these plays, as also Charles Darrell's latest drama, Her Luck in London, have been negotiated by this agency.

Mr. Norman Macowan will start his autumn tour at the Theatre Royal, Preston, to-night, when Mr. Macowan will attain his 472nd performance of Monsieur Beaucaire. The popular actor does not hold the record in his own company, however, as his wife, Miss Violet Sterne, has played the part of Lady Mary Carlisle on over 500 occasions, and Mr. Coneybeare Gough, another member of the combination, has enacted Rakell nearly 600 times.

Master Tonge has been engaged by Mr. Tree for the part of Mamillius in The Winter's Tale at His Majesty's Theatre, the rôle in which Miss Ellen Terry made her first appearance on the stage.

Mr. Halliwell Hobbes has been engaged by Mr. Forbes Robertson to support him on his forthcoming English and American tour. When Mr. Robertson produces The Merchant of Venice and Hamlet in Manchester he will make the ninth Shylock and the eighth Hamlet with whom Mr. Hobbes has been associated. Mr. Hobbes also played Guiderius in Cymbeline at the Queen's Theatre, Manchester, last winter, on a hundred and one occasions. With such a notable record of Shakespearean work it is fitting that Mr. Hobbes should be a native of Stratford-on-Avon, at which historic town he is now spending a short holiday.

Miss Muriel Godfrey-Turner, who is taking a well-deserved holiday up the river, will shortly appear as Rosalind in As You Like It, under the direction of M. Russell Rosse. Miss Turner has all in her favour for the portrayal of Shakespeare's most lovable heroine, being undoubtedly fair and more than common tall.

At Bow-street Police-court on Friday, before Sir Albert de Rutzen, Mrs. Chambers was charged with obtaining money from the Actors' Benevolent Fund in the name of Muriel Brendon, upon the recommendation of Mr. Milton Bode, and was remanded to Wednesday.

Mr. Clarence Sounes has arranged excellent holiday attractions at the various houses under his control. At his Grand Theatre, Woolwich, Mr. Lewis Waller's company will open the autumn season with Brigadier Gerard, the Prince's Theatre, Poplar, will have a powerful attraction in The Still Alarm, and at the Theatre Royal, Aldershot, The New Barmaid will constitute the programme Mr. Sounes' bookings at each of his theatres are varied and good, embracing the latest London successes, together with a number of tried favourites. He will produce two pantomimes this Christmas, one at Poplar, and the other at Woolwich, relying on musical comedy for the festive season at Aldershot.

Mr. J. Bannister-Howard has secured Miss Edith Housley for his suburban tour of Florodora. Miss Housley was understudy to Miss Ada Reeve at the Lyric Theatre, where she frequently played the part of Lady Holyrood during Miss Reeve's absence. She was afterwards retained by Mr. Tom B. Davis for his productions of the Silver Slipper and The Medal and the Maid.

Miss Winifred Emery, having no part in Tripplepatte, will embark on a provincial tour during the autumn with W. G. Wills' Olivia. The tour will start at Manchester on October 1, and will last for ten weeks. Miss Emery will be supported by Mr. Brandon Thomas, Mr. Eille Norwood, Mr. Harvey Ashford, and Miss May Chevalier.

Mr. George Musgrove's Prince of Pilsen company started its third tour at the Theatre Royal, Brighton, on Monday, before an audience which crowded Mr. Beryl's handsome house from floor to ceiling, amply justifying the popular lessee's selection of this merriest of musical comedies for his Goodwood attraction. The enthusiasm which prevailed throughout the evening, culminated in a veritable storm of applause at the close, when the curtain had to be raised no less than eleven times, while bouquets and bon-bons were literally showered upon the fair members of the company.

Mr. J. Bannister-Howard has added to his extensive list of enterprises by taking over the Castle Theatre, Richmond, thus exploiting a theatrical field which has for some time lain fallow. There is at present no house devoted to the drama in the district, the new Richmond Theatre being now given over to variety. Mr. Howard, who has a fine selection of the best companies at his disposal, has already got together a strong list of bookings. The theatre will open on August 30 with Sergeant Brue, by arrangement with Mr. Frank Curzon, and will be open during the season on every Thursday, Friday and Saturday, on which day a matinée will be given. The house will be lighted throughout by electricity, and a special feature will be made of the ladies' lounge, where tea, coffee, ices, and light refreshments will be served. Among the forthcoming attractions will be A Country Mouse, with Miss Annie Hughes in the title-rôle, The Earl and the Girl, The Silver King, Public Opinion, The Belle of New York, Bluebell in Fairyland, Oliver Twist and The Eternal City (by arrangement with Mr. Tree), Hall Caine's play The Christian, Florodora, Charley's Aunt, and many other first-class companies.

Mr. Norman V. Norman has secured the rights of a romantic comedy on the subject of the Old Pretender, and intends to produce it on the first opportunity. The author is the Rev. Canon Langbridge, part author of The Only Way, After All, and Count Hannibal, the historical drama that has been so successful with Mr. Norman.

The body appointed to control the operations of the Commissioners of the Actors' Association held a special meeting on Monday last when the chair was occupied by Mr. S. Major-Jones. There were present Messrs. Cecil Barth and Leslie Carter, Messrs. Acton Bond and A. E. Drinkwater (deputy-chairman) of the Council, and C. B. Rivington (representing the secretary). The proposed circular letter to be sent to commissioners was again under consideration, and suggestions were received from three members of the committee. Eventually a letter was compiled embodying the same. The new set of seven reasons for joining the Association was also under discussion, and a revised set was formed.

The usual weekly meeting of the Council of the Actors' Association was held on Tuesday last. There were present Mr. A. E. Drinkwater (deputy-chairman), Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Miss Kate Phillips, Messrs. Cecil Barth, Clarence Blakiston, Acton Bond, Burton Cooke, William Devereux, Quinton McPherson, M. R. Morand, and Hubert Willis, and C. B. Rivington (for the secretary). The hon. solicitors reported progress in several matters, and stated that they had advised members on points submitted. The secretary reported that Mr. Frank Melrose, one of the members of the Association, had presented the A.A. with a fine coloured engraving of Mrs. Siddons, which the Council were pleased to accept. The circular letter prepared by the Commissioners Committee and the seven reasons for joining the Association were approved of by the Council.

The question of the Irving memorial was again before the Council, and it was decided to write to the president, the vice-presidents, and the rest of the Council to arrange a meeting at an early date after the vacation to take further steps in this matter. It was agreed that a letter of condolence from the Council should be written to the relatives of the late Mr. J. L. Toole.

The report of the Finance and General Purposes Committee was received. Mesdames Mildred Surrey and Muriel Barrington were nominated as candidates for election to the Association. Two former members were reinstated.

The Finance and General Purposes Committee held a meeting on Tuesday. There were present Mr. Acton Bond (chairman), Messrs. A. E. Drinkwater, M. R. Morand, and Hubert Willis, and C. B. Rivington (for the secretary). The letter to be sent to the president and vice-presidents regarding the Irving memorial and referred by the Council for this committee to frame was agreed upon.

DEATH OF MR. J. L. TOOLE.

The frequent bulletins that have been issued during the past few weeks have prepared our readers for the sad news of the death of Mr. J. L. Toole, who passed peacefully away on Monday night at his residence at Brighton. On the stage his work had been finished for some years, but the memory of his genial presence, his hearty English comedy, his unaffected, manly pathos, will always be precious to the playgoer. He had been an invalid for a long time, and yet he outlived his dear friend Irving, whose death deeply affected him. The affection between the two men was beautiful and touching, and the loving kindness and unswerving loyalty that each showed the other are among the things that enrich the annals of the British stage.

John Lawrence Toole was born in St. Mary Axe, in the City of London, on March 12th, 1830. His father was the City Toast Master, a position his son, when he was a boy, used to think equal in importance to that of the Lord Mayor himself. He spent all his pocket-money in playgoing, and nearly all the time he could command in imitating his favourite actors. He divided his attention pretty equally between the City of London, the Pavilion, and the Garrick theatres. Before he joined the profession, young Toole played in public, appearing at the Sussex Hall, Leadenhall Street. He belonged to the City Histrionic Club. The members paid for the hall, and gave a performance once a quarter. The audience was large—there was nothing to pay. On his first appearance the programme opened with the trial scene from The Merchant of Venice. They had all agreed that none of them should appear in costume; evening dress was to be de rigueur. But their Shylock deceived them. He turned up in the Jewish gaberdine, and with a regular make-up. It was too late, or probably his indignant fellow-members would have cut him out of the part. As Antonio, young Toole was extra bitter on him when he gradually got the Merchant into trouble, and perhaps the breach of agreement after all did no harm, though it must have made the gentlemen in dress-clothes look a little out of it. In a scene from Boots at the Swan, Toole was Jacob Earwig. He also gave a recitation and played in Sylvester Daggerwood, giving something like five-and-twenty imitations of popular actors.

On a certain memorable benefit night at the Pavilion, Toole—still a boy—was taken behind the scenes. On this occasion a member of the company who used to give imitations of well-known actors failed to turn up; and Toole was induced to take his place. He went on after an explanation, and gave one after the other, most of the imitations he had been in the habit of giving at the City Histrionic Club gatherings. He was successful beyond his expectations, and was naturally delighted at the result.

At this time young Toole was a clerk in a wine merchant's office. A day or two after his appearance at the Pavilion some busybody came into the counting-house and said he had seen him on the stage. Challenged by one of the firm, he was in such a fright that he denied it, but in a weak kind of way. After that first taste of the real footlights he began to dream of becoming an actor in earnest. The first time he played to a regular audience in a regular way was at Ipswich in 1852, and it was under the name of John Laver. One of his fellow clerks at the wine merchant's had gone on the stage and was at Ipswich. It was at his suggestion that Toole appeared at the leading man's benefit. He played the part of Sylvester Daggerwood, which gave him an opportunity of introducing some of his imitations. His Ipswich experience was very satisfactory. He received the compliments and congratulations of the leading man, a heavy and impressive tragedian; and he returned to London more than ever determined to give up his clerkship in the wine merchant's office.

After his Ipswich adventure he played with amateurs at the Walworth Institute. One night Charles Dickens came, and was very complimentary. John Forster mentions the incident in his "Life" of the great novelist. While taking a holiday at Dublin, Charles Dillon, who had heard of Toole in connection with the Walworth Institute, invited him to play at the Queen's Theatre; and he made an immediate hit as Simmons in The Spitalfields Weaver. Emboldened by this success he sent word to his London employers that he was not coming back. He then accepted an engagement at £2 a week, and remained in Dublin for the season. It was at this time he made the acquaintance of Robson, the famous comedian. He stayed two seasons at Dublin, where Mr. Robert Wyndham, of the Edinburgh Theatre, saw him, and offered him an engagement at £3 a week, which he accepted. On the 9th July, 1853, he made his first appearance on the Edinburgh stage as Hector Timid in the play of The Dead Shot. He had travelled from Dublin, put up at Milne's Hotel, and after a rehearsal went to bed, fairly worn out. He left instructions with the landlady to call him, but she forgot all about it, and he was still sleeping soundly when a messenger arrived from the theatre to inquire for him. To quote his own words: "I sprang out of bed, dressed, rushed to the theatre, and was just in time to scramble upon the stage and take up my cue. In entering, I stumbled over a mat and almost fell, and this so worried and upset me that throughout the whole piece I was nervous and wretched. Next day, however, I was agreeably surprised to find the critics unanimous in their praise of my acting, specially pointing out how appropriate to the character of 'Hector Timid' was the uneasy manner and faltering gait of the young comedian. Everything had happened for the best, even the carelessness of my landlady, my accident, my nervousness, and all my disasters."

The young actor gained considerable experience in Edinburgh, not only through the constant change of bill, but from acting with the stars who visited the Scotch capital. Amongst these was Miss Helen Faucit, with whom he played Touchstone in As You Like It, Cloten in Cymbeline, and Glavis in The Lady of Lyons. Phelps also came to Edinburgh on a starring tour, and young Toole played many parts with him, and also with Charles Mathews. He appeared in as many as eighteen different parts in a week during his early experiences as a stock actor, some of them new studies entirely. Those were the days when an actor had to work like the proverbial nigger; it made things easier for him later in his career, of course, but it was very hard work.

After about eighteen months of this severe practical training, Mr. Toole was offered and accepted an engagement at the St. James's Theatre, London, opening there on October 2, 1854, as Pepys in Tom Taylor and Charles Reade's play of The King's Rival. The piece was not a success, nor was Toole's part one in which there was much to be done. He also played the same evening the leading character in the farce of My Friend the Major. He afterwards acted Pierre in a piece called Honour before Titles at the St. James's, and later filled in a season with Miss Lydia Thompson in The Spanish Dancers. However, not being quite satisfied with his first experiences in town, and though he had several offers to remain, he went back to Edinburgh to rejoin Mr. Wyndham's stock company in his former position. This meant plenty of hard work, but, on the other hand, he had opportunities of acting with the stars of the profession, and of making new appearances in parts that he liked. A year passed and the young actor was once more tempted back to the metropolis, this time by a flattering offer from Mr. Dillon to join his company as low comedian. He accepted it; and at the end of the season at Edinburgh, Mr. and Mrs. Wyndham organised for him a farewell benefit. It was on this occasion that Mr. Toole made his first appearance as Paul Pry, and he also played Bottom in a scene from A Midsummer Night's Dream. His farewell speech was quite an ordeal, so large and enthusiastic was the audience; and he was in no mood to introduce any funny allusions on that memorable occasion.

Mr. Toole opened at the Lyceum Theatre in September, 1856, as Fanfaronade to Dillon's Belphegor, and the occasion was a memorable one, inasmuch as Miss Marie Wilton (the present Lady Bancroft) then made her first appearance in London. This "clever merry little actress," as Toole described her, represented the boy Henri, afterwards appearing as Perdita in William Brough's burlesque of The Winter's Tale, entitled Radita, or the Royal Milkmaid. Mr. Toole was two seasons with Dillon, and between whiles, when the vacations came, used to go starring, more particularly to Edinburgh, with a small company of his own.

It was here that Mr. Toole first formed the acquaintance of the late Henry Irving about the year 1857, but did not see much of him at that time. He met him later at Manchester, where the friendship which was to prove so strong and lasting commenced. When Irving was a lad he recited at Crosby Hall, and Toole used to recite at Sussex Hall, and the comedian was often heard to express the wish that he had known Irving then.

At the close of Dillon's management at the Lyceum, Mr. Toole went on another starring engagement in the provinces; and on his return to town, being recommended by Charles Dickens, Mr. Benjamin Webster engaged him for the Adelphi as successor to Edward Wright. He made his first appearance at that theatre in Good for Nothing, and an opening sketch by Edmund Yates in 1858. In January, 1859, he appeared in the burlesque of Asmodeus, and the following May he played for the first time Spriggins in Ici on Parle Français, the famous farce which he was destined to act thousands of times. His next part of any importance was Augustus de Rosherville in The Willow Copse, a character previously played by Wright. Webster was unmistakably pleased with the work of the latest addition to his company, and they got on together exceedingly well. Mr. Toole entertained a great respect and admiration for his new chief; for Benjamin Webster was liberal in business, and his instincts were thoroughly artistic.

When Paper Wings, by Watts Phillips, was produced at the Adelphi in 1860, Toole played William Kite; and by permission of Mr. Webster he was cast for Enoch Flicker in the same author's drama, called A Story of '45, and produced at Drury Lane. It was a part in which the actor had a chance of combining humour with pathos, and he was complimented by the author on his interpretation of the character. A new version of The Cricket on the Hearth, by Boucicault, was staged in April, 1862, and Toole's Caleb Plummer was considered by leading critics to have been an advance upon anything he had then done above the range of burlesque and farce.

The Area Belle, the famous farce by William Brough and Andrew Halliday, was produced in 1864, Paul Bedford appearing as the soldier, and Toole as the policeman. It was in this farce that he first sang "A 'Norrible Tale," written by E. L. Blanchard, who contributed for many years articles to the pages of this journal. During the same year Toole played the title rôle of Stephen Digges, a serio-comic piece adapted by John Oxenford from Balzac's novel of "Le Père Goriot. This production was the special attraction which he put up for his annual benefit. Between this and other new plays there were many revivals of favourite Adelphi dramas, among them being The Green Bushes. It was full of gags which had originated with Wright and Paul Bedford. There was a pot-boy at an adjacent tavern who used to serve the theatre with its ale and stout, and who had all these gags by heart, and whenever the piece was revived Wright would send for this boy and rehearse the gags with him. The boy not only remembered them, but every bit of business belonging to them.

Among the Adelphi revivals was Janet Pride, and Toole followed his old friend Robert Keeley in the part of the clockmaker's boy. In January, 1865, he appeared as Fathom in a revival of The Hunchback, Miss Bateman being the Julia; and in the summer of the same year he played Joe Bright in Through Fire and Water, by Walter Gordon. In May of the following year he was cast for the part of Prudent in the Fast Family, adapted from Sardou's La Famille Benoiton, and this ended his record at the Adelphi so far as original pieces were concerned.

In January, 1868, Mr. Toole accepted an engagement at the Queen's Theatre, Long Acre, with Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Wigan, the company including Henry Irving, Charles Wyndham, John Clayton, Lionel Brough, Miss Nellie Moore, and Miss Henrietta Hodson, John Ryder being the stage-manager, and Liston acting-manager. The first production was H. J. Byron's play, Dearer than Life, in which Toole made a hit as Michael Garner. The production was made specially memorable by Charles Dickens's prediction that there was an actor playing Bob Gassit at the Queen's who would be heard of again—no other than Henry Irving.

Leaving the Queen's Toole starred at the Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, for six or seven weeks, and also at the Crystal Palace, Irving accompanying him. A year later Toole returned to the Queen's for a short season, and played Jack Snipe in Watts Phillips's Not Guilty. In the same year he commenced a long engagement at the Gaiety, opening in a new domestic comedy written for him by Byron, Uncle Dick's Darling, a piece that remained popular with his audiences until the end of his stage career. His Uncle Dick was one of his favourite parts; and Henry Irving was the original Chevenix. His early associations with Irving in the part were so pleasant that, according to his own admission, he subsequently always felt a kind of blank when playing in the piece.

At the Gaiety he produced a round of old and new pieces, having the valuable assistance of that clever comedienne, Miss Nellie Farren. These included Byron's comedy, Tottles, Wait and Hope, Paul Pry, and Our Clerks, Aladdin the Second, Artful Cards, by Burnand, the same author's Babes in the Wood, the burlesques of The Forty Thieves and Don Giovanni, Bib and Tucker, Thespis, Gilbert and Sullivan's first effort in the way of comic English opera, Shilly-Shally, by Trollope and Reade, and Much Too Clever, by Hatton and Oxenford.

During the engagement of Phelps and Charles Mathews at the Gaiety, Mr. Toole played with these two great actors—Bob Acres in The Rivals, Mawworm in The Hypocrite, and Bulgruddery in John Bull. He then gave farewell performances prior to his visit to America, taking the Globe Theatre for the purpose, and producing there for the first time James Albery's comedy, Wig and Gown, and H. J. Byron's very successful play, A Fool and his Money. His season lasted ten weeks, and the business was excellent.

On the eve of Mr. Toole's departure for America a banquet was given in his honour at Willis's Rooms, under the presidency of Lord Rosebery. This took place on the 24th June, 1874, and proved a brilliant success. A farewell dinner to Mr. Toole was also given at the Great Western Hotel, Birmingham, the late Mr. George Dawson presiding.

Mr. Toole's American tour, which lasted over a year, was in every way successful, and in many ways extremely pleasant. Off the Line, Dearer than Life, Oliver Twist, Paul Pry, and Dot were the pieces that pleased the Americans most; and the leading New York papers were unanimous in their complimentary notices. He received many kindly tributes from both actors and playgoers, was frequently interviewed, had many pleasant dinners given him, and was accorded a most kindly reception at the Lotos Club. He travelled right through the States with varying fortune, but nowhere without receiving much kindness and being greeted by enthusiastic audiences. He gave several entertainments at public institutions in America, including two at the famous Pittsburg Lunatic Asylum at Dick's Pound.

When Mr. Toole returned from his American trip in August, 1875, he, after a successful provincial tour, became the lessee of the Folly Theatre, once known as the Charing Cross Theatre, and opened there in A Fool and His Money, followed by Ici on Parle Français. During an illness that followed, and a sad domestic affliction—the death of his son—H. J. Byron appeared in a revival of Not Such a Fool as He Looks, and other of his own comedies. Mr. Toole returned the first week in February, and on March 31, 1880, he produced The Upper Crust, by Byron, appearing himself as Barnaby Doublechick. In the summer season a pretty little comedy by A. W. Pinero, called Hester's Mystery, was added to the programme. Mr. Pinero, who was then a member of the Lyceum company, was introduced to Mr. Toole as a dramatist by his friend, Henry Irving. In the autumn a few matinées were given, Mr. Toole reviving Dot, and introducing later Byron's farcical piece The Light Fantastic, which went so well that it was transferred to the evening bill. Mr. Toole played the part of Professor Slithery, a dancing master. Another revival was Robert Reece's Wizard of the Wilderness, originally produced at the Gaiety in March 1873, Mr. Toole's part being that of Didymus Dexter, a chemist, who performs conjuring tricks. To obtain proficiency in a few sleight-of-hand tricks he took lessons of a professional magician.

The Upper Crust had a run of over four hundred nights; and in June, 1881, was revived Mr. Burnand's Artful Cards, which ran during alternate nights with The Upper Crust, following it by a comedy by Mrs. Fairbairn, called Waiting Consent. In the middle of July, Mr. Toole gave two farewell performances prior to closing his first season of management, taking a rest and arranging for his provincial tour. His farewell programme included The Hunchback, with Ellen Terry as Helen and Henry Irving as Modus.

The theatre was then reconstructed at a cost of upwards of £10,000, and under the title of Toole's Theatre was reopened on the 16th February, 1882, the bill consisting of Paul Pry and Domestic Economy. The house had been considerably enlarged, was very prettily decorated, and a handsome hall, saloon staircase, and foyer were much admired.

The most notable event of the first season at the newly-named house in King William Street was the production of a three-act play by Byron, entitled Austie. Unfortunately, a portion of the scenery caught fire in the first act. There was a scare for a few minutes, but the principals quickly reassured the audience, and the interrupted performance proceeded.

At the close of the season Mr. Toole made another provincial tour, and returning in October reopened with The Upper Crust and Guffin's Elopement, by Arthur Law and George Grossmith, in which he made a great hit in the well-written comic song "The Speaker's Eye," and produced Pinero's comedy, Boys and Girls. In the spring he revived Uncle Dick's Darling, with Billington as Chevenix, and Miss Florence West, afterwards Mrs. Lewis Waller, made a promising first appearance on the regular stage as Mary Belton.

On the 27th May he produced Burnand's burlesque of Fedora, in which Miss Marie Linden gave her successful imitation of Sarah Bernhardt. Early in 1884 the same author followed up his success with Fedora by a clever travesty of Wilson Barrett's successful production of Claudian. The piece was called Paw Clawdian. Other successful productions of those days included Going It, by the veteran playwright, Maddison Morton, a burlesque of the Lyceum Faust, by Burnand, The Butler, by Mr. and Mrs. Herman Merivale, and The Don, by the same authors. The last-mentioned two plays took a foremost place amongst Mr. Toole's most successful pieces.

The loss of his wife and daughter leaving him alone in the world, a widower and childless, Mr. Toole closed his theatre, and went abroad for a time. On his reappearance he was welcomed back to King William Street and in the provinces with touching warmth.

Then came an offer to visit Australia, which he accepted. Farewell breakfasts, dinners, and suppers galore followed, every kind of complimentary mark of love and esteem being shown. All the good wishes with which Mr. Toole started for the Antipodes were fulfilled. Lord Carrington invited him to Government House, the clubs vied to do him honour, and the people crowded the theatres in which he played.

On Mr. Toole's return to London, the public going to greet him on his reappearance in The Don found the hall and foyer of his theatre converted into a veritable museum of Antipodean trophies.

Having revived several of his most familiar plays, Mr. Toole made a successful provincial tour during which he accepted a new piece from the pen of Mr. J. M. Barrie, who up to that time had been known only as a successful novelist. On his return to town, Mr. Toole produced, on Feb. 25, 1892, the new play under the title of Walker, London. It proved a great success and had a long run.

Homburg, a sketch in one act by Joseph Hatton, was staged on May 3, 1893, when the comedian appeared as J. L. Toole himself, also representing two other characters, John Duncan Campbell and Mark Loftus. His last production at Toole's Theatre was the farcical comedy by Ralph R. Lumley, entitled Thoroughbred. This was produced on Feb. 13, 1895, with Mr. Toole as John Rimple, but ill-health and an attack of nervousness prevented him doing justice to the part at the first performance.

When Mr. Toole relinquished the heavy responsibilities of managing a London theatre he confined himself to suburban and provincial tours, with a répertoire consisting of his most popular plays. He made his last appearance on the stage at the Theatre Royal, Rochdale, on Saturday, Dec. 19, 1896, having appeared the first three days of that week at the Theatre Royal, Bury, in three plays, The Serious Family, Paul Pry, and Dot. The following year ill-health compelled Mr. Toole to seek retirement, and Margate and Brighton became his favourite resorts. Of late years he resided at the last mentioned town, and in his bath chair, in charge of an attendant, was a familiar figure on the front.

For most of the facts contained in the above record of Mr. Toole's career we are indebted to Mr. Joseph Hatton's volume of reminiscences, published a few years ago.

To "The Era Almanack" for 1901, Mr. John Billington contributed some interesting recollections entitled "With J. L. Toole in Australia." He points out that his life-long friend "Johnny" had the happiest faculty in the story-telling line he ever knew. On the outward voyage Toole joined the ship and his company at Brindisi, "when the fun became fast and furious, especially as the calm weather soon enabled him to get his 'sea legs,' and when not on deck he was generally found in the beautiful saloon, surrounded by crowds of attentive listeners, to whom he would be relating his funny stories, while he proudly displayed for admiration his social trophies and presents from his admirers, and, in particular, the famous gold and jewelled snuff-box from 'my dear friend Henry Irving.'"

In "The Era Annual" for 1904 appeared a portrait of Mr. Toole, who also sent the following amusing story:—

I was once playing in Dearer than Life with Irving and Billington at Leeds. After the performance several gentlemen were in the general room of the hotel where we were staying, and among them a certain Mr. Jones, who professed to have a large acquaintance in the profession, and who appeared to have a reputation as a judge of ages.

"Well, how old," said some one, "would you take Mr. Toole to be?"

"Well," said he, "sixty-five, if he's a day."

"Do you know him?" I asked.

"Oh, yes; know him very well indeed."

"Ah! and how old should you take me to be?"

"I should take you to be forty, if you're a day."

Irving asked Mr. Jones if he didn't think Mr. Toole was nearer seventy-five than sixty-five. "No," he said; "sixty-five, if he's a day," and the company present seemed to put it down that that would be my age. They had most of them been to the theatre and seen me—for the first time probably—playing an old man; and as it was my first visit to the town, and we were going on by the mail train that night, I had a fancy not to go away and leave them under the impression that I was this very old gentleman. I found that Jones was a decent sort of fellow, and I said to Irving that before I went I should just give him my card and let him know what a mistake he had made. By-and-by, when our cab arrived, we said good-night to our casual acquaintances, and, taking Mr. Jones aside, I handed him my card, whereupon he said, "Oh, indeed!" in a very offensive manner, and walked away.

"Well," I said to my friends as we drove away, "that's the most impertinent fellow I think I ever met." Whereupon Billington and Irving went into fits of laughter, and confessed that they had warned Mr. Jones that I was continually passing myself off as Toole, and he was to be quite prepared for my handing him a card and trying the imposition upon him.

THE LATE MR. J. L. TOOLE.

An account of Mr. Toole's funeral will be found on the next page.

FUNERAL OF J. L. TOOLE.

In spite of the fact that the late Mr. Toole's stage work was not so well known to the younger generation as to their fathers, an immense concourse of people assembled along the line of route yesterday afternoon, long before the hour announced for the funeral cortége to start on its sad journey. Wreaths and floral tributes of all kinds and designs kept arriving until well after the carriages had left for the cemetery. Mr. F. J. Arlton, a cousin of the deceased and a trusted companion for eighteen years, had been busy for several days arranging the conduct of the funeral and attending to the wreaths and other matters incidental to the death of a famous man. While the public showed great interest in the obsequies of Mr. Toole, there was not a great number of theatrical folk present owing to the theatres being closed, and many of our well-known actors and actresses being too far away—on the Continent or elsewhere—to be able to travel to London for the special purpose of attending the ceremony.

The apartment in Mr Toole's residence which had been set apart as a reception-chamber for the flowers looked like a beautiful garden. In the centre was the plain, pale oak coffin, with its massive brass fittings and its simple inscription plate, which read:

John Lawrence
Toole,
Died 30th July, 1906,
Aged 76 years.

The sweet odour of the flowers and their delicate loveliness made one think that, after all, there was daintiness in death. The art of the florist seemed to have been exercised to the utmost to make the combinations prettier than anything which had been previously attempted in that direction; and all the messages which they bore spoke of love, of faithful friendship, and of deep respect. "How should not such as thou fare well, Though we fare ill that love thee and that live." This was the sweet sentiment which accompanied a floral tribute sent by Joseph and Bessie Hatton. Mr. Laurence Irving's wreath carried a card bearing the words, "In loving memory, from his godson Laurence." Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Irving forwarded a wreath "in loving remembrance," and Mr. Arthur Bourchier's wreath was a particularly fine one, consisting of arum lilies, azalia, stephanotis, and lilies of the valley.

It was to be regretted that Mrs. Young, the aged sister of the deceased, was not well enough to accompany the mourners. The cortége started from the house shortly after one o'clock. In the first mourning coach there were Mr. Fred Toole (nephew), Mr. C. L. Young (nephew), Mr. C. Hammond (nephew), and the Rev. A. P. Spelman. The second coach contained Mr. and Mrs. Williams (nephew and niece), Mrs. Ashwell (niece), and Mr. T. K. H. Cole; the third, Mr. F. J. Arlton (cousin), Mr. Langton, Mr. Bram Stoker, and Mr. Colvin; the fourth, Mr. Lyell, Mr. Lowne, sen., Mr. Macready, and Mr. Dubois; the fifth, Mr. John Hare, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. George Alexander, and Sir Edward Clarke; the sixth, Mr. Lionel Brough, Mr. Shelton, Mr. C. M. Lowne (representing Green Room Club and himself), and Mr. H. Westland; seventh, Mr. Laurence Irving, Mr. Weedon Grossmith, and Mr. Derlacher; eighth, Nurse Selway, Mrs. Herbert (housekeeper), and Mr. Brunton. Mr. E. S. Willard, Mr. Comyns Carr, Mr. Henry Dickens, K.C., and Mr. Harry Nicholls. Mr. C. J. Davies (representing the Royal General Theatrical Fund), and Mr. C. I. Coltson (Actors' Benevolent Fund), and Mr. Arthur Weston, also followed.

Kensal Green Cemetery was reached at a quarter to two, and the service, both in the chapel and at the graveside, was conducted by the Rev. A. P. Spelman, the curate of St. Nicholas Church, Brighton. A large concourse of people assembled around the vault, where the late Mr. Toole's wife and two children were already buried.

Mrs. Mary Ann Young, the only sister of the deceased, sent a beautiful wreath of white flowers "In ever loving remembrance of my dear brother"; other family wreaths were from Mr. Fred Toole (nephew), Mr. C. L. Young (nephew), Mr. Frank Arlton (cousin), Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hammond (niece), Mrs. Ashwell (niece), Mr. and Mrs. Williams (niece), and Mrs. Carlton and Miss Rosa Carlton (cousins).

The names of those who sent wreaths, in the order of their arrival, is as follow:—Mr. G. Lee (Manchester), "With grateful remembrance of seven years' comradeship"; Mrs. E. and Miss Routledge, Mr. and Mrs. Lepard (Brighton Alhambra), Colonel and Mrs. Kennedy, Mr. Carey, Mr. and Mrs. Gosling, Miss Vera Braidwood, An Ardent Admirer of the late Sir Henry Irving, Edinburgh Pen and Pencil Club, "To My Hero" (bunch of flowers), Irene and Dion Boucicault, Mr. Andrew Macfarlane, Mr. Wm. Pink, Mrs. Wm. Black, son, and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Bransby Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Kendal, Mrs. Joseph Fell and daughters, Mrs. H. T. Craven and son, Mr. P. S. King, Mr. Gillie Farquhar, the Baroness and Mr. Burdett-Coutts, Mr. George Shelton, Mrs. Clementson, Miss Helen Ferrars, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Irving, Miss Fortescue, Mr. and Mrs. Fernandez, Miss Pollie Brough, Mr. and Mrs. Paxton, Mr. and Mrs. John Drew, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Howard, Joseph and Bessie Hatton, "In memory of many happy hours at Toole's Theatre," Miss Phyllis Broughton, Mr. and Mrs. Pullar and family, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dickens, Mr. C. M. Lowne, Mrs. Ralph Lumley and children, Mr. Leonard Hunt, Mr. Laurence Irving, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton, the Playgoers' Club, Mr. George Grossmith, the O. P. Club, Mr. Allan Ainsworth, "Barbara, Jennie Jessie, and George" (relatives), Mr. John Hare, Sir Squire and Lady Bancroft, Mr. and Mrs. Pinero, Mr. Bram Stoker, the Rev. A. P. and Mrs. Spellman, the maids at West Pier Mansions, Brighton, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Beryll, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Harvey, Mr. David Bispham, Mr. Lewis Waller, Mr. E. V. S. Hill, the president, vice-president, committee, and members of the John Carpenter Club, Miss Blanche Wolsey, Mr. J. D. Langton, Mr. and Mrs. Monillot, members of the Green-room Club, Miss Lydia Rachel, Mr. W. S. Penley, Mr. Fred W. Millis, Mrs. T. H. Chance and Ida Chance, Mrs. Lloyd Rayner, the Savage Club, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Yates (Miss Lilian Chevalier), Mr. and Mrs. Weedon Grossmith, Mr. Fredk. Carr, Mrs. Clarke Travers, Mr. C. H. Price, Mr. George Savage (Sunderland), E. Y. Lowne and Jane Lowne, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Sir Francis and Lady Burnand and family, Miss Hogarth, Mr. H. B. Lewis, Mr. Gorham Bacon, Mr. Henry Wortland, Mrs. Alfred Moul, Dr. Herbert Langton, Mr. Jay Cee, Mr. and Master George Perrin, Mr. S. Heilbut, Mrs. Griffin, Mr. Cecil Barth, Touring Managers' Association, Mrs. Bacon and family (Brighton), Miss Edie Bacon, Mr. B. B. Bacon, Mr. Tom Thorne, Misses Constance and Jessie Young, Mrs. J. B. Howard (Edinburgh), Mr. and Mrs. Nathon, Miss Rosie Illington, Mr. W. B. Walker, Mrs. Farjeon, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert, Nurse Selway, Mr. and Mrs. H. Loveday, Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree, Mr. and Mrs. Dubois, Mr. and Mrs. Wyndham (Edinburgh), Mr. and Mrs. Fred Terry, the trustees and directors of the Royal General Theatrical Fund, Actors' Benevolent Fund, Actors' Association, Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Maude, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Law, Miss Elaine Terris and Mr. Seymour Hicks.

TO THE MEMORY OF JOHN L. TOOLE.

Now is it dark! the flickering light is gone,
That brightly on the drama's altar shone!
Gay Folly mourns, her eyes cast on her lap,
Where idly lie some well-worn bells and cap.

And he who proudly wore them, had, alas!
At last into the far-off bourne to pass.
A motley jester, who for many years,
With cap and bells swayed both our smiles and tears!

Proud Thalia, too, her aspect worn and wan,
Mourns where to find just such another Man!
To use that cap and bells, which lie there thrown,
The bells a sceptre, and the cap a crown!

And while she mourns, there pass before her eyes,
The forms of many who to fame shall rise!
And still she scans, and murmurs in regret:
"Not one among them all! at least, not yet!"

IRVING AND TOOLE.

Again they're joined; two golden hearts
That sought on earth life's highest goal:
To brighten Art with all their best,
And give it, as to Heaven, their soul.

Matthew Brodie.

August 2, 1906.

A volume might be filled with anecdotes of the late J. L. Toole. One of the earliest is in connection with Sothern, whom Toole had arranged to meet at a restaurant. The latter arrived first, and thinking he recognised an elderly man sitting with his back to him, banged the gentleman on the back, and asked him heartily how he was. The man was a stranger and elderly and choleric, and it took Toole some time to calm his anger. Soon after Sothern arrived. Toole pointed out the stranger, and offered to bet a sovereign that Sothern would not go up to him, bang him on the back, and pretend that he knew him. Sothern promptly accepted the bet, and banged away in his turn, with a result that may well be imagined.

Another good story of Toole relates to a fright he gave a certain eminent judge who was sitting in assize at Liverpool while the comedian was playing at one of the theatres there. A cause celèbre was creating a great deal of attention, and the judge sent a note to Toole inviting him to come to supper at the judge's lodgings after the performance at the theatre. During supper the case was a subject of conversation, and the judge remarked that he would next day give the man fifteen years, and he deserved it. "Oh!" said Toole on leaving, and with all the seriousness he could command, "would you mind me calling at the different morning newspaper offices and telling them about the fifteen years? It will be a tip for them, and do me no end of good with the press. Exclusive information, you know, and so on." "Great heavens, no, sir!" thundered the judge, and walked with Toole to his hotel, tucked him up, and waited till he was fast asleep and safe from temptation.

The gentle art of practical joking of which Toole was a master is exemplified in the following whimsical anecdote. The actor was giving a dinner party, and one of the guests was very late. All the other men were seated at the table and the meal had begun when his knock was heard at the door. "All get under the table," said the host, "and let him think he is the first," and one by one, with many nudges anticipatory of coming humour, the men got on the floor. The late man entered. "I beg your pardon for being so late," he began, and then looking round the room, "but I see I'm the first, after all." "Oh, no, you're not," was the reply. "All the other fellows are here, but for some extraordinary reason they are lying on the floor."

The never-failing wit and presence of mind of the comedian stood him in admirable stead once at Dublin, where he was playing Uncle Dick's Darling. All went well until a piece of scenery stuck. It was a "scene rise and sink," and the top went up. The other portion would not budge, however, and Toole was obliged to step over the bit of scenery that would not sink. The "gods" expressed their disapproval in the time-honoured way. "At the close," said Toole, in telling the story, "when they called me, I went forward and said, "A little mishap has occurred, but you ought not to blame us. We were only two or three minutes trying to sink that bit of scenery, and you have been two or three weeks trying to raise a ship 'in Kingstown Harbour.'"

An excellent appreciation of the value of advertisement was always manifested by Mr. Toole. Whenever he was touring, it was his habit to visit the best-known hostelries in a town and reveal his identity. Knowing his custom, the wags of his company once left London by an earlier train, made the round of the hotels, and introduced one of their number—a tall, heavily-built man—as "Mr. Toole." Quite casually they let it be known that there was "a member of our company, a little fellow who gives us a lot of trouble. He will insist on telling strangers that he is Mr. Toole. You know what to do with him if he comes in here." When the comedian duly arrived on his errand he got a welcome which puzzled and perturbed him

In the Court of Bankruptcy, on the 27th ult., before Mr. Registrar Giffard, a sitting was held for the public examination of Mr. Clifford Rean, The accounts showed unsecured liabilities £956, and no available assets. In answer to the Official Receiver, debtor said that he had been connected with the stage since 1893. In January, 1899, he inherited a sum of £868, and commenced a theatrical tour with various plays, which proved unsuccessful. Since July, 1901, he had lost £611 on the tour of A Woman of Pleasure, and his present position was due to that and similar losses. The examination was concluded.

Whilst playing in Liverpool twenty-nine years ago the late Mr. J. L. Toole heard that a figure of himself had been added to the fine collection in Reynolds's wax works in Lime-street. On visiting the exhibition he was surprised at the likeness, and remarked that it reflected him in the character of Paul Pry with almost the accuracy of a mirror. Mr. Charles Reynolds, who still shows the figure enclosed in a special glass case, has among his treasures an autograph letter, dated October, 1877, from the dead actor, complimenting him upon the splendid waxen cast.

Mr. T. W. Dunscombe, who has been starring as Paul Gouffet, the Detective, in The Face at the Window, for some time past, has been re-engaged by Messrs. Armadale and Warren for autumn, and will make his 638th appearance in the part on Monday at the St. James's Theatre, Manchester.

THE EMPIRE, OXFORD.

LICENCE REFUSED.

It will be remembered that on June 5 last, at the Oxford City Court, before the Mayor and Aldermen, application was made by Mr. Hugh Sturges on behalf of Mr. Albany Ward, for the renewal of the licence of the Empire Theatre, Oxford, for the ensuing year.

Mr. Sturges said the theatre was situated in the east of Oxford, and was frequented principally by tradespeople and the class who lived in that part, and also a great number who came in from the neighbouring villages. He understood the licence had been granted from year to year for sixteen years. During that time no complaint of any sort or description had been made excepting a complaint in 1903 brought before the Bench, drawing attention to the fact that the theatre was structurally unsuitable for the purposes to which it was put. The matter was gone into at considerable length, and a distinguished architect made a report, which was submitted to the Bench, and they renewed the licence subject to the alterations suggested in that report being carried out. In 1904, in consequence of a fire at one of the theatres, the Bench expressed a wish that a fireproof curtain should be put in, and it was immediately done. In 1905 they obeyed the wish of the Bench by ceasing to carry on a cinematograph.

Mr. F. Gray, who appeared on behalf of the East Oxford Constitutional Hall Company, said the company had expended a considerable sum in 1903 to meet the requirements of the Bench. They were a public limited company, having to meet the expenditure out of income, and they were only now beginning to feel the benefit of the expenditure they made at the suggestion of the Bench in 1903. He submitted that, at that stage, the licence ought not to be refused. His friend and himself had a number of persons present who were prepared to speak as to the requirements of the district for a place of entertainment of this class.

Mr. Albany Ward, the licensee of the "Empire," stated that a large number of people who attended the place came from the immediate neighbourhood and villages in the locality. In 1903 the sum of £90 was spent on the premises, and a report was drawn up by Mr. Buckle, a London architect, upon the structure. In 1904 a fireproof curtain was provided, it having been suggested by the justices. In the following year a cinematograph film caught fire, and he had ceased having such things in the place since. There had been no complaint as to the conduct of the house since he had had it.

Mr. C. F. Talbot, secretary of the Constitutional Hall Company, said that the sum of £86 was paid in 1903 for repairs on the premises, to meet the requirements of the justices.

Mr. Sturges submitted that after the expense that Mr. Ward had been put to it would be an injustice to deprive him of his licence, for he had done his best to preserve order and proper behaviour in the theatre. He also pointed out that there was no opposition to the renewal of the licence.

The magistrates retired to consult, and on their return in a few minutes,

The Mayor said the Bench were quite unanimous in coming to the decision that the application for the renewal of the licence should be refused.

Mr. Sturges then applied that a temporary licence should be granted from the present time, pending an appeal at the Quarter Sessions.

The Magistrates granted a temporary licence, as asked for, to date from June 9, and to extend to the date of holding the Quarter Sessions.

The appeal came on for hearing at the adjourned Quarter Sessions of the City of Oxford on Saturday last, before the Recorder (Mr. R. B. Dyke Acland, K.C.).

A preliminary objection to the appeal was lodged by Mr. T. M. Snagge, who represented the respondent justices. The appeal arose under the Theatres Act, 1843, the regulation of theatres giving inter alia jurisdiction to the justices with regard to granting licences, and the only section which provided for appeal was Section 20, which said it "shall be lawful for any person who shall feel himself aggrieved by any order of such justices of the peace to appeal therefrom to the next Quarter Sessions of the Peace." Counsel's point was that no order had been made in this case. The terms of the section differed from the Ale House Act of 1828, which in regard to appeals from refusals to renew the licences of public-houses, said in Section 27, "Any person who shall think himself aggrieved by any act of any justice may appeal against any such act." But in the Theatre Act it was limited to order. The word "order" had come under the consideration of the Courts, and in cases arising under the Summary Jurisdiction Act the terms were, "any conviction or order," but it had been held that the justices of the licensing meeting were not a court of summary jurisdiction, and the refusal of the justices of a licence was not a conviction or order. In this case no order was drawn up. The justices only refused to grant a licence, and he submitted, as his friend was entirely confined to the terms of the Act, there being no order no appeal could lie. Further than this, the section must be taken in its relation to the preceding and following sections. Both of those related to penalties, and he contended that this section only related to appeals against penalties.

Mr. Hugh Sturges, who appeared for the appellant, argued that the Act of 6 and 7 Victoria gave to the Lord Chamberlain or to the justices power to grant licences in respect of theatres, and made it unlawful to keep houses of public resort without such authority. His contention was that once a house had been licensed with the authority of the justices there was no necessity of any sort or description to apply for its renewal. But it was reserved to the judges (Section 9), in the case of any riot or breach of any rules, that they might "order" the house to be closed for such time as the said justices shall see fit, and while such order shall be in force the theatre so ordered to be closed shall be deemed an unlicensed house." If his contention was correct, a house once having been licensed, unless there had been some breach of the rules, there was no power in the justices to order the house to be closed. It was admitted that the licence was obtained in 1900, and from time to time in this particular case orders were given that certain things should be done. All the wishes of the justices had been carried out. Section 9 of the Act gave powers to the justices to make rules for ensuring order and decency, a copy of such rules to be affixed to the licence. He contended that in the case of a breach of the rules the magistrates could order the theatre to be closed, and that in this case an order was made. A theatre once licensed was always licensed until there was an order closing it, and before the justices had jurisdiction they had to have the sworn testimony of two persons that there had been a riot or breach of the rules. He submitted that an order had been made in this case, that it was the only order the magistrates could make, and that it was an order closing the house.

Once a license, continued counsel, always a license. The magistrate must have made an order when they refused to allow performances to continue, and if they had not done something on that day the theatre would have gone on as before. The whole point of the section was to give the aggrieved person the right to appeal to Quarter Sessions. The Act ought to be construed as broadly as possible, and he asked the Recorder to say, that being the meaning of the Act, this appeal stood.

The Recorder said the appeal must fail. From 1900 onwards Mr. Albany Ward had applied annually to the magistrates for a license, and had received, he supposed, in each year a license in the form he held before him, authorising him "to have and to keep open a certain building called the Empire Theatre . . . as a place for the public performance of stage plays . . . for the space of one year, from June 9, 1905." When he applied this year for a new license or a renewal, so called, of this license, the magistrate simply declined to make any order at all. It seemed to him quite clear that their refusal to do anything did not amount to an order within the meaning of Section 20, and his view was borne out very strongly by the provision of Section 20. He saw no provision in the Act which enabled the aggrieved person to appeal against the refusal of the magistrates to grant a license. That being so, the appeal to this Court was entirely misconceived, and must fail. Of course it was desired to take this further he would state a case.

Mr. Sturgess asked: Would the Recorder allow the theatre to remain open pending the decision whether a case should be asked for?

The Recorder said he would not give judgment for three weeks. He then formally adjourned the Court.

Mr. Albert Strong, the well-known authority on Dramatic Law, writes:—"The recent refusal of the Justices at Oxford to renew the licence for the Empire Theatre, Oxford, to Mr. Albany Ward, raises a question of the very greatest importance to theatre owners. Mr. Albany Ward has had the licence of the Empire Theatre, Oxford, renewed to him for six years, without any question. Oxford, of course, is a 'Varsity town, and everyone connected with either Oxford or Cambridge knows that the undergraduates are apt occasionally to be a bit lively, but Mr. Ward's theatre has had nothing whatever during all these years suggested against it. In June, however, without any opposition whatever being made to the renewal, the Justices, without any reasons, refused to renew the licence. The consequence is that Mr. Ward finds his theatre, on which he has spent large sums of money, and for which he has created a valuable goodwill, suddenly taken away from him without anything being alleged against him and without any reasons given therefor. If the Justices have power to do this in one case they will have power to do it in another, and the question therefore is a very serious one for theatrical people to consider. In the case of Ex-parte Harrington, decided in 1888, it was held by the Court of Appeal that the Justices had power to refuse a licence for a theatre. In that case it was argued on behalf of the applicant that the Justices had no power to refuse a licence. The Court of Appeal said they had a discretion to grant or refuse a licence. But after that case came the celebrated case of Sharpe v. Wakefield, where the Lord Chancellor laid down very clearly the sort of discretion which has to be exercised by Justices. He says:—'And "discretion" means, when it is said that something is to be done within the discretion of the authority, that that something is to be done according to the rules of reason and justice, not according to private opinion, according to law, and not according to humour. It is to be, not arbitrary, vague, and fanciful, but legal and regular, and it must be exercised within the limit to which an honest man competent to the discharge of his office ought to confine himself.'

"This decision was on the question of the discretion of Justices to refuse to grant an excise licence to a public-house, but the judicial interpretation of the word 'discretion' will surely equally apply to theatrical licences. Indeed, in 1896, in the case of the Queen v. County Council of West Riding of Yorkshire, this definition was discussed and expressly applied to the case of Justices granting a licence with a condition attached that no intoxicants should be sold. But apparently no case has been decided, apart from Ex-parte Harrington, as to the rights of a licensee of a theatre who has a renewal refused him. No doubt if the Justices had good reason for it they can lawfully refuse to renew, but it is contended that their reasons must be 'not arbitrary, vague, and fanciful, but legal and regular.' The immense importance of this case is obvious. Many thousands of pounds are invested in theatres throughout the country, and if the law is in accordance with the views of the Justices of Oxford the security of theatre owners is of the very slightest. Their theatres are at the mercy of any Puritan faction in the town which for the time being has the upper hand. The case is essentially one for the Theatrical Propretors' Association, and it is to be hoped they will take it up. In any case, the future development of this case will be watched with the keenest interest by all connected with theatrical enterprise throughout the country."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—In connection with the above, may I ask your kind permission to state a few facts for those of your readers whom the case may interest?

I have held the license of the Empire now for six years, and during the whole of that time there has been no complaint against me as to my conduct of the house.

In 1903 the Justices asked for structural alterations, and I called in Mr. Buckell, the eminent architect, who made a report that some of the "improvements" suggested by the Bench would have been a source of danger to the public. The Bench accepted Mr. Buckell's report, and with many of my own suggestions the alterations were carried out, at a considerable cost to myself and the owners of the building.

In 1904 the Bench requested a fire-proof curtain, and this I at once put in. I think from this it will be seen that I have at every and all times obeyed, and more than obeyed, the wishes of the Justices.

On the 6th of June of the present year I applied for the renewal of my license in due course, but hearing from confidential information received some two days previously, I gleaned that there was likely to be some opposition My solicitor, Mr. E. T. Hatt, of Oxford, suggested I should brief counsel, and Mr. Hugh Sturges was accordingly retained.

Having been informed that the Watch Committee had made a report to the Justices, my counsel asked that all interested persons should leave the Bench, but this was taken no notice of, and at least three of the same committee, who had made the report sat on the Bench to decide the application.

Counsel asked whether there was any opposition, and the Justices' Clerk publicly asked if there were any one to oppose the license. No opposition was offered, and the Bench then heard the application, at which, in no way, shape, or form, was there any legal opposition. The Magistrates' Clerk cross-examined myself and my manager, as to an incident of potato throwing by an Undergraduate, in which, by the way, he did not hesitate to ask leading questions.

The Bench retired, and almost immediately returned and the Mayor announced that they had unanimously decided to refuse the license. My counsel then gave notice of appeal to Quarter Sessions, which the Bench granted.

On July 16 the Quarter Sessions were held, and after being kept all day waiting, with some thirty witnesses, we were told that the appeal could not be heard that sessions, but the Recorder would appoint a later date to suit all parties. Ultimately, although protested against by my counsel, Saturday, July 28, was fixed, a day on which it was almost impossible for me to get my witnesses.

However, we again appeared, with what witnesses could be obtained, to be faced with the argument by the Justices' counsel, that we had no right of appeal whatever, as the Justices had made no order. This was upheld by the learned recorder, and so the law stands that Justices may, without giving any reason whatever, refuse a license, and the unfortunate licensee is at the mercy of every "honest tradesmen" however unlearned in law or prejudiced, either by self-interest or possible religious opinions that may happen to hold the right to sign himself "J.P.," and have no appeal whatever.

That this sometimes leads to injustice being done may be gathered from the following:—Knowing the uncertainty of the law, I opened a pierrot show in a field, situate some five hundred yards from the nearest house, and sank some amount of capital, to make it worthy of the city.

Now, by an old Act, of which I was unaware, the Mayor has the right to refuse or grant permission for any entertainment, not strictly theatrical, in the City of Oxford. Immediately following on the decision as to the appeal, I received a letter from the Chief Constable, saying that "He did not wish to seem to be persecuting me," but I must obtain permission from the Mayor for my pierrot entertainment. I called on the Mayor, who received me courteously enough, but granted me permission for two days, and assured me that he thought it would be all right, but that he would like to consult the magistrates. It was pointed out to him that it was nothing to do with the Bench, but was his sole prerogative. He, however, adhered to his decision to consult his brother magistrates, with the result that on the following evening I received, through the police, an intimation that this was also refused, and summarily "shut down."

Now, can "Dogberryism" go any further, and does it not show the necessity for a strict revision of the Law of Licensing, as under the present state of things it is possible for a Bench to ruin any man, and drive him from a town.

In conclusion, it may be of interest to state, that the Vice-chairman of the Watch Committee is also the managing director of the opposition theatre, whilst another of the "J.P.'s" is the owner of a site whereon it is proposed to erect another theatre, almost opposite my own, of which he has, I believe, prepared the plans.—Yours faithfully,

Albany Ward.

On Earth you held a myriad eyes;
You charmed, amazed, bewitched, enthralled,
Enraptured, dazzled, and appalled!
Such talents as to you were sent
Filled all the world with wonderment.
As spell-bound they would speak your praise,
And marvel at your mystic ways!
And now your soul is called Above
To Mansions of Eternal Love;
Why should we sorrow? You were good,
A type of perfect womanhood!
And though we all your loss deplore,
For you awaits the Open Door:
For you the Realms beyond the Skies—
For you a home in Paradise!

CHAS. F. FORSHAW, LL.D

*Widely known as "Mystic Marie."

For Sympathy
The Late Marie Walford.

Dr. and Mrs. Walford Bodie wish to tender their sincere thanks to the hundreds of friends and relations who so kindly sent letters and telegrams of condolence on the death of their dearly-beloved sister, Miss Marie Walford (Mystic Marie).

Mrs. Weeks, South London Palace, desires to thank all friends for kind enquiries, wires, and letters of condolence during her husband's severe illness; also to thank all friends who have sent such lovely wreaths. Many, many thanks for the same. Such kindness will never be forgotten by his wife, Melvina Weeks.

HOW TO KEEP COOL.

We strongly recommend all who suffer from the prevailing heat to add a few drops of Condy's Fluid to the Daily Bath or Foot Bath.

A Condy's Fluid Bath imparts a delightful sensation of Coolness, Freshness, and Purity. It invigorates the body and braces the nerves. The Cooling, Strengthening, and Bracing effects are Simply Magical, they are so very lasting.

Sold by all Chemists, 1/- 8oz., 20oz. 2/- Caution.—Insist on having "Condy's Fluid."

At the Tynemouth Palace-by-the-Sea, Stanley's giant fairy fountain is interesting everyone, and some charming effects are given by the aid of coloured lenses under the strong electric rays. Elliston Webb contributes some pleasing tenor songs; Helen Charles shows versatility in a neat drawing-room sketch; Dillon Shallard is a fine baritone vocalist; Merton and Rydon submit some excellent comedy; and the Grand Casino orchestra, under the bâton of Henry Sprake, meet with hearty appreciation.

The statement that Mr. Oliver Conroy would appear in Mr. Lingford Carson's pantomime The Babes in the Wood was erroneous.

On Wednesday, on the application of Mr. Helmsley, manager of St. James's Theatre, Mr. Denman renewed the licence permitting Iris Hawkins, the charming girl-actress, to play in His House in Order.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER.

BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

THE ERA

SATURDAY, AUGUST 4, 1906.

THE MUSICAL COPYRIGHT BILL.

The Musical Copyright Bill, which was read for the third time in the House of Commons on Tuesday night, passed on Thursday night through all stages in the House of Lords, and by the time these lines appear will probably have received the Royal Assent. The justice of the measure is, indeed, and always has been, so obvious to the unprejudiced understanding that to those unacquainted with the practical working of Parliamentary pressure it may seem strange that so much delay should have been incurred in obtaining necessary protection for a body of honest men against the "daylight robbery" of rogues. The Bill itself contains only three clauses, as follows:

Clause 1.—Every person who sells, exposes, offers, or has in his possession for sale any printed copies of any musical work, or has in his possession any plates for the purpose of printing or reproducing pirated copies of any musical work, shall (unless he proves that he acted innocently) be guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction, and shall be liable to a fine not exceeding five pounds, and on a second or subsequent conviction to imprisonment with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding two months or to a fine not exceeding ten pounds. Any constable may take into custody without warrant any person who in any street or public place sells, exposes, offers, or has in his possession for sale any such copies as aforesaid.

2.—(1) If a court of summary jurisdiction is satisfied by information on oath that there is reasonable ground for suspecting that an offence against this Act is being committed on any premises, the Court may grant a search-warrant authorising the constable named therein to enter the premises between the hours of six of the clock in the morning and nine of the clock in the evening, and, if necessary, to use force for making such entry, whether by breaking open doors or otherwise, and to seize any copies of any musical work or any plates in respect of which he has reasonable grounds for suspecting that an offence against this Act is being committed.

(2) All copies of any musical work and plates seized under this section shall be brought before a court of summary jurisdiction, and if proved to be pirated copies or plates intended to be used for the printing or reproduction of pirated copies shall be forfeited and destroyed or otherwise dealt with as the court think fit.

(3) In this Act the expression "pirated copies" means any copies of any musical work written, printed, or otherwise reproduced without the consent lawfully given by the owner of the copyright in such musical work; and the expression "plates" includes any stereotype or other plates, stones, matrices, transfers, or negatives used, or intended to be used, for printing or reproducing copies of any musical work; provided also that the expressions "pirated copies" and "plates" shall not, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to include perforated music rolls used for playing mechanical instruments, or records used for the reproduction of sound waves, or the matrices or other appliances by which such rolls or records respectively are made.

With a view to meeting the objections of some of the opponents of the Bill, amendments were introduced of precautions against illegal or wanton arrest. These are the principal of those amendments:

Provided that a person convicted of an offence under this Act who has not previously been convicted of such an offence, and who proves that the copies of the musical work in respect of which the offence was committed had printed on the title page thereof a name and address purporting to be that of the printer or publisher, shall not be liable to any penalty under this Act unless it is proved that the copies were to his knowledge pirated copies.

Pirated copies of any such musical work as may be specified in any general written authority addressed to the chief officer of police, and signed by the apparent owner of the copyright in such work or his agent thereto authorised in writing, requesting the arrest, at the risk of such owner, of all persons found committing offences under this section in respect to such work, or who offers for sale any pirated copies of any such specified musical work by personal canvass or by personally delivering advertisements or circulars.

A copy of every written authority addressed to a chief officer of police under this section shall be open to inspection at all reasonable hours by any person without payment of any fee, and any person may take copies of or make extracts from any such authority.

Any person aggrieved by a summary conviction under this section may in England or Ireland appeal to a court of Quarter Sessions, and in Scotland under and in terms of the Summary Prosecutions Appeals (Scotland) Act, 1875.

It may be interesting to compare this admirably drawn Bill with that which was read for the first time in the House of Commons on July 11 last year, and subsequently "came to grief."

OFFENCES.

1.—(1) If any person sells or offers for sale or has in his possession for the purposes of sale copies of any musical work, which he knows to be pirated, or has in his possession any plate for the purpose of printing or reproducing pirated copies of any musical work, he shall be liable, on conviction under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, to forfeit all such copies and plates in his possession, and also to a fine not exceeding one shilling for each copy, and five pounds for each plate in respect of which the offence was committed, so, however, that the total amount of the fines inflicted on one offender for one offence in respect of the same musical work shall not exceed twenty pounds.

(2) The expression "plates" includes any stereotype or other plates, stones, or matrices, or negatives used or intended to be used for printing or reproducing copies of any musical work.

SEARCH WARRANTS AND SEIZURES.

2.—(1) If a court of summary jurisdiction is satisfied by information on oath that there is reasonable ground for suspecting that an offence against this Act is being committed on any premises, the court may grant a search warrant authorising the constable named therein to enter the premises, if need be by force, at any time between nine o'clock in the morning and six o'clock in the afternoon, and to seize any copies of any musical work or any plates in respect of which he has reasonable grounds for suspecting that an offence under this Act is being committed.

(2) All copies of any musical work and plates seized under this section shall be brought before a court of summary jurisdiction, and if proved to be pirated copies or plates intended to be used for the printing or reproduction of pirated copies, shall be forfeited, and destroyed or otherwise dealt with as the court may think fit.

(3) In case of seizure under this Act or the Musical (Summary Proceedings) Copyright Act, 1902, the court, if satisfied that the owner is unknown or cannot be found, may, without summons, but after such public advertisement as the court thinks fit, make such order as by this Act or the said Act it is authorised to make.

This Act may be cited as the Musical Copyright Act, 1905, and shall come into operation on the first day of October nineteen hundred and five, and expressions used in this Act, unless the context otherwise requires, have the same meanings as in the Musical (Summary Proceedings) Copyright Act, 1902, and that Act and this Act may be cited together as the Musical Copyright Acts, 1902 and 1905.

This Bill had an unfortunate fate. Readers will easily remember the relentless opposition which it received, with the result that it was withdrawn in August, 1905, in spite of the energetic efforts of the leading music-publishers and of Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR, who, supported by the leading members of the Liberal party, worked with unceasing energy to induce the opponents of the Bill to come to some reasonable compromise. By activity and perseverance the hearty co-operation of about a hundred Members of Parliament was secured, and the Government was at last induced to bring in a short Bill themselves. This, however, was not done until very late in the session, as the Government would not introduce the measure unless it was to be non-contentious; and thus a great deal of time was wasted in efforts, which unfortunately proved vain, to meet the views of the opponents of the Bill. Once again the Government left the property of a large body of taxpayers unprotected and at the mercy of the rascals who were making large profits by their dealings in pirated music. The legitimate trade grew worse and worse, as any trade naturally would if its main support were taken away from it. As an instance of the inadequacy of the law to protect the music-publishers' interests, about this time 300,000 copies of pirated music were seized in one heap; and for this the absurdly inadequate sum of ten guineas costs was ordered against the owners—to be paid if they could be found. To such a condition had the music-publishing trade been brought that a notice was issued by the leading houses to the effect that the issuing of new works would have to be discontinued until the law was amended, as the costs of purchase and the expense of publication were borne by the publishers, while the sole benefit of such publications as turned out successful would necessarily be again reaped by the pirates.

Undaunted by this defeat, Mr. O'CONNOR again returned to the charge, and drafted the Bill which we print at the commencement of this article. On the 16th of last month the House of Commons went into Committee to resume the consideration of the Bill; and by the scrupulous examination which its clauses received—a full report of which appeared in our pages—it may be truly said that never were the interests of liberty more carefully looked after. It would be a weary work to take our readers through the maze of amendments, some of which, however, such as Mr. GLADSTONE'S regarding the constable's power to seize copies of any musical work or plates and bring them before a court of summary jurisdiction, were judicious and valuable. However, nobody wishes, even in the interests of honesty, that the liberty of the subject shall be encroached upon; and perhaps it is just as well that the Bill has weathered the storm of criticisms and objections in the Commons before passing into the calmer water of the House of Lords.

We regard the third reading of Mr. O'CONNOR'S Musical Copyright Bill as a great triumph. It has been the result of long and persistent effort, of persuasion applied in many directions and extending over a considerable period, and of the hearty co-operation of honest men in united action against a body of bold and active thieves. Mr. T. P. O'CONNOR'S deep interest in all that is connected with the theatrical and musical professions has made his labour in this matter a labour of love; and the wearisome and discouraging opposition which he has had to encounter did but increase his earnestness and strengthen his resolve to achieve ultimate victory in so good a cause.

THE MOODY-MANNERS OPERA CO.

Meyerbeer's The Huguenots was given on the night of the 26th ult. before a large audience, and the Moody-Manners company are again to be congratulated on the happy choice of an important work that has not been heard at Covent Garden this season. The Huguenots, though in some portions somewhat mechanical in its effects, has many happy moments and a host of charming melodies. The cast on the night to which we are now referring was on the whole excellent. Mr. Joseph O'Mara imparted great vocal interest and fine dramatic feeling to the part of Raoul, and Mme. De Vere did not spare herself in the exacting rôle of Valentine. Miss Lucy Lever impersonated Marguerite of Valois with ability, but it was evident the lady was not in her best voice, and the difficult florid music of the part somewhat severely taxed her resources. Mr. Manners was capital as the rugged old soldier Marcelle, and the famous "Piff-paff" solo was given with splendid energy; his fine, rich, deep notes also gave great effect to the old Lutheran hymn. Mr. Charles Magrath proved of great service in the character of Count San Bris; and Mr. William Dever made an excellent Count de Nevers. Miss E. Alvord gave a sprightly performance of the page Urbano, being particularly effective in her rendering of "Nobil Signor." The costumes were picturesque and handsome, and the dramatic action of the chorus in the third scene deserves great praise, also the charming ballet, with its delightful orchestration so characteristic of Meyerbeer. It was a pity, however, in this scene, that the river at the back was not shown instead of a street. All worked hard, the minor parts being well filled; and the orchestra, under Herr Eckhold, performed the familiar music admirably.

On Friday, July 27, before a crowded house, Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci, two examples of the modern Italian school, were given. In the first opera Mme. Blanche Marchesi enacted the part of Santuzza in a most powerful manner; Mr. Wilson Pembroke appeared as Turrida, and, inspired by Mme. Marchesi's fine acting, imparted more passion and fervour to his singing than he has hitherto shown. Mr. Marshall Vincent displayed ample energy in the character of Alfio, Miss Ethel Cadman making a pleasing Lola, Miss Arnold showing ability in the small part of Lucia. The chorus sang with great expression and capital intonation, being rewarded in the "Hymn" with an encore; the orchestra also played the popular intermezzo so finely that a repetition was demanded. In Pagliacci Mr. Charles Carter proved entirely in his element as Canio, acting well, and singing the dramatic "On with the motley" solo with much intensity. Miss Ethel Cadman made a charming Nedda, using her bright and telling soprano with good effect, and revealing no small ability as an actress. Mr. William Dever was the Tonio, and the famous prologue lost nothing of its interest by his clever singing. Mr. Lewys James appeared as Silvio. An excellent performance of Leoncavallo's opera was given, and the humour displayed by several of the company hugely delighted the large audience. Signor Sapio admirably conducted both operas.

Saturday last the Moody-Manners company repeated Gounod's Faust in the evening, another large and enthusiastic audience being present. Mme. De Vere enacted the rôle of Marguerite in a thoroughly artistic style, Mr. Wilson Pembroke taking the character of Faust, and Mr. Charles Manners again giving his admirable interpretation of Mephistopheles. Miss Mildred Bryan, who has recently joined the company, proved her talent by her skilful impersonation of Siebel. The part of Martha was carefully undertaken by Miss Arnold. Signor Sapio conducted.

In the second performance of Eugene Onegin, given by the Moody-Manners Company on Monday evening, there was a slight change in the cast, Miss Mildred Bryan taking the character of Olga. Miss Bryan has a charming voice, a pure mezzo-soprano, and acts with much vivacity; her fine stage presence also makes an important feature of Olga, greatly adding to the attractions of the delightful ball-room scene. As on the first night, Mr. Lewys James imparted great interest to the part of Eugene Onegin, his friend Lenski being again performed in a most skilful manner by Mr. Wilson Pembroke; while, as before, Madame Moody was a most charming Tatiana. The other characters were undertaken by the same artists as on the first occasion, Mr. Manners making a capital Prince Gremin, giving his pleasing solo, "In every age sweet love is master," with admirable expression; and the smaller parts were most adequately filled. The opera seems to gain by repetition, the delicate music making its own appeal to the cultured musician, and even if the plot is weak, the opera, as performed by the Moody-Manners Company, ought to be heard, if only for the charming letter song in the first act and the delightful ball-room scenes.

Wagner's opera, Lohengrin, was performed on Tuesday evening for the second time this season, with some changes in the cast. An excellent representation of the opera was given before a large audience. On this evening Madame de Vere was the Elsa, and acquitted herself admirably, being most ably supported by Mr. Joseph O'Mara in the character of Lohengrin, the music of which part, it need not be said, being beautifully rendered by the accomplished tenor. Mr. William Dever made a stalwart Telramund, and his powerful singing and acting deserve praise. Miss Toni Seiter was again an excellent Ortrud, and Mr. Charles Manners imparted great dignity to the part of the King. Mr. Marshall Vincent, as before, made a successful Herald, and the orchestra and chorus did good work under the baton of Herr Richard Eckhold. It is to be hoped that this clever company will, at no distant date, give us Bezet's popular masterpiece, Carmen, which would be a most welcome revival.

MR. H. CHANCE NEWTON tells in the Tribune of the mutual devotion which existed between Irving and Toole:—"Some few years before Irving was knighted, he chanced to have to pay a visit to an official very high in Royal circles. This official pointed out that, as Irving had done so much at the Lyceum for the rehabilitation of the British stage, it was felt by certain friends in these Royal circles that Irving should be presented to the Queen, meaning, of course, the late beloved Victoria. Irving expressed his delight at the great honour proposed to him, and requested his kind friend to let him know a date convenient to her Majesty. Irving was about to leave when the official called him back, and requested, somewhat mysteriously, that Irving "should not mention this matter outside, lest other actors, such as Mr. Toole, &c., might also think that they should be presented, too."

"'I beg your pardon,' said Irving to the official friend. 'You have just mentioned, somewhat slightingly, certain popular stage players, among them my dear old friend Toole. Now, let me tell you, sir,' added Irving, 'that Mr. Toole is not only a deservedly-renowned comedian, he is also a diligent ratepayer and taxpayer, and a man of boundless charity. In short, a truly Christian gentleman. And, besides all this,' added the actor, 'dear Johnny Toole often saved me from adversity, perhaps from starvation, at a time when I needed help as a young beginner, and if John L. Toole is not worthy to be presented to her Most Gracious Majesty, neither is Henry Irving. I wish you good-day, sir.'"

MR. EDWARD TERRY has arranged with Mr. George Leitch to represent him at Terry's Theatre during his provincial tour.

"THE DAIRYMAIDS" AT THE APOLLO.

Refreshment of a most exhilarating character is to be obtained at the Apollo, where The Dairymaids, which has just passed its hundredth night, brings the scent of the hayfield agreeably over the footlights. No uncertain note was sounded in the chorus of praise which arose on its production on April 14th last, and the continuity of its success throughout the year is assured by the invariably crowded state of the beautiful house. No changes of importance in the cast are apparent.

Mr. Walter Passmore overflows with high spirits as the irrepressible Sam Brudenell, his humour asserting itself at every opportunity. In singing and dancing his efforts are characterised by the finish and smartness of a practised artist. His topical song, "In Dover Street," has to be supplemented by many extra verses concerning up-to-date politics, and similar honours attend the "Song of a Sea-Serpent," the "effects" of which are secured by a number of fair ladies in green, who trail round the stage in imitation of the fabled monster.

Blythe and bonnie dairymaids are presented in the dainty persons of Miss Carrie Moore and Miss Agnes Fraser. Joyousness is the prevailing characteristic of Peggy, who is impersonated by Miss Moore with unflagging vivacity. A merry interlude is supplied in her scene of "Tinker, tailor, soldier, sailor," in the merry revels of which representatives of various industries join with ludicrous results. Miss Moore is especially delightful as "The Sandow Girl," and her accomplishments are warmly admired. No less winsome is the Winifred of Miss Fraser, whose roguish rendering of "Hello, little stranger!" in which topical references are also made, is so effective that many encores are demanded. The matinée hat is severely satirised in the song, in which a quartet of juveniles lend commendable aid.

A rapid passage to fame has been secured by Mr. Dan Rolyat, whose recent success on the music halls was preceded by effective work in a touring melodrama of which his merry antics were an outstanding feature. Transplanted to musical comedy, his talents have ripened and his success as a laughter-creator has been sealed. Mr. Rolyat's effects are gained by humour of the quietest yet most pronounced description, and the mock seriousness of the seafaring Joe Mivens, his verbal perversions, and his nimble eccentricities are a distinct departure from conventional comicality, and sharpen the appetite of the most jaded playgoer. Mr. Rolyat takes his share ably of the "Poaching" duet, sung in company with Mr. Passmore, in which everything becomes fair game, and from the beginning of his struggle with the motor-car to the end of his flight with the punching-ball laughter is incessant.

Miss Florence Smythson appeals successfully to all by her maidenly modesty and girlish innocence as Hélène. Her vocal gifts are of rare quality and are utilised agreeably in "The Wild Rose," the tuneful cadences of which are rendered in a voice of such purity and sweetness that there is little wonder that the ballad has to be repeated.

A pillar of strength to the cast is found in Miss Phyllis Broughton, who plays one of her most favoured parts in that of the fair Lady Brudenell. In her scene with the incorrigible Joe Mivens the light comedy powers of this fine actress are brought agreeably into play, and in other parts of the piece her brightness and vivacity are invaluable. A clever caricature of a prim old maid is that supplied by Miss Carlotta Zerbini as Miss Penelope Pyechase. It is a real character-study, on which the experienced actress can be heartily congratulated, and contributes not a little to the thoroughness of the success attained. Another character creation is that of Miss Gracie Leigh, whose country "slavey" gives quite a new view of the maid-servant. "Mary of the Dairy" is rendered with subtle drollery, and her "Grumbles" are so pointedly enunciated that encore verses are innumerable.

Mr. Ambrose Manning is pleasingly conspicuous in the part of Captain O'Byrne, the bonhomie of the Irish naval officer never languishing. Only once does his good-fellowship appear to desert him, and that is in the "bull-milking" episode, which is very cleverly managed. Mr. Horace Lane cuts a dashing figure as Frank Brudenell, and acts with buoyancy and agility, making also a droll appearance in female habiliments. Little is left to Mr. Frank Green as Captain Fred Leverton, except to act the lover to Hélène, which he does with conspicuous gallantry. His song "Dear little girl in dreamland" is one of the prettiest numbers of the piece, and Mr. Green's cultured voice gives it every effect.

The fun and melody of the work, so admirably written by Messrs. A. M. Thompson and Robert Courtneidge, in which the musical art of Paul A. Rubens and Frank E. Tours and the lyrical attainments of Mr. Rubens and Mr. Arthur Wimperis are well displayed, is appreciated by crowded houses, who surrender themselves completely to the fascination of The Dairymaids, the production of which owes much to the superintendence of Mr. Courtneidge.

MR. ALBERT C. DUNCAN, of the King's Theatre, Cardiff, sends us a copy of a letter he received this week from a stage aspirant, in which a certain amount of pathos is combined with the comedy. The letter reads as follows:—"July 30 19006 Dear Sir I write this letter asking you Sir if you could find Me a place on the Stage as a Chorris Gril Dear Sir I ham Staying in —— —— I am Staying in Lodgins whits a freind Sir Dear Sir I send you these few lines asked you Sir that I cant get in privite service I have been a barmaid Sir of corce Sir I dont want to go in to Service Sir again if could help it because I thought of getting more money SIR Dear Sir My Name is Miss —— of —— Street, —— Dear Sir I am a good singer and a fine girl of my age of 18 I throught Sir you would give a trail Sir I have not a Mother nor father because I throught of earning more money Dear Sir I am only poor girl and I throught You wolud me a trail Sir on the Stage Sir could you by next Wenday this week Let me now this at once this week. Please Sir write Back by return at once this week before Wenday."

ACTRESSES were alluded to as works of art in the Court of Chancery this week, an action was brought against a Bradford photographer for an injunction to restrain him from selling certain picture postcards. Counsel stated that plaintiff had arranged with the defendant to take photographs of Miss Godwynne Earle, Miss Daisy Jerome, and Miss Mabel Lait for the purpose of picture postcards, and ordered a number of negatives to be supplied him. Defendant retained for his own use various other negatives of the ladies, and that, counsel argued, was a breach of the implied agreement with plaintiff. The ladies were brought to defendant's studio to be photographed as works of art, and it was claimed that he took photographs for himself during his agency for the plaintiff. Both Miss Jerome and Miss Earle gave evidence, but none was called for the defence, and his lordship gave judgment for defendant, with costs, stating that he could find no implied contract on his part not to take photographs other than those ordered.

THE RED ROSE ORCHESTRA (Manton-Myatt Family) broke their tour with the Southern Syndicate last month, and in high appreciation of their services, Mme. Manton-Myatt was presented by the management with a handsome gold watch, suitably inscribed, and by the staff with an elegant long gold chain. Needless to say, the presentation was most gratifying to the members of the family, who are now filling their usual summer hotel season, and start on a continental engagement in October.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

In another column will be found a report of the action brought by Mr. Glinseretti against Mr. Harry Rickards, the well-known Australian music hall proprietor, to recover damages for an alleged breach of contract. The case was tried on Monday and Tuesday before Mr. Justice Phillimore and a jury, and a verdict in favour of the plaintiff was returned, the damages being assessed at £500. The judge left it to the jury to decide whether the troupe of acrobats which the plaintiff proposed to take to Australia were the same from a business point of view as the troupe with regard to which a contract was entered into. The case is one of extreme importance both to music hall proprietors and artists; and Mr. Rickards has decided to appeal against the decision. The result will be watched with interest. No doubt in future stricter attention will be paid to the wording of contracts with troupes of performers who are booked to appear at a distant date.

Many leading members of the variety profession have vivid recollections of the late J. L. Toole, and sincerely mourn his death. Mr. Bransby Williams, whose mimicry of leading actors is so admirable, has often related how, whenever he went to Brighton, and met Toole being wheeled along the front in a bath chair, he would delight the old actor by giving a faithful imitation of Irving's tone and manner in saying, "Well, Johnnie, how are you?" "That's Harry," Toole would exclaim with a chuckle, his face lighting up with pleasure at the familiar greeting.

The latest recruit to the variety profession is Mr. Harry Nicholls, the well-known actor, whose first London engagement was at the Surrey Theatre as second comedian. In 1876 he went to the Grecian, sharing first low comedian with the late George Conquest the elder. Four years later he was secured by Augustus Harris for Drury Lane pantomime, in which he played for fourteen years. He also took part in the autumn dramas. Later he fulfilled a four years' engagement at the Adelphi. Mr. Nicholls is about to appear at the halls in a new vaudeville sketch, in which he will play a farcical character.

On the occasion of his fourth annual benefit concert on the 27th ult., in the Town Hall, Portrush, Mr. Rowland Hill was presented by Mr. Billy Verne with a handsome silver-mounted russia leather gentleman's dressing-case.

In the attractive holiday programme at the Empire the ballet will remain the principal feature. In addition to Delibes' charming Coppelia, in which Mlle. Genée appears nightly, the Watteau divertissement in Wilhelm's Cinderella will be added to the attractions.

The annual staff outing of the Sheffield Empire Palace took place on Sunday. Accompanied by Mr. Alan D. Dunbar, the acting-manager, the party, 76 in number, left the Empire at 8 a.m. in a drag and nine carriages. On reaching Bastow the party were duly photographed. After a pleasant drive through Chatsworth Park, for which special permission was given, Matlock Bath was reached at one o'clock. A capital dinner was served at the George Hotel, after which "Success to Moss' Empires" and the health of Mr. Dunbar were drunk with acclamation, and duly responded to by Mr. Dunbar. The party left Matlock at six o'clock, after a most enjoyable day's outing, reaching Sheffield after a four hours' drive.

A new writing illusion called "Buddha's Blackboard" has been introduced at the Hippodrome. An ordinary red-ruled school blackboard is placed in a frame on a stand, and over this is locked a piece of plain wood. The introducer then calls upon the spirit of Buddha to say if he is at his service. The wooden sheet is at once removed, and the word "yes" is seen in chalk on the blackboard. In similar fashion the mysterious agency writes a number or the name of any celebrity selected by the audience. Answers to questions of a purely personal character written upon pads by members of the audience are also answered, some of the replies being exceedingly apt. The novelty has been introduced by Messrs. Auger and Bauer.

A musical sketch written by Cayley Calvert, with music by Denham Harrison, entitled Nici, or the Belle of the Orient, will be produced at the Cambridge on Bank Holiday by Mr. J. M. Jones, the well-known pantomime producer, who will supply a speciality of six dancers. There are thirty characters and chorus, and Mr. Johnnie Danvers, the well-known comedian, has been specially engaged to play the part of a shipwrecked sailor, a character similar to that of the Cockney hero, Billy Bowbell in the old play of The Illustrious Stranger. The scenery is by Messrs. W. T. Helmsley and Sons. The new production has been booked by Mr. T. G. Richards for a suburban tour.

Miss Ada Reeve, the well-known comedienne, is expected to arrive at Southampton from South Africa by the Union Castle liner Carisbrooke Castle to-day. Miss Reeve has had an enormously successful season at Johannesburg and Cape Town, where she appeared exclusively at Messrs. Hyman's two theatres, and for her nine weeks' work she received the record fee of £5000, which is the largest amount ever pair to a variety artist for an engagement for a short season as a single turn. After a brief rest at her seaside home in Dorsetshire, Miss Reeve will make her reappearance in London in a few weeks' time at the Tivoli, for which she has been exclusively engaged.

On Monday La Milo will present, at the London Pavilion, a new and striking series of classical contrasts. On account of its enthusiastic reception, her representation of the Velasquez Venus will remain in the programme. Cruikshank will add a number of familiar faces to his already large répertoire. Hal Forde, assisted by the Pavilion Girls and chorus, will appear in a new and original Oriental episode, entitled They Never Do That in Japan, written by John P. Harrington, composed by James W. Tate.

Mr. Will Dalton is appearing with great success at the Oxford in two very funny songs, "What a Nose" and "I must do it with the Old Man's Hat on." The hit he has made is quite exceptional. Neither of the songs will be published, and Mr. Will Dalton expects to make as big a success in the provinces shortly, where he is a great favourite.

Harry Fragson, whose clever songs at the piano have so caught on at the Tivoli, has been re-engaged, and will continue at that hall until the beginning of the Drury Lane pantomime season. Mr. Fragson has also signed a contract for three years to appear exclusively at the Tivoli.

Mr. Arthur J. Barclay, manager of the Walthamstow Palace, is holiday-making at Herne Bay. In his absence the direction of affairs is in the hands of Mr. Geo. F. Slatter, acting-manager.

Although hardly changing in the composition of artists, the Palace Theatre's holiday programme will undergo a complete revision. Miss Courtney, one of the newcomers, has brought some fresh ideas from America, which country is also represented in the person of Mr. Fred Niblo, whose dry style of humour has caught London's fancy. Mr. Paul Martinetti and company will revive their famous sketch A Terrible Night, and on the bioscope will be seen pictures quite fresh to the Metropolis.

Plans for a proposed theatre of varieties on the west side of Cheapside, Reading, have been submitted to the Drainage and Buildings Committee of the Reading Corporation by Mr. W. G. R. Sprague, architect, of Criterion Chambers, Jermyn-street, S.W., acting on behalf of Messrs. Stanhope and Co. The plans show a building designed to accommodate a total number of 1460 persons. The building has an elevation to Cheapside of about 70ft. in width with the main entrance set back behind the frontage line. There is an open private way 10ft. wide on the southern and western sides of the building, and on which the stage and scenery entrances and extra exit doors from the stage and the fauteuils abut. There are other extra exits provided for the dress circle, pit, and gallery. The materials to be used in the building are stone, brick, and concrete. The auditorium is shown to be separated from the stage by an asbestos curtain on a steel frame. The other openings next the stage will be fitted with fire-resisting doors. A hydrant installation, with fittings of similar gauge to that of the Corporation Fire Brigade, will be provided; and ventilation is proposed to be obtained by exhausts and fresh-air inlets.

The plans were referred back for amendment as several of the details contravene various sections of the Corporation Act and by-laws, and the architect was required to furnish further details as to the construction of girders and cantilevers to the circle, gallery, and roofs.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Jones (Ada Mansfield) produced last week at The Gaiety, Dundee, The Prodigal's Return, a new vocal scena by Albert Voyce. The reception accorded it during the week proves that Mr. Theodore Jones has secured another big success in addition to his Jack Sheppard production, and their many Dundee admirers are looking forward with pleasure to the return visit of the popular Welsh actor-vocalist and his wife.

The Palace Theatre, Bath, reopens on Monday next for the regular autumn season. Two houses nightly will be adhered to, and Mr. Charles Schubert will continue to act as general-manager for Mr. Frank Macnaghten. The success attending this charming little house, under the spirited management of the Macnaghten regime, has been most marked, and the coming campaign is eagerly looked forward to.

Dr. Walford Bodie has again been playing to record business at the Palace, Aberdeen, and Dundee. Despite the fact of it being his 19th annual visit, his success has been greater than ever. At both towns he has been playing to holding capacity, the large buildings being packed nightly at early door prices. The Doctor will finish his Scotch tour at Dundee on Saturday night, and will take a well-earned rest of two weeks at his beautiful Highland home, the Manor House, Macduff, reopening for a long season with Mr. Oswald Stoll at the Stratford Empire, etc., all the syndicate halls to follow. He desires us to thank the hundreds of friends who have written letters of sympathy on the death of his sister, Miss Marie Walford ("Mystic Marie.")

On Friday, the 27th ult., Dr. and Mrs. Walford Bodie gave a treat to over 700 newsboys, matchboys, waifs and strays of Aberdeen at the Palace Theatre. The boys of the Oakbank Industrial School were also present, and selections were given by their pipe and brass bands. Dr. Bodie and the whole of his company appeared. The Doctor had a rousing reception. At the close of the performance Mrs. Bodie presented each child with an envelope containing a silver coin. This is the fifth annual treat given by Dr. Bodie to the poor children of his native city.

The usual monthly meeting of the Music Hall Sick Fund will be held at the York Hotel on Wednesday next, at two o'clock.

On Wednesday Mr. Harry Randall was the attraction at the Victoria Pier, Folkestone, and so great was the rush of visitors—some even coming specially from Dover—to hear the comedian that Mr. J. Fenton Walsh, Messrs. Keith Prowse's courteous manager, had his hands full both afternoon and evening to accommodate patrons. Mr. Randall sang at the latter performance no fewer than five songs, viz., "At 9½d. an Hour," "Husbands (by One who has had Four)," "Cursory Rhymes," "The Boarding-House Keeper," and "Wicked Mr. Tootle." On Thursday the singer repeated his triumphs at Hastings, before returning to Margate. Future engagements at the Folkestone Pier include Miss Madge Lessing, Miss Evie Greene, and Mrs. Langtry.

Mr. George Essayan presided at the annual meeting of shareholders of the Manchester Palace of Varieties. In the directors' report it was stated that there was a net profit for the year (after deducting £750 depreciation on furniture and plant) of £8116, to which was added a balance of £473 brought forward. The directors had written off the balance of the alteration and decorations suspense account, amounting to £3000, and they recommended a dividend at the rate of five per cent. per annum, free of income tax, absorbing £3500. This left a balance of £2090 to carry forward.

The Chairman, who moved the adoption of the report and accounts, said that, in spite of severe competition, the results of the year's working were such as entitled the shareholders to congratulation. The directors hoped for even further improvement in the future. While improving and considerably increasing the accommodation of the theatre, they had done the work out of revenue. Mr. A. White seconded the motion, and it was adopted. The dividend as recommended having been declared, Mr. Walter de Frece was re-elected a director. Mr. Withecomb said it was due to Mr. de Frece sending such good artists to Manchester that much of the success of the concern was due.

Mr. Bransby Williams completes his present tour in three weeks' time, and after a brief holiday will sail for America per s.s. Caronia on on Tuesday, the 28th inst. Mr. Williams will return to England to fulfil his pantomime engagement at the Theatre Royal, Glasgow.

One of the most novel and elaborate acts of the present time is this week being presented at Her Majesty's Theatre, Walsall, by the Spanish Goldinis. Their nickel electric stage act is most gorgeous, and they are without doubt one of the most attractive items of the programme. The act includes carpet spinning, balancing, juggling, electric dances, &c. They will appear in the West End halls very shortly. Their agents are Cavill and Co.

The Haverleys, American song illustrators, after a successful London season, commence a seventeen weeks' tour on Monday next at the Regent Theatre, Salford, and it is strong evidence of their success that this is their fifth return visit to this comfortable theatre, where they are sure of a hearty welcome.

Miss Margaret Ashton, who has this week been singing with great success at the Palace, Leicester, her new song "If a girl like you loved a boy like me," has in preparation a new dramatic song-scena, which she will shortly produce, with special scenic effects, at one of the West End halls. The popular American soprano appears next week at the Ardwick Empire, Manchester. Her charming song-scena Winter has been very generally admired in the provinces.

A new light comedy sketch by George Unwin, entitled Touched Up, was produced by the Players at the Standard, Pimlico, on Monday evening. The scene is the studio of Bob Hardup, an artist, who, as his name suggests, has not found his profession a remunerative one, He has, however, obtained a commission to paint a portrait of Lady Swearer to whose charming niece Dolly he is engaged. Sir Augustus, without any real cause, is jealous of his wife, and her frequent visits to the artist's studio excite his suspicions. Bob amuses himself by going through a mock proposal scene with a lay figure, and Sir Augustus, who is on the watch, is under the mistaken impression that the artist is making love to his wife. The matter is, however, soon cleared up to the satisfaction of the suspicious husband, who, hearing his wife approach, and not wishing to be discovered in the character of a Paul Pry, agrees to give his permission to Hardup's marriage with Dolly on condition that the artist assists him to evade Lady Swearer. There is only one thing to be done—dress Sir Augustus up as a model. This is duly carried out, and Lady Swearer and Dolly being in the secret, Hardup proceeds to make ardent love to the elder of the two ladies. In the end the artist obtains his object, consent being given to his marriage with Dolly, and Sir Augustus is cured of his foolish jealousy.

The author of the sketch, Mr. George Unwin, is an amusing representative of Sir Augustus; Mr. Herbert Ford is well placed as Bob Hardup; Miss Violet Ellicott is good as Lady Swearer, and Miss Rose Temple scores as Dolly. Touched Up has also been played at the Cambridge.

"You may shake, you may lose our dear Vesta Till—Eh, but the work of the Press Agent will follow her still."

This charming bit of verse was, according to an American journal, scrawled by Justice Blanchard on his pad in the Special Term of the Supreme Court, New York, as he listened to the heated arguments of lawyers to show why the "Vesta Tilley" hat should be fully and completely protected by the trademarks issued by the United States Government. The firm of Kursman & Sons, who have been making hats named after the trousers-wearing vaudeville singer since 1894, kept right on making hats until they learned with rage and chagrin that the S. R. Riemer firm had been putting a "Vesta Tilly" hat on the market for months. Then there was rage and litigation in the millinery camps.

The Kursmans haled the Riemers to court, producing affidavits and certificates from the Interior Department at Washington to show that in 1894 Vesta Tilley gave permission to the Kursmans to name a hat after her, and that thereupon they obtained a trademark upon the name as applied to a hat so that even Vesta Tilley could not call a hat a "Vesta Tilley" hat without infringing a trademark. They admit that the Riemers call their product the "Vesta Tilly" hat, omitting the "e" in the name Tilley, but the Kursmans insist that this is no defence. Never was there a Tilly important enough to have a hat named for her, they insist, and therefore ask that the Riemers be restrained by injunction from selling any more Vesta Tilly hats. Justice Blanchard, after looking over the millinery exhibit, granted the injunction.

The Oxford announces a long and attractive array of leading variety stars for its Bank Holiday programme including Little Tich, Harry Tate in a new sketch by Wal Pink entitled Gardening, Wilkie Bard with new songs, the Karnos in The Early Birds, Will Evans, Katie Butler, Clark and Hamilton, Harry Ford, Nellie Wallace, Gus Elen, G. H. Elliott, Bros. Horne, Leslie Bros., and Nina Martino Jury's Bioscope is re-engaged with the famous Bisley pictures, and Victoria Monks remains in the bill.

The August Bank Holiday programme at the Tivoli is a highly attractive one. The popular Scotch comedian, Harry Lauder, returns to town, and makes his reappearance on the scene of former triumphs after a long absence. He promises new songs as well as some of the old ones. Harry Fragson remains to delight the audience, who nightly receive him "Most Politely." Annie Purcell, the dainty comedienne, Alice Hollander, the Australian contralto, Russell Wallett (the lady in black), Nellie Wallace, Alexandra Dagmar, Lena Verdi, Sam Mayo, Athas and Collins, &c., complete the strong holiday bill of fare provided by Mr. Joseph Wilson.

Messrs. Maskelyne and Devant's Mysteries will reopen at St. George's Hall on Bank Holiday.

Mr. Barney Armstrong has purchased the sole singing rights of a song, entitled "Your eyes are not so bright," written and composed by Will Letters. It will be sung by Miss Lena Brunton at the Richmond Theatre on the 20th inst.

The Three Rubys, after a very successful forty-two weeks' continuous tour in their Pot Pourri act, return to town for four weeks with Mr. McNaghten and one week at Richmond. They are rebooked for pantomime with Mr. Lester Collingwood, and a full Moss and Stoll tour by Mr. Geo. Aytoun.

The People's Palace, Tottenham, and the Hippodrome, Hounslow, re-open on Monday, after undergoing extensive alterations and improvements.

Mr. Lloyd Townrow will shortly produce a new farcical comedy sketch, entitled Cleopatra's Needle; or, the Judge in a Fix. Mr. Jesse Sparrow, to whom the sketch has been read, has expressed a highly favourable opinion of its merits.

Miss Louisa Peach will be at the Richmond Theatre next week with her clever comedy sketch, Taming a Husband. She will be supported by Mr. Walter Graham and Mr. Conrad Clarke.

Mr. David Day has added to the "Sixpenny Pops" Alf. J. Lawrance and H. Gifford's pretty song, "Firefly," and Miss Lil Hawthorne's great success, "My Cosy Caravan," written by the aforementioned writers in conjunction with Tom Mellor.

There has been a change in the management of the Oxford, the direction of affairs being at present in the hands of Mr. C. Blyth Pratt, who has for some years filled the position of assistant manager under Mr. Albert Gilmer.

The new spectacle at the Hippodrome will be presented by Mr. Frank Parker in September.

Mr. Brian McCullough, the well-known sketch author and actor, will re-open the Kilburn Empire on Monday with a production of Uncle Tom's Cabin and an excellent variety company. The elaborate scenery is by Mr. F. H. Bull. There will be two performances nightly at popular prices.

The Stavordale Quintette are booked to open at the Empire on the 13th inst., through the agency of Messrs. Ashton and Co., who will in future act as sole agents for this unique act.

Mr. Harry B. Wincote, in consequence of the death of Mr. Frank Weeks, the late manager of the South London, has taken on the duties of acting-manager pro tem. Mr. Wincote, who, by the way, has been associated with the place of amusement mentioned for six years, was married on the 8th ult. to Miss Florence Sarah, the honeymoon being spent at Shanklin. The happy couple received many presents, including one from Mr. and Mrs. Weeks and the staff of the hall.

Mr. Tom Hearn, "the laziest juggler on earth," writes to us from New York, enclosing a marked programme for the week beginning July 23, of the entertainment at Hammerstein's Paradise Roof Garden and Victoria Theatre of Varieties, "to show you how England is represented over here." Of the ten turns, five are marked as English. Mr. Hearn, who was engaged for one week and stayed six, adds:—The Cuttys are also English, but have been over here so many years that they are known as an American act; all their family are over here. They are considered the best musical act in the business, the salary being $750 weekly. I sail on the Minnehaha on July 28th, and expect to arrive home on August 6th. I am not booked for one week in my own country. I open at Paris on August 16th at Olympia for one month and a half. We are having plenty of English acts coming over here on spec, many of which I have never heard of, others with very small names in England. This type of act is running a big risk; they usually open at the wrong place, but then the trip is a nice one."

The Promenade Concerts under the management of Mr. Robert Forsyth at Bognor are a great acquisition to this popular seaside resort, and Mr. Forsyth is to be congratulated on repeating the success he made at Clacton.

La Tosca, the artist's model, is making a big hit with her celebrated tinted living statuary representing "Popular Paintings by Popular Painters."

Mr. John P. Harrington, the well-known song writer, is on a cycling tour from Bedford to Great Yarmouth, taking in Cambridge, Ely, King's Lynn, Hunstanton, Cromer, Norwich, etc., en route. He is staying a few days at each of the towns mentioned. His partner, Mr. Jas. W. Tate, is also away holiday-making.

Mr. George C. Doughty will commence on Monday at the Ardwick Empire a tour of the Moss-Stoll halls with his smart comedy sketch Captain Cupid. Mr. Doughty will be supported by Miss Phyllis Atherleigh.

Mr. Alf. J. Lawrance, the well-known author and composer, fishing from a pier on the Kentish coast on Tuesday, hooked and landed a splendidly marked wrasse of one and three-quarter pounds.

Mr. Charles Wilmott, the well-known lyrist and librettist, and private secretary to Mr. David Day, is enjoying a well-earned holiday at Boscombe.

Mr. B. G. Maclachlan, who since Christmas has held the position of manager of the Glasgow Coliseum, has just been appointed by Mr. Stoll to the managership of the Shepherd's Bush Empire, in place of Mr. Dobson. Mr. Maclachlan was for many years Mr. Macdona's principal manager, and possibly in that capacity has witnessed more performances of the Geisha than any man living. Mr. H. Burdette, who was assistant to Mr. Maclachlan at the Glasgow Coliseum, has been appointed manager of that house, an appointment which has given universal satisfaction.

On Sunday last the employees of the Glasgow Pavilion had their first annual outing. The party numbered seventy-four in all, and included Mr. Samuel Lloyd (general-manager), Mme. Lloyd, Mr. Howard W. Galpin (musical director), Councillor Caldwell, and The Era correspondent for Glasgow. The route selected was via Dumbarton to Balloch, where the company sat down to dinner in a marquee picturesquely situated in the grounds of Balloch Hotel.

At the conclusion of the dinner a short toast list was gone through, the company, with enthusiasm, pledging the toasts of "The King," "The Pavilion Directors," "The Visitors," "The General-Manager," and "The Musical Conductor and Orchestra." These latter having been responded to in short but pithy speeches, the entire party embarked in rowing boats on the River Leven, and pulled up to Loch Lomond, where two steam launches were in waiting to convey the company on a cruise round the loch and the many picturesque islands which render it so charming.

The weather conditions were absolutely perfect all day, and the trip was an enthusiastic success. The return to Balloch Hotel was made about six o'clock, and after tea, the time was filled in with boating, walking, and the taking of snap-shot photos of the company by Mr. Howard W. Galpin. About 8 p.m. a start was made for Glasgow, which was reached shortly before eleven, and the opinion was generally expressed that it had been, in the words of Burns, "a ne'er-to-be-forgotten day."

Mr. Frank Coyle was wired for by Mr. Wilmot to open at the Lyric, Liverpool, on Monday, and having repeated the great success he achieved in St Helens last week, has been booked the full tour.

The Tivoli, Leeds, reopens next Monday under the same management, but renamed the New Hippodrome. The building has undergone, during the recess, extensive renovation and decoration, and presents a charming appearance.

Marie Santoi, who is the original producer of Japanese scenas in the variety halls, is leaving town for a four months' provincial tour, returning on November 19.

The Smythsons are leaving town for fourteen weeks' tour of Moss and Stoll Empires, opening at Sheffield on Monday next.

Mr. S. Smalley having joined partnership with Mr. Thomas Mattinson, a well-known local business man, will reopen the Hippodrome, Castleford, for the season, commencing Monday, the 20th inst.

Miss Florrie Bray, the dashing comedienne, appeared at the Hippodrome, Hastings, this week in place of Miss Rosie Lloyd, who was unable to fulfil her engagement through indisposition. After singing three songs Miss Bray had to bow her acknowledgments many times, the audience demanding more. She has some excellent songs, together with a good voice and appearance.

Chirgwin has this week met with a most enthusiastic and flattering reception at the Palace, Plymouth. He has been devoting his spare time to fishing and swimming, and in a brief note addressed to us there is an obscure allusion to "junket and cream twice a day."

Mr. Charles Matthews, who appeared at the Queen's Theatre, Gateshead, last week, and John Higgins, who is fulfilling an engagement at the same house this week, have been matched to jump for £100 and the world's championship. The contest was announced to take place at the Metropole, Gateshead, last night.

The staff of the Royal Theatre of Varieties, Oldham, held their first annual outing on Sunday last. Previous to starting they were photographed, after which they left in char-a-bancs for a drive to Cunning Corner, by way of Blackstone Edge. After tea had been partaken of, a vote of thanks was given to the management for their kindness in giving the treat, and this was suitably responded to by Mr. W. Howgate, assistant-manager. The party arrived home shortly after ten o'clock, having thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

The 474th meeting of the committee of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association was held at the offices on Tuesday, when there were present Messrs. Chas. Coborn (in the chair), J. Alexander, Peter Bijou, H. Griff, Fred Herbert, Walter Munroe, Albert Voyce, C. Douglas Stuart (secretary), and Douglas White (hon. treasurer). Minutes of the previous meeting were read and passed, and matters arising out of them discussed. Cases of refunds and insurances were considered, and instructions given. The opinion was expressed that if all artists would attend at the various agents' offices between 12.30 and 1 o'clock on Saturdays it would greatly facilitate the arrangements and save the committee a deal of time and trouble afterwards in adjusting disputes which might thus be avoided.

A letter was read from Miss Gore-Booth acknowledging the committee's vote of thanks, adding that she would be always very glad if she could be of any assistance in future to the ladies of the profession when any political attacks were made upon them. Similar sentiments were expressed in a letter from Miss Hester Roper. The Rev. Stewart D. Headlam also acknowledged the vote of thanks, and said he was glad to do something for the gymnasts and acrobats. It would be necessary for them to be on their guard for next year. What was wanted was that the clause in the 1904 Act which provides for the training of the young should be repealed; and legislation, if necessary at all, should be directed against foolhardy amateurs. The real influence behind the Bill, he thought, was a Puritan one. Whenever the fight was renewed Mr. Headlam assured them that they would not be without helpers.

The hon. treasurer presented his financial statement, by which it appeared that £100 had been duly paid to the deposit account. The secretary's statement for the week ending July 28 showed the addition of twenty-six new members, the receipts being £26 and the expenditure £11 7s. 11½d. Attention was called to the unsuitability of a certain provincial agency, and the secretary was instructed to take steps with a view to changing it.

The New Cross Empire celebrated its seventh birthday on Wednesday night last. Despite tropical weather, five minutes after the doors opened at 5.30 the house was packed from floor to ceiling. Mr. Ernest Bridgen has now been manager seven months, and his great popularity is evident if only by the fact that 271 telegrams of good wishes were received by him from all parts of London and the country. Mr. Bertie Shelton (one of Mr. Beerbohm Tree's late managers) and Mr. Will Collins were the hon. stage managers, and the following artists contributed to a six hours' programme:—Cabaret's Dogs, Lizzie Fletcher, the Bisera Troupe, Harris and Worth, Spry and Monti, Colbitt, Johnnie and Charlie, Phil Ray, John Donald, the Melody Makers, Leonard Fletcher, Datas, Victoria Monks, Newell and Niblo, Arthur Lennard, Bella and Bijou, Lily Esplin, Ben Nathan, Florence Schubert, Griff, Nipper Lupino Lane, Billy Hobbs, the Darktown Entertainers, T. E. Dunville, the Glenroys, Herbert Lloyd, Edie King, the Harvey Boys, Ella Shields, the Gothams, Elsie Bernard, Brilliant and Brilliant, the Carlyles, Miniature Marie, George Robey, Harry Grey, the Blossom Quartette, R. H. Douglass, and the Sakers.

Rumour again associates the Coliseum with the Covent Garden syndicate, another offer having, it is said, been made to take over the theatre with the view of opening the building next season as an opera house. The proposal was first suggested many months ago, when the Westminster site for the home of opera was discussed.

Owing to the great success of the Terriers' Annual River Outing, and the many requests for a repetition, the executive committee have arranged for another trip on Sunday, the 26th inst., from Hampton Court to Old Windsor and back. Early application to the secretary, Harry Lester, is necessary, as the number is limited.

As successor to Mr. Charles Wilson, the directors of the Alhambra have appointed Mr. A. G. Forde stage manager at that house. Mr. Forde, trained in the traditions of grand ballet, and well accustomed to the hard tasks imposed by its preparation, has already been identified with many of the Alhambra's greatest successes, he having produced at that establishment, Aladdin, Ali Baba, A Midsummer Night's Dream, and Sir Arthur Sullivan's Victoria and Merrie England.

Mr. Bannister-Howard has had an excellent company of entertainers during the week at the café chantant in the North Tower Gardens of the Crystal Palace. The afternoon and evening shows at this delightfully situated place of amusement are every day becoming more popular. The Great Hercat has been the chief attraction. His wonderful feats of magic and conjuring and his clever ventriloquial and comic sketches are a whole entertainment in themselves. Tomps and Wells, the eccentric musical comedians, who have now been a fortnight at the Palace, thoroughly deserve the popularity they have gained. It is somewhat refreshing to find two men who can be so quietly funny, and their entertainment is absolutely free from vulgarity. The other artists include Miss Florrie Fairfax, vocalist and mimic, and Miss Clarice Rayner, the lady baritone.

Harry Marlow and May Manton, who are playing their clever skit on a day nursery, entitled Other People's Babies, have been very successful with provincial audiences since its production in February. Leaving London with only one week booked, they were immediately secured by several managers, who have kept them busy ever since. Their engagements extend into 1908, and this novel act will be seen in London the first week in September.

The following are the names of artists leaving per the Kildonan Castle from Southampton to-day for South Africa to fulfil engagements at the Empire Palace, Johannesburg—Les Trombetta, the Bros. Maningo, Nowel and Niblo, the Sisters Crystal, Miss Cissie Paris. Amongst artists arriving home from South Africa on the same day are Fred Land, Kitty Timms, Bounding Pattersons, Stuart, De Witt, Burns and Torrance, and Miss Ada Reeve.

Ernie Myers and Lily Lonsdale have been engaged by Mr. Fred Karno to play principal parts in his Christmas production at the Palace, Manchester.

Chevalier T. H. Crowther, champion skater and swordsman, after two and a half years' idleness through an attack of rheumatism, made a distinct success at a large garden party on Monday last, and has booked several Continental dates.

Owing to the success achieved on the special weeks that variety has been the attraction at the Theatre Royal, Gloucester, Messrs. C. W. and J. R. Poole have decided to run this old-established place of amusement as a variety theatre on the two-houses-a-night principle. Country visitors, and especially those on market days, have been hitherto unable to stay to see the whole of the plays (except on certain nights), but will now be able to attend the first house and have ample time to catch their trains and arrive home at a reasonable hour. The opening takes place on August Bank Holiday, when a very strong bill will be placed before the patrons. Topping the bill are Lotto, Lilo and Otto; Ada Cerito is in the middle, whilst Kitty and Wyndham are at the bottom. The other turns announced are Jimmy Shields, Sisters Stratton, the Eugenes, and several others.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE EUSTON.

Messrs. Leonard Mortimer and company are appearing here this week in what is correctly described as "a weird and sensational sketch" entitled Spectres. Mr. Mortimer is the author of the piece, which purports to be "the true story of a West End haunted house," and plays the leading male character, one Leyland Nyte, "a man of mystery." The house is appropriately called "The Shadows," and here is kept a prisoner, under the excuse that she is insane, Linda, the wife of Leyland Nyte. She is in charge of an old man named Ainslie, who is in the power of her husband, inasmuch as he has committed forgery and is in fear of being denounced by Nyte should he set that scoundrel at defiance. We also learn that Nyte's object is to compel his unhappy wife to sign certain papers handing over her property to him; and this explains her imprisonment. Her sister, Lelia Romain, a famous actress, visits the haunted mansion in search of Linda, who has been missing; and other visitors are Ainslie's son Mark, a rackety young fellow, and his friend Douglas Lane, a barrister, who is in love with Lelia. Finding the front door open, they resolve to explore the mysterious house. While Lane is making a voyage of discovery in another part of the premises Mark, hearing a cry for help, is about to break open the door of an adjoining room, when Nyte appears and fires a shot at him, also disabling him by means of a secretly-delivered electric shock. A series of sensational scenes follow. The young barrister's suspicions are aroused when he discovers that Lelia is in the house; and she demands of Nyte the release of her sister. She threatens him with a knife, and there is an exciting struggle between the two; but eventually the young men come to the rescue, and the sisters are reunited. Mr. Leonard Mortimer is consistently impressive as the villain Leyland Nyte, Mr. Leonard Robson is a manly Douglas Lane, and Mr. Reginald Weighill introduces some much-needed humorous relief as Mark Ainslie, his comic terror at being left alone in a room in the haunted house causing considerable merriment. Mr. W. S. Hartford renders valuable assistance as the guardian of "The Shadows," Miss Edith Lewis is a good representative of Lelia, and Miss Ida Clifford successfully appears as Linda.

Mr. Ryder Stone takes high rank as a clever comedian, and his embodiment of that familiar stage character a policeman, who boasts that he can drink more beer than any other "Bobbie" in the force, is exceedingly funny. His encounter with a spectacled lad who crosses the stage eating an apple and reading a book causes hearty laughter. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finder appear in their duologue entitled A Desperate Remedy, which relates to the quarrels of a married couple. The lady produces a large bottle labelled "Poison—prussic acid," and pours some of the contents into a glass, at the same time threatening to commit suicide. Unknown to her, the husband substitutes Scotch whisky, vows he will live no longer, and gulps down the liquid, to the horror of his wife. His pretended agonies are most amusing; indeed, the little piece is capitally played all through. Professor Dunning continues to score with his ventriloquial performance, and appearing later as an illusionist under the name of Kahn performs very neatly tricks with billiard balls, coloured handkerchiefs, &c., concluding with the production and display of a number of national flags. Foreman and Lannan, who delight to address each other as "Percy" and "Harold," are old favourites, and their funny patter is very welcome. Mr. James Stewart, the tramp at the piano, also meets with his usual success; Miss Evelyn Taylor sings a couple of songs in acceptable style; and the graceful, supple young lady known as Nadji gives a remarkable performance in which she shows how it is possible to travel up and down stairs on one's hands, and holding on to a piece of leather by the teeth to become for the time being a human teetotum. Mr. Fred McAvoy is the courteous manager at this hall, assisted by Mr. Chas. E. Wellman as acting-manager and Mr. Opferman as the efficient musical director.

CHELSEA PALACE.

We are pleased to be able to state that, although Mr. Edward Swanborough is still confined to his house through illness, his condition has undergone an improvement. Next week he goes to Hove for a period of convalescence, and we hope that when he returns to Chelsea the veteran manager will be completely restored to health. During his absence Mr. J. Norman Berlin is attending in a capable manner to the requirements of the house. This week capital audiences have assembled to partake of the enjoyments furnished by a programme containing clever items. Mr. Reginald Leyland would upset the gravity of a misanthrope with his burlesque scena, A Visit to the Royal Italian Opera. In his introductory remarks he is unblushingly candid. "Fancy goes a long way," he says, and on that hypothesis he leaves himself in the hands of his audience, after telling them that he will make up the opera as he goes on. The task would seem to the average man a very burdensome one, but Mr. Leyland is quite cheerful about it. And very soon his cheerfulness is shared by his hearers. Seated at the piano, he accompanies himself to the singing of such difficult classical operatic masterpieces as "Italiano, Ice-creamo"! We need say no more to indicate the character of the "musical passages" to which we are treated, and which furnish abundant reason for laughter. Miss Dollie Denton is a dainty comedienne who sings coon songs in an enchanting way, and dances most gracefully. Miss Flo Penley and Mr. George English have an extremely entertaining and bright little sketch, the title being In Ould Kildare. In their Irish comedy characterisations the two clever artists contrive to be exceedingly amusing.

There is a new production this week at the Chelsea Palace in

"UNDER THE SEAL."

Father David (a Priest)..MR. HERBERT HARDEN
Isaac Fogdale .....MR. MORRIS SEATON
P.C. 147 .....MR. E. J. WOOLLEY
Bet .....MISS MARGARET PARKER

The story is dramatic in the extreme, and, on the whole, is well told. The brother of a priest, Father David, has been murdered by a ruffian in revenge for his victim's action in getting him sentenced to a long "stretch" for wife murder. Fogdale, the murderer, tells Father David under the privileges of the secret Confessional of his crime, and then proceeds to taunt the priest that the latter's lips are sealed by the laws of the Church to which he belongs. Fogdale leaves, promising to return later. Bet, seemingly a servant of the priest, enters the room, and quickly realises that Father David is more than usually perturbed in mind. Before long, with the aid of the instinctive curiosity of her sex, she has a shrewd idea of what is troubling the thoughts of the holy man, and decides to enact the rôle of an eavesdropper when Fogdale pays his next visit. The latter turns up in due course to continue his persecution of Father David, but this time the priest sternly informs him that their interview is a conversation between man and man, and that his repetition of the admission of guilt cannot now be concealed from the authorities as if it had been uttered, as on the previous occasion, in the confessional box. Bet, who has heard all, sends for the police, but before the representatives of law and order arrive, there is a desperate struggle, during which Fogdale, while attempting to stab the priest, inflicts mortal injury upon the faithful little servant girl. Miss Margaret Parker in the rôle of the latter shows that she is equally at home in low comedy as in tragedy, and her characterisation is a most praiseworthy one. Her death scene is particularly pathetic and affecting. Mr. Herbert Harden seems to be well fitted for the rôle of the priest. His dignified, thoughtful, and scholarly representation is adequate in every respect. Mr. Morris Seaton is thoroughly convincing as the ruffian, and his Fogdale is an admirable study of a certain type of criminal.

Mr. Ben Albert indulges in absurdly comical discourses on the relative merits and demerits of the sexes, and his quaint epigrams keep the house in a state of uproarious merriment. The humour of his lines is accentuated by his really funny facial expressions. The Sisters Desmond, in a lively "part song," join issue against each other on the question of motors v. horse-drawn carriages. The lady who urges the advantages of the more old-fashioned vehicle seems to get most support from the audience, but as the argument is only intended to amuse, what matters it if a trap is safer than a motor-car, or if a motor-car travels more quickly than a pony? Of one thing the charming sisters do convnce us—that they are character duettists of much ability. The Three Laurels jump and spring and turn somersaults on and from a spring ping-pong table with amazing agility and rapidity, and Edie Veno is a chic and sprightly comedienne and dancer, whose verses ending with the query, "Is it you, Mr. Brown?" gain her no small favour. Mr Tom Leamore, as a County Council park-keeper, cuts a ludicrous figure, and his jokes concerning the experiences of such officials tickle one's fancy immensely. He is excruciatingly whimsical both in this and in his succeeding song. Hilarity is once more to the fore when the Folkstones come upon the stage and tell us all about "swimming the Channel." A world of droll notions are laid open to us in their bathing scene, and nothing could exceed the energetic fashion in which they engage in a variety of sportive antics.

HAMMERSMITH PALACE.

Mr. J. C. Coe's programme at the Hammersmith Palace this week is largely composed of turns that make for laughter, and a humorous offering that found decided favour on Monday was the new and original farcical comedy act, Nursery Pets, submitted by Mr. Tom Fancourt and Miss Jennie Ruble. The "nursery pets" are a couple of exceptionally precocious youngsters, Reggie and Sissie, who decide to emulate their elders, and go in for theatricals. After some amusing introductory business they give a brief exhibition of their ability as descriptive vocalists, and cause much hilarity by some burlesque acting, in which Reggie impersonates a bold, bad pirate, and his sister the helpless maiden. One of the cleverest things in the trifle is a duet which we may call "Park-lane, Petticoat-lane, and Drury-lane," in which the couple, especially Mr. Fancourt, do some particularly smart quick changes, each character represented being excellent. Another very successful impersonation of Mr. Fancourt's is that of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the speech which he delivers being punctuated with laughter. The versatile and hard-working couple also introduce a capitally worked fire rescue scene, and the playlet, which is admirably staged, also included many other entertaining items.

No Parson Required, the new Scottish farcelet which concludes the programme, is also of a most amusing nature. A quartette of lovers, Kitty and Charlie and Bill and Emma, are holiday-making in Scotland. It is the last day of their rustication when the curtain rises, and the merry party have just come across an ideal spot in which to picnic at the foot of the Cheviot Hills. In the midst of their meal they are disturbed by the appearance of a dour Scotchman, who informs them that they must clear off, as his master, a highly moral man, objects to the presence of "lovers" on his land. Married folk, however, can stay there as long as they like, and as the picnickers are so comfortable they declare they were only joking, and are united in wedlock. They are, of course, unaware that, according to the law of Scotland, if after twenty-one days' residence a man and woman declare themselves husband and wife before two witnesses it constitutes an irregular but legal Scottish marriage; but the grim Highlander soon informs them, and as each maid has somehow become attached to the wrong man the situation is decidedly awkward. In the end it is discovered that they have been in Scotland just an hour short of the required time, and they quickly decamp over the border; but not before the wily Scotchman has emptied the whisky bottle and accepted all the bawbees the distracted lovers have in their possession. The farce, which contains many witty lines, is capitally acted by Mr. Roy Cochrane and the company supporting him, and compels laughter from beginning to end.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finden present their screaming absurdity Two to One, Mr. Finden cleverly doubling the characters of the stuttering husband and the gentleman whom his wife mistakes for him, the funny dialogue and situations evoking much merriment; and there is much that is amusing in the boxing act of the Brothers Curran, a smart exhibition of the "noble art" concluding a well-worked and entertaining interlude. Miss Flo Cecil sings of the charms of "Carrie from Camden Town," a damsel who apparently knows her way about; and also has a pleasing number in the "Bamboo Bungalow," the dainty step dance which accompanies it being especially appreciated. Some of the heartiest applause heard during the evening was accorded Mr. John M'Culay for his artistic singing, in character, of "The Vagabond" and "There's magic in the Drum"; Mr. Ted Cowan created mirth by his droll rendering of "Dearie, Oh Dearie Me," and another nonsense song; and the programme also included Mlle. Eugénie Fougère, in French songs and imitations, and the Parisian dance, "La Mattchiche," and a particularly varied and interesting series of animated pictures, produced under the supervision of the management, especially appreciated being Raid on a Gambling Den, The Smugglers, Dolly Varden, Japanese and English Sports, Rescued in Mid Air (a very ingenious and funny film), and the Night of the Party.

SADLER'S WELLS.

It seems questionable whether people will ever get tired of witnessing Dickens impersonations, and certainly their interest should not easily fade while they are presented in the capable manner which marks the representations of Miss Eva Hope and Mr. Jack Wayho at Sadler's Wells this week. These two artists appear in three different scenes, namely, those between Nancy and Bill Sykes, the Little Marchioness and Dick Swiveller, and the death of Poor Jo. There is a sufficiently strong contrast between these selections from the great author's works to admit of Miss Hope and Mr. Wayho showing how versatile they can be when the opportunity offers, and in each of the characterisations referred to these clever artists act intelligently and with sound dramatic appreciation of the different types of individuals they portray. Miss Jenny Belmore is an acceptable male impersonator. In fact, when she first comes on, and before we hear her speak, it is difficult to come to a decision as to her sex, so deceptive is her make-up. Her vocalisation, as applied to "An Englishman's Castle is his Home" and "Come along, old chap," is full of character and expression. The Rushworths have a pleasing little entertainment consisting of illustrated songs written and composed by themselves. "My true-hearted Irish lad" and "Heroes who have never been to war" are the themes round which the verses are written, and the coloured pictures thrown upon the screen add an attractive ness to the ballads.

An engaging little comedienne who charms with her singing and dancing is Miss Ada Merry, who should be heard of in the future. Her song about her dolly is a pretty number prettily rendered. Collinson's company of juveniles in their "topsy-turvy school" engage in uproariously funny antics. The youngsters are a particularly bright lot, and deliver songs and pirouette round the stage in the sprightliest fashion. Mr. Jack Collinson as a schoolmaster somewhat given to habits of inebriety is an extremely comical figure. His latest contribution to the world of amusement finds great favour, the audience demanding recall after recall. A ventriloquist who makes one wonder what the human voice is not capable of doing is King Leo. His vocal illusions, if we may so describe his line of business, are skilfully arranged, and he is rewarded with loud and continued applause for the singing of a few verses of a popular ballad, "Rocked in the cradle of the deep," which seems to emanate from his dummy. Jack and May McKenzie are delightfully amusing in the duologue, Married for Money. It is the story of two lovers who perpetrate a fraud upon each other, each thinking that the other has a fortune. Marriage, of course, levels fiction down to fact, but everything ends happily enough. Married for Money is an agreeable petite diversion, and the McKenzies act in spirited style. Rozelle distinguishes himself in the direction of gymnastics, his various feats being neatly and smartly performed.

Picturesquely mounted, beautifully dressed, and capably presented is the dramatic episode in three acts, Ye Ladye Godiva. The plot is based on the historical incident with which the name of Coventry is indissolubly associated. The company is that of Miss Josephine Colona, who proves herself a graceful actress in the title-rôle. She possesses elocutionary powers of no mean order, and has mastered the art of dramatic gesture and motion. Added to these qualities she has a striking and handsome personality. Mr. W. H. Samo brings dignity and manliness of demeanour to his portraiture of Earl Leofric, and his delivery of the lines allotted to him is distinctly commendable. The parts of Peeping Tom and Bibeau are effectively sustained by Mr. F. H. Neville and Mr. Charles Bowen respectively, and the other members of the company ably assist in the production. A dainty juvenile comedienne and dancer faces the footlights in the person of Miss Maudie Francis, a daughter of the manager of the Brixton Empress; and a very accomplished child she is; and Mr. Harry Zetter wins golden opinions for his diverting comedy and eccentric dancing turn. Intense merriment is created by the series of cinematograph views shown by Raymond and Son's Bio-Tableaux, and pictorially describing how an advertisement for a watchdog is replied to. All manner of people, leading by the string and carrying all manner of dogs, from the ferocious mastiff to the harmless pug, are seen rushing through the gateway of a mansion in the hope of doing business, and the motley gathering affords a most ludicrous sight.

THE GRANVILLE.

During the dog-days, with insupportable heat outside, many of the music halls keep delightfully cool, thanks to the sliding roof and other facilities for toning down the temperature, and at the pretty Walham Green theatre of varieties Mr. Robert W. Duce sees to it that advantage is taken of all these aids to comfort. The hot weather also seems to have caused talent to spring up like mushrooms at the Granville. A better all-round programme has seldom been presented. The Delevines are in great form in their musical mélange and knockabout absurdity, entitled Flipp and Flopp, in which the said Flipp and Flopp try to take it out of the young squire on account of his attentions to Peggy, the barmaid, a charming young person. They introduce some wonderful contortionist business as a couple of scarecrows, and altogether give a very clever and entertaining show. The Harmony Four make a distinct and palpable hit in their fantastical and funny original musical medley. Each in his way is invaluable to the combination—Mr. T. C. Bergeron at the piano as Professor Schutz, Mr. F. M. Barrett full of dry humour as the porter Mike Murphy, Mr. John Lloyd as a sweet-voiced clubman Reginald Astorbilt, and last, but not least, Mr. E. Hughes as the irrepressible and resourceful Happy Hooligan. Roars of laughter accompany the action of the sketch.

A scena in a more serious vein, but pleasantly devised and well written, is the Napoleonic episode, entitled The Emperor's Divorce, capitally acted by Bayne and Hope (Ronald and Evelyn) on the familiar lines of the play entitled A Royal Divorce. Miss Carlotta Levey is in great form and as popular as ever in her songs "Learn to labour and to wait," and her latest ditty, with a moral, entitled "Sympathy" she renders her songs with great spirit and vivacity. Miss Amber Austa is a charmingly original and droll comedienne and dancer, with a marvellous facility for making bricks without straw, for there is really nothing in her song "Any Ice"; the success achieved is due to the admirable way in which she renders it, and the attractive abandon of the dance which follows. Hughes and Elliott, speciality dancers and sand-dancers, also apparently revel in their work, and are liveliness and dexterity personified. Miss Lilian Lowe is a vocalist with a marvellously strong and sweet voice, a combination not always found together, and her rendition of "The flight of ages" and "The song that reached my heart" gains tumultuous and well-deserved applause. Frank Hartley is, indeed, as the programme specifies, a clever boy juggler. He performs some exceedingly difficult tricks with a neatness and ability worthy of a more practised hand, and his imperturbable manner and unvaried sangfroid are delightful. Maggie Rennie is a taking little comedienne who sings and dances prettily, though her songs "I ain't no use for sleep" and "I wonder if the girl I'm thinking of is thinking of me" are not much in themselves. Mr. Charles Lilburn is a great favourite with his droll ditties "Better than nothing at all" and "He died of a broken heart." Mr. Sydney Dolf is undoubtedly clever and original, though if he styled himself a clever conjuror instead of a mimic it would be just as apropos of his performance. The Thurban Trio of vocalists and instrumentalists add singing and dancing to their accomplishments, and contribute a very lively turn. Mr. Frank Leslie scores as the kerbstone millionaire; Mr. Fred Kuton causes roars of laughter in his whimsical ditty "I'm not supposed to know what I'm about," his droll facial play helping considerably; Woodhouse and Wells are capital patter comedians and the Vernon's Bioscope is as admirable as ever.

BARNARD'S, GREENWICH.

A novel entertainment was presented here on Friday night by Bruno and Bianco, the former of whom undertakes to coin money in full view of the audience. He exhibits flat strips of silver, afterwards passing them through a machine which stamps out discs about the size of a sixpence. He then inserts each into another machine, which is supposed to mill the coin, and finally pours acid on them to complete the process. The finished sixpences appear in some mysterious manner in envelopes which members of the audience have previously sealed and affixed their names and handed on to the stage. Mr. Bert Dent takes a leading part in the above. He is on the stage all the time, explaining the whole process to the audience, as each item occurs. Bianco's business consisted chiefly of producing out of one bottle any drink asked for by the audience.

The programme this week is of the usual excellence. The novelty entitled The Trunk of Tantalus is introduced by the popular local manager, Mr. Bert Dent. Mr. Jones, the commercial traveller, while showing his samples to a certain tradesman, suddenly discovers he has only ten minutes in which to catch his train. The station is five minutes walk from the shop, leaving him five minutes in which to repack his trunk with thirteen parcels of samples. A sovereign was offered to anyone who could accomplish this feat within the time named, but no one was successful on the night of our visit.

Jock M'Kay, billed as the new Scotch comedian, sang with success "Duncan Donald" and "Piper McIndoo." The Idento Brothers gave a capital exhibition of their skill as jugglers. C. Garnet Vayne and company appeared in a well-acted dramatic episode entitled A Righted Wrong, and Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope exhibited a new and interesting series of pictures. Miss Mabel Thorne, who was enthusiastically encored, sang in capital style "My Jack's come home to-day," "Oh, Mr. Green," "The Coalman's Wife," and "The Spider and the Fly." Gus Dallon's speciality, entitled Snapshots, was well received, and deservedly so, it being a clever ventriloquial and juggling turn. "The Big Four," viz., Callan, Morian, Kennedy, and Evans, were excellent alike in song, dance, and patter, and Darky Frolics was one of the best items on the programme. Mac and Hill introduced some original and amusing patter, and sang "Gentlemen" with capital effect. Miss Vesta Rich greatly pleased her audience by her charming rendering of "Spoon with me" and "Jack and Jill." Avon and Crest created an excellent impression with their clever dialogue. There were several extra turns, including Mr. Dan Carter, who sang "I'd like a little bit of that" and "Got it first pop," and was rewarded with considerable applause, and Mr. Eric Brand, who was well received in "Danger in Delay" and "Happy 'cos she's dead."

EALING HIPPODROME.

The Bioscope is always an attractive item in a variety programme, and, as introduced here this week by Ruffell's Imperial Co. in the "Phantom Ride to Monte Carlo," is especially welcome. The films are beautifully coloured, and almost free from the painful flickering that so often mars their effect. The starting point of the ride is upon the Place de l'Opéra in Paris, where an excited crowd "assists" at the departure of the "phantom motor. After a contretemps or two at Dijon railway station, where the car plays "leap-frog" with the officials, it is seen careering over the topmost heights of the Maritime Alps, and ultimately the "phantoms" invade the gardens of Monte Carlo. Another incident illustrated is "Boot-cleaning." A handsome society girl stops to have her tan-coloured boots polished. Filled with admiration at so dainty a spectacle, dozens of the sterner sex collect, and upon the lady's departure a crowd of "gilded youth" follows in pursuit. By train, tram, omnibus and street she is pursued, but ultimately Cupid appears upon the scene in the person of a sedate-looking curate, and all ends happily. This moving picture depicts the most "up-to-date" rendering of the "pursuit of pleasure," and was heartily applauded.

In the majority of her songs Miss Carlotta Levey conveys a moral lesson, and this is particularly so in "Sympathy," which she warbles very sweetly. Although, perhaps, not possessing so catching a refrain as her second number, "Put a little bit away for a rainy day," yet there is present a tender melodiousness that lingers long upon the ear. Miss Levey occupies an unique position in the estimation of West Londoners, and since her great success as "principal boy" in the King's Theatre pantomime last Christmas she has grown in popular favour, and her reception here this week shows how thoroughly this popularity is deserved. An attractive and chic young vocalist, who certainly, so far as Ealing is concerned, appears for the first time, is found in Miss Aline Sudbury. Endowed with a fresh young voice and a charming personality, she not only sings with distinction but also acts her songs admirably, while her movements upon the stage are instinct with freedom and grace. Her first song, "Marguerite," is given with excellent effect. Upon a recall "Come back to Erin" was substituted. Miss Sudbury wears the Irish peasant costume, and with her pretty bare feet presents the ideal picture of an Emerald Isle colleen; her turn is an altogether delightful one.

Mr. Tom Costello in his Lovely Woman on the Warpath has seized upon the irrepressible Suffragettes for his theme, and exploits it for all it is worth. Assisted by four irate exponents of "woman's rights" the maximum of fun is extracted from the little sketch, which is received with roars of laughter. Diving beneath the surface, there is something more than pathos in Mr. Costello's scena of the Clown of Old Drury, and as he for the last time dons his wig we appear to be assisting at the "swan-song" of this particular character. The Musical Silvo, soloist on musical glasses and silver chimes, has some novelties in the way of sweet sound producers. His proficiency upon the concertina is well known, and he is equally successful with other and more weird instruments upon which he essays his skill. Roze and Calvert, comedy artists, produce one of those frolicsome episodes which find much favour nowadays, and which are the medium in this particular little scena for some clever fooling and singing. Woodhouse and Wells are comedians and patterers of the first order, and are—as they claim to be—thoroughly original. Their travesty of a hunting song is most amusing, and they have some very good cross-talk, while the skilful use one of the gentlemen makes of his stick is an entertainment in itself.

Mr. Jake Friedman in his "One Man Opera" is extremely droll, and his quaint way of announcing himself is exceptionally funny. He is in continuous difficulties in his efforts to induce Mr. Neale's orchestra to accommodate itself to the exigencies of the "One Man Opera," while he is in positive terror of the big drum. Needless to say, an artist of so many parts is well received. The Papillons, four dainty dancers and singers, in a butterfly pas de quatre coupled with a tuneful song, are responsible for some fine dancing associated with very graceful acrobating. The turn is greatly appreciated, and the four pretty Butterflies in blue have a good reception. The Sisters Poole appear in an elegant society entertainment of the sort which is always popular, and their step-dancing is excellent. A selection from The Geisha is ably rendered by Mr. W. Neale's admirably-directed band. Mr. E. W. James has a capable and courteous acting-manager in Mr. C. M. Lurring.

A STRONG RESEMBLANCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Kindly permit me, in reply to your correspondent Mr. Charles Darrell, to state that I have not had the pleasure of witnessing the sketch he refers to.

Nell of the Music Halls was played and copyrighted in the year 1900, and has been played, not "since last March," but for these six years, all through America, both by the authoress, Miss Marion Russell, and myself. The original manuscript, authenticated at Washington, U.S.A., is in the hands of my solicitor.—Faithfully yours,

MUSIC HALL CONTRACTS.

A case of great importance to music hall proprietors and artists was heard on Monday in the High Court, before Mr. Justice Phillimore and a common jury. The action was brought by Mr. Ferdinand Glinseretti, organiser and manager of a troupe of acrobats, known as the Glinserettis, against Mr. Harry Rickards, of the Tivoli Theatre, Sydney, and the Gaiety and Bijou Music Halls, Melbourne, to recover damages for alleged breach of contract.

Plaintiff said that in 1899 he was engaged to fulfil an engagement in Australia for twenty-four weeks certain, from May 15, 1902, with an option to the defendant for a further engagement at £75 a week, the troupe to have second-class passage-money out and home and travelling expenses in Australia. In February, 1902, defendant refused to carry out the contract, on the ground that the troupe was not then composed of the identical members who composed it when the contract was made. The troupe was partly broken up in 1901, and reconstituted, but it was performing with as much acceptance as ever when the engagement was broken. It was inevitable that such a troupe should find its members often changed. As a matter of fact, both Mr. Glinseretti and several of the performers were Austrians, and as their term for military service came round they had to return to their country to serve, so necessitating changes in the personnel of the troupe.

Defendant urged that by the very terms of the contract it was clear that the agreement was with the members of the troupe, and not with the plaintiff, the object being that Mr. Rickards should have control over the Glinserettis, or else they could have appeared at rival places of amusement. Throughout, the contract spoke of the members and not the plaintiff, otherwise there would have been no remedy against the troupe if they left Glinseretti and started in opposition to him.

Mr. Duke, K.C., and Mr. J. R. Atkin (instructed by Mr. G. C. L. Fry), were for the plaintiff; and Mr. Dickens, K.C., and Mr. Frank Dodd (instructed by Messrs. Beard and Sons) for the defendant.

In cross-examination, Mr. Glinseretti admitted that a particular troupe might do a trick very much better than if it were differently constituted; it was the particular way the trick was done that pleased the public and made the draw. It was important for a music hall proprietor to know how a combination worked, and he would usually see a troupe perform before he engaged it. His combination was as good or better than ever.

Evidence was given by Mr. Maurice Cronin to the effect that when there were alterations in a troupe between the date of a contract and the time when it had to be performed it was not the practice for the music hall proprietor to consider the contract broken. Witness was now performing with his troupe of jugglers at the Empire.

Mr. Dickens: We will all go there to-night.

Witness went on to say that he was one-fifth of his show.

Mr. Dickens: You are the show and the others are supers?—Oh, no; I do the serious part, and they supply comic parts.

I see, you swallow the knives, and they laugh at you?—Oh, no.

Mr. Dickens argued that the changes in the troupe were such as to make it practically another troupe, and the defendant had no opportunity of seeing whether the new members were as good as the old.

Defendant asserted that for eight years he had been in the habit of visiting England and America to engage artists, and he never engaged anyone without first seeing a performance. He saws the Glinserettis at the Empire. In 1901 competition was very serious in Australia, and as he was very short of artists he went to America to get others to meet the new competition. He heard the Glinserettis had disbanded, and cabled cancelling the engagement. He got another troupe in their place. He had been in the profession forty years. There was no supply of artists in Australia; they had to get performers from England and America. He had never had a company constituted differently offered him; all his companies had come out intact as he engaged them.

Cross-examined: He went to half a dozen halls every night to find artists.

Mr. Atkins: You must get very tired of it?

Witness (emphatically): I do.

Mr. Rickards went on to say that if a member of a troupe died he would not have considered the contract broken, nor if a light man got too heavy and had to be replaced by another lightweight. The Glinserettis were his star—his headline—and he could not get extra turns at a moment's notice. If anyone had said that the troupe was as good as before he would have accepted them.

Mr. Justice Phillimore: That seems to dispose of many points in the case.

Mr. J. L. Graydon, music hall proprietor, said that if he found that a troupe was changed he would put another turn on. Managers were never told of a change by either artist or agent, but they sometimes got to hear of it. He did not say that he had the right to cancel the contract, but he had to be careful. He could not give a particular instance.

On Tuesday Mr. Justice Phillimore, in summing up, said that the two questions the jury had to decide were (1) whether the troupe the plaintiff proposed to take to Australia was the same from a business point of view as the troupe with regard to which the contract was entered into, and (2) if they came to the conclusion that it was the same, and that there was a breach of contract, what damage was the plaintiff entitled to.

The jury, after half an hour's deliberation in private, answered the first question in the affirmative, and assessed the damages at £500.

His lordship entered judgment accordingly for the plaintiff, with costs. Stay of execution was granted for a fortnight with a view to an appeal.

FRANK PARKER AND THE COLISEUM.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—It has been definitely stated in a public journal that I am to be very actively associated with the London Coliseum when it reopens its doors. Would you allow me to state that, up to the moment of writing, such report is erroneous?—Yours faithfully,

MISS LENA VERDI will make her reappearance in London after a long provincial tour at the Tivoli on Monday next.

DR. BODIE AND "MEDICAL JEALOUSY."

The Civil Court at Leeds Assizes was crowded on Thursday, when the action was resumed, before Mr. Justice Grantham and a jury, in which Mr. Walford Bodie, the music hall artist, known as the "bloodless surgeon," sued Mrs. Robert Hudson, of Weetwood Mount, Far Headingley, to recover £100 damages for alleged slander. Mr. E. Tindal Atkinson, K.C., and Mr. Charles Mellor were for the plaintiff, and Mr. Scott Fox, K.C., and Mr. A. W. Bairstow represented the defendants.

The first witness called at yesterday's proceedings was Mrs. Emily Hurley, the mother of a girl who had passed through Mr. Bodie's hands. She said that in 1904 her daughter Violet, seven years old, suffered from scarlet fever, and in consequence she was kept at the Mansion Hospital for 32 weeks. The fever left her with a diseased knee, which was deformed, making it impossible for her to straighten it out. On the advice of the doctors she was taken to the General Infirmary, where she remained 23 days. On going out she was still unable to bend her leg, and for twelve months she was an out-patient of the institution. After coming out of the Infirmary the child wore a kind of leg shield (produced) and some irons. In February, 1905, the witness took the child to see Mr. Bodie, who operated upon her. The child at the time was wearing the irons, and Mr. Bodie took them off and threw them on the floor. Since that time she had never had to wear irons. The child could now use her leg, "dance, or anything," where she could not before. The witness had never been asked by Mr. Bodie to go on to the stage, but she had done so many a time, and had thanked Mr. Bodie many and many a time for what he had done for her. Mr. Bodie had never paid her or her child any money.

Somewhat similar evidence was also given by Mrs. Townsley, whose child was also treated by Mr. Bodie.

Nurse Higgins, upon whose information it was suggested that Mrs. Hudson had made her statements, told her story, and said that in consequence of what one of the girls at the Invalid Children's Home had said, she went to the Tivoli and saw the entertainments there.

"Dr." Bodie came on the platform, and explained some part of his electrical treatment. He performed operations on two people, and then said he would produce some of his cures, amongst them being Edith Estill and Rachel Schneider, two of the girls from the Home.

She believed that the girls had received appliances from the society, but it was before the witness's time. "Dr." Bodie did nothing to the children on the stage, but simply exhibited his cures. He said that the girl Schneider had been discharged from the Infirmary as incurable, and did not that night require either splints or crutches. The crutches had been chopped up for "piggies" for her little brother. The witness added that she admonished the children in connection with the affair.

Mr. Mellor: How soon after this particular evening did the girl Rachel go to the Infirmary again?—I could not tell.

Was it weeks or months?—Within two or three months after.

I understand the "doctor" did nothing to her at the Tivoli on this night; that he only produced her as a cure. Do you suggest that it was because of her going to the Tivoli that she went back to the Infirmary?—Certainly not. I only say she was not cured.

Mrs. Hudson then went into the box and gave evidence of the meeting at which the alleged slander was uttered. She said, as far as she could remember, that she regretted some of their children had been taken to the Tivoli, and represented as "Dr." Bodie's cures, one of the cases, she understood, not having been in his hands at all previously.

Mr. Mellor, addressing the Court for the plaintiff, expressed his amazement at the defence. From first to last there had been no apology, no expression of regret, no retractation. The defence practically amounted to saying that any lie could be told about a public entertainer with impunity. When they were compelled to confess that they were mistaken, they said, "Oh, if we told a lie about him, it was not as an entertainer, but in his capacity as a doctor, and as he is not really a doctor he is not entitled to recover." The thing was absurd, and now at the last they tried to plead privilege, but his Lordship would not allow them.

His Lordship, in summing up, said that so far as he could understand the case there was no defence. The defendant admitted that she was wrong, and the occasion was not a privileged one. The evidence of Nurse Higgins was of no value whatever, and had really nothing to do with the case. They could understand the feelings of nurses who were interested in these cases, and who got angry if anybody took a different view from theirs. The case amounted to this: Mrs. Hudson accused this man of being a rank impostor. Nothing more serious could be said about a man in the position of the plaintiff. People might regret, and he himself regretted, that he did not carry on his cures in some other way; but so long as a man was making his living legitimately people had no right to call him a rank impostor because they disliked the way in which he carried on his work. It was well known, added his Lordship, that doctors were jealous people. They called these men quacks, but it was a fact that these men did things that doctors could not do. It was a matter of common knowledge that a common cobbler had cured thousands of cases the doctors had never been able to touch. It was a very cruel thing, added his Lordship, to say these children had never been treated, and to accuse them of participating in a fraud.

After retiring for a few minutes, the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff with one farthing damages. Mr. Bairstow asked that the plaintiff should be deprived of costs, and applied for a stay of execution, but both applications were refused.

AN APPEAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

Sir,—My late friend and partner, Mr. James Clarence, who passed away recently, left a widow and two children in need of assistance.

Any subscription to this deserving case will be gratefully acknowledged by Mrs. Clarence, 3, Adventure-place, Hanley, Staffs. Trusting that the many friends of "Poor Jim" will give what little assistance they can. The following sums have been received:—

—Yours faithfully, JOE BELL.

An inquest was held at Broadstairs on Monday night on John Albert James, 33, comedian, in "Uncle Mack's" minstrel troupe, whose home was at South Hackney. On the closing of the performance at ten p.m. on Saturday the deceased expressed an intention to bathe in the bay. Next morning his body was found half buried in the sands, his clothing being in a tent 200 yards away. It was supposed that he was seized with cramp, to which he had been subject. The deceased was a widower, without children, and a popular member of the troupe. A verdict of "Accidentally drowned while bathing" was returned.

DEATH OF MR. FRANK WEEKS.

We regret to record the death of Mr. Francis James Weeks, better known as Frank Weeks, the manager and secretary of the South London Music Hall. The deceased had been suffering for some time from diabetes, and recently a carbuncle formed on the neck, which caused blood-poisoning, which was the immediate cause of his much-lamented death. He gradually sank, and passed away on Sunday last at the age of fifty-six.

Mr. Weeks, in his early days, had a considerable experience as a military man. He served for over twenty-two years in both battalions of the Northumberland Fusiliers, in which he attained the rank of staff-sergeant at Newcastle-on-Tyne. At all the different districts where his regiment happened for the time being to be stationed he was the manager of entertainments for his comrades and others. At Aldershot, Glasgow, Curragh Camp, Dublin, Kilkenny, Mullingar, Jersey, Woolwich, Colchester, and Chatham he was the moving spirit in the military merry-making. In the garrison towns of Ireland he used to amalgamate theatre and variety shows, and he has had the assistance of some of the best artists of the day. Mr. Charles Duval, whose suicide on a steamer bound from the Cape to this country is not yet forgotten, was one who assisted Mr. Weeks at Newry. A man cannot organise and stage-manage even barrack entertainments for a number of years without becoming acquainted in some degree with the more pronounced features connected with public performances in a popular theatre or music hall, and it is hardly surprising that the taste thus acquired should later on be used to advantage in a much bigger way. But Mr. Weeks did not merely manage these military concerts, but, in addition, appeared on the platform himself to show that he possessed vocal powers and humorous qualities to no small extent. He used to sing mostly Mr. G. H. Macdermott's songs, for which he first obtained permission in 1888. Mr. Weeks' most successful efforts in this direction were "How did you lose your arm?" "A little bit too slow," "His lordship winked at the counsel" (first sung by Mr. Harry Rickards), and Mr. James Fawn's "I did it." Mr. Weeks also took part in dramatic performances, one of the principal characters he played being that of Montmorency in New Men and Old Acres. When he became a member of the London Recruiting Staff he promoted many smoking concerts at St. George's Barracks, where he received great assistance from professionals. During the period of his association with the London Recruiting Staff Mr. Weeks was in the habit of taking the chair at the Montpelier in the good old days of George Edwardes and Charley Page, the musical director. It may be remembered that the last-mentioned died in his chair one night while writing a song. When Mr. Macdermott purchased the Hoxton Theatre of Varieties Mr. Weeks became the manager of this hall, remaining in the position for over three years. He very soon formed a pretty correct estimate of the people he had to deal with in the Hoxton playgoers, and he determined he would stop their bad behaviour. He succeeded, but the undertaking required all his efforts for twelve months. He broke up two or three gangs of ruffians, and he had the satisfaction of seeing the principal member of one of these select coteries sentenced to fifteen years' penal servitude. After the local hooligans became aware of the fact that Mr. Weeks would not be played with matters considerably improved. After reigning for a little over three years at Hoxton Mr. Weeks had a serious illness, and was obliged to keep to his room for a considerable time; and on recovering Mr. Macdermott, the managing-director of the South London Palace, offered him the management of that house, where he commenced his control on Aug. 21, 1899.

Here also he made it his business to deal effectually with the noisy element in the audience, the result being the restoration of order and decorum, to the extreme gratification of the well-behaved patrons and the artists themselves. He was always an advocate for the best class of variety entertainment, and in pursuance of this policy engaged, for a period of several weeks, Mr. Charles Fisher and company in a series of condensed versions of well-known operas. The success attained was far beyond what might have been expected. Mr. Weeks has always shown a keen interest in the various societies and institutions connected with the variety profession. He was specially interested in the Music Hall Benevolent Fund, and occupied the important position of chairman of the committee. By means of his collecting boxes he raised a large sum for this fund, and his valuable services on its behalf received due recognition. He was also honorary vice-president of the Music Hall Sick Fund, and as recently as May 9th last presided over the usual monthly committee meeting.

The poor children of Southwark have lost a kind friend in Mr. Weeks, whose custom it was to give the little ones an annual treat. He was very popular amongst the members of the profession, and had many friends, these including members of the Borough Council, for which, indeed, he had frequently been invited to become a candidate. Kindness and generosity were leading features in his character; he never seemed better pleased than when promoting some good object or helping some deserving institution; and his death is a distinct misfortune to the profession with which he was so long and so honourably connected.

FUNERAL OF MR. WEEKS.

It was not merely the funeral of a very popular music-hall manager, it was also the funeral of a soldier. There was scarcely a wreath that had not its patriotic decoration of red, white, and blue ribbon, and picturesque interest was lent to the occasion by the fact that the coffin was carried from the house by members of the deceased gentleman's old regiment, the 2nd Northumberland Fusiliers (late Fighting Fifth), who, by the way, walked by the side of the wreath-covered hearse and formed a striking spectacle with their scarlet uniforms and black busbys.

That the late manager of the South London Palace was held in local esteem was testified to by the lowering of blinds and the placing of black planks in front of windows in the London-road. The funeral cortége, consisting of five mourning carriages and the hearse, started from the music hall shortly after one o'clock. Crowds of people lined each side of the road, and through a corridor formed of human beings on the pavement, the mourners passed to the vehicles. In the first carriage there were Mrs. Weeks (widow of the deceased), Mr. Weeks (brother), Mr. Rapsey (brother-in-law), and Mrs. Rapsey. The second carriage contained Miss Rapsey and Miss Ashling (nieces), Mr. J. Rapsey (nephew), Mr. Horace Marriott (representing the Music Hall Benevolent Fund), and Mr. T. N. W. Grimsdail. The occupants of the third carriage were Mr. Harry B. Wincote (acting-manager pro. tem.), Mr. C. E. Howells (musical director), Mr. Birkett, and Mr. H. R. Ackerman. The first two gentlemen, along with Mr. Charley Seaman (the stage-manager), represented the staff. In the fourth were Mr. Harry Masters, Mr. Fred Reeves, Mr. Charles Beecham, Mr. Harry Day, and Mr. Tom Pacey. Representing the Music Hall Sick Fund, of which deceased was vice-president, were Mr. Pat Carey, Mr. Harry Mountford, and Mr. H. E. High, while Mr. Harry Lester appeared on behalf of the Terriers' Association. Mr. W. Edelsten and Mr. Nelson Francis followed in a victoria. Accompanying the funeral procession, either on foot or in carriages, were fourteen non-commissioned officers of the 2nd Northumberland Fusiliers, namely, Sergeant-Major Buckthought, Colour-Sergeants Fenton, Hill, Thompson, and Hollett, Drum-Major Casey, Sergeant Casey, Pioneer-Sergeant Owen, Sergeant Haddon, Band-Sergeant Williamson, and Sergeants Harcourt, Huckins, McEnery, and Lees.

Nunhead Cemetery, where a private grave had been secured for the deceased, was reached about half-past two. The chaplain of the cemetery, the Rev. Mr. Walker, officiated, both in the chapel and at the graveside, whither the coffin was borne by the deceased's brother-sergeants. The coffin, which was of pale oak, bore the following simple inscription:—

Francis James Weeks,
Died 29th July,
1906,
Aged 56.

A goodly concourse of people, professional and otherwise, gathered around the graveside, and many of them seemed greatly affected during the reading of the Burial Service.

The handsome floral tributes numbered between thirty and forty. That from the widow was of arum lilies, white chrysanthemums, sweet peas, and lilies of the valley, and bore the following pathetic message: "To my dear husband, from his true helpmate, his wife Melvina." A beautiful harp, composed of white chrysanthemums, cornflowers, and arum lilies, came "With sincere and heartfelt sympathy from his fellow-managers," as follows:—Messrs. C. Blyth-Pratt, F. Miller, J. Wilson, E. T. Barclay, Charles Beecham, F. McAvoy, James Howell, H. Masters, F. Glenister, L. Zeitlin, Edward Swanborough, and Nelson Francis. A couple of wreaths were sent from two battalions of Mr. Weeks's late regiment, one of red and white roses, and the other "From the sergeants of the 5th Fusiliers to their revered comrade," testified to the affection in which the deceased was held by the lines—

A comrade near
To the regiment dear.

The directors of the South London forwarded a crescent of tiger lilies and lilies of the valley, and the floral token of Mr. C. E. Howells, the musical director, carried the sentiment, "I loved him as as brother." The staff gave a chaplet of arum lilies tied with tricolour ribbon; Misses Janet and Marjory Tozer, a wreath of pinks and white flowers; and Mr. and Mrs. Wincote, lilies of the valley and white roses. A particularly artistic floral combination came from the president, committee, and secretary of the Music Hall Benevolent Fund, "In sad memory of one of the best friends the poor music hall artist has ever had." The wreath of the Terriers' Association was of white chrysanthemums and arum lilies, into the midst of which were woven in blue cornflowers the letters "T. A." A dainty device in lilies and sweet peas, "In loving memory of his old friend," was from Mr. T. N. W. Grimsdail. Other wreaths came from the South London staff and orchestra, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Weeks and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Chadworth, Alderman and Mrs. Bowers and family, Mr. Pat Carey, Mr. Read, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Pacey, Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Rickards, Mr. and Mrs. H. Seward, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Pemberton, Mr. L. P. Joyce, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Howells, Mr. and Mrs. Ackerman, Mr. J. J. Feedon, Mr. F. Sharp, "Little Jack," Mr. Stow Banks, Mr. Duck, Mr., Mrs., and Miss Salter, Mr. and Mrs. Ginnett, Mrs. Wirth, Mrs. Collins, Mrs. Herbert, Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer, and Mr. Hoare. Mr. Theophilus Dunkley attended in his usual able manner to the funeral arrangements.

The following lines are from the pen of the musical-director of the South London:—

A TRIBUTE.

F aithful, firm to duty's call,
R ight his might, to honour true;
A lways a man to great and small,
N one better, his equal few—
K ind of heart and generous, too.

W e whom he has left behind
E very day will feel his loss;
E very heart, with love inclined,
K eep his memory green. His cross
S partan-like he bore—a soldier and a man.

—C. E. Howells.

THE KING AND MR. GEORGE LEYTON.

It was felt by several friends who watched Mr. George Leyton's incessant efforts to aid Crimean soldiers, that His Most Gracious Majesty the King would certainly be interested in the noble and benevolent work of the popular actor-vocalist. Therefore, when Mr. Leyton's Crimean Fund reached the magnificent total of £2,000 from the sale of his song, "The Boys of the Chelsea School," the psychological moment had arrived to place the facts before that Monarch who appreciates his soldiers to the full, and who undoubtedly felt a pang at the disbandment of the Scots Guards. So a brief but sufficient history of Mr. Leyton's praiseworthy movement was written, the very facts themselves, simply stated, giving the unique story an eloquence all its own. In this story to the King from the actor-vocalist of the music halls came the points that for three years Mr. Leyton has been singing his song, "The Boys of the Chelsea School," and, acting on his idea to sell the words of the song to the audience after the rendition of the same, the response has been most liberal all over the land. Of course, Mr. Leyton had to obtain the permission of managers and proprietors for the attendants to go into the audiences and sell the song, and he cannot speak too highly of such gentlemen as Mr. G. Adney Payne, Mr. Oswald Stoll, Mr. Thomas Barrasford, and others, who have granted every facility for the sale of the song. By this means he has given as much as £10 to £30 to a Crimean veteran, and, in some cases, the money he has raised has saved the old soldier from the workhouse, or the little home belonging to a veteran and his wife, whose old age was embittered by penury, and yet, with the knowledge that the man had fought in the 'fifties, when England and Russia were foes, to be forgotten in his old age. The King was told how mayors and clergymen had gone on to the music hall stage on the last night of Mr. Leyton's engagement, and thanked him publicly for the good he was doing to old soldiers, for his work would be the topic of the week in a city or town deeply interested in the novel steps at the music hall by which the popular actor-vocalist was raising pounds for an old soldier more used to pence, and sometimes not even them. On these touching farewell performances, with the actor-vocalist on the stage, the mayor or a clergyman, there, too, would be the grizzled old soldier who was young in the long ago, and notwithstanding a straight career knew deep poverty in old age. Then the purse of gold would be handed to him amid the applause of the audience, and thus would conclude a scene which no witness would forget. There is no doubt this benevolent work has had a great moral effect in thousands of circles throughout the land. Mr. Leyton's desire is to consolidate a fund so that weekly payments might be made to old Crimean veterans, and thus their poverty would be a thing of the past. This point was also embodied in the story placed before His Most Gracious Majesty, and an acknowledgment has been sent with the thanks of our King from Buckingham Palace, thus assuring the fact that the details of Mr. Leyton's work have obtained attention in the highest circle of the land. As recently it seems that the Balaclava Fund, energetically pushed by Mr. T. H. Roberts, has met with diminishing support, it seems evident that the public are slow in sending shillings and pounds, and thus Mr. Leyton's direct appeal for the pence is very happy, as they in sufficient numbers make the larger coins. It it now beyond all dispute that Mr. Leyton has solved the problem of old soldiers' poverty, and with his aim for an enterprise in London to raise a good fund Crimean veterans should be well taken care of.

It may be pleasing to know that a copy of the words of "The Boys of the Chelsea School," beautifully printed on white satin, has been sent to our gracious King, with letters from philanthropic leaders, who have given their warmest appreciation to Mr. Leyton, whose work has imparted an unquestionably distinguished tone to music hall charity.

With our actor-vocalist military sketches are a speciality, and therefore he can carry on his work for the Crimean soldiers with each new one, for nothing could more win the world's regard to the value and discipline of the soldier than Mr. Leyton's latest sketch, The Wreck of the Birkenhead, which has just been produced in London, shows the artist himself to the best advantage, has won the warmest plaudits of his audiences, and secured the approval of our chief daily organs. When the words of The Wreck of the Birkenhead are printed, there are countless thousands who will buy them, that the money may be given to deserving old soldiers. Thus the £2000 will swell to bigger proportions, and it will be seen that the movement commenced on a small scale has grown into one of national importance, and that he who hoped to do a little good has stirred hearts in all circles, and seen thousands of pounds where he did not expect hundreds. It is to be hoped that now the story of Mr. Leyton's work has reached the palace of the King that some members of the Royal circle will yet hear the actor-vocalist in one of his sketches, in which by song, music, picture costume, and every possible elevating effect he concentrates attention on the heroic virtues of England's soldier. Our illustration shows Mr. Leyton in his new sketch, The Wreck of the Birkenhead.

THE ALHAMBRA ANNUAL OUTING AT GUILDFORD, JULY 22ND.

TO MARIE IN HEAVEN.

Lines written by Dr. Walford Bodie on the day of her funeral.

Flow on, sweet Deveron, as of yore,
With wooded glens and rugged shore,
And memories sweet, I can't forget,
My Mystic Marie dwells there yet.
The rippling waters gently glide,
To follow up the ebbing tide,
The sky so bright and verdure green,
The day I lost my "Mystic" Queen;
And now the shadows softly fall,
My Marie's gone beyond recall.
An earthly Queen, none can deny,
It seemed a shame for her to die
So young, so beautiful, and fair,
Her spirit always light as air;
So gifted also in her ways,
She lingered on for many days,
Still hoping, trusting for the best,
But she's gone to her last rest.
She nobly fought with might and main,
And hoped to be herself again;
But cruel disease the victory won,
And as the ice melts with the sun,
So did my Marie pass away—
No one the Hand of Death could stay.
She shared my joys, she shared my pains,
Her memory with me still remains;
So good, so noble, and so kind,
Her equal I shall never find.
Oh, Macduff Town, while life remains,
To me shall be a hallowed spot;
Our darling Marie's dwelling-place
Shall never, never be forgot;
And while the winter's stormy blast
With lightning's flash and thunder's roar,
Thy memory green I'll always keep,
And think of you on yonder shore.
And on the hill top near the church,
To me a sacred place shall be,
For there our Marie sweetly rests,
In her last home so near the sea;
Her voice I'll hear in every wave,
Like music as in days of old,
For did she not enchant the ears
Of thousands then both young and old?
Oh, God, I know it was your will,
To take her to your fold;
I hope that she shall dwell with you,
And wear a crown of gold;
For was she not a Godly girl when
She on earth was living?
She now has gone aloft with Thee,
To take her place in heaven.

Mlle. Talma, the celebrated palmist and queen of lady conjurers, need have no fear of being numbered amongst the ever-increasing army of unemployed if we can accept the testimony in the letter hereunder, which she received in the usual way at one of the music halls recently. The document has since been the cause of considerable mirth in the firm of Le Roy, Talma, and Bosco, the Comedians de Mephisto Co., who are at present appearing at the Palace, Blackpool. The communication was as follows:—"Deer ladie,—i opes has ow yu wil kepe this ere letor strikli sekrit fack is i seed yore tern at the showbox larst nite and yu tikkeld me orful wen yu puld munie owt of mi eer and got it from pokkets ware thare warnt nun look ere ime a game un and yore a game un wot if we dubbles up i duz sum pinchin by trade and wiv yore tallence i cud put you up to makin a wallopin fortin you see i finks ov yore wa ov slidein fings owt ov site sorter quik like and orl this iz the sekrit of owr game ov kors hit wil bea orkard for Leroi and Mister Boskoe wen yu leev em but yu kan bet yore butes yu wil make tuns of munie wiv me meat me on fursda hat wilsons korner ov markit streat and we kan setel job. rite orf—beleev me yores respeckly, ——."

The adjourned Oxford City Quarter Sessions were held on Saturday to hear an appeal by Mr. Albany Ward, of the Empire Theatre, Oxford, against the decision of the Oxford City magistrates refusing the renewal of his licence for the Empire Theatre. The case was heard before the Recorder, Mr. R. B. Dyke-Acland, K.C. Mr. Hugh Sturges with Mr. Porter appeared for the appellant, and Mr. T. M. Snagge with Mr. Nigel Davidson represented the respondents. At the outset Mr. Snagge took a technical objection that no appeal could lie against the decision of the licensing magistrates, as the Act allowed appeals only against penalties which might be inflicted for breaches of rules, and that the magistrates in refusing the licence made no order closing the house. Mr. Sturges, for the appellant, contended that the refusal of the renewal constituted an order; he further argued that once licensed the premises were always licensed, and could only be closed if proof were given of breaches of rules.

In the course of a long argument it was elicited that no order was framed by the magistrates, and also that Mr. Ward had accepted annual licences running from June to June. The Recorder said the appeal must fail. It seemed to him that the appeal was against the magistrates for doing nothing, and that was the act complained of. He gave no opinion as to Mr. Sturges's argument that "once licensed always licensed," but thought it rather an amazing contention. He was willing, if Mr. Sturges wished, to state a case. As Mr. Ward had engaged companies for the next three weeks he would not formally give his decision until the expiration of that time.

A music hall case of some interest was decided at the Bow County Court on the 27th ult., when Miss Alice May, actress, of Rupert-street, Piccadilly, sued Messrs. Macnaghten, the music hall proprietors, for £8 in respect to the production of the sketch Tranquillity at the Britannia Theatre, Hoxton. In March last the defendants agreed that the sketch should be produced, but after the first night Miss May was dismissed on the ground that the entertainment was "too classical" for the district.—His Honour: What is the character of the sketch—Mr. Robinson (for Miss May): Miss May impersonates seven different characters—a laundress, a slavey, a Salvation lass, Italian girl, newsboy, Punch and Judy show woman, and, finally, a society girl. (Laughter).—His Honour gave judgment for the plaintiff for the amount claimed and costs.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

To fully understand the popularity of Longsight wakes you must take into consideration the vast population it serves. Within ready access of the fairground dwell half-a-million people—Manchester workers driven by the growth of their city into its suburbs. It is this significant fact—the flow of the population from the centre of Manchester to its far-stretching outer circle known as Greater Manchester—that constitutes the necessity for and the abiding and ever-increasing success of the suburban wakes.

WELL within living memory Longsight was a pleasant village on the road to Stockport, a picturesque spot, with its roadside inn, smithy, and a small workshop or two. On the roadside less than thirty years ago the shows and stalls pitched, and the local wake held its privileged revel. Here came in those days the friends and neighbours of the people of Longsight from busy Ancoats and Beswick that lay nearer to Manchester, and on the other side from Levenshulme, Gorton, Fairfield, and other villages stretching yet further into the open country. Within living memory, too, are the Morris dancers from Stockport and Cheadle Hulme, and all the local accessories of a Lancashire holiday.

NOTHING more truly indicates the vast progress in the popular open-air amusements of the Lancashire folk than the contrast between what the people did then and what they do now. Forty years ago their principal pleasure was in eating and drinking. The stalls for the sale of tasty comestibles largely predominated; and after the fashion of our rude and hearty forefathers, the wake was a veritable feast of fat things, when the poor serving of the daily board gave way for a glorious season to the delights of a full table, summed up in the old adage, "plenty of cakes and ale." Oh, yes. There were shows and toy and novelty stalls, swing-boats, and hobby-horses in those far-away days; but great as the change and evolution has been in the life and habits of the people, greater still has been the progress of the shows and showmen. Forty years ago the showman pitched his circus, small menagerie, set of hobby-horses, over-boats, or swings in the side streets, or on the open space by the village inn. The itinerant traders and stall-keepers lined the roadside for half a mile, and the people turned out and were merry.

TO-DAY within its gates the wakes-ground at Longsight contains show concerns so costly that one of them alone represents a bigger capital outlay than the money invested in the whole of the shows thirty or more years ago. Here is another significant fact that proves the ability of the showman to follow the times and adapt himself to the needs of the people. The older generation of showmen to-day remember the day of small things, and have passed through all the changes leading up to the better things of the present time. When we visited the fair on the principal day of its enterprise and saw the happy and good-humoured crowd of eager sightseers, we felt sure that no honest critic of modern fairs could have failed to be convinced of their supreme popularity and growing importance in the life of the nation. Here in the crowd were all sorts and conditions of people freely mixing together on one common object intent—to see and be seen; open and frank pursuit of necessary recreation; after toil relaxation—and this was equally true of the brainworker as the craftsman and artisan (old and young alike), "the potent, grave and reverend seignior," and happy, light-hearted youths and maidens. All alike enter fully into the fun of the fair, with its marvels and delights, its delightful jangle of merry sounds, that entrancing medley of voice and music, so intensely human, yet so magical and compelling. What a spell it has over you. What resistless power and charm. What is it that hold you and sets your blood coursing through your veins, your heart beating in full response to its influence? It is the spirit of the common life, the joy of the common hope and comradeship. You are at one with your fellows, and you are the better for the fellowship. That is the real secret of the abiding power of the showman's work in the national life.

PASSING down the centre of the wakes-ground the first machine novelty to attract the eye was Lieske's big wheel. The double motion of this unique aerial roundabout is a notable and novel invention. The cars, filled with passengers, make many revolutions of the big wheel, and at the same time each car revolves on its own fixed axis in a contrary circle to the great wheel itself—a complex and yet most exhilarating experience. The next concern was provided by James Hibbert and Sons, of Stockport, and was one of their magnificent sets of electric racing cockerels, known as the farmyard roosters and revolving cars. Like everything else belonging to this up-to-date firm, the machine was resplendent in brilliant colour, golden glitter, and lit up with powerful electric arc lamps. In the central position stood John Whiting's immense electric novelty, the Japanese cars from Tokio—a vision of gorgeous colouring and Eastern splendour. The cars ride gloriously along a switchback track. Each is a model of exquisite Japanese artistry, richly carved in Japanese national emblems, and cushioned and upholstered in dark crimson velvet. This truly magnificent machine may be said to be the very last and best thing in electric roundabouts. John Collins exhibited the wonderful, weird, and sensational success, the new whirly-whirly, or whirling the whirl. This was the supreme novelty of the fair, and the talk of Longsight. Here you had an entirely new sensation in exciting motion—a roundabout, the deck of a steamer in a squall, an express train, a switchback, and up in a balloon. Take all these in the separate flight and motion, and you have the whirly-whirly.

ISAAC RICHARD'S twin ships in the air—excellent steam swings—well maintained their established position in public favour, despite the keen competition of more recent novelties. Mrs. John Whiting's delightful gems, the juvenile motor-cars, were a special feature of interest, and won the admiration of all visitors, and the "wee tots" thoroughly enjoyed their first ride in real motor-cars at the fair. A pretty set of juvenile swings completed the excellent range of machine novelties.

AT the far end of the ground and facing down the fair were located Proctor's London circus and James Norman's electric theatre. Proctor's circus is one of the oldest and most famous shows on the road, the entire programme in the arena, with but one exception, being given by the clever and justly celebrated Proctor family, fourteen in number — tight rope flying rings, bareback riding, clever humorous sketches by the Proctor clowns, assisted by that animated bundle of fun Little Mickey, the clown, trained horses, and the donkey introduced by Father Proctor making a genuine and entirely original and clever show, all too rare on our fairgrounds.

THAT grand old man of showland, James Norman, with his capital cinematograph theatre, gave great satisfaction to the patrons of his show by his high-class range of beautiful up-to-date animated photography. We saw two performances, and the delight of the audiences was enthusiastic. The long picture at each show was a masterpiece. The first we saw was a stirring drama, full of keen life and sensation, The Train-wreckers: A Story of American Railway Life. The second show gave us a moral drama—Drink and Tuberculosis—a French film of great length showing the downward path of the drunkard and the misery, want and disease that follow in its train. It was a sermon in action, and the audience quite grasped its tragic point. James Norman deserves every praise for placing such excellent pictures before fairground audiences.

AMONGST the side-shows were Ling's two exhibits—the fine art gallery with up-to-date pictures and models; the No. 2 concerns the stereorama.

STRETCHING from the entrance gate on either side of the ground were avenues of minor novelties, shooting galleries, refreshment saloons, dolly frames, variety stalls, throwing games, ring and dart boards, pannum and fairing stalls. These were provided, amongst others, by the Harringtons, the Whatmores, the Jewells, and Messrs. Delaney, Smith, Henshaw, Black, Richmond, White, Jennings, Newall, and Pessagno.

AT Hillkirk-street, Beswick, another Manchester suburban wakes, this week were John Collins's aggregation of fairground novelties, and with him were T. Hurst, with racing birds, Dyer's theatre of varieties, and a host of minor novelties.

AT Mossley Wake, on the Lancashire Round, were Col. Clark's electric coliseum, Wm. Mitchell, jun.'s motor cars, Ben. Mitchell's racing cockerels, James Hibbert and Sons' flying motor cars, the Newmarket Riding School, and sets of swings and minor novelties, shooters, &c., by Messrs. Shuttleworth, Frank Woods, Mrs. John Cornwell, and others.

AT Nelson Fair were Captain Payne's Bioscope, Holden's junks, Makin's horses, Pedley's whirling the whirl, Starkie's shooter and swings, Sharpe's shooting gallery and juvenile horse, and throwing games and stalls in galore.

CAPTAIN TOM PAYNE has suffered a serious misfortune in the loss by fire of his costly organ, and the whole of his electric light plant, dynamos, and complete up-to-date electric equipment.

THE fire broke out whilst the show was in transit by rail from Stalybridge to Nelson, and although immediate action was taken by the railway staff and the services of the nearest fire brigade called in, the fire was not subdued until damage to the amount of £1,400 was done. We understand that Mr. Payne was not insured, and we feel sure his fellow showmen will be heartily sorry to hear of his terrible loss.

MESSRS. W. C. AND S. HANCOCK have also suffered considerable damage and loss by an accident to their rolling stock. One of their big concerns was being taken by road by traction engine, when, owing to the uncoupling of the hind waggon, followed by the unfortunate snapping of the drag chains, the loose waggon and a water cart linked with it ran down the steep incline of Elford Hill, and was ultimately smashed with its valuable contents. Fortunately the road was clear of passengers, or more serious damage might have occurred. As it was, a number of carved horses used on the machine and electric lamps and appliances were destroyed.

UNDER the banner of the local caterers, the Hancock Family, Exeter and other West of England Fairs have the well-known shows and other novelties of Prince Samonda, Sidney Braham, Sol. Roader, Alf. White, John Jones, Wm. Weston, Anderton and Rowland, and varieties of all kinds by Messrs. Barker, Chapman, Heal Bros., Frampton, White, Legge, Moti, and others.

IN the West of England we have the commencement of the splendid run of fairs known as the Regatta Round, including places like Dawlish, Teignmouth, Newton Abbot, Babbicombe, Paignton, Brixham, Torquay, Dartmouth, and Totnes. This run of fixtures leads on to the Autumnal Hiring Fairs, and includes towns like Taunton, Ilfracombe, Portland, Bridgwater, Gloucester, Cirencester, Cheltenham, Tewkesbury, Stratford-on-Avon, Salisbury, Marlborough, Devizes, Warminster, Northampton, and Market Harborough.

FROM the Yorkshire Round we have news of Dewsbury Feast, maintained by the very best of the concerns on this busy circuit. Three large cinematograph shows—Relph and Pedley's, Monte Brothers', and Enoch Farron's—Permaine's performing bears, Bailey's Temple of Mirth and Mystery, and Westray's Freak Exhibition were the exhibitions proper. The machines, always well represented at this fair, included the well-known sets of Messrs. Howden and Son, P. Collins, the Waddingtons, the Redfearns, the Marshalls, and single sets by Corrigan and Shaw, manual swings and highfliers by Proctor, Johnson, and Blake, bazaars (invariably a great feature at Dewsbury) by Messrs. Seed and Sons, John Seed, A. Gledstone, and Howarth and Sons. Varieties in avenues and long rows, stalls and fairground novelties in their multitude and multiplicity by Messrs. Gavin, Burgess, Holdsworth, Richards, Blake, Guthrie, Lorenzo, Vanner, Jameson, Holdsworth, Clayton Brothers, Steward, Jacques, Stockwell, Pollard, Walker, Hodder, Kirby, Mitchell, Beaumonts, Whyatt, Howell, Rhodes, Patterson, Hepworth, Wright, Turner, and many others.

ON the Scotch Round, for the summer season of Holiday Fairs are Arthur Henderson, George Green, Senator Leo, J. Wilson, McIndoe, Carter, and Wm. Clark, jun., with cinematograph theatres; Buff Bill and Chipperfield, with menageries; Paulo Scott and Pinder Ord, with circuses; Biddall, with ghost illusion; and Biddall's No. 2 Show, the Freaks of Nature; and the side shows of Professor Moore and T. Wright. Messrs. Wilmot and Sons, George and John Green, Wingate, Howard, Swallow, White, and Mans, with all the best and latest novelties in riding machines; shooting concerns in great perfection and variety by Messrs. Hughes, Wright, Biddall, Sheeran, and others; minor novelties, throwing games, and stalls by Messrs. Dawson, Salvoni, Henshaw, Cook, Wright, Chapman, Newton, McIndoe, Smith, Hunter, Brockley, Irvin and Son, Stevenson, Wilmot, Baker, Day, Newman, Lawrence, Kelly, McIntosh, Lovell, and many others.

WITHIN a few short days of one another two notable show-women have passed away to their well-earned rest, namely, Mrs. Proctor and Mrs. Scott, both of circus fame, and known on a thousand fairgrounds throughout the United Kingdom.

MARIA PROCTOR retired from the active management of her circus a few years ago, having carried on the show after her husband's death with success and distinction. She spent the peaceful time of retirement at the house of her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Twigdon, at Mortedge, Derby, and during the later months of her life was an invalid. The strenuous life of the road, the upbringing of a numerous family, the loss of her husband—all these broke down her remarkably vigorous constitution, and she passed away at the age of sixty-nine years, full of years and honour.

MRS. JOHN SCOTT, the wife of John Scott, of the British Circus, the head of a great clan of circus people, died of heart failure at Beith, Scotland, last week, at the comparatively early age of forty-seven years. Though twenty years younger than Maria Proctor, Nellie Scott was equally well known and respected by show people and the show loving people. We are quite sure that the heart of Showland beats in deepest and tenderest sympathy with both the Proctor and Scott families, and to all of these we tender our sincerest condolences.

THE fêtes and galas around Bath and district will be in full swing during August, and showmen will have a busy time. Jennings' steam roundabouts are at Batheaston this week. On Monday they move to Box and are due at Road (Wilts) on the 21st inst. Cole Bros.' electric switchback and galloping horses attend the big local flower show at Tiverton-on-Avon (Bath) on Monday. Symonds' great world fair were at Trowbridge on the 28th ult., and are billed to form a leading attraction at Neston Park (Wilts) on the 8th inst.

LORD JOHN SANGER AND SONS, LTD., visited The Butts, Salisbury, on the 26th ult., and gave two shows to crowded audiences. The troupe of performing elephants proved a strong attraction in the first-class programme. The Maro Troupe of acrobatic equestrians were very smart. The other principal turns included the Fondants, musical wire artists; Pimpos' leaping dogs; The British Tars at practice; M. Roberts, barebacked equestrian; the Flying Airless trapeze marvels. A display, entitled "Nero; or, the Sports of Ancient Rome," was very creditably executed. Several highly trained horses were exhibited, including Hoffmann's talking pony and Miss Lina's thoroughbred. The musical portion was under the able bâton of Mr. Clem A. Lawrence.

STIRCHLEY is a large and important village, three miles from Birmingham, and two from King's Norton, where a fair is held on Oct. 1st. Some good shows and machines should do well here. In the neighbourhood the industries are metal works, paper mills, screw factories, cocoa works, and flour mills.

AT Astwood Bank this week Gilbert and Co., the auctioneers, are doing good business.

ALCESTER MOP will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 9, not Oct. 2, as has been falsely circulated. Alcester Mop is always held on the Tuesday before Oct. 11. Showmen may take up their quarters anywhere in the street close to the Town Hall and the church.

Jacob Studt's Electric Coliseum, galloping horses and motor switchback, with novelty side shows, were announced to open for the holidays at Archers' Field, White Horse-road, Oxford, on Friday. The proceeds of the first night were to be handed over to the Oxford Hospital's Committee.

AT the Cainscross and Ebley Flower Show, held in Jefferies' Field, Stroud, on Saturday, Biddall Bros.' palace of varieties and animated pictures drew large crowds; Mr. W. Symonds' switchback railway, swing boats, shooting saloons, and pleasure fair were well patronised.

ST. GILES, Oxford, great pleasure fair will take place on Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 3 and 4. Those who imagine that fairs are dying out should take a trip to the carnival, where they will find one of the largest and best-conducted fairs in England. Many prominent showmen have been allotted spaces between the avenue of trees in the wide thoroughfare of St. Giles, right from George-street to the commencement of St. Giles' Church.

EAGLE DAVIS, a lion tamer, had a narrow escape whilst performing with the untamable lion Wallace at Aberkenfig, S. Wales, on the 24th ult. The performer had no sooner entered the cage, than the animal sprang at him; but, fortunately, the tamer managed to deal the savage brute a severe blow with a club which for the moment dazed him; but on endeavouring to get out of the den Davis had the middle finger of one of his hands severely clawed.

HEPWORTH'S new film, entitled "Black Beauty," is fully equal to, if not better than, "Rescued by Rover." A gentleman leaves his house for a ride in the country, mounted on his favourite horse. While riding through a lovely wood, he is suddenly attacked by two tramps, dragged from his horse and relieved of all his valuables. The injured man, upon reason gradually returning, calls his companion to him, and with a knowledge of the animal's wonderful powers tells him to return home for aid. Black Beauty races back to the house, and taking the handle in his mouth pulls the bell. His mistress coming outside, views with dismay the riderless horse, and quickly mounting allows him to take her to where his master lies. Realising that her husband cannot possibly be moved without assistance, she takes from his pocket, pencil and paper, scribbles a short note, asking for help to be sent immediately, and attaches the note to the steed's saddle. Then she instructs him where and how to go. A stretcher is thus obtained from the police, and following in the horse's steps they are soon brought to the scene, and lifting the poor man carefully on to the stretcher they take him home.

A UNIQUE event happened at Mr. John Henry Cooke's Circus, Edinburgh, on Saturday, when a reindeer was born. The mother is one of a herd used by Mr. Cooke in a spectacle, "Lapland," produced last Christmas.

THE pleasure fair at Eastbourne under the management of Swales Forrest has been a great success, the free show attractions, Herman (the monarch of the high rope), and Caselli (champion acrobat and table performer), astonishing the people of Eastbourne nightly by their marvellous feats. Herman conveyed a man across the high rope without any pole or other balancer.

ON George Beach's ground the outside attraction was Almero on the high mast—a very good show.

THE shows and novelties on Mr. Forrest's ground were the lessee's concerns, the Japanese airship, or whirling the whirl—a big novelty—the juvenile roundabouts, the big wheel sensation, and throwing games; Mr. J. Saunders's fine art gallery, Mr. Wm. Elliott's fistiana saloons and Winchester range, H. Forrest's park swings and games, Penfold's football frame, bottle battery, and varieties, Bolesworth's shooting saloons and cokers, and G. Bolesworth's throwing games, Sand's swings, and other attractions.

WITH George Beach were his well-known novelties the farmyard set, the shooter, swings, and cokers; and associated with him were Long, with shooting saloon and roundabout, Rowe, with fish pond and ring and dart boards; and Cooper, with pipe breaker and other varieties.

MR. PERCY T. BURNETT'S portable theatre, His Majesty's, has opened for a season at Camborne, where the performances are drawing good houses. Amongst the plays recently produced are Uncle Tom's Cabin, Jack Ashore, Richard III., and Driven from Home. It is many years since a portable theatre has visited this district.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

ENQUIRER.—Lord George Sanger has retired from business, and if he is at present tenting, it is for his own pleasure.

S. FORREST.—Have been away for ten days, but will make enquiries and send word at once

W. C. WITTLE.—Again many thanks. We are taking all possible care to preserve the fair rights. Yes, keep in touch with the guild.

A. TIVINGTON (Derby).—Owing to absence on work of the guild, your interesting letter has been kept over this week. You have our sincere sympathy. See our columns this week.

MISS MILLINGTON (York).—The guild has successfully dealt with the Vagrant Children's Education Bill. Many thanks for your continued interest in the child of the showman.

THE SHOWMEN'S GUILD MEETING AT MANCHESTER.

For ten years past at Longsight, Manchester, a meeting of the Guild has taken place at the annual Wakes. The continuance of this popular pleasure fair is largely owing to the great interest the Rector of St. Agnes (in whose parish the fair field is situated) has taken in the welfare of the show people. Upon many occasions when the fair has been attacked and efforts made to abolish it, the rector of the parish has stood as the champion of the people's fair rights and the particular interests of the travelling showman. Only last year the wise conciliation and tact of the Rector prevented the over zeal of some would-be puritanical reformers running riot, the object of the agitators against the fair being to take steps of some kind to hamper the show business and prevent, if possible, the Wakes taking place.

Owing to the Rector's interest in and sympathy with the Guild, the great bulk of his parishioners are supporters of the fair. Yet none the less showmen all over the country know how easy it is for one or two cantankerous persons in a town to do incalculable harm to the showmen during their absence between one fair and another.

These objectors can work up all manner of prejudice in twelve months, and unless the showmen have friends in the locality to speak a word for them and to defend them, the chances are in favour of the enemy gaining his ends.

At Longsight the strong bulwark of defence is the liberal-minded and kindly Rector, and showmen know this and appreciate to the full the good work and worth of the Rev. H. Norburn, Rector of St. Agnes, and Hon. Local Chaplain of the Guild.

As usual, the children of the fair were invited and welcomed to the school, and a good number of the children attended—many of them over school age. Some half dozen of these older ones in a class that the Rector catechised at the end of their lesson showed equal intelligence with the rest of the class, and in some of the subjects where definite and trained thought was necessary the child of the travelling show gave better answers than the regular scholars of the school. The Rector made a point of this fact, and agrees that the change from town to town and the necessity of the show life quickens the intelligence and gives the travellers' child a clearer and broader view of life and the sanction of Christianity.

This is important, in face of the utterly mistaken notion that show children are behind the children of the town in the blessings of education.

In the evening the Rev. T. Horne preached to a crowded congregation at St. Agnes Church, taking for his subject "The compassion of Christ for the multitude."

Following the church service, the clergy and church workers went to the Parish Rooms adjoining the Wakes ground. Here the show people were assembled in good numbers, together with friends from the congregation of the Parish Church. The singing was brightly sustained by the church choir, and the service intoned by the Rector.

Again the Rev. T. Horne was the special preacher. Taking the Gospel story of the day—the feeding of the hungry multitude by the compassionate Saviour—he spoke of the tender solicitude of the Master for the crowd. Their work, he told the show people, was to minister to crowds—to give, as their Master of old, to the multitude the ministry of their best. He then pointed out the peculiar influence and power of crowds. They had to work for the crowds that thronged their fairs. The inspiration of the crowd, the love of the crowd for their favourites, the reciprocal influences for good or evil between entertainer and audience, all these were dwelt upon and their lessons applied. The preacher especially referred to the exhausting nature of this work of ministering to the multitude.

At the close of the meeting the Rector tendered to the Guild Chaplain the thanks of his people and himself (in this he included his show people—parishioners for the time being) for coming again at Wakes time, and again showing that the Church regarded these travelling entertainers of the people as belonging to the household and family of God.

Amongst the prominent showmen present were John Whiting, James Norman, and Richard Newall, vice-presidents of the Guild; John Walker, an ex-President; T. Hurst, hon. secretary; George Proctor, of Proctor's Circus; and amongst the visitors we noticed Mr. Ward and other friends.

At the close a ten minutes' conference on the work of the Guild took place, and the action of the Executive with regard to the Education of Vagrant Children's Bill was explained.

ON the Shropshire and Cheshire round we have news of Crewe fair. The shows and concerns included P. Collins's, jun., electric coliseum of varieties and animated photography, Professor Huton's temple of magic, Cooper's novelty booth, Wright's fine art academy, Jess with boxers and athletes, P. Collins's motor-car set, and the Venetian gondola set; John Collins's switchback, P. Collins's, jun., steam yachts, and manual swings and highfliers by Messrs. Dobson and Jervis; Winchester ranges, rifle saloons, and bottle batteries by Messrs. Wright, Stokes, Hall, and Fletcher; the minor novelties, throwing and other games, were provided by Messrs. Humphries, Hall, Dobson, Cordwell, Mercer, Deeks, and others.

IN addition to the names already given as being at Stalybridge were Hibbert and Sons with their concerns, and P. Collins and Shuttleworth with one set each; and Messrs. Cordwell, White, Beaston, Jewell, Clough, Thomas, and Walter Shaw.

AT Nelson were also Walter Shaw's fine art gallery and steam swings, Williams's tunnel railway, Harrison's helter skelter, George Cornwell's shooting concern; and varieties, games, and minor novelties by Messrs. Slater, Pickles, Lorenzo, Forshaw, Redfern, Butterworth, Tughan, Freer, Holland, Crick, Broughton, Sharrocks, Jennings, and Gallagher.

SUBSCRIPTIONS to the guild funds, per Mr. Whitney:—Mr. Ogden (Longsight), 10s. 6d.; Mr. Cris Darwent (Longsight), 5s.

As might be expected at this period of the year, there was a very poor attendance on the Collingwood-road Circus Ground on Wednesday, when Mr. Tom Norman, the famous auctioneer, offered at auction the Crystal Palace Circus. The majority of leading showmen are at this season much scattered about, and busy with their own concerns, but customers were found for the whole of the seventy-two lots. Mr. David Tayleur, of Ada Alexandra's world-renowned circus and hippodromes, who, it will be remembered, was a very extensive purchaser at Lord George Sanger's sale, was the principal buyer. The large tent was knocked down to Mr. Watson for £46 10s., tableaux went as low as 25 guineas, living carriages 15 guineas, and luggage waggons 8 guineas. Altogether the circus complete realised something like £435, a very poor price for such a high-class concern. Amongst those present we noticed in particular that well-known and highly-respected veteran showman, Sir Robert Fossett, Messrs. David Tayleur, Jas. Irwin, G. Cole, James Crockett, George Watson, Sidney Pinder, and James Green.

THE TIVOLI ANNUAL MEETING.

The fifteenth annual meeting of the shareholders of the New Tivoli (Ltd.) was held on Tuesday at The Tivoli, Strand, Mr. Henry Tozer (chairman of the company) presiding.

The chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said that the accounts showed a substantial increase in the takings as compared with last year, and a general diminution of expenditure, save in the item of repairs and maintenance and London County Council requisitions, which had considerably increased their normal expenses. Those requisitions, or "suggestions" as the London County Council were pleased to call them, had been pressed upon them for the past three years, and the directors had, during the year just ended, dealt with them thoroughly, save that they had felt it impossible, in the interest of the safety and comfort of one portion of their audience, to concur in a request that they should narrow certain of their doors and doorways. However, he ventured to hope that commonsense and logic would prevail when that little matter was more fully considered by the London County Council Theatres Committee. Further sums must be spent to complete those alterations and to redecorate where the walls and ceilings were being disturbed. They were told that if they satisfied the present requirements of the London County Council they would be graciously permitted, in future, to carry on their business in peace. It was a consummation devoutly to be wished, for to lay their bogies had been a most expensive proceeding. Besides the cost of that process they contributed to the London County Council this year, amongst their rates, no less a proportion than £700, and they had also suffered depreciation of £374 on the London County Council stock they held. It could thus be seen that their profits had been largely dipped into to sustain that omniscient body, and truly might it be said, of course, in a spirit of patience and long-suffering, that whatever moral or physical benefits they received from them were very dearly bought. The board had spent, apart from the London County Council requisitions, £1,000 less than last year, and they had taken £10,000 more. They were thus enabled to recommend a substantially increased division of profits. They would, perhaps, have hesitated to advise quite so large a bonus as 4 per cent., but they took into especial consideration the fact that the dividend last year was only 6 per cent., and they therefore decided to recommend such a distribution this year, viz., 14 per cent., as would bring up the return to shareholders for the past two years to 20 per cent. The profits enabled them also to place £3,000 to reserve, making that fund £10,000. Although in the kindred company, the Oxford, they had a much larger reserve fund, it must be remembered that the Tivoli property was nearly all freehold. The business, which began many months ago to recover from its temporary depreciation, showed great steadiness, and they might safely claim that the prosperity of the Tivoli had been firmly re-established—subject, of course, to exceptional circumstances that they could not foresee. It was always satisfactory to have prophesied aright, and he might recall, therefore, the opinion expressed on behalf of the board at last year's meeting, that the unhealthy competition they had been subjected to would disappear, and that the diminution of profits was only transitory. Without seeming to triumph over the misfortunes of others, they were entitled, judging by what had happened, to say that there would appear to be no room in their immediate locality for any rival to the Tivoli.

Mr. G. Adney Payne (managing director) seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously, without discussion.

AT the weekly meeting of the Tramways and Electricity Committee of the Council of the Belfast County Borough, the question raised at a former meeting by Messrs. W. Coates & Son as to the electric installation at the Palace Theatre of Varieties, Belfast, was again discussed, a letter having been received from Messrs. Warden to the effect that as the new Hippodrome would be virtually under their charge they would probably put down a plant of their own and supply current to that building as well as to the Palace. The Lord Mayor said he thought that would be a very serious matter, and the committee should secure this business even if at a reduced rate. Mr. M'Cowen stated that in Glasgow, Liverpool, and Manchester a reduction was made in the case of theatres, but the rate charged was not any less than that at present paid by the Palace Theatre, which consumed 65,000 units of electricity during the past twelve months. It was finally agreed that Mr. M'Cowen should look into this matter again and bring it up at the next meeting, no decision to be arrived at meanwhile.

ON Thursday Mr. Harry Marvello had the distinguished honour of appearing, by special command, at Duff House, before Her Royal Highness Princess Louise (Duchess of Fife), His Grace the Duke of Fife, and suite. Mr. Marvello gave his clever conjuring and ventriloquial performance. This occasion is the sixth upon which Mr. Marvello has appeared before Royalty, he having been engaged on two previous occasions at Duff House, once at Mar Lodge, and twice at Balmoral Castle, before Her Majesty the late Queen Victoria.

IN a letter addressed to the editor of the Times, and dated July 27, a correspondent (Frances Balfour) writes: "The 'Political Notes' of the Times of to-day contain a letter addressed by Mr. Herbert Samuel to the secretary of the International Artistes' Lodge In this communication Mr. Samuel blandly asserts that 'the scope of this Bill,' now happily withdrawn from Parliament, has been 'misconceived.' The strong opposition to the Bill was formed under no misconception. The Bill purported to be one consolidating legislation already enacted. The Dangerous Performances Acts had to do with minors and children. The Government, by inserting the word 'women' into the Act endangered the professional livelihood of many thousand honest, hard-working women, and they were about to commit an act of gross injustice in a Parliament which is pledged to do justice to 'the rights of women.' It was under a complete apprehension of this back-handed blow at those unable to speak or vote for themselves that an opposition has successfully been organised to defeat the Government in their hasty and ill-considered action."

DURING the summer vacation Mr. T. Allan Edwardes, the proprietor of the Palace Theatre of Varieties, Attercliffe, has had the place thoroughly renovated, the whole of the auditorium and passages being decorated in a most artistic and elaborate manner, the predominating colours being crimson and gold, with a dado of dark green. New scenery has been added, and other improvements carried out, and when the place reopens its doors on Monday evening, the patrons will find it most cheerful and attractive. Mr. E. C. Clayton, who is re-engaged for the third consecutive season as biograph exhibitor, has introduced a novel and unique screen on which to throw his pictures. Mr. J. Lacy Lyne is still retained as general-manager, which is in itself a sufficient guarantee that the high-class character of this popular house will be fully maintained.

THE PASSING OF "THE CHAIRMAN."

(BY OUR OWN COMMISSIONER.)

The silvery-haired old gentleman with the retrospective expression of countenance tried bravely to conceal his emotion as ever and anon he puffed at his cigar, or rapped for silence with his ivory mallet, or bent over to answer a question put to him by the writer. For more than twenty-seven years he had nightly presided in his gilded throne over the principal public entertainments in Canning Town, and this Saturday evening marked not only his severance from the establishment he had served so long and so faithfully, but it also marked the occasion on which the last of his line—the line of music-hall chairmen—gave place to a less antiquated order of things. With his ample white locks always most carefully parted and brushed well back from the forehead, his full, though nicely-trimmed beard, his thoughtful, dreamy eyes, and a complexion that many a lassie of twenty summers might envy, he is what you would call a handsome old man. His pleasant personality will be sorely missed by many of the people he has himself watched grow up from childhood to maturity.

For a man in his seventy-sixth year Mr. Walter Leaver, who on Saturday night at the Royal Albert Music Hall, Canning Town, concluded a period of chairmanship extending over forty-three years, is a splendidly-preserved specimen of mankind. One would scarcely think that, seated with one's back to an orchestra for three hours every night year in year out for well-nigh half a century, and having one's auricular susceptibilities taxed to the utmost by a conglomeration of noises—the awe-inspiring booming of the big drum, the teeth-chilling, grating sound (at any rate at close quarters) of the violin, the shrill cry of the piccolo, the deafening blare of the trumpet, the clamorous echoes of the horned instruments, the singing (melodious and unmelodious) of songs by the artists, the bewildering shouts of the "quick-patter" comedian, and the tumultuous applause—was conducive to the improvement of one's nerves. Immediate proximity to a band does not inspire the average man with any great affection for harmony divine. As in the case of a masterpiece in oils, you must stand a little back from the production to enjoy its strength and beauty.

But in spite of all these adjectival terrors, Walter Leaver to-day enjoys the best of health. The fact is, he revels in a mighty uproar. During the daytime he follows the trade of a blacksmith, and to him the sharp, imperative clanging of the sledge-hammer is as sweet music. It seems a curious and violent change—this discarding every evening of the dirt-begrimed smock of Vulcan for the spotless starch and the silken suit of a Thespian president!

The Royal Albert came into the possession of Mr. Charles Relf, by whom it has just been sold to Mr. Arthur Hunt, in 1878, and Mr. Leaver was appointed chairman in the following year. Seemingly it has been Mr. Relf's principle to retain his officials as long as possible, as the stage-manager, Mr. Joseph H. Mitchell, has been associated with the hall for twenty-two years. When, in 1879, Mr. Relf was granted a music-hall licence, the Royal Albert held only 230 pepole, and the band consisted of piano, violin, and cornet. About that time Mr. Relf started giving benefits in aid of the Poplar Hospital, and in spite of his small audiences he was able to hand over as his first contribution the sum of £55 4s. 4d., the result of three nights' performances. The total extent to which this institution has benefited by his efforts would be somewhere in the neighbourhood of £3000, and a similar amount has gone to the Seamen's Hospital, for both of which charities yearly benefits were organised. Mr. Arthur Hunt, the new proprietor, intends to carry on this beneficent work. "As time went on," remarked Mr. Relf to us the other day, "I acquired property at the back of my little hall and added a gallery, with the result that I could seat 1500. Then, after a few years, I took other property, comprising three houses in Burnham-street, erected a second gallery, and there is now accommodation for 2300. When the trouble arose over the sketch question, I applied to our West Ham Council for a stage-play licence and got it, so that the Royal Albert can be run solely as a legitimate theatre or as a music hall, or as both combined."

The Lloyd Family, including the popular Marie, the Sisters Collins, Harry Ford, Kate Carney, Chirgwin, Harry Randall, Michael Nolan, Slade Murray, Harry Champion, Harry Anderson, and many other well-known artists made their first or early appearances at this establishment. It was at the Royal Albert that Pat Rafferty made a strong bid for fame and fortune with "We drew his club money this morning."

One might expect hooliganism to be rampant in Canning Town; but the writer is informed that the only outbreak of ruffianism which occurred in the Royal Albert was when an excited larrikin in the gallery threw a knife at a comedian. The latter had been commenting in too outspoken a fashion upon the condition and the inhabitants of Whiteman-street, a local thoroughfare which then bore a very bad reputation.

In the early days of the hall it was Mr. Leaver's custom to open the entertainment each evening by singing a song himself, and he tells us that one of his ditties which found most favour was "The Political Shoemaker," the first verse of which ran:—

"Folks says I'm a drunken old cobbler,
Just because I'm fond of my beer;
Yet I stick to my last firm and fast,
And I always stick to my beer."

This song, in addition to many others, was written and composed by the old chairman.

It is of interest to relate that Mr. Leaver gave evidence against the impostor, Arthur Orton, in the well-remembered cause-célèbre, the Tichborne Claimant case. The claimant and the subject of this sketch were, as boys, playmates at Wapping, and Mr. Leaver considers that Orton was a smart out impudent rogue.

The stately chair from which Mr. Leaver called out the names of the artists, the desk before which he sat, and the adjustable looking-glass which enabled him, while facing the audience and with his back to the footlights, to see what was being done on the stage, were all made by himself, and in other respects he has given practical evidence of mechanical ingenuity. There is at present in the possession of the King, given to His Majesty a score of years ago, a set of elegant models of the tools used by a blacksmith, consisting of a steel anvil, sledge-hammer, hand-hammer, vice and bench, all fitted on to a tiny plaque 5in. in diameter

No doubt Walter Leaver will miss the hubbub and the excitement of the Royal Albert. "I suppose I shall get used to it after a week or two," is the self-condoling phrase which gives expression to his thoughts. Possibly he will stick to his anvil, and in the sparks that merrily fly upwards revive his memory with recollections of the many happy hours he has experienced in Canning Town. Or possibly he will content his soul and find greater joy in spending the remainder of his days in the company of the sweetheart he took to the altar fifty-seven years ago. And surely, when a man has passed his grand climacteric by twelve years, is it not well that he should retire from the activities that are called into being within the noisy arena of business affairs and satisfy himself with quietly watching the shadows creep along the wall?

A Copy of "The Era" will be forwarded to any address in the United Kingdom for six stamps.

THE HIPPODROME.

At last Mr. Louis de Rougemont has given practical proof before a British audience of his ability to ride on the back of a turtle. It will be remembered that some few years ago the readers of a certain magazine were enthralled by a series of adventures, which, happening, as supposed, to one man, far exceeded in excitement and novelty the experiences of that friend of our boyhood, Robinson Crusoe. On Monday evening at the Hippodrome we sat and watched a curious spectacle. After the enormous red circular curtain had been lowered and raised, the huge tank was seen to be full of water. At one of the entrances to what in the ordinary course is the arena stood a tall, lean, elderly man, obviously attired in a bathing suit, which was partially covered by a large rug. On the landing stage there lay prone a big turtle, which we were informed weighed three hundredweights. The man in the bathing suit was, of course, the celebrated Frenchman, Louis de Rougemont, and he had a few remarks to make before entering upon the venture which was to provide the sensation of the evening. He referred to the oft-expressed doubts cast upon the statements made by himself in the Wide World Magazine, and admitted that in that respect his name had become a by-word. Years ago his critics averred that it was impossible for any human being to remain seated in the water upon a turtle. He would challenge that statement by taking a trip on his trusty chelonian. There is little more to be said. The animal was unceremoniously shoved into the water, and de Rougemont sprang on to its back. It threw him off; again he mounted the none too conveniently shaped shell saddle. His fat and greasy steed next turned a somersault in the water, splashing vigorously with its flappers, and for the moment it looked as if the plucky adventurer was placed hors de combat. However, he stuck bravely to the beast, and at the fall of the scarlet curtain de Rougemont was "top dog"—that is, he was apparently the master of the situation, seated on the back of the ungainly monster, albeit the latter liked it not, and clearly indicated its mind to the explorer. The act certainly succeeded in proving a "thrill."

There is much of interest and variety in the rest of the programme. Lavater Lee is as droll as a man can be. He makes known his presence from hte fauteuills, where he engages in an amusing altercation with the ring master, Mr. Otho Twigg. After having borrowed from a member of the audience a counterfoil of a ticket to prove his right of admission, he jumps over into the arena and introduces his three cleverly-trained French poodles. Then there is more fun, for the disobedient animals decline to do as he wishes, and laughable situations arise. Mr. James H. Jee almost makes our hair stand on end with his wonderful feats on the tight wire, on which he dances to the tune of "The Cosy Corner Girl," and performs a particularly daring jump over chairs from one part of the steel thread to another. The Jack Theo Trio distinguish themselves as equilibrists, and Iles and Antonio excite one's risible faculties with their eccentricities. Mlle. Olive juggles with a variety of articles in a smart and skilful manner. She has mastered the knack of balancing a large bowl on the point of a stick, and humour is imparted to that portion of her act which, with marvellous celerity and precision, she catches plates thrown to her from the side of the arena. If anyone wishes a lesson in the art of gracefully riding a cycle, let him visit the Hippodrome and watch the performances of the Kauffmann Troupe. Eight good-looking—physically as well as facially—young ladies execute a series of attractive manœuvres with the aid of their pneumatic steeds, the whole demonstration furnishing a pleasing spectacle. For agility and strength of body, and originiality of mind as displayed in an exhibition of gymnastics, we can commend the Lios Alfas, who, picturesquely attired, appear in front of an exceedingly pretty "backcloth," and engage in all sorts of evolutions on the trapeze.

"Buddha's Blackboard—an Unsolvable Mystery." The sub-title is correct. We tried hard from our seat to find out how the thing was worked, and, after discarding conjecture after conjecture, were finally compelled to "give it up." A large wooden contrivance after the style of an easel is wheeled on to the stage, and in the frame is placed a blackboard. The audience are told by a gentleman who is responsible for the "act" that any name they like to call out will appear, written in chalk, on the blackboard. We are not informed precisely how it is done, but a reference is made to what sometimes happens at spiritualistic séances, where seemingly disturbed spirits floating about in the supernatural sphere cause messages in black and white to be delivered by unseen hands. It should be mentioned, in regard to Buddha's Blackboard, that a thin sheet of amber-coloured wood is fixed before the blackboard while Buddha, or whoever it is, performs the graphological exercise. Anyway, the result is most satisfactory, the answers to questions being chalked on the blackboard by some invisible means. Unquestionably, to the lay mind, the method in which the words are put on the board is, as the programme expresses it, "an unsolvable mystery." The lively antics of those fantastically-garbed eccentric comedians, Harding and Ah Sid, are diverting in the extreme. The Harmony Four are likewise a mirth-provoking little band with what they are pleased to call their "original musical comedy." While one of the gentlemen makes an honest attempt at vocalism, the others chant a weird refrain, and indulge in a multitude of comicalities which are most ludicrous. Alburtus and Millar aid in the merry-making with their "scene at the fair grounds," in which, among other things, they prove to be expert jugglers. The Three Small Heads, said to be the only living members of an otherwise extinct race, arouse general curiosity, and the trio of strange women seem scarcely less interested in the audience. The American Bioscope is a capital entertainment in itself, the picture illustrative of the Fire Brigade drill in Hyde Park, and another in which smuggling dogs figure, being specially praiseworthy. The dramatic and realistic spectacular "episode," The Flood, with its beautiful scenes, is as greatly admired as ever.

Should be found very useful.—Pelican.

Should prove perfectly invaluable.—Weekly Sun.

The Brewster Troupe arrived at Marseilles on the 30th ult. per s.s. Aquitaine, having completed five months with the Seguin tour. They were originally engaged for two months, but owing to the success they achieved were re-engaged. They speak very highly of the enthusiastic reception they received from the audiences in the various towns they visited in South America.

The employees of the Empire Theatre, Newcastle, held their annual outing to Shotley Bridge last Sunday. Grand weather favoured the excursionists, and a thoroughly enjoyable day was spent. A cricket match and sports were indulged in during the afternoon, and caused much excitement. After dinner, Mr. E. Leslie Conroy, the energetic manager, made a neat little speech, thanking the staff for the excellent manner in which they had carried out their duties, and also spoke in high terms of his directors.

AMUSEMENTS IN AUSTRALIA.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, June 18.—Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Aydon.—To the already strong bill provided was added yet another novelty on Saturday evening in the shape of the one-act comedy, entitled Hooked by Crook, performed by Miss Marguerite Keeler, Mr. Homer B. Mason, and Mr. Henry Travers. The comedy was played with a dash and go which completely took the audience by storm. Mr. Homer B. Mason as Burglar Bill did some excellent fooling, besides proving himself to be a first-rate performer on the piano. Miss Keeler possesses a pretty face and a beautiful figure, combined with a pleasing manner. Mr. Travers did excellent work as Oliver Kerkower. Alexander and Bertie appears in a graceful trapeze act, while Larola, Victor Kelly, the Lewis Sisters, the Three Lees, Baby Watson, Vasco, the mad musician, and others added interesting turns to an excellent programme.

MELBOURNE, June 26,—Princess's Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. Willoughby and Geach.—The Man From Mexico was produced at this theatre on Saturday evening last, in the presence of one of the most brilliant audiences that has ever gathered within its walls. The occasion was a memorable one, marking as it did the return to Melbourne, after an absence of a number of years, of the popular and fascinating actress Miss Grace Palotta, who was accorded a most flattering reception, which was shared to a large degree by Mr. Hugh Ward, who also made his reappearance after a lengthy sojourn in England. The Man From Mexico abounds in amusing situations, crisp dialogue, and smart byplay. The company includes Mr. Reginald Wykeham, Mr. J. Hartman, Mr. Edward Bonfield, Mr. Charles Knight, Mr. Arthur Cornell, Mr. W. Gamble, Miss Olive Wilton, and Miss Gillian Scaife. The Man From Mexico seems destined to have a long run judging from the enthusiasm with which it has been received since its opening performance.

Her Majesty's Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. J. C. Williamson.—Business-Manager, Mr. Geo. Tallis.—On the Quiet, presented by Mr. Charles Frohman's American comedy company, headed by Mr. William Collier, entered upon its second week on Saturday evening in the presence of a large audience. The play is a wildly farcical comedy, packed full of hilarious American humour that keeps the audience in a simmer of merriment from the rise to the fall of the curtain. On the Quiet will run till further notice.

Opera House.—Proprietor, Mr. Harry Rickards; Business-Manager, Mr. Fred Aydon.—The exceptionally strong programme being presented just now drew a large audience on Saturday evening. The Homer B. Mason and Marguerite Keeler company continues first favourites in the clever American sketch Hooked by Crook. Vasco, the mad musician, plays innumerable instruments with great skill; Alexandre and Bertie give a graceful trapeze act; while a number of other interesting turns are contributed by Mr. Slade Murray, the Three Lees, Larola, Mr. Tom Dawson, the Sisters Watson, Mr. Alf Lawton, and a host of others. Mr. Fred Aydon, the genial and popular manager for Mr. Rickards, has lately been suffering from a severe attack of influenza, but is now quite himself again.

Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. William Anderson; Business-Manager, Mr. Julius Grant.—The ever-popular melodrama Hands Across the Sea was revived on Saturday evening. Mr. George Cross as the hero, George Dudley, did excellent work; as Tom Bassett Mr. Bert Bailey was seen at his best; Mr. Laurence Dunbar gave a conscientious study of the part of the villain Richard Stillwood; and Mr. H. O. Willard made an effective French black-leg. Miss Duggan's interpretation of the part of the heroine Lilian Melford was one of the best things she has yet accomplished. Other characters were played by Miss Ethel Buckley, Miss Ada Guildford, Mr. Edwin Campbell, Mr. Edmund Duggan, and Mr. Temple Harrison. The setting throughout the piece was good, the opening scene in a Devonshire farm being excellent.

Gaiety Theatre.—Lessee, Mr. Frank Clark; Business-Manager, Mr. Joe Solomons.—On Saturday evening there was a complete change of programme by the Folly company; Hagan and Fraser contributed a new sketch; Essie Jennings rendered three new songs; Miss Bella Perman appeared in new dances; Mr. Howard Thomas, a baritone from New Zealand, scored a great success. The performance terminated with a capital farce entitled The Carpet Man, by Frank Yorke.

At a special Dean of Guild Court, Paisley, on Wednesday, the continued petition by Mr. E. H. Bostock, of the Scottish Zoo, Glasgow, to erect a hippodrome at Smithhills-street, Paisley, was granted. The plan shows a corrugated iron structure of ample dimensions, seated from the front backwards, starting from the orchestra, and including stalls, &c., pit, and gallery. A commodious stage is to be erected at the far end, and the whole of the seating area will be occupied, so that it is evident the performances will be of the variety order, without any circus features. There is to be only one entrance—a long covered way, leading from the Smithhills, and lit from the roof. The new hippodrome will be situated in the most central part of the town. Mr. E. H. Bostock is the proprietor, and from what the Paisley public know of his catering in Glasgow, their expectations in the matter of suitable entertainment will not be belied.

Lynn's "Mudlarks," a clever company of juveniles, are gaining a great reputation in Australia, where they remain under the management of Mr. Frank Murphy.
